Sunday night passed slowly for the grief-stricken watchers. The patient was restless and nervous, with small fluctuations in condition that did not range far on either side, for the general average of extreme depression and exhaustion.

The terrible nervous strain on those who watched without hope and in despairing resignation was very apparent. As the gray light of Monday morning spread over the earth the vital force of Mrs. Harrison was at the lowest ebb, and the president's anxiety became so acute that he felt the need of some assurance, no matter of what character, from medical authority. So a messenger was despatched to the home of Dr. Gardner and the physician quickly responded, reaching the White House at 7 o'clock. He found the patient in a condition to warrant the gravest apprehensions, and so hopeless was his report that the president desired him to remain in the White House for a time. Dr. Gardiner accordingly remained and breakfasted with the family. At 9 o'clock it appeared that the struggle for life was to be prolonged for some hours at least, and the doctor left the White House, after giving the family the small grain of comfort to be found in the statement that Mrs. Harrison might live until daylight began to fade into the shadows of evening.

The day was clear and crisp and cool and the dryness of the atmosphere had somewhat helped the invalid and acted as a stimulant. She was lying on her back; and whenever she awoke from her troubled and unsatisfactory sleep she was conscious. She could still recognize her surroundings, and a glance of recognition greeted the physician when he entered the sick room this morning. The fatal cough was present, but naturally in the enfeebled state of the invalid it was not pronounced.

Early in the morning there was a revival in the popular interest in Mrs. Harrison's condition. Many of the chiefs of bureaus and other officials went out of their way to enter the White House and ask for information regarding the condition of the patient, and the watchmen at the door were kept busy answering questions. Attorney General Miller called early and saw Mr. Halford. Mr. Halford himself had been admitted to the sick room early in the day, so that he was prepared to describe the situation. One of his first acts was to telegraph a statement of the case to Secretary Rusk, who is in Wisconsin, and Secretary Elkins, in West Virginia, and suggest their speedy return to Washington. The other absent members of the cabinet were not telegraphed for, because they were expected to return during to-day or to-morrow. The clerks were at their desks at the White House during the day, but it was plainly evident that here all was gloom. Dr. Gardner sat at the bedside nearly all the forenoon. He went away several times to attend to other professional duties, but was never absent long. He admitted that death was very near and that, remarkable as Mrs. Harrison's vitality was, he did not see how she could live more than a few hours.

Mrs. Harrison at noontime was still conscious. A little before that the president, leaning over her, asked if she wished for anything. With the old time smile that the approach of death only made more tender and trustful, she answered, low, but very distinctly: "No, dear." At 1 o'clock, as he left the house, Dr. Gardner said that most of the time Mrs. Harrison was in a sleepy, semi-conscious condition from which she frequently aroused. The doctor said that his efforts were devoted solely to making his patient as comfortable as possible in her dying hours. She could not take nourishment of any kind, and frequent applications of a stimulating moisture to her parched lips was the only treatment that afforded any relief. The doctor returned to his patient about noon and found her even weaker than before, almost completely prostrated and unable longer to speak or cough. Apparently she was conscious. There was little change during the afternoon, but every change was for the worse, and the watchers were fearful that death would ensue about Sunday. Secretaries John W. Foster, Rusk and Elkins telegraphed to the president in response to his message about Mrs. Harrison's condition that they would return to Washington immediately. A number of messages of condolence were also received. From 4 o'clock until 6:30 in the evening the president and all the members of the family remained unceasingly at Mrs. Harrison's bedside.

As the day waned and the unclouded sun sank behind the western hills, casting rapidly lengthening shadows, the anxiety of the watchers became more and more intense. The persons about the building moved stealthily across the halls and tesselated floors and dropped their voices into whispers when they spoke—even though far out of ear shot of the stricken woman who lay quietly with resignation awaiting the last call. The shadows deepened, the sun sank in the west, night came and in the south, the new moon showed herself in the sky, and yet the end was not yet. The physician's calls were more frequent and whenever he came from the sick chamber he brought the same report—that the patient was as near death as she could be and live. So the employes in the business section of the house whose work was done, and who might have gone home lingered in the rooms.

Absolute dejection were pictured on each countenance. The telegraph instruments in the eastern part of the building had been steadily ticking all day bringing from afar and near inquiries from friends of the family. But after 6 o'clock they ticket faster and faster, and Executive Clerk Montgomery, who is charged with the manipulation of the wires, was kept very busy.

The reason for the sudden increase in their activity was found in the fact that some one had sent to Indianapolis a bulletin announcing Mrs. Harrison's death. The premature report spread rapidly, and there began to flow in upon the wires massages of condolence addressed to the president. Mr. Halford promptly authorized a prompt denial, but it did not overtake the original story, and the messages continued to arrive in numbers. Just after 6 o'clock Mrs. Harrison suffered another sinking spell, and messages were sent by Mr. Halford to the absent cabinet officers asking them to return to Washington immediately. But the sick woman still had the strength to rally once more, and to repulse the attack of the dread visitor who hovered at the threshold.

About 8 o'clock word came from Seattle, Wash., in answer to numerous telegrams, that J. G. Scott, Mrs. Harrison's brother, had passed through that place on his way to Washington. Dr. Gardner had made eight calls during the day, and when he came on the last he sent his carriage home and made preparations to stay until the end. Soon after 9 o'clock he announced, that the patient might be expected to live until midnight. Even this small grain of comfort was received with gratitude by the anxious and grief-stricken family and husband.

At the supper hour the meal was spread upon the table and one by one the watchers snatched a few moments to take a hasty repast. It could hardly be said that the patient was unconscious during the evening hours, for she betrayed some understanding of attempts to relieve her last moments by partially opening her parched lips to receive the stimulating food applied to them. But not a drop could she swallow, and speech had apparently left her forever. Then came increased difficulty in breathing, which was regarded as a bad sign.

Among those who called during the evening were Secretaries Tracy and Noble, who have just returned from Chicago, Attorney General Miller, Assistant Secretary Grant, Assistant Secretary and Mrs. Soley, Chief Justice Fuller, Justice Harlan, Gen. and Mrs. Breckinridge and Third Auditor Hart, members of the diplomatic corps, and the Rev. Dr. Hamlin, of the church which President Harrison and his wife have attended. Hour after hour slipped away, each leaving the patient weaker in turn, yet so gradual was the decline that it could not be said at any minute that she had materially failed. The physician said if she tided over midnight she might possibly survive until daylight.

Frequent glances were cast at the clock which was steadily ticking away the lifetime of the invalid, and there was a visible air of relief when the gong sounded 12, and one critical point was supposed to have been passed. The hope inspired by the doctors' last statement was only of short duration. About 12:30 o'clock, while he sat by Mrs. Harrison's side with his fingers lightly pressed to her pulse his practiced hand discovered a noticeable weakness of the heart's action followed almost immediately by a slight decrease of prespiration. He notified the grief-stricken family group around the couch appeared to be very near and that unless she soon rallied from the stupor in which was now drifting she could scarcely live half an hour longer. This intelligence had a most depressing effect upon the president, who had been in constant attendance upon his afflicted wife for over nine hours, and he sustained himself with the greatest difficulties.

If it were possible to add to the gravity of the situation of the family gathering, those results were attained when Dr. Gardner, after a narrow examination and feeling the pulse of the dying woman, announced that all indications justified the belief that she could not survive more than half an hour. This was at a quarter to 1 o'clock. The minutes passed with frightful rapidity and the half hour passed. The helpless form, however, still retained the life spark.

The resistance offered by the constitution of the patient was surprising to the physician and all at the bedside. There was no struggle, no exhibition of pain, but a simple, passive resistence that was baffling in its quiet intensity. In a few minutes Dr. Gardner again took up the feeble hand and felt the wrist. The blood still crept through the contracting arteries, but ho, how slowly. He shook his head and said that a brief fifteen minutes must surely finish the struggle. The agitation of the family could no longer be controlled, and realizing his utter helplessness to longer cope with her formidable foe, and from consideration for the sacredness of such grief as this, the devoted physician and friend bowed his head and passed out.

Outside of the door he waited. It was not a long time. The minutes flew like seconds, and suddenly there was an expression of heart-stricken woe and the end had come. The president was beside his dying wife, as he had been for nine hours continually, and his was the last of the loved features her eyes had dwelt upon. Her breath was labored and very slow.

As the hands of the clock crept toward the next hour it grew fainter yet and less frequent, and as the time-piece marked the hour of 1:40 o'clock there was an interruption of the feeble breath, a resumption and then a stop, this time to be eternal, and the life of Caroline Scott Harrison had gone out peacefully and quietly and without pain.

Over Fifty Deaths Thus Far.

St. Louis, Oct. 24.—A telegram received here says the Tolliver-Howard feud has broken out again in Western Kentucky, with fatal results. A general fight occurred at Hogtown, Rowan county, last night between the two factions. Col. Tolliver was shot in the breast and instantly killed. Wylie Tolliver and Sam Howard will die. Their relatives and friends are arming, and a battle is expected to-night or to-morrow. This feud has already resulted in more than fifty deaths, and the present trouble promises to add many to this list.

He Wants the Charges Proved.

Seattle, Wash., Oct. 25.—Henry J. Snively, Democratic candidate for governor, to-day began suit against the Press-Times for $200,000. This suit grows out of an article published in the Press-Times recently charging Snively with fraud and embezzlement while a resident of Grafton, W. Va.

Germany's New Military Bill.

Berlin, Oct. 23.—Official details of the new army bill were published to-day. The peace effective from Oct. 1, 1893, to March 31, 1895, is fixed at 492,068. The service of the infantry is generally reduced to two years. The adoption of this measure is necessary because the former military preponderance of Germany has gone. The war strength of France is placed at 4,053,000 and Russia at 4,556,000. When the reorganization under the bill is completed the German army will not be able to exceed her present strength. The bill retains the power of the military authorities to keep men in the ranks until they have completed their third year of service. This will be done as a punishment for offenses under the military code.

DEDICATED TO PROGRESS.

VICE-PRESIDENT MORTON PERFORMS THE CEREMONY

An Immense Throng of People Witness the Dedicatory Exercises —The Greatest of All Columbian Fete Days.

Chicago, Oct. 22.—The empty structures of the World's Columbian exposition were dedicated to-day to the purposes for which they have been designed by the people of the great and grandest and noblest republic that has ever existed on the face of God's earth. This was the nation's day, a day set part by proclamation of the chief magistrate, a proclamation as rigorously observed as were the pronunciamentos of the magistracy of ancient Europe, as a brief season of thanksgiving and of festivity in commemoration of the man and the discoverer of four centuries since. Chicago kept holiday to-day, and not only Chicago, but every nook and corner of the big, bustling, tearing, driving, striving republic. Joy, jubilation and gladness were unconfined. Patriotism, the safety valve of a people enlightened and determined to be free, had full vent. In city and town, village and hamlet, the people, to quote the proclamation of President Harrison, "devoted themselves to such exercises as may best express honor to the discoverer and appreciation of the great achievements of the four complete centuries of American life." Joy and gladness enveloped the nation as a mist, a joy and gladness unknown to nations over which limited or absolute monarchies exercise full sway. It was a day of liberty, a day of fraternity, a day of equality, a day upon which rich and poor, young and old, native and foreign born, from the ocean washed shores of Land's End to the extremity of the Golden Gate, where the cliffs are kissed by the gentle waves of the Pacific, were singing with heart and voice, chanting in unison, one great pean ascending to the skies, and penetrating the thin veil that hides the continent from the abiding place of the Eternal, "God bless our native land."

The scene presented by the vast gathering in the dedication building was one never to be forgotten. In many respects it was without precedent. Everything was on the order of the superlative. The dedication hall—the manufacturers' and liberal arts' building—is the largest structure ever erected, and in it was gathered the largest crowd ever assembled beneath a single roof. In the audience were probably more distinguished Americans than have ever been seen together on any commemorative occasion in the history of the republic. Learned jurists from the bench, cabinet officers, governors of states, senators and congressmen, admirals and generals with all the regalia of authority, cardinals with their insignia of apostolic faith, scientists who are fast wresting from jealous nature the problems of the ages—all these gathered here to-day to do honor to the great, silent student of 400 years ago who, in his way, was the pioneer of them all, who led the van of human thought and manly daring and gave to the world a new continent and to posterity an imperishable reverence for Christopher Columbus.

This was the name that was on every lip, in every ode and song, that crowned every peroration, that found utterance in the opening prayer and was softly breathed in closing benediction. All did him honor, and time, that ripens and mellows the gratitude of nations, after 400 years, gave greatest homage to his memory and name. As seven Grecian cities claimed the birthplace of Homer centuries after he had begged his bread throughout their streets and moldered unhonored into dust, so art and science and invention and religion all vied to-day in claiming Columbus as their own. The president of the exposition claimed him as the author of the national development of this age and hemisphere; the eloquent Depew characterizes him as a pioneer of art, science, invention and higher civilization, who had sailed from a country where "force was the sole source and exercise of authority, both by church and state," and the great Catholic Cardinal Gibbons, at almost the same minute, claimed him as a zealous representative of the Church of Rome, an "apostle who was inspired with the sublime ambition of carrying the light of the gospel to a people buried in the darkness of idolatry."

THE PARADE.

The military pageant was one of the leading features of the day. 15,000 regulars and militia escorted the prominent personages to the grounds. The vice-presidential party, consisting of Vice-President Morton, the officers and members of the Columbian commission, and the various committees in charge of the exercises, these were followed by the members of President Harrison's cabinet, the diplomatic representatives of foreign nations, governors of the different states, with their personal staff and, other dignitaries.

As the parade approached the great manufactures building from the south, every marching man hollowed his back, swelled out his chest, drew in his chin, and looked as pretty as the thick coating of dust on his warm and perspiring face and pretty soldier clothes would admit. Then, in a long column, with resounding tramp, they swept through the east of the hall, detachments breaking out here and there after the greater portion of the length of the building had been traversed, and marching off to disband and seek much needed refreshments. The officials in charge of the parade had done nothing to enhance its beauty; they made no pretense of having anything which should in any way appear to be a pageant. They simply got men in column and then let them go. But for all that it was a brilliant parade of 15,000 gallant fellows who, by their own skill, good discipline and gallant bearing made the march to the dedication ceremonies a thing of beauty to be long remembered.

THE EXERCISES.

Arriving at the grounds, the distinguished guests took seats on the large platform erected for the purpose. A moment later and a signal from the leader ushered in the first feature of the programme—the "Columbian March," by Prof. John F. Payne of Cambridge, in honor of the day and of the event. Probably never before was the insignificance of the human voice so fully demonstrated. The chorus of 5,500 voices is a grand aggregate, but in this vast building, over a quarter of a mile in length, those at the extreme north could scarcely have caught sufficient of the sound to distinguish the

As the music ceased the hum of human voices was the only sound to be heard, for over a minute. Suddenly a silence fell over the vast multitude as, at a signal from Bishop Fowler, in sacerdotal garb, he commanded silence and pronounced an invocation. At the conclusion of the prayer Director General Davis advanced to the front and presented the building to the president of the United States for dedication. The director general concluded his address by introducing Mayor Hempstead Washburne of Chicago. The latter bowed a modest acknowledgment to the welcome generously awarded him, and advanced to the stand just vacated by the director general. In a very resonant and clear voice the mayor of the world's fair city extended the freedom of the city to the guests of the day. Following the address of the mayor, President Palmer, of the national commission, introduced Mrs. Sarah C. Le Moyne of New York, who read selections from the dedicatory ode, written by Miss Harriet Monroe of Chicago.

Mrs. Palmer was then introduced, and delivered an address on the part of the lady managers.

President Higinbotham then tendered the buildings, on behalf of the exposition, to President Palmer, of the Columbian commission. President Palmer responded, and then introduced Vice President Morton.

DEDICATED BY MORTON.

When the applause had subsided Vice President Morton spoke as follows:

Deep indeed must be the sorrow which prohibits the president of the United States from being the central figure in these ceremonies. Realizing, from these sumptuous surroundings the extent of the design, the adequacy of the execution and the vastness of the results, we may well imagine how ardently he has aspired to be officially and personally connected with this great work, so linked to the past and to the present of America. With what eloquent words he would have spoken of the heroic achievements and radiant future of this broad country. While profoundly anguished in his most tender earthly affection, he would not have us delay or falter in these dedicatory services, and we can only offer to support his courage by a profound and universal sympathy.

I am not here to recount the story of this city's wonderful rise and advancement of the matchless courage of her people; of her second birth out of the ashes of the most notable conflagration of modern times, nor of the eminent position she has acquired in manufactures; in science and in the arts. I am here in behalf of the government of the United States, in behalf of all the people. All hail to Chicago! All hail to the Columbian exposition! From the St. Lawrence to the gulf, and from the peerless cosmopolitan capital by the sea to the Golden Gate of California, there is no longer a rival to Chicago, except to emulate her in promoting the success of this work.

We trust that from the lands beyond the seas many will come to engage in fraternal competition, or to point us to more excellent standards. If they shall find little in our product to excite their admiration; we shall welcome them to the atmosphere of the new world, where some of the best efforts have been made in the cause of freedom and progress by Washington and Franklin, and Lafayette, by Lincoln and Grant, by Bolivar and Juarez and Toussaint L'Ouverture, by Fulton and Morse and Edison.

We are near the beginning of another century, and if no serious change occurs in our present growth, in the year 1935, in the lifetime of many now in manhood, the English speaking Republicans of America will number 180,000,000. And for them John Bright in a burst of impassioned eloquence predicts one people, one language, one law and one faith; and all over the wide continent the home of freedom and a refuge for the oppressed of every race and clime. If the time should ever come when men trifle with the public conscience, let me predict the patriotic action of the republic in the language of Milton: "Methinks I see in mind a noble and puissant nation rousing herself like a strong man after sleep and shaking her invincible locks; methinks I see her as an eagle renewing her mighty youth and kindling her undazzled eyes at the full midday beam; purging and unscaling her long abused sight at the fountain itself of heavenly radiance; while the whole noise of timorous and flocking birds with those also that love the twilight flutter about amazed at what she means."

Mr. President, in the name of the government of the United States, I hereby dedicate these buildings and their appurtenances intended by the congress of the United States for the use of the world's Columbian exposition, to the world's progress in art, in science, in agriculture and in manufactures. I dedicate them to humanity.

God save the United States of America.

The conclusion of this was the signal for loud and long continued applause, and when the vice president stepped forward to bow his thanks one-eighth of a million men and women rose to their feet and gave him a salvo of applause that he is likely to remember so long as he has breath and life. The "Hallelujah Chorus" was rendered at this point. A good old-fashioned reception of cordiality was extended to Henry Watterson when he came to the front of the stage to deliver his address.

WATTERSON'S ADDRESS.

Col. Watterson spoke in part as follows:

Among the wonders of creative and constructive genius in course of preparation for this festival of the nations, whose formal and official inauguration has brought us together, will presently be witnessed upon the margin of the inter-ocean, which gives to this noble and beautiful city the character and rank of a maritime metropolis, a spectatorium, wherein the Columbian epic will be told with realistic effects surpassing the most splendid and impressive achievements of the modern stage. No one, who has had the good fortune to see the models of this extraordinary work of art, can have failed to be moved by the union, which it embodies, of the antique in history and the current in life and thought, as, beginning with the weird mendicant faluting upon the hillside of Santa Rabida, it traces the strange adventures of the Genoese seer from the royal camp of Santa Fe to the sunny coasts of the Isles of Inde; through the weary watches of the endless night, whose sentinel stars seemed set to mock but not to guide; through the trackless, and shoreless wastes of the mystic sea, spread day by day to bear upon every rise and fall of its heaving bosom the death of fair, fond hopes, the birth of fantastic fears; the peerless and thrilling revelation, and all that has followed to the very moment that beholds us here, citizens, freemen, equal shareholders in the miracle of American civilization and development. Is there one among us who does not thank his maker that he has lived, to join in this universal celebration, this jubilee of mankind?

A better opportunity could not be desired for a study of our peculiarities than is furnished by the present moment. We are in the midst of the quadrennial period established for the selection of a chief magistrate. Each citizen has his right of choice, each has his right to vote and to have his vote freely cast and fairly counted. Wherever this right is assailed for any cause wrong is done and evil must follow, first to the whole country, which has an interest in all its parts, but most to the community immediately involved, which must actually drink of the cup that has contained the poison, and cannot escape its infection. The abridgement of the right of suffrage, however, is very nearly proportioned to the ignorance or indifference of the parties concerned by it, and there is good reason to hope that, with the expanding intelligence of the masses and the growing enlightenment of the times, this particular form of corruption in elections will be reduced below the danger line. To that end, as to all other good ends, the moderation of public sentiment must be our chief reliance; for when men are forced by the general desire for truth, and the light which our modern vehicles throw upon truth, to discuss public questions for truth's sake, when it becomes the plain interest of public men, as it is their plain duty, to do this, and when, above all, friends and neighbors cease to love one another less because of individual differences of opinion about public affairs, the struggle for unfair advantage will be relegated to those who have either no character to lose or none to seek. It is admitted on all sides that the current presidential campaign is freer from excitement and tumult than was ever known before, and it is argued from this circumstance that we are traversing the epoch of the commonplace. If this be so, thank God for it! We have had full enough of the dramatic and the sensational, and need a season of mediocrity and repose. But may we not ascribe the rational way in which the people are going about their business to larger knowledge and experience, and a fairer spirit than have hitherto marked our party contentions? Parties are as essential to free government as oxygen to the atmosphere, or sunshine to vegetation. And party spirit is inseparable from party organism. To the extent that it is tempered by good sense and good feeling, by love of country and integrity of purpose, it is a supreme virtue; and there should be no gag short of a decent regard for the sensibilities of others put upon its freedom and plainness of utterance. Otherwise the limpid pool of democracy would stagnate, and we should have a republic only in name. But we should never cease to be admonished by the warning words of the Father of His Country against the excess of party spirit, re-enforced, as they are by the experience of a century of party warfare; a warfare happily culminating in the complete triumph of American principles, but brought many times dangerously near to the annihilation of all that was great and noble in the national life: Sursum Corda. We have in our own time seen the republic survive

There is no geography in American manhood. There are no sections to American fraternity. It needs but six weeks to change a Vermonter into a Texan; and there never has been a time when, upon the battle field, of the frontier, "Puritan and Cavalier were not convertible terms, having in the beginning a common origin, and so diffused and diluted on American soil as no longer to possess a local habitation, or a nativity, except in the national unit. The men who planted the signals of American civilization upon that sacred rock by Plymouth bay were Englishmen, and so were the men who struck the coast a little lower down, calling their haven of rest after the great Republican commoner, and founding by Hampton Roads a race of heroes and statesmen, the mention of whose names brings a thrill to every heart. The South claims Lincoln, the immortal, for its own; the North has no right to reject Stonewall Jackson, the one typical Puritan soldier of the war, for its own! Nor will it! The time is coming, is almost here, when hanging above many a mantle-board in fair New England—glorifying many a cottage in the Sunny South—shall be seen bound together, in everlasting love and honor, two cross-swords carried to battle respectively by the grandfather who wore the blue and the grandfather who wore the gray.

I cannot trust myself to proceed. We have come here not so much to recall bygone sorrows and glories, as to bask in the sunshine of present prosperity and happiness, to interchange patriotic greetings and indulge good auguries, and, above all, to meet upon the threshold the stranger within our gate, not as a foreigner, but as a guest and friend, for whom nothing that we have is too good.

WORDS FROM DEPEW.

After the singing by the choir of "Star Spangled Banner" and "Hail Columbia," Chauncey M. Depew was introduced. He said:

This day belongs not to America, but to the world. The results of the event it commemorates are the heritage of the peoples of every every race and clime. We celebrate the emancipation of man. The preparation was the work of almost countless centuries, the realization was the revelation of one. The Cross of Calvary was hope; the cross raised on San Salvador was opportunity. But for the first, Columbus would never have sailed; but for the second, there would have been no place for the planting, nurture and the expansion of civil and religious liberty. Ancient history is a dreary record of unstable civilizations. Each reached its zenith of material splendor, and perished. The Assyrian, Persian, Egyptian, Grecian and Roman empires were proofs of the possibilities and limitations of man for conquest and intellectual development. Their destruction involved a sum of misery and relapse which made their creation rather a curse than a blessing. Force was the factor in the government of the world when Christ was born, and force was the sole source and exercise of authority both by church and state when Columbus sailed from Palos. The wise men traveled from the east towards the west under the guidance of the Star of Bethlehem. The spirit of the equality of all men before God and the law, moved westward from Calvary with its revolutionary influence upon old institutions, to the Atlantic ocean. Columbus carried it westward across the seas. The emigrants from England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales, from Germany and Holland, from Sweden and Denmark, from France and Italy, have, under its guidance and inspiration, moved west, and again west, building states and founding cities until the Pacific limited their march. The exhibition of arts and sciences, of industries and inventions, of education and civilization, which the republic of the United States will here present, and to which, through its chief magistrate, it invites all nations, condenses and displays the flower and fruitage of this transcendent miracle. Absolutism in the state and bigoted intolerance in the church, shackled popular unrest and imprisoned thought and enterprise in the fifteenth century. The divine right of kings stamped out the faintest glimmer of revolt against tyranny; and the problems of science, whether of the skies or of the earth, whether of astronomy or geography, were solved or submerged

By Ecclesiastical Decree.

The sum of human happiness has been infinitely increased by the millions from the old world who have improved their conditions in the new, and the returning tide of lesson and experience has incalculably enriched the fatherlands. The divine right of kings has taken its place with the instruments of medieval torture among the curiosities of the antiquary. Only the shadow of kingly authority stands between the government of themselves, by themselves, and the people of Norway and Sweden. The union in one empire of states of Germany is the symbol of Teutonic power and the hope of German liberalism. The petty despotisms of Italy have been merged into a nationality which has centralized its authority in its ancient capitol on the hills of Rome. France was rudely roused from the sullen submission of centuries to intolerable tyranny, by her soldiers returning from service in the American revolution. The wild orgies of the reign of terror were the revenges and excesses of the people, who had discovered their power, but were not prepared for its beneficent use. She fled from herself into the arms of Napoleon. He, too, was a product of the American experiment. He played with kings as with toys, and educated France for liberty. In the process of her evolution from darkness to light, she tried Bourbon, and Orleanist and the third Napoleon and cast them aside. Now in the fulness of time, and through the training in the school of hardest experience, the French people have reared and enjoy a permanent republic. England of the Mayflower, and of James the Second, England of George the Third and of Lord North, has enlarged suffrage and is to-day animated and governed by the democratic spirit. She has her throne, admirably occupied by one of the wisest sovereigns and best of women; but it would not survive one dissolute and unworthy successor. She has her hereditary peers, but the house of lords will be brushed aside the moment it resists the will of the people. The time has arrived for both a more perfect union and greater distance between the Old World and the New. The former indiscriminate welcome to our prairies, and the prestitution to those palaces of art and industry mark the passing period. Unwatched and unhealthy immigration can no longer be permitted to our shores. We must have a national quarantine against Disease, Pauperism and Crime.

We do not want candidates for our hospitals our poor houses or our jails. We cannot admit those who have come to undermine our institutions and subvert our laws. But we will gladly throw wide our gates for, and receive with open arms those who by intelligence and virtue, by thrift and loyalty, are worthy of receiving the equal advantages of the priceless gift of American citizenship. The spirit and object of this exhibition are peace and kinship. If interest in the affairs of this world are vouchsafed to those who have gone before, the spirit of Columbus hovers over us to-day. Only by celestial intelligence can it grasp the full significance of this spectacle and ceremonial. From the first century to the fifteenth counts for little in the history of progress, but in the period between the fifteenth and the twentieth is crowded the romance and reality of human development. Life has been prolonged, and its enjoyment intensified. The powers of the air and the water, the resistless forces of the elements, which in the time of the discoverer were the visible terrors of the wrath of God, have been subdued to the service of man. Art and luxuries which could be possessed and enjoyed only by the rich and noble, the works of genius, which were read and understood only by the learned few, domestic comforts and surroundings beyond the reach of lord or bishop, now adorn and illuminate the homes of our citizens. Serfs are sovereigns and the people are kings. The trophies and splendors of their reign are commonwealths, rich in every attribute of great states and united in a republic whose power and prosperity, and liberty and enlightenment are the wonder and admiration of the world.

All hail, Columbus, discoverer, dreamer, hero and apostle. We here, of every race and country, recognize the horizon which bounded his vision and the infinite scope of his genius. The voice of gratitude and praise for all the blessings which have been showered upon mankind by his adventure is limited to no language, but is uttered in every tongue. Neither marble nor brass can fitly form his statue. Continents are his monument, and unnumbered millions, past, present and to come, who enjoy in their liberties and their happiness the fruits of his faith, will reverently guard and preserve, from century to century his name and fame.

At the close of Mr. Depew's speech more music was rendered, Cardinal Gibbons, and Rev. A. P. McCook offered prayer and the exercises were brought to a close by the singing, of "America," by the vast audience.

No Use.

In Bermuda, says Mrs. Rollins, your driver and your washerwoman bring you every day bunches of flowers that in New York would cost five or six dollars; but not even five or six dollars would induce them to hurry their horses or change the day for bringing back the wash.

In the shops dealers almost resent your demands upon their stock, and the story is vouched for of one shopkeeper who explained his lack of something inquired for, by the extraordinary statement:

"People kept coming and coming for it, and bought it all out just as fast as we got it in; so we stopped keeping it."

Ex-President Cleveland's Buzzard's Bay residence known as Gray Gables, is for sale. It is stated that Mr. Cleveland will again make his summer home at Marion, Mass.

GREAT NORTHERN

TIME CARD.

NO. 3 Daily			NO. Daily
7 40 p m		Lv......St. Paul......Ar	6 55 am
8 10 "	11	......Minneapolis......	6 25 am
6 a m	216	......Barnesville......	10 25 pm
*10 40 am	278	Lv......Crookston......Ar	4 00 pm
*11 15 "	301	......Shirley......	3 30 "
*x11 45 "	311	......Ives......	x3 00 "
x12 20 pm	[illegible]	......Wylie......	x2 20 "
*12 45 "	327	Ar......St. Hilaire......Lv	2 00 "

*Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

S. S. Buzza Agt.

Dr. H. GRUNDY.

Physician

& Surgeon.

Graduate of the University of Toronto Canada and member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario.

Messages from the surrounding country attended to.

Office in Drug Store

THIEF RIVER FALLS,

NORTHERN PACIFIC

THE

GREAT TRAMSCONENTAL ROUTE.

Passes through Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, Manitoba, Montana, Idaho, Oregon and Washington.

THE DINING CAR LINE

Dining cars are run between Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Winnipeg, Helena, Butte, Tacoma, Seattle and Portland.

PULLMAN SLEEPING CAR ROUTE.

Pullman service between Chicago St. Paul Montana and the Pacific Northwest; and between St. Paul, Minneapolis and Minnesota North Dakota and Manitoba points.

THE POPULAR LINE.

Daily Express Trains carry elegant Pullman sleeping Cars, Dining cars, Day Coaches, Pullman Tourist Sleepers and Free Colonist Sleeping Cars.

YELLOWSTONE PARK ROUTE.

The Northern Pacific R. R. is the rail line to Yellowstone Park; the popular line to California and Alaska; and its trains pass through the grandest scenery of seven states

THROUGH TICKETS Are sold at all cupon offices of the Northern Pacific Railroad to points North, East, South and West in the United States and Canada

TIME-SCEDULE.

	Leave Crookston Daily	Arrive Crookston Daily
For Staples, Minneapolis, St. Paul Duluth Ashland and points East and South	7:05 p. m.	8:20 a m.
For Grand Forks Grafton Drayton, Winnipeg and points in North Dakota and Manitoba	8:27 a m.	7:10 p. m

For Rates, maps, Time Tables or special information, apply to Agent Northern Pacific R. R. at Crookston Minn., or

Chas. S. Fee,
Gen. Pass. Agent.
St. Paul Minn.

ST. HILAIRE MEAT MARKET.

All kinds of fresh and salt meat always on hand.

I make a specialty of buying and selling cattle of all kinds.

If you want to buy or sell anything in that line it will pay you to give me a call.

JAMES DAINARD.

FRED Eikhof

DEALER IN CHOICE

WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS.

Beer always on tap. Pool Room in Connection.

Broadway St. Hilaire.

FRANK IVES,

Attorney and Counselor AT LAW,

CROOKSTON and ST. HILAIRE, Minn.

Will Practice in ALL The Courts, OF T STATE and and before the U. S. Land Office at Crookston and at Washington.

Will give special attention to contests of claims.

BREVITIES.

Wheat is 60 cents.

H. E. Ives is in St. Paul this week on business.

Ground feed, shorts and barley for sale. Inquire of E. T. Spafford & Co.

Dr. Barnes, of Fertile, came up last Friday to set the teeth in a few "rakes" in our village.

Miss Josie Harris left to-day for Ada where she will attend school the coming winter.

F. G. Banks, of Thief River Falls, was in town a short time this week on his way home from St. Paul.

Hon. Frank Ives, of Crookston, was in town several days the first of the week looking over the political situation.

J. R. Smith and W. H. Godfrey, auditors for the Great Northern Ry, were here several days last week checking up this station.

Miss Lizzie Hall gave a very pleasant party to a large number of her young friends last Saturday evening. About thirty-five of the little folks attended and thorougly enjoyed themselves for several hours.

ASTRAY.

Taken up on the premises of the undersigned in St. Hilaire 3 steers past two years old red and white spotted and 1 red steer past three years old. Owner can have same by paying expense of keeping and for this notice.

M. Hendrickson

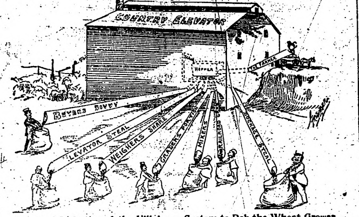
O. E. Tveitmoe, local editor of the Crookston Tribune, addressed a large number of voters in the village hall to-day, on the issues of the campaign from a Peoples party stand point. Mr. Tveitmoe is a forcible speaker and was well received by the people. He will also speak at Thief River Falls this evening and at the town of Norden Oct 27th.

John R. McKinnon, Democratic candidate for representative, came up to our village from Red Lake Falls on Monday on a still hunt for Democrats. We presume he found some in the village for he left on the Crookston train the same day wearing a smile as broad and genial as that worn by the great Red River savannas in June.

J. M. Harson, Democratic candidate for County Auditor, is out in the field making the dirt fly and the opposition hustle in a manner that reminds us of old time political campaigns. Harson is a worker and as he only seems to be drawing strength from the Republicans we say, "go it, Jacob, and convert every Republican in the county—first to Democracy—then we will receive them into our ranks as members of the P. P. without question as to their loyalty."

The completion of the extension of the Great Northern Ry. to Thief River Falls found the denizens of that neighboring burg in a wooderfully happy frame of mind. Conductor H. T. Murray was the recipient of an elegant silver conductor's lantern of the latest pattern and Engineer M. B. Milligan was presented with an elegant silver locomotive clock, by the appreciative citizens, as tokens of their gratitude to the conductor and engineer who took the first train into their village. The occasion was a felicitous one and was highly enjoyed by all who participated.

George J. McManus, the genial good-fellow and ubiquitous life insurance agent, came up on the cattle train Monday from Crookston and at this writing is among our people dealing out indemnity in large chunks to all who have the time and courage to listen to him. George's modesty is his only besetting sin and sometimes causes him serious loss pecuniarily. On the train he came on there were two most excellent specimens of manhood, fit subjects for his fine work, but as they were in charge of very bright, comley and retiring ladies (probably their better halves) George did not dare to tackle them, and let go toward the frozen, inhospitable regions northward uninsured. "Eternal vigilance," George,—you know the quotation.



Practical Operation of the Villainous System to Rob the Wheat Grower.

However important the tariff question as stated in our last issue may be, it pales into utter insignificance when campared with the great financial questions of the day. The old party leaders know this, know that the life and safety of the money power depends upon the success of either, and the country knows that the great banker and the millionaire have controlled the legislation of the country for the last thirty years, and have furnished a large share of the material with which to carry on the campaigns for each and they will not tamely submit to any curtailment of their incomes or profits, and will launch out their millions of ill-gotten gains to keep the Republican party in power and to maintain their strong hold upon the finances of the nation. They are determined to keep gold as a basis of our circulating medium or their advantage is lost. They tell us that to remonitize silver will bring upon us the direst disaster, and that gold will rise in value to such an extent that it will be driven out of circulation; that our country will be flooded with foreign silver, and utter financial ruin will stare us in the face as a result of such action.

Let us see about this: To-day for monetary purposes, an ounce of gold is equal to 16 ounces of silver; in England, France and all the continental countries of Europe, an ounce of gold is only worth 15½ ounces of silver, and in India an ounce of gold is worth but 15 ounces of silver. These facts do not sustain the arguments before mentioned, that if we remonitize silver, foreign silver will be sent to us by the ship-load If European silver be sent to us it must suffer a loss of four cents on a dollar and if sent from India the sender must sustain a loss of eight cents on a dollar. Mexico and the South American republics have a standard like our own and will have no object in sending their silver to us except in payment of trade balances. The banker or business man of no nation whose silver parity is greater than ours will ever part with any of his treasure by sending it to the U. it d States at such a direct loss. They will not send their silver here to prove that the Republican party leaders have told you the truth. We are told by the hireling newspapers that silver to-day in India is worth 33 per cent less than its standard money value, but they don't tell us that the fact cuts no figure in the value of India's circulating medium. Our silver is now selling at about 85 cents per ounce, but a silver dollar, containing 371 grains of pure silver, having a bullion value of about 66 cents, is as freely taken by our people as the gold dollar; and so it is in India. It is not the intrinsic value of the metal that makes the "buzzard" worth a dollar, but the faith and credit of the United States, with its unlimited power of taxation to make the dollar good, it is the promise of the government to pay that makes this bastard dollar good, and we are as well off with that dollar as with any other so long as it will buy what we want. In India the same conditions exist. The Lombard street banker in London and the Wall street banker in New York buy the silver of this country at about 85 cents per ounce, gold basis, ship it to India and have it coined into rupees with the Brittish sterling stamp upon it, and at once, as in the United States, that which cost the thrifty banker 85 cents, by this process and by his shrewdness at once becomes $1,37. With this product of their genius they purchase wheat and cotton in Calcutta and Bombay and ship it to London to compete with the products of America. A dollar and thiry-seven cents worth of these products has cost them in gold but 85 cents and they can afford to "bear" the markets of America even to the destruction of the country and the ruin of the people. This is the whole secret of the low price of wheat and cotton, provided we could have a fair market and an honest deal. But if the Republicans are so sorely frightened about foreign silver being piled upon us, why not exercise the power they hold in passing an act placing a duty of 50 per cent on all silver imported.

Enigmas are sometimes solved by persons of the simplest minds, and the great and most important problems of the day and hour are carried in our heads for months without an attempt to solved them. We have often wondered at the apparent stupidity of men possessive of more than an ordinary store of common sense, and an ability to see the right and detect the wrong, and asked ourself why, especially in politics, such men will keep the wheels of progress in the old ruts worn by the wheels of partisan strife a quarter of a century ago, without any attempt to get out. In a free country, like ours, orthodoxy in politics should have no place, the illiberal thinker should stand aside to make room for the image breaker; The propagandist of liberal thought and a greater liberty and freedom for the average man, must be allowed to come to the front. In these days, when every farmer does his own thinking, especially in politics, it becomes the duty of the pioneer in thought to make sure he is right before he launches out his theories and opinions on the questions that must be discussed, and adopted or rejected by the great jury of farmers before whom these theories and opinions must soon be laid. With all the opportunities of the average business man of the city or village, we venture the assertion that the average farmer is his peer in general information and in knowledge of the prominent political topics of the day; and when we set up our ideas against theirs, and attempt to teach them the doctrines which we have adopted, perhaps without reflection or an intelligent idea why we have adopted them, does it not look a little egotistical or dogmatical in us to try to force upon the modest toiler, ideas which he knows from bitter experiance to be wrong and contrary to good reason and common sense? We are too apt to dictate to those we consider our inferiors in knowledge; too apt to find fault with them to disagree with them, not only in politics but in the management of their farms and general affairs; too apt to accuse them of laziness, inattention to their farms and their own interests, without knowing anything about the circumstances or the forces controlling them. There is not enough community of interest between the business man and the farmer. Every bushel of wheat and every head of cattle and sheep in the country tributary to the market town bears an indirect profit to the merchant, the mechanic, the professional man and the laborer. If the farmer is successful in producing these acres and rearing these cattle, his success is at once felt by all the classes named who do not produce. It can be readily seen then that the success and prosperity of the tiller of the soil is the foundation for the prosperity of the merchant and the other non-producing classes. Hence we are forced to assert that if a protective tariff is a burden to the farmer it must be a burden and a detriment to the merchant and if the free coinage of silver and a more liberal distribution of the circulating medium will better the condition of those who produce the worlds wealth why will it not better the condition of the merchant, the mechanic, the doctor the lawyer and the teacher? These are pertinent questions in which we all have sufficient interest to force us to investigation and we will be untrue to ourselves and untrue to the interests and liberties of our country if we fail to give them a fair and impartial examination and settle back into the old rut made for us to walk in while we wore kilts and copper-toed shoes. We say investigate and see if the farmer is not on the right track, and if he is, get out of the rut and go with him.

STRAYED.

From the premises of the undersigned one red bull with a hole in the right ear. A reward will be paid for the return of the above described animal to

M. Hendrickson.

WANTED. Salesmen. Local and Traveling, To represent our well known house. You need no capital to represents a firm that warrants nursery stock first-class and true to name. WORK ALL THE YEAR. $100 per month to the right man. Apply quick stating age. L. L. MAY & CO.

Nurserymen, Florists and Seeds men, St. Paul Minn.

(This house is responsible.)

U. S. LAND OFFICE,

Crookston Minn September 15 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn., on, December 8 1892 viz:

Charles Will Heden D S no. 11561 for the NE ¼ Sec 20 Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of said land viz:

Ole J. Johnson, O. G. Mostrom, John Mostrom, Knut Steen all of St. Hilaire, Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

People's Party Ticket

For President, JAMES B. WEAVER, of Iowa.

For Vice President, J. G. FIELD, of Virginia.

For Presidential Electors—First District W. H. Norton. Second District—F. M. Currier. Third District—C. P. Carpenter. Fourth District—Dr. E. Fish. Fifth District—Dr. E. F. Clark. Sixth District—C. F. Bodahl.

STATE TICKET.

For Governor, IGNATIUS DONNELLY, of Dakota.

For Lieutenant-Governor, KITTLE HALVORSON, of stearns.

For Secretary of State, H. B. MARTIN, of Hennepin.

For State Treasurer, P. M. RINGDAL, of Polk.

For Attorney General, J. L. McDONALD, of Ramsey.

For Judges of the Supreme Court: Thomas Canty, of Hennepin, Daniel Buck, of Mankato and W. N Davidson, of Rock.

CONGRESSIONAL.

For Congress, H. E. BOEN, of Otter Tail.

JUDICIAL.

For Judge, 14th Judicial District FRANK IVES, of Polk.

LEGISLATIVE.

For Representatives to the Legislature—J. D. Knuteson, of Polk, B. M. Chesley and O. E. Olson, of Norman.

POLK COUNTY TICKET,

For Auditor—C U. Webster,

For Treasurer—J. T. Beaudry.

For Register of Deeds— J. Amundson.

For Sheriff—Arne Grundysen.

For County Attorney—A. R. Holston.

For Judge of Probate—C. M Benson.

For County Surveyor—O. L. Hamery

For Supt. of Schools—A. A. Lommen

For Court Commissioner—J. G. McGrew.

For Coroner—H. Shepard.

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONERS,

First District John E. Oppegaard.

Third District—Christopher Anderson

Fifth District—Robert Anderson.

INTERESTING ITEM.

GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY LINE

It is to the interest of parties contemplating going east to consider the great advantages the Great Northern offers them through its fast passenger service to St. Paul and to all points west to the Pacific coast, their free colonist cars, and magnificent Dining and Sleeping cars. The shortest route, close connections, quickest time and fare as low as the lowest. Any information cheerfully given,

S. S. Buzza
Agent.

MONEY TO LOAN.

I am prepared to make a few choice loans on real estate at 10 per cent straight.

H. E. IVES.

FIFTY CENTS IN CASH

Will secure the Spectator from now to Jan. 1st 1893, a hot political campaign is now on and we will try to make the Spectator interesting we make this low offer so that every farmer in this part of the country can afford to subscribe.

STRAYED

From my pasture on the 9th, day of October, one bay colt four years old, one bay mare 6 years old both branded F L on shoulder. Liberal reward offered for information.

S. M. Dainard.

FOR SALE.

A dapple-gray stallion, seven years old, weight about 1,600. Will sell or trade.

Peter Lindbloom
Bray Tp, Sec. 23.

CLOSING OUT SALE!

At E M Hoff's Store

My whole stock of

Dry Goods and Notions

Gents Furnshing, Goods

$5,000 worth of ready made clothing

Foot wear of all kinds and everything belonging to a full stocked general merchandise store will be closed out at cost in the next 90 days.

COME EVERY BODY

AND

SECURE GOOD BARGAINS.

E. M. HOFF

CROWN ROLLER MILL.

EQUIPPED WITH THE LATEST AND BEST IMPROVED MACHINERY.

Manufactures the well known PERFECTION FANCY PATENT and WHITE ROSEFLOUR.

Rye and Feed mill in connection.

Flour and Feed always kept on hand

Custom work a specialty.

FRICKER & WELCH Prop,

HILAIRE MINNESOTA

CHAS G. RAPP.

A large and complete line of

General Merchandise.

CONSISTING OF

Dry Goods, Groceries, Clothing Boots & Shoes, Hats & Caps Notions

THE ST. HILAIRE SPECTATOR.
[illegible] EVERY WEDNESDAY EVENING
[illegible], Propr.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE:
Advance, $1.50 Per Year
If not in Advance, $2.00 Per Year

Entered in The Post Office at St. Hilaire, as Second Class Mail Matter.

WEDNESDAY October 26, 1892

AN ALABAMA REVOLT.

HONEST CITIZENS WILL FIGHT THE JONES GANG'S METHODS.

A Lifelong Democrat Denounces the Scoundrels Who Have Disgraced His Old Party—Eight Hundred Men Pledged to See a Fair Count—The War Over.

A special correspondent of the New York Press gave a graphic account of the opening hours of the Alabama state convention of the Jeffersonian Democrats and People's party, who met in joint session at Birmingham. Following is a portion of the report:

The joint convention of the People's party and the Jeffersonian Democrats, who supported Kolb in the recent election for governor, met this morning with between 700 and 800 delegates, representing every county in the state. There were not half a dozen colored men among them. The wool hats, careless dress, slouching gait and sunburned faces indicated the Alabama farmer, who tills his fields with his own labor. Nine-tenths of them were representatives of the class from which came the rank and file of the southern army during the rebellion. Many of them had worn the gray uniform; some had empty sleeves; others walked with a limping step.

Like all new bodies they were slow in getting down to business, and like all southern crowds they wanted to hear somebody make a speech. Weaver and Field, the People's party candidates for president and vice president, entertained them in an open air meeting in the middle of the day. One had worn the gray, the other the blue. It was proof that the war was over and that a new generation had grown up with new interests. The band played "Yankee Doodle" and "Dixie" by turns, and Weaver was cheered even louder than Field. Mrs. Lease, of Kansas, also spoke.

Then the convention came together again in the opera house and Chairman Bowman was called upon for a speech. He is a tall, broad shouldered, lean waisted native of the south, the born leader of a popular movement, eloquent in speech, handsome to look at and quick on the trigger. He has three bullet holes in him, and the reputation of being ready to take chances on more. Much of his speech was devoted to local issues.

He pointed out that Democratic politics in Alabama for twenty years had consisted in keeping the same old ring of politicians in office, who did nothing and cared nothing for the interests of the common people of the state. He touched upon the incidents that led up to the independent candidacy of Kolb against Jones for governor, and showed how, even by the official count, which was manipulated by the Jones men, Kolb carried all but three or four of the white counties in the state.

"Today," he thundered, "they have Thomas G. Jones perched upon a stack of stuffed ballot boxes from the black belt counties and call him governor of Alabama.

"The organized Democracy of Alabama have been caught with the stolen goods in their possession, and they will never be forgiven unless they acknowledge the theft and surrender the plunder."

He said four-fifths of the negro vote, where it had a chance to be cast and counted, was for Kolb. He declared that Kolb had been elected by a tremendous majority, and challenged the head of the Democratic ticket to call the election inspectors of five counties into a room and ask them to tell the truth about the count.

If it did not show that the ballot boxes had been stuffed and miscounted enough in these counties alone to reverse the whole majority claimed for the Jones ticket, he would agree to withdraw all contests and accept the count. He deferred going into details of the election frauds until later in the proceedings, but mentioned one conscience smitten election inspector who had voluntarily confessed to Captain Kolb in the presence of witnesses that at his polling place, which had been returned as giving Jones 400 majority, the vote had really been 255 for Kolb and 43 for Jones.

By such nefarious practices as these, the chairman's speech declared, the organized Democracy had made enemies out of those who had once been their brothers. They would beg no longer that these things should not be done. They would see to it that they could not be done.

"There will be another election in November," he cried, "and we will have a full congressional and electoral ticket in the field against that of the organized Democracy. How many of you will be willing to serve as United States supervisors and deputy marshals to see that it is not counted out? As many as are willing stand up."

The delegates did not merely rise up. They sprang to their feet, 800 as one man, waving their hands and shouting, "I, I, I!" After the tumult had subsided, pointing his finger at a group of Democratic politicians in the gallery, he continued: "Take warning by what you have seen. Heretofore you have had to deal with poor, half blind negroes at the polls on election day. These are white men like yourselves. From now henceforth and forever the free white men of Alabama mean to throw off the shackles of ballot box stuffers and election thieves. "Let them try the old game in November and they will be indicted under the laws of the United States, and native white southern citizens of Alabama will go into the jury boxes and convict them."

Such a denunciation of election methods in the south, such a menace to Democratic supremacy in Alabama was never before thundered from the lips of one who had been born and bred among them and never voted a Republican ticket in his life.

In the list of new papers given in Newspaperdom for August there are 25 Democratic, 87 Republican and 47 People's. The summary for the last three months is Democratic, 87; Republican, 83, and People's, 185.

WEAVER AT PULASKI.

The People's Champion Unmasks a Lie Manufactured by His Enemies.

My attention has been called to the publication in various Democratic papers concerning my administration as commander of the post at Pulaski, Tenn., in the winter of 1863-4. The charge that I ever imprisoned any one and then released him for a moneyed consideration, or that I ever oppressed any one, male or female, or ever charged the people of that locality for passes through the lines of the Federal army, or that I ever in any manner extorted money from the people of that locality and appropriated the same to my own use, is an unmitigated lie.

I was assigned to the command of the post at Pulaski by order of General G. M. Dodge, commander of the left wing of the Sixteenth army corps. Upon entering that part of Tennessee General Dodge issued an order and made it public in which he stated that his army was in need of supplies of every kind, and that if the people would bring in supplies vouchers would be rendered for the same without making any inquiries as to the loyalty or disloyalty of the parties. The people brought in their supplies, and vouchers were given, and they were all paid by the assistant commissary general, Cyrus C. Carpenter. The left wing, Sixteenth army corps, consisting of several divisions of troops, was encamped at Pulaski during the winter, with General Dodge in command.

During my administration as commander of the post a large number of refugees came within our lines. They came from the Confederate army in Alabama and elsewhere. They were totally without supplies and destitute, and at that time they could not be allowed to depart without restraint. General Dodge issued an order commanding me to make a levy of $2,000, as I now remember, from wealthy citizens living in the vicinity, for the purpose of paying for supplies necessary for the sustenance of these refugees. In obedience to that command, I issued an order reciting the authority under which I was acting, and served it upon certain parties, doubtless the parties named in the circular sent out from Pulaski. The money collected was paid direct to Colonel Cyrus C. Carpenter, assistant commissary general of the left wing, Sixteenth army corps, and did not pass through my hands, if I remember correctly, and the wants of the refugees were supplied. In no event was one cent of it retained by myself.

General Dodge is well known to the people of the whole country, being at present in charge of an extensive railway system in the southwest, and Colonel Carpenter has since served as an officer in the treasury department, as a member of congress and as governor of the state of Iowa. To those officers, and to all others who knew me in the army, I refer all questions concerning my rectitude and honorable conduct as a soldier. There is not a human being—man, woman or child, living or dead—that I ever oppressed or mistreated while I was in the service of my country. I did not dispossess any one of his dwelling house and appropriate the same for officers' quarters during my stay in Pulaski.

My headquarters were in the court house, and I boarded with a private family, that of Mrs. Ballentyne. The officers of my regiment lived in their tents in line with their respective companies. The several divisions, brigades and regiments encamped at Pulaski were not under my authority—not even my own regiment—while I was in command of the post. It is manifestly absurd and silly to charge to my account the misfortunes and misdeeds incident to the military occupancy of that part of the country. It is promulgated for an evil purpose and is too transparent to deceive any one.

The confiscation of property is cruel, the taking of life is cruel, every phase of war is cruel, and unfortunately our unhappy country had a surfeit of it. For my standing in the community and during the time I commanded the said post I refer to Mr. Harris, the Ballentyne family, Rev. Robert Caldwell and others who lived in Pulaski at the time of my sojourn there. My association with the people was as peaceful and fraternal as possible during the existence of hostilities and remarkably so in all that region of the country.

No complaints were ever made to me concerning the matter now hatched up, and so far as I know none were ever made to General Dodge. The troops at Pulaski were under the command of General Dodge, and I was acting under his authority myself. Had I been guilty of the outrages charged he would, upon being made acquainted with the fact, have removed me instantly.—J. B. Weaver in Southern Alliance Farmer.

A Brave Woman.

The People's party nominee for attorney general in Montana, Miss Ella L. Knowles, is a political hustler. She addressed public meetings at different points in the state nearly every week day in August and will keep it up until election. Sometimes she speaks two and three times in twenty-four hours. The women taking part in the independent political movement are not saying much about their "rights," but they are seizing them and holding them with a firm hand.—Chicago Vanguard.

To Arrange Matters with Money.

"I am afraid our situation is critical," said Congressman Oates recently. "To carry Alabama for Cleveland is going to take hard work and lots of money. I have not been home very long, but I find many Democrats leaving the party. Something must be done at once. Still I have confidence that we can arrange matters before November.

The Farmers' Alliance has absolute and undisputed control of the Democratic party machinery in this state and has the votes, white votes, behind them. This is the condition that is to be borne in mind when one figures upon the political future of South Carolina.—South Carolina Cor. New York Sun.

Volume of Money.

John C. Calhoun, who is recognized as one of the most profound statesmen and philosophers of this or any other country, maintained that there should be in circulation, at that time (1837), one dollar in money for every thirty dollars' worth of property. No one in the United States senate at that time controverted the proposition, though it was composed of as able statesmen as ever assembled in council.

A HIGH AUTHORITY.

Proof That the Pretended Tariff Contest Between the Old Parties Is a Sham.

In proof of the charge made by People's party orators and writers, that the supposed difference between the two old parties on the tariff question is sham, the following from the New York Sun, a leading Democratic paper, is offered:

For historical purposes we now place side by side the Republican declaration of 1892 concerning the tariff and the resolution reported at Chicago by the platform committee:

REPUBLICAN.	DEMOCRATIC.
We believe that all articles which cannot be produced in the United States, except luxuries, should be admitted free of duty, and that on all imports coming into competition with the products of American labor there should be duties levied equal to the difference between wages at home and abroad.	When custom house taxation is levied upon articles of any kind produced in this country the difference between the cost of labor here and abroad, when such difference exists, fully measures any possible benefits to labor. In making reductions in taxes it is not proposed to injure any domestic industries, but rather to promote their healthy growth.

The Republican plank and the proposed Democratic plank, it will be observed, amount to about the same thing. The principle of protection is recognized and affirmed in both. For the Democratic resolution recognizing and affirming protection the convention substituted another resolution denouncing "Republican protection" as a fraud and a robbery and declaring that the federal government has no constitutional power to enforce and collect tariff duties "except for the purpose of revenue only."

Nevertheless 353 members of the convention voted for the tariff plank as originally presented by the committee on resolutions, with the approval of Mr. Cleveland's managers, and, it is said, with the approval of Mr. Cleveland himself. The proposition to substitute for the resolution looking toward protection a resolution denouncing protection and declaring for a revenue tariff only was resisted by the solid vote of Arkansas, California, Connecticut, Kansas, Minnesota, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont and Wisconsin. The solid vote of every one of these states was afterward cast for Mr. Cleveland's nomination.

Will anybody but a free trade Mugwump pretend that the Democrats of New Jersey and Connecticut, for example, are not Democrats because they refused to denounce protection and to declare for free trade?

West of the Mississippi.

A glance over the whole field is full of encouragement to every well wisher of the People's party.

The transmississippi states are moving with the tread of disciplined veterans. Kansas proposes to keep her well earned reputation of being the advance guard of this great movement. In all the districts and in every school house the people are pushing ahead.

The Nebraska campaign is pushed with vigor. The Democrats are practically disorganized. In Minnesota the Alliance forces are all now pulling in harmony and the chances are very strong for carrying the state. The silver states are moving like an avalanche. The action of Senator Stewart, of Nevada, in coming out for the People's party has removed the last prop, and they are all coming. It is safe to repeat the assertion that Mr. Harrison will not get a vote west of the Mississippi unless it be in Iowa.—Nonconformist.

Mr. Blaine says, "The tariff on imports is the first issue." Well, if age is any cause for priority it certainly is.—Iowa Tribune.

Ask Your Dealer For
[illegible]
WHIPS.
FEATHERBONE is made from Enameled Quills—nature's own toughest, and strongest elastic material. Best wearing whips made for 35c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50. All styles for Buggy, Cart, Track, Team and Riding. Be sure and ask for a FEATHERBONE.
FOR SALE BY
S. M. HOFF
St. Hilaire

Going to Buy
A Dictionary?
GET THE BEST,
Webster's International.
A Choice Gift
A Grand Family Educator
A Library in Itself
The Standard Authority
WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY
SOLD BY ALL BOOKSELLERS.
The International is a new book from cover to cover, fully abreast of the times, and is the successor of the authentic "Unabridged." Ten years were spent in revising, 100 editors employed and over $300,000 expended before the first copy was printed.
Do not buy reprints of obsolete and comparatively worthless editions.
Send for free pamphlet containing specimen pages and full particulars.
G. & C. MERRIAM CO., Publishers,
SPRINGFIELD, MASS., U. S. A.

U.S. LAND OFFICE.

Crookston, Minn., Nov. 12 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on November 28 1892. viz:

Theodore Halvorson D S 11948 for the SE¼ Sec. 20 Tp 152 R. 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Knut Steen, Anton Lee, Ole J. Hegg, Ole Johnson, all of St. Hilaire Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

E. T. SPAFFORD. S. M. DAINARD
E. T. SPAFFORD & CO.
DEALERS IN
LUMBER, LATH AND SHINGLES.
A complete stock of all kinds of Lumber Lath, Shingles, Mouldings, Building Paper Sash, Doors and Screens, Lime, Cement Stucco, Plastering Hair, Brick etc. always hand at the lowest market prices.
S. M. Dainard, Manager.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE, MINN

E. T. SPAFFORD & GO.
WILL ALWAYS PAY THE
HIGHEST MARKET PRICES
FOR
All kinds of
CATTLE.
Also for Cord wood, Hay, Oats,
Barley and flax.
Ground Feed for Sale
S. M. DAINARD.
Manager.

Reserved For
THE
ST. HILAIRE
TOWNSITE
COMPANY

W. A. ARTHUR.
DEALER IN
FRUITS, CONFECTIONARY
TOBACCO AND CIGARS.
STATIONARY OF ALL KINDS
Lunch Counter
Warm meals at all hours.
BROADWAY. ST. HILAIRE MINNESOTA

JUSTUS L. JOHNSON
DEALER IN
pure medicines Fancy articles, perfumer and stationery, paints oils and dye stuffs.
Cigars, Candy, Fruit and Soft Drinks always on hand.
Barbershop in connection
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE

I CAN SAVE YOU
MONFY
If you wish to make
REAL ESTATE
LOANS
For full particulars call on or address
H. E. IVES.
SPECTATOR OFFICE ST. HILAIRE.

HOLMES BRO'S
Dealer in
HARDWARE, TINWARE,
We are carrying a heavy and complete line of Heating and Cooking stoves.
GOOD GOODS LOW PRICES.
CALL ON US FOR BARGAINS
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE MINN.

FARMERS STORE
NEW GOOdS AT HARD PAN PRICES.
If you want to save money do your trading with
HALL BROS.
DEALER IN
Dry Goods, Groceries
NotIONS.
BROADWAY. ST. HILA

S. M. HOFF
DEALER IN
HARDWARE
A new and complete stock of all kinds of Hardware, Tinware, Stoves, Fencing wire, Nais, in fact everything usuay kept in a first-class Hardware Store,
AT GREATLY REDUCED pRIGES
Call and examine Goods
and Get Our Prices.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE

DR PRICE'S Cream Baking Powder.
The only Pure Cream of Tartar Powder.—No Ammonia; No Alum.
Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

PROF. HERMANN.

He Throw the Sultan's Watch Overboard and Then Went Fishing for It.

"During the passage on the yacht I was brought into close contact with the Sultan and noticed that he had a most magnificent watch, which he consulted and handled as if it were the apple of his eye," writes Hermann in the North American Review. "This of course was a good thing for me, for, as I was performing before him personally, it was not etiquette to take anything from the audience. I, thereupon asked him to take out his watch and show it to me, which he did. I, then said:

"Will your imperial master allow me to throw this watch overboard?"

"He laughed at first, but a second afterwards his brow darkened and he looked a little bit as if he was offended with me for making the request.

"'If,' said I, 'I do not return the watch to you exactly as you gave it to me, you may put me in irons for the rest of my life if you want to.'

"The Sultan looked me straight in the eye, with a piercing glance for a second, handed the watch to me, and I instantly threw it into the rippling waves of the Bosphorous. The yacht careened over, for every individual, from the cabin boy on the forcastle to the Sultan himself astern, rushed to the side and looked overboard after the watch. I felt that if anything went wrong with this trick I certainly should be put in irons; but I called for a fishing line, and instead of showing my anxiety, at once proceeded to do a little fishing, while everyone looked at me, not so much with astonishment, as with pure disbelief in my ability to recover the watch, which was not only one of the things in the world the Sultan liked, but was worth a great deal more than any watch I myself had ever seen.

"My fishing, however, happened to be prosperous, for in a few minutes I drew up a little shiner and landed him safely on the deck. I brought it before the Sultan, took out my pocket knife, ripped open the fish, and presented the watch to his majesty, in, of course, exactly the same condition as it was when he handed it to me. Turks as a rule are not very demonstrative, and I found in after life to make a Turk laugh heartily was impossible. They smile, look pleased and with their dainty pointed nails pick their beards, but on this occasion every Turk, from the Sultan and his blue-blooded Pashas to the sailors in the fore-castle, sent up one howl of delight that floated over the beautiful Golden Horn and reechoed from the hills of Asia."

STORY OF A SKULL.

No Affidavit as to Its Truthfulness Is Deemed Necessary.

A skeleton in the office of the Vienna Progress, a doctor's stratagem, and a frightened editor. Dr. W. S. Howell, brother of the Progress, had this skeleton in a box. One day he pulled out the ugly, ghastly, grinning skull and began to handle it. Finally, he decided that he wanted that skull opened so that he could study the inside structure. There being several seams in the skull he decided to fill the skull with peas and soak them in water, thinking that they would force the seam apart. He asked the editor to help him and the latter poured peas and water into the hollow bone and corked up the eyes and nose holes to keep it from running out.

Some time after the editor was startled to see that the peas had sprouted in the skull and the vines were of most wonderful growth. Out of the hole where the backbone is jointed to the neck an army of little vines had grown and by some unknown instinctive power they had twined in and through all the bones of that body. The young tendrils had wrapped around the stovepipe and table legs and the whole skeleton had been reared upright in the middle of the room. From the nostrils and eyes vines were streaming that had clustered around and upon the presses, stand, and tables, and from each joint hung a pod in the likeness of a small skull, the exact counterpart of the large one.

It is rumored that when the editor beheld these things he left the office by the window route and the skeleton is still in full editorial control—Atlanta Constitution.

Respectful.

In Quito, according to Mr. Whymper, it is customary when a visitor takes off his hat on entering a room, to beg him to put it on again; and in the absence of permission, leave is generally requested.

This custom is due to apprehension that cold will be taken if the head is uncovered. In Quito there are no stoves, fireplaces, nor chimneys.

The same persons, on going out of doors, take off their hats to flashes of lightning, no matter if rain is falling; and when the streets are busy and lightning is abundant, a grotesque effect is produced by these salutations, which seem to be regarded as a duty by all well-behaved persons, and are performed as punctiliously as the homage paid to religious processions.

Making the Wind Useful.

Two railroad companies, one in Indiana and the other in Florida, have experienced the mortification during the last few days of finding their locomotives chained to the track as the result of legal process for debt. In one case a counter appeal to the law secured release, but in the other case inventive genius triumphed, for, although the only engine on the road continued in humiliating captivity, operations were resumed by means of a flat car rigged up with sails, and at last accounts this uncommon carrier was "making regular trips" over the entire length of the road—thirteen miles.

She Has Given Up Protesting.

At the theatre: She—That couple in front of us, do you think they are married?

He—Yes, I am sure they are. They have been married a long time, too.

"Why, how do you know?"

"Haven't you noticed that when a pretty girl comes on the stage she always hands the opera glasses over right away.—Somerville Journal.

France and Germany are likely to engage in a serious diplomatic dispute over German interference on behalf of the Dahomeyans in their war with the French.

LEWIS' 98 % LYE
Powdered and Perfumed
(PATENTED)
The strongest and purest Lye made. Unlike other Lye, it being a fine powder and packed in a can with removable lid, the contents are always ready for use. Will make the best perfumed Hard Soap in 20 minutes without boiling. It is the best for cleansing waste pipes, disinfecting sinks, closets, washing bottles, paints, trees, etc.
PENNA. SALT M'F'G CO.
Gen. Agts., Phila., Pa.

WE WANT $100,000.00 SALESMEN
1,200 ACRES. Largest in the West. Valuable Specialties.
Responsible, Highest Com. & Salaries.
For our immense stock of NORTHERN GROWN FRUITS, Ornamental Trees, Shrubs, Etc. Experience not necessary. PAY WEEKLY. Apply at once for terms, etc., stating age. The JEWELL NURSERY CO., Lake City, Minn.
☞ Name this Paper every time you write.

Appleton's Business College
16 Fifth Street South, Minneapolis
Bookkeeping, Shorthand, Penmanship, English. Mention this paper. Address,
A. R. ARCHIBALD, Manager.

SHORTHAND Thoroughly taught by mail or personally. SITUATIONS PROCURED all pupils when competent. Send for catalogue. J. D. HESS, Pioneer Press Building, St. Paul, Minn.

Asthma The African Kola Plant, discovered in Congo, West Africa, is Nature's Sure Cure for Asthma. Cure Guaranteed or No Pay. Export Office, 1164 Broadway, New York. For Large Trial Case, Free by Mail, address KOLA IMPORTING CO., 132 Vine St., Cincinnati, O.

DOUBLE Breech-Loader $7.50. RIFLES $2.00 WATCHES GUNS BICYCLES $15. All kinds cheaper than elsewhere. Before you buy, send stamp for catalogue to The Powell & Clement Co., 166 Main St., Cincinnati, O.

IMPORTED Percheron & Shire Stallions first class $800; 1, 2 & 3 years' time. Imported mares cheap. Hiram C. Wheeler, Odebolt, Sac Co., Iowa.

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till cured. DR. J. STEPHENS, Lebanon, Ohio.

"German Syrup"
Two bottles of German Syrup cured me of Hemorrhage of the Lungs when other remedies failed. I am a married man and thirty-six years of age, and live with my wife and two little girls at Durham, Mo. I have stated this brief and plain so that all may understand. My case was a bad one, and I shall be glad to tell anyone about it who will write me. PHILIP L. SCHENCK, P. O. Box 45, April 25, 1890. No man could ask a more honorable, business-like statement.

"MOTHER'S FRIEND"
is a scientifically prepared Liniment and harmless; every ingredient is of recognized value and in constant use by the medical profession. It shortens Labor, Lessens Pain, Diminishes Danger to life of Mother and Child. Book "To Mothers" mailed free, containing valuable information and voluntary testimonials.
Sent by express, charges prepaid, on receipt of price, $1.50 per bottle.
BRADFIELD REGULATOR CO., Atlanta, Ga.
Sold by all druggists.

CURES CATARRH
LONDON BALM
LONDON BALM CO. NEW YORK
CURES CATARRH HAY FEVER
PRICE 50¢
SOLD BY YOUR DRUGGIST.

N. W. N. U. No. 44—1892

"WELL BRED, SOON WED." GIRLS WHO USE SAPOLIO ARE QUICKLY MARRIED. TRY IT IN YOUR NEXT HOUSE-CLEANING.

CHAS. E. LEWIS & CO.
GRAIN COMMISSION — MINNEAPOLIS.
Highest Prices. Prompt returns. Buy and Sell for in "Futures" delivery in lots of 1000 bu and upwards. Write for our price Current.

AT TWILIGHT.

When the golden glimmer
Dimmer grows and dimmer,
And shadow's tremor
Shifts across the wall,
Touch the old chords brightly,
Let them tremble slightly
Into tune, and lightly
Tender themes recall.

Then thy soul surrender
To the soulful splendor
Of the music tender
One with thee to be.
Binding smiles together
With an airy tether,
Love's enchanted weather,
Pain's euthanasy.

Let your dark eyes leaning,
Up to mine their meaning,
Diviner glory gleaning
From the seraph strain,
Search mine own, revealing
Passion's dewy feeling,
Droop while I am kneeling,
Draining them again.
Ah, the strain is dying.

And I hear you sighing,
And your hand is lying
Softly in my hair.
And your lips are bending
On mine own and lending
Ectacy transcending,
Aught I know or care.

Now the purple glimmer
Dimmer grows and dimmer,
And the shadow grimmer
Spreading o'er the wall;
Hushed the music beating,
Souls in kisses meeting,
Love and love repeating,
While the plovers call.

THE CHILD.

It was the twelfth Brumaire in the second year of the French republic. The day was cheerless, and the sky dark with a threatening snowstorm, as the beautiful Delphine, Countess of Athis under the monarchy, alighted from a hack on the Pont Neuf, close to a liberty-tree surmonted with its red cap. A man, who had been leaning for sometime against the pedestal from which they had dislodged the statue of Henry IV., came eagerly forward and lifted his fur cap. His hair was close cropped in revolutionary fashion, and he wore a ragged carmagole open at the throat without any cravat; but even thus disguised, the lady recognized Maurice Despies one of the youngest and most promising advocates in the last parliament.

"Maurice," she said, "your dress is admirable; but that does not insure your safety. I have sent for you to take me before the revolutionary tribunal."

"I, Delphine, take you before these executioners!"

"You know that our friend Lefebvre is brought to trial today."

"Yes, I know that, Delphine, and I know, too, that he will not be alive tomorrow."

"And I Maurice know that I ought to testify in his behalf. Since the 12th of July I have often heard him declare himself a republican, and I can prove that he refused a place offered him as tutor of the Dauphin—against my advice, it is true I can bring forward many instances of his patriotism that must convince his judges."

"They will not listen to you. Write, send word, but do not go yourself;"

She looked at him beseechingly.

"Do not try and discourage me, Maurice. If you only knew how frightened I am in such a crowd and how hard it is to do my duty! I am trembling now and only go because I must."

"You ask me, Delphine, to take you to certain death."

"If you really love me, Maurice, you would not have me cowardly."

"But it is so useless."

"It is never useless to do our duty. I have been perfectly frank in acknowledging my weakness; but what would you truly think of me if I should follow your advice, turn now and go back to my house at Auteuil?"

"Come then," said Maurice. She took his arm and they walked along the quay, talking in a low tone of the old friend whose courage had brought him before the bloody tribunal.

"He was hiding," said Mme. d'Athis, "at Mme. d'Aubry's, my lace woman's, and he was perfectly safe there; but he insisted on leaving because he had reason to think that his stay was endangering his benefactress. He succeeded in reaching Sevres in safety, but he was recognized in a wineshop by some Jacobins, brought back to Paris, and now he is in the conciergerie awaiting his trial. It will go hard with him."

"Thank you, Delphine, for sending to let me know."

"Who but the man I love, Maurice, should share my danger?"

As they turned the corner of the large square clock tower that abuts on the quay, they saw a crowd of armed men, tumultuously swaying to and fro before the iron gateway of the palace of justice. Delphine quickly withdrew her hand from Maurice's arm.

"Keep me in sight," she said. "My courage will fail me if I do not feel that you are looking at me all the time; but it is best that we should not seem to be together. I had better appear to be quite alone, for I have an instinctive feeling that I shall be safer if these creatures think me entirely unprotected."

He yielded to her imperious sweetness, stopped outside the gate and then entered, following at a distance the woman now threading her way through the brandished pikes and sabers. The wide staircase was crowded with a rabble in sabots, carmagnoles, and red caps, singing, shouting, and surging to and fro. Groups of men blocked the entrances to the different revolutionary tribunals, loudly urging summary proceedings and a general massacre, accusing the authorities of lukewarmness and leniency toward the guilty. Newspaper venders came and went, crying: "Here you have a list of lucky numbers in the lotery of the holy gullotine! Who will buy the list? Buy the treason of Joseph Lefebvre former physician of the infamous Capet. Buy the account of the dreadful conspiracy of the traitor Lefebvre to bring about the massacre of all good patriots."

Delphine made her way through the crowd. She was going upstairs when she was brought to a stand by man dressed in a carmagnole, a self-appointed sentinel. "Where are you going citizen?"

"I am going, citizen, to attend the trial of Joseph Lefebvre; I am a witness."

He made no objection, and she was moving on when a hideous woman with a baby in her arms protested, declaring that aristocrats ought to be kept away from the tribunals, where they only went to corrupt the judges. She, for instance, that woman, would go and show her face and weep and faint and turn the head of all those men inside. Such creatures know perfectly well what they were about, and that was the way justice was cheated and traitors escaped who let people die of starvation. But Delphine hurried on to the room where she heard the clerk of court reading the summons of Joseph Lefebvre.

Protected by his dress, Despies followed her unmolested. But the woman's railing had enflamed vindictive hatred, and on all sides cries arose of "Marat has gone. We have lost our best friend. Since he was killed the aristocrats are raising their heads. Down with the aristocrats! Death to the conspirators! To the gullotine with the enemies of the people! Death to the false witnesses! Down with the sorceresses, the fine ladies!"

The indictment against Joseph Lefebvre was read, the interrogatory was over—the witnesses were to be heard. Every moment some one coming out of the courtroom gave to the crowd outside a distorted account of some incident connected with the trial. Among other things it was asserted that it was proved that the infamous Dr. Lefebvre had constantly administered poison, instead of medicine, to his poor patients. And when it was reported that a woman had testified in favor of the accused, the tumult reached its climax and there were shouts of "She is his accomplice! Send her to the gullotine with him!" Then there were interminable disputes, shameful exhibitions of brutal ignorance and fiendish cruelty.

The hours wore away and the popular impatience grew more uncontrollable, kept at fever heat by occasional rumors of a possible acquittal. The cries, "Death to the false witnesses!" grew louder and louder. The September butchers, massed on the stairs, were talking of breaking down the door when it opened and Delphine appeared. At the sight of the furious, threatening mob she paused for a moment, proudly erect, but very pale. Maurice, who had followed her closely, pressed to her side as she stood there, encircled by the bare, brawny arms, the clinched fists, and uplifted sabers of these bloodthirsty men, but she restrained him by an almost imperceptible motion of her head. The threats redoubled. The women's shrill cries rose fiercely above the drunken yells of some of the men. The most frightful of all these women, the same creature with a child in her arms, who kept the crowd in a state of continual excitement for hours, now pressed forward, and, shaking her fist in Delphine's face, shrieked: "Yes, my fine lady, you have got to bleed for it!"

Then a half-naked, hairy-breasted giant pushed the woman aside and seemed about to strike. Mme d'Athis bit her lips to bring back the ebbing blood, and conscious that her lofty aspect of virginial purity and calmness was her only protection—that the terrified shrinking of a predestined victim would be instantly fatal—she cast her eyes about her and remarked the hideous mother who stood there still in a threatening attitude. Advancing toward her, she simply said:

"You have a beautiful child."

At there words, the kindest perhaps she had ever heard, the mother's heart was touched. Tears came to her eyes.

"Take him," she said, and she held the baby out to Delphine, who took him in her arms and walked down the stairs unharmed, smiling in the child's face, while the crowd, hesitating, subdued, taken by surprise, made way for her to pass. She walked thus across the court with her innocent protector and was safe. Outside the gate she gave the baby to its mother. Neither uttered a word, but a tear fell on the child as she handed him back.

Maurice had gone before, and they both took shelter in the carriage waiting for them at the clock tower. Turning away, the wheels of their hack came in contact with the rough cart driving up to take Joseph Lefebvre to the scaffold.

A Remarkable Name.

There would be nothing bad, unseemly or lacking in euphony about Mrs. Carrie Lane Chapman Catt's name if she did not appear to be assured of it herself. Her present husband, Mr. George Washington Catt, formerly a good citizen of Des Moines is a good and successful man, and is not a "10-cent man," either. Since leaving Des Moines he has made some fortunate investments in the new state of Washington, by which he has acquired a handsome competency. Mrs. Catt, however, is a good, bright and forceful Iowa woman, is endowed with unusual energy and ability, and she has the right, so Dr. Blackwell says, to retain any name of which she has been legally possessed. The good doctor says when he married Lucy Stone she said she did not want to lose her name, and that he told her it was not necessary for her to change it, and she has retained her maiden name to this day. When they sign deeds or any other legal paper she signs her name Lucy Stone instead of Mrs. Blackwell. Mrs. Carrie Lane changed her name to Carrie Lane Chapman, a former local editor of the Register, and retained that name when she married Mr. Catt. We suppose it is all right, but the Register does not like to see a Des Moines man slighted even in a good cause.

Safe Enough.

A man rushed into the waiting room of a safety deposit company recently and said hurriedly to the custodian:

"I want to get something out of my box—No. 87,400—and I've lost my key. How will I manage it?"

"We gave you two keys, you remember, when you leased the box," returned the custodian, "so that if you lost one you could fall back on the other. They are duplicates. You will have to go and get your key. There is no other way to get at the contents of your box, sir."

"Great Scott!" gasped the excited caller. "I put the other key inside the box for safe keeping.—Chicago Tribune.

Hardly Worth While.

"You are now thirteen years old, Miss Fanny, and yet you can hardly write your own name."

Miss Fanny—That's a fact; but it will be such a short time before I get another name that it is hardly worth while learning to write my present one yet.—Puck.

QUEER OLD ENGLISH CUSTOMS.

How Sleepy Worshipers Used to Be Kept Awake—Dogs in Church.

There was once a time, a long time too, extending over several centuries, when there was a salaried official in church to waken sleeping members of the congregation and to expel dogs from the sacred edifice. These individuals are referred to in the records as sluggard-wakers and dog-whippers, and the fees paid them were very liberal, their annual salary being a mere pittance. The custom, which was frequent in England, was also practiced in America more than two centuries ago, Rev. Dr. Samuel Whiting, a minister of Lynn, Mass., was provided with a sluggard-waker, one Allen Brydges, who brushed the faces of those inclined to sleep with a fox's tail fastened to a long staff, "likewise a sharpe thorne, wherewith he may prick such as be most sounde." A certain Mr. Tompkins, being thus admonished, sprung up with a great deal of force and to the wonder of all, did, so says the record of the day, "prophainlie" exclaim in a loud voice: "Buss the woodchuck," he dreaming, as it seemed, that a woodchuck had seized and bit his hand. "And I think," continues the chronicler, "he will not soon againe go to sleep in meeting. The women may sometimes sleep and none know it by reason of their enormous bonnets."

Women as well as men served in this capacity, according to the Detroit Free Press. Betty Finch, of Warrington, occupied this position in Holy Trinity church in 1810, a comparatively late period. She walked majestically up and down the aisle during the service armed with a long stick like a fishing rod with a "bob" on the end of it. With this she angled for sleepers. The term "bobbers" was used for this service and Betty's son, one of a family of officials, used to recite for the amusement of the taverngoers:

My father's a clark,
My sister's a singer;
My mother's a "bobber"
And I am a ringer.

The dog-whipper was to be found in every county in England, and is still at his work in the churches of some remote places. Indeed, there is a church in Wales where "lazy tongs" with spikes in the ends are still used to drag the unconsecrated animals out of the sacred edifice. The dog-whipper at Bray, in Berkshire, was provided with a "jerkin" to indicate his official position, at a cost of 6 shillings and 4 pence. The item paid to Richard Turner for whipping the "dogges" out of a church at Morton, in Derbyshire, in 1622 was 1 shilling. It is believed that the well-known sexton of Peterboro, Old Scarlett was one of the first dog-whippers in the country. His portrait on the wall of the cathedral depicts him with a whip in his belt. He died in 1591.

In some of the churches the dog-whipper was only allowed to drive out truant dogs, the dogs of the gentry being furnished with a pew where they were admonished to keep order. In Northorpe church, which was a dependency of Northorpe hall, there was a hall pew for the Northorpe canines who were of bluer blood than the collies of the shepherd, and were highly accommodated as well as being safe from the taws of the dog-whipper.

POISON OF FEARFUL STRENGTH.

Experiments Showing the Power of Virus Ejected by the Deadly Cobra.

Dr. Arthur Stradling, writing to the Manchester Times of a number of vipers which were presented to him, says: "Vipers have very large poison glands, and I obtained the venom by allowing them to bite on a small porcelain spoon made on purpose, covered over with oiled silk like a drum. The fangs, sinking through the silk into the hollow of the spoon, would each discharge a tiny drop or globule of virus, and this I would collect and store in fine glass tubes or on dried blotting paper. There are many other methods of getting the poison, but I think this is the best. In India the natives procure cobra venom by inducing the enraged reptiles to strike at a shell, across which a leaf is stretched. Each of my snakes could be depended upon to yield poison once a day, but it was only a trace at a time—just a glistening speck that you could hardly see. Of course this was a slow process, and one day I made a calculation that if my sixteen vipers had kept in full health and vigor, and had yielded daily all the year round, and supposing that it had been possible to keep the fluid without letting it dry up, it would have taken more than seven years to produce a quart. This will give you some idea of the fearful strength of the stuff, when you think how minute is the quantity injected at each bite. The experiments which I was making just then consisted chiefly of soaking scraps of meat, bits of hard-boiled egg and things of that sort in the poison, and analysing the changes which resulted in them after a given interval. And from these and from similar trials it was found that this fluid had the power of dissolving the albumen of flesh like the gastric juice has; so it is thought that one great use—perhaps the greatest—of the venom is to aid in the digestion of the serpent's food. Of course, it might do that, and serve as ammunition to kill the prey as well."

Society Note.

Gus De Smith arrived a little late at a sociable given by Mrs. Dey Street. When he arrived he sought her presence, and having found her, said:

"I beg a thousand pardons for coming so late."

"My dear sir," replied the lady, "you can never come too late."

Gus thinks this is a hint to stay away altogether.

Too Previous.

Rowne de Bout—Look here, you sent around to borrow that new black coat of mine last week, and you haven't returned it.

Upson Downes—Great heavens! old man, the wedding season isn't half over yet.—Puck.

Whooping-cough, croup, sore throat, influenza, bronchitis, cold, and cough are, at once relieved and positively and permanently cured by Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, the incomparable remedy for all pulmonary and throat affections.

The shipments of lumber from Marinette and Menominee the past season amounted to 437,000,000 feet.

People call it backache and do nothing for it until the doctor is called and he pronounces it rheumatism. If they had used Salvation Oil in time the doctor's bill could have been saved.

W. G. Maxey, of Oshkosh, has secured the contract for laying the Neenah water works mains, and operations will commence at once.

In Olden Times.

People overlooked the importance of permanently beneficial effects and were satisfied with transient action, but now that it is generally known that Syrup of Figs will permanently cure habitual constipation, well-informed people will not buy other laxatives, which act for a time, but finally injure the system.

Mrs. Finch and Mrs. Schmitz, two Racine women who were driving were severely injured in a runaway accident.

How's This!

We offer One Hundred Dollars reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions and financially able to carry out any obligations made by their firm.

WEST & TRUAX, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O. WALDING, KINNAN & MARVIN, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Testimonials sent free. Price 75c. per bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

Miss Nellie Fraglen was married to John Stipple, both well-known residents of Racine.

With Ely's Cream Balm a child can be treated without pain and with perfect safety. Try the remedy, it cures Catarrh.

My son has been afflicted with nasal catarrh since quite young. I was induced to try Ely's Cream Balm, and before he had used one bottle that disagreeable catarrhal smell had all left him. He appears as well as any one. It is the best catarrh remedy in the market.—J. C. Olmstead, Arcola, Ill.

One of my children had a very bad discharge from her nose. Two physicians prescribed, but without benefit. We tried Ely's Cream Balm, and, much to our surprise, there was a marked improvement. We continued using the Balm and in a short time the discharge was cured.—O. A. Cary, Corning, N. Y.

Apply Balm into each nostril. It is Quickly Absorbed. Gives Relief at once. Price 50 cents at Druggists or by mail.
ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren St., New York.

Samuel Thompson, of Darlington passed away suddenly of heart failure.

To Young Wives.

A disappointed bachelor has said that some time after marriage a man's wife ceases to be supremely attractive to him. Never was a greater libel. Beauty preserved and grace retained can never lose their charm or yield their empire. The preservation of our bodies in their original healthy perfection and comliness is a sacred duty. Every young mother who will faithfully carry out the directions given with each bottle of "Mother's Friend" will never lose figure or complexion. The dainty bud will mature into the blooming rose, and old age will find her blessing the day she first used "Mother's Friend." Sold by all druggists.

John G. Warren, an aged veteran of the late war, died at his home in Oshkosh.

If You Breathe Poison,

No less than if you swallow it, it will impregnate and destroy, you. If you live or sojourn in a malarious locality, be assured that you must inhale the germs of disease. Nullify and render these harmless with the grand antidote to malaria, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which is also a potent remedy for indigestion, liver complaint, costiveness, rheumatism and debility.

Peter Blon, a Belgian, aged 60 years, was buried by caving clay at the tile works at Leclaire. His limbs were broken in several places and death followed in three hours.

Have You Asthma?

DR. R. SCHIFFMANN, St. Paul, Minn., will mail a trial package of Schiffmann's Asthma Cure free to any sufferer. Gives instant relief in worst cases, and cures where others fail. Name this paper and send address.

The United States army is to be equipped with magazine guns and smokeless powder.

Allen's Iron Tonic Bitters cause food to assimulate. All genuine bear the signature of J. P. Allen, Druggist, St. Paul, Minn.

The Aaron Meyer bank at Buckbourg, Lippe, founded 107 years ago, has failed, with liabilities of 1,500,000 marks.

PERSECUTED HIS BARBER.

He Wanted a Dollar's Worth of Surgery With Each Shave.

"Hum!" said the irritated barber, "It's easy enough to kick. Didn't I slice all the hair off your face? What more do you expect for 15 cents?"

"The stubble has been removed," remonstrated the customer, says the New York Herald, "but with it a large amount of my cuticle."

"Well, what of it?" demanded the barber. Didn't I dab alum on that gash in your ear?"

"You did," the exacting customer confessed, "but you cut the tip off my nose."

"And I pasted it on with court plaster."

"True enough, but you severed one of my eyebrows and lost it on the floor."

"I kept the razor out of your eye, didn't I?"

"You did."

"And only gashed your neck in four places?"

"Quite right."

"I'm afraid you are a kicker. My advice to you is to grow a beard or buy a safety razor and not come around insulting union barbers. You're one of those fellows that want a dollar's worth of surgery with each shave and then kick because you weren't chloroformed."

Sensible Woman.

Mr. S., snappishly,—Don't be correcting that boy always, Sarah. Let nature take its course, won't you?

Mrs. S., laying aside the shingle,—I'll do nothing of the sort. I don't intend that any woman shall have such a husband as I've got, if I can prevent it.—Demorest's Magazine.

Our Baby
Was a beauty, fair, plump and healthy. But when two years old Scrofula Humor spread over her head, neck and forehead down into her eyes, one great sore, offensive and dreadful, causing such itching and burning that we had to tie her hands to prevent scratching. For 5 years Emma Frederick she suffered terribly. The first beneficial effect from Hood's Sarsaparilla was that she began to show more life and have an appetite. Then the humor soon began to subside, the itching and burning ceased, and the sores entirely healed up. She is now perfectly well, and so different from before taking
Hood's Sarsaparilla
that she seems like "another child." I. W. Frederick, Danforth street, near Crescent ave., Cypress Hill, Brooklyn, N. Y.
HOOD'S PILLS cure all Liver Ills, biliousness, jaundice, indigestion, sick headache.

A Great Scheme.

"Keen scheme that of Harlow's," said Hicks; "took his boy to church last Sunday—pinched him just before the collection, and boy cried so Harlow had to take him out. Saved his money."

A Perfect Balm.

Rev. Slowanslseepy—Ah, Miss Smilax, I was glad to see you at church again after your long absence. I hope you liked the sermon?

Miss Smilax—Oh, yes, indeed; it was so restful.

COPYRIGHT 1891

In the place of a woman who's weak, ailing, and miserable, why not be a woman who's healthy, happy, and strong? You can be. You needn't experiment. The change is made, safely and surely, with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

It's a matter that rests with you. Here is the medicine—the only one for woman's peculiar weaknesses and diseases that's guaranteed to help you. It must give satisfaction, in every case, or the money is promptly returned. Take it, and you're a new woman. You can afford to make the trial, for you've nothing to lose.

But do you need to be urged?

You don't want size in a pill—it means disturbance. You want results. With Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, smallest, cheapest, easiest to take, you get the best results. Sick Headache, Biliousness, Constipation, Indigestion, and all derangements of the Liver, Stomach and Bowels are prevented, relieved, and cured.

SHOPPING BY MAIL is sometimes a great convenience. It's right, of course, for you to buy at home, when possible; but many things can be bought satisfactorily only at a Big Store. Ours is a BIG STORE largest in the Northwest. We sell everything necessary to clothe man, woman and child from head to foot—to furnish a home from Parlor to Kitchen—and many things besides. If you're too far away to come, send us this coupon:
GATALOGUE.
Every housekeeper in the Northwest, living out of the Twin Cities, should have one of our large illustrated catalogues. HOW TO GET ONE: Cut out and send this coupon with your name and address and you will receive a catalogue, FREE of charge, by return mail. Samples sent if you mention kinds, colors and about what price. Big mail order business; sixty-six mail order departments, 5 acres of selling space; 56 departments. Reliable Goods. Lowest Prices. Satisfaction Guaranteed. 89
SCHUNEMAN & EVANS, St. Paul

S.S.S.
PURELY a vegetable compound, made entirely of roots and herbs gathered from the forests of Georgia, and has been used by millions of people with the best results. It
CURES
All manner of Blood diseases, from the pestiferous little boil on your nose to the worst cases of inherited blood taint, such as Scrofula, Rheumatism, Catarrh and
SKIN CANCER
Treatise on Blood and Skin Diseases mailed free. SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., Atlanta, Ga.

TOWER'S FISH BRAND The Best Waterproof Coat in the WORLD!
SLICKER
The FISH BRAND SLICKER is warranted waterproof, and will keep you dry in the hardest storm. The new POMMEL SLICKER is a perfect riding coat, and covers the entire saddle. Beware of imitations. Don't buy a coat if the "Fish Brand" is not on it. Illustrated Catalogue free. A. J. TOWER, Boston, Mass.

Tutt's Tiny Pills
A single dose produces beneficial results, giving cheerfulness of mind and buoyancy of body to which you were before a stranger. They enjoy a popularity unparalleled. Price, 25cts.

MEN We will send you the MARVELOUS and UNFAILING French Preparation, CALTHOS FREE by MAIL, and a legally executed guarantee that CALTHOS will STOP Discharges and Emissions, CURE Varicocele, and RESTORE Lost Vigor. Use it & pay if satisfied. Von Mohl Co., Importers, Cincinnati, Ohio.

EARHUFF ORGANS
The Only Absolutely Mouse and Dust Proof Organ On the Market.
Artistic designs, good workmanship, best Hand rubbed finish. Every Organ Guaranteed. If not handled by your dealer write to factory for prices. Address,
J. G. EARHUFF, ORGAN CO.
NORTH ST. PAUL, MINN.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.
CATARRH
Sold by druggists or sent by mail. 50c. E. T. Hazeltine, Warren, Pa.

Minn Hist Society
MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

St. Hilaire Spectator.

VOLUME XI. ST. HILAIRE, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1892. NUMBER 15.

THE NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

DIGEST OF THE NEWS FROM ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

All Important Occurrences of the Past Week, Boiled Down and Arranged for Rapid Reading.

The Capital.

During the past few days the subtreasury has received $200,000 in gold from Canada.

The persistent reports of a threatened outbreak of the South Dakota Indians are authoritatively denied.

S. G. F. Davis, private secretary of Senator Jones, has been selected as official stenographer of the international momentary conference.

Record of Casualties.

Melville Zalst, aged 5 years, was scalded to death at Fostoria, O.

Ida Reder, a school girl, was run over and killed by a railway train at Elkhart, Ind.

By the explosion of a locomotive boiler at Palos, Ala., the engineer and fireman were blown to atoms.

A Union Pacific barge loaded with wheat ran into a dock at Astoria, Or., and had a hole knocked in her bottom. Capt. Marshall Short and August Anderson went down into the hold to stop the leak, when the barge sank and both men were drowned.

A peculiar accident occurred on Pennsylvania avenue, Pittsburg. One side of the slot of the conduit of the cable line had been pushed over against the other side by a heavy iron wagon crossing the track. This left no room for the grip to slide through. The first car to approach was No. 13 When the car reached the obstruction it stopped with a jerk. The force of the shock was so great that the front truck was completely demolished. The car was crowded at the time and all the passengers were more or less injured.

People in Print.

Ouida says every pretty woman should be a flirt and every clever woman a politician.

According to the artists Christopher Columbus possessed a wonderful collection of faces.

Otto Hegner, the child pianist, has an offer to make another tour of the United States.

Mr. Gladstone is threatened with lenticular cataract of the eye that was injured by a missile in July last.

James W. Tuttle, the hero of Fort Donelson, died at Casa Grande, Ariz., of paralysis. He will probably be buried at Des Moines, Io.

Rev. Francis Springer, better known as Chaplain Springer, a Lutheran minister, and well known in all Grand Army circles, died in Springfield, Ill., aged eighty-two years.

Arthur Paul Albert David Milland, of the Paris Figaro, died suddenly. He was born Jan. 17, 1836, and is the author of a number of works. He was decorated with the Legion of Honor in 1877.

Prof. William Swinton, the well known author of the series of school books that bear his name, died suddenly in New York recently. His body was found lying face downward on the floor where he had apparently fallen in a fit of apoplexy.

Mlle. Paulina, native of Queensland, is the smallest human being in the world. She is nearly sixteen years of age, her height is eighteen inches and her weight only seven pounds. Unlike most of the midgets, she is remarkably pretty and accomplished, speaking four languages fluently.

Sinful Doings.

Michael Pottaschinick, a Polish Jew, has been arrested for the murder and robbing o a stranger at St. Louis a year ago.

In a quarrel over a borrowed wheat bin at Shoals, Ind., Frank Holloway killed Thomas Gillick with a rock.

At Marietta, O., the classes of '95 and '96 of Marietta college had three fights in one day, many of the boys being seriously hurt. The class of '96 was victorious.

During a ball at St. Joseph, Mo., an insane man named James Carter began slashing people with a knife, and was shot and killed by James Fiddler.

At Augusta, Ill., a white man named Ed. Riggins shot and killed a negro named Glover Foster, because the latter threw an empty whiskey bottle at his house.

James Williams, a barber, and Albert Jabes, a hack driver, indulged in a hand to hand fight at Salt Lake, Utah, over the affections of a fallen woman. Razors were used as weapons and both men were fatally carved.

Miss Emma Morgan, living four miles from Letart, Ohio, shot and killed her lover Henry Jones. They had quarreled and Jones accused her of favoring another young man.

An atrocious murder was committed recently at Melrose, a small station near Chicago, the victim was Earnest Kunneth, an aged capitalist, who lived by himself and bore an excellent reputation, he always had considerable money on hand, but none of it was touched, the crime was committed to gain possession of some documents which the old man had in his possession. A box containing the papers was the only thing carried away.

The Foreign Budget.

Minister of Finance Foster denies that Canada will issue a loan.

A large number of Temochians, nearly pure Aztecs, are slaughtered by Mexican troops. They were in rebellion.

Fire recently in a warehouse in Hamburg destroyed $500,000 worth of property. Several firemen were hurt by flying bricks from a falling wall.

The Yellow river, in China, has overflowed its banks and washed away twelve towns. Owing to the slow advance of the water, not many lives were lost.

Under the insistent monition of Sir Andrew Clark, his physician, Mr. Gladstone has decided to limit his presence in the house of commons during the coming session.

The revolt in Santiago del Estero, Argentine Republic, has assumed such proportions that the federal government has decided to intervene to restore the provincial government in authority.

A sensational trial is promised at Gratz, the capital of Styria, where a respected district judge has been arrested on the charge of murdering his wife. The woman died suddenly and the circumstances of her death led to the arrest of her husband.

The trial of Honore Mercier, ex-minister of the province of Quebec, and Ernest Pacaud, proprietor and editor of L'Electeur, the Liberal organ, was begun in Quebec, and the day was consumed in securing a jury.

The regiment of Maj. Count Augustus Bismarck and Capt. Count Bismarck-Bohlem from the queens own body dragoons has made a very painful impression in Berlin, as nobody believes they resigned of their own preference.

The contents of a remarkable manuscript left by Victor Hugo have been made public. The manuscript is dated Feb. 28, 1851, and described experiences at a spiritualistic seance. The comments on the seance indicate that he believed in spiritualism.

Emperor William, because he was angry at some sentinels in the station at the new palace, Potsdam, for failing to recognize the empress, has ordered that her portrait be hung in every barrack room in Germany.

Lord Houghton, viceroy of Ireland, has refused to receive an address which the Irish Methodists wished to present to him. He bases his refusal on the ground that the address contains political references.

A sensation has been caused at Paris by an article in the Memorial, in which it is asserted that Lord Rosebery has intimated that England will not be a party to any hostilities between the dreibund and France.

Capt. Delaveron, of the Russian cruiser Seaboikins, who has been making seizures of sealers, is said to have been pronounced insane by the governor of Behring island. He is also said to have been discharged from the Russian navy.

The duke of Roxburgh died recently. Sir James Innes-Ker, duke of Roxburgh, and Earl Innes, was born on Sept. 5, 1839. He married Lady Anne Spencer Churchill sister of the duke of Marlborough, in 1874. His heir is the oldest son, Henry John, marquis of Bolmont.

The czarowitz will be formally betrothed at Athens to his cousin, Princess Marie of Greece, the czar as the head of the orthodox Greek church having granted the dispensation which is necessary on account of the consanguinity of the parties to the contract. Turkish objections prevented the czarowitz journeying to Athens by way of the Dardanelles.

The New York Herald publishes a letter from Gen. Crespo dated Caracas, giving a history of the stirring events of his fight to secure control of the Venezuela government. He says that he began a struggle with 11 followers. He had no arms nor munitions of war, but adherents flocked to his standard and he fought his way into Caracas at the head of 14,000 well armed and disciplined troops.

Labor.

St. Joseph, Mo., reports that the chances for a strike among the trainmen of the Maple Leaf road are good.

The order of train dispatchers was permanently organized at Memphis recently with 152 charter members. The constitution and by-laws embrace the protective features which caused so much discussion at the convention held in New Orleans last June. W. W. Olcott of Pine Bluff, was elected chief dispatcher. The next meeting will be held at Kansas City on the second Tuesday in September.

Political Echoes.

Wisconsin Republicans protest against the latest Democratic apportionment.

Mr. Blaine's extended and long promised review of the pending presidential campaign is made public.

About the Railroads.

Strikers at Homestead again become riotous.

A scheme for another Canadian transcontinental line is sprung in Chicago.

Canadian railways, under Judge Brewer's decision, can be compelled by American lines to quit cutting long distance rates, and they will be forced to do so.

The Soo reports an exceedingly heavy travel East for this season of the year. One coach had to be added to its usual complement of sleepers.

Gossip of the Sports.

The California Club directors have made two matches to take place within the coming two months. George Dawson of Australia and "Doc O'Connell of Boston, welter weights, were signed to fight for a $3,000 purse, the event to take place either during the latter part of November or the first part of December, Johnny Van Heest and Solly Smith were signed to fight for a purse of $2,000, $400 to the loser, on the evening of Dec. 29.

General News.

A large tin plate manufacturing plant will be located in St. Paul.

Government clerks from Washington are disfranchised in Chicago.

The Protestant Episcopal convention will be held in Minneapolis in 1895.

An immense grain blockade occurs in Chicago.

Commander-in-Chief Weissert, of the G. A. R. appoints his aids.

The Columbian festivities in Chicago close with the dedication of state buildings on the fair grounds.

The Western coal sales agents at their meeting in New York recently decided not to advance the price of coal for November.

Joe L. Ford and Miss Zulla Peevore, of Columbus, O., were married in an Ashland, Ky., cemetery, at the side of her sister's grave.

A disease known as beri-beri, which resembles yellow fever but is more fatal, reaches New York having come from Japan.

In Philadelphia John Fora, a keeper at the zoological garden, had a terrible encounter with an infuriated Rocky Mountain elk, and received injuries which resulted in his death.

The committee of the American Society of the extension, of University Teaching has fixed the meeting of the second national conference on university extension for Dec. 29 and 30 in Philadelphia.

Sarah Cherry, wife of ex-Sheriff James Flack, died suddenly in New York. She figured as correspondent in the famous Flack divorce case in 1889, and it was not known until her death was announced that she had been married to Flack.

The fight in New York city between the steamship companies and grain shippers over the form of a bill of lading has ended in a victory for the steamship companies and an advance in freights from 2 to 4 cents.

The stockholders of the Western Union Telegraph met recently and ratified the resolutions of the board of directors to increase the capital stock of the company. The increase is made in the amount of $13,800,000, consisting of 138,000 shares at $1000 each. This amount swells the capital stock to $100,000,000.

David Dudley Field, the great constitutional and international lawyer of New York, has donated through his friends and associates, John Randolph Tucker, his entire library to the Washington and Lee university in which Mr. Tucker is professor of international and constitutional law. It consists of over 1,000 volumes.

Huber A. Newton, professor of mathematics at Yale University, has been elected a member of the Royal Philosophical Society, of London. This honor is one which has been paid to fewer than a dozen Americans, and is a high tribute to Newton's contributions to science. Prof. Newton is the oldest active professor at Yale, having been connected with the university since 1852.

NORTHWEST NEWS BUDGET.

THE WEEKLY ROUND-UP OF IMPORTANT NEWS.

A Concise Account of the Happenings of the Past Week in Minnesota, North Dakota, Iowa and Wisconsin.

Minnesota.

William Poole indicted for horse stealing and Harry Brady for forgery pleaded guilty in the district court at Waseca.

Christ Guse, a farmer living north of Sleepy Eye, was kicked to death by a vicious horse. He leaves a large family.

J. B. Krier's barn in Luxenburg burned with a stock of hay and corn and some pigs. Loss $500.

Sarah Green, of Ripley, who was shot in the hip by the accidental discharge of a gun, will recover.

The Winona fire department has been worried lately by false alarms being turned in. The city council has offered a reward for the apprehension of the guilty parties.

The United States circuit court opened at Fergus Falls and has important business before it. The term will not be a very long one.

James Budd, an old resident of West Union, Todd county, hanged himself the other morning. He lived alone, the cause is supposed to have been despondency.

H. Bervig of Yucatan, was killed about five miles from Caledonia. His buggy went over a steep bank and overturned, killing Bervig and his two horses.

Grant & Dougherty's store at Fergus Falls, was robbed of $200 worth of shoes and fine plush goods. This is the second time within a month.

William Hughes, brakeman on the Milwaukee road, fell before the cars of a moving train at Owatonna and was cushed by the wheels so that he soon died.

C. E. Cady, while painting the tower of a windmill at Dover, fell the distance of some ten feet, breaking his leg just above the ankle.

H. Brande's hotel and Peter Prenovost's residence at Hinckley were burned at Sandstone. Brandes lost $5,000, insurance $2,500. Prenovost lost $500, no insurance. The guests of the hotel had a narrow escape.

Julius Wenzel, who has been successfully engaged in business at Lake City for a number of years died, aged thirty-two years. He leaves a widow and two young children.

The jury in the case of Charles Way, indicted for forgery at Waseca, after being out 12 hours agreed to disagree, standing eight for conviction and four for acquittal. A new trial has been ordered.

The body of the 3-year-old child of Frank Haberman, of Fulda, that was lost Aug. 27, was found recently in a slough not far from the residence of the parents. The remains were in a good condition.

A prairie fire three miles from Fisher, recently destroyed an immense amount of hay and other grain. The wind at the time was blowing a gale and it was impossible to stay the flames.

The Masonic block at Fergus Falls was totally destroyed by fire recently. The fire caught in a closet it is supposed from oily rags used by the militia for cleaning guns. It was partially covered by insurance.

August Qitner left Red Lake Falls and has not returned. It is generally supposed he committed suicide. He has a wife and five young children. The family is in financial distress.

Fred Oelschlager, employed in the wood factory at Waseca, had two fingers of his left hand cut off by the saw, and while having the fingers temporarily bandaged, fainted, falling on the same saw, which partially severed his right elbow.

The general store of J. H. Orr, at Dundas was entered by burglars and the safe opened with a sledge hammer stolen from Horknorait's blacksmith shop. They did not get any money, but bagged some cigars and tobacco.

Joseph Sellwood has been made vise-president of the Duluth & Iron Range railroad, to have charge of the Mesaba branches of the road. This move means that the Iron Range intends to push into the new iron country and will make a strong bid for the business of the range.

The dwelling owned by Mrs. Fassburg and occupied by Ed Eaton caught fire at Lake City from an unknown cause and was destroyed. The flames were communicated to a contiguous dwelling owned and occupied by Mrs. Smith, which was also destroyed. But a portion of the contents of either house was saved. Loss, $1,000; no insurance.

An 11-year-old son of O. C. Wheeler, who lives eight miles north of Staples, was accidentally shot while out duck hunting with his elder brother. The youngest boy was walking ahead of the elder brother, who was carrying the gun in his right hand muzzle forward, when the hammer caught on some brush and discharged it. The charge of shot struck the boy in the body. He lived about one hour.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Winslow, Jr., Mrs. Eugene Winslow, Sr., and Fletcher Lankey were arrested at Fertile for kidnapping the 4-year-old son of Ed Boddy, who is married to Mr. Winslow's daughter, but who have lived together for some years. The child was taken away from Mr. Boddy's mother while she was in town witnessing the Columbian day exercises. child has not been found as yet.

Wisconsin

Schlitz Park at West Bend has been sold to Charles Moser, of Milwaukee, for $7,500.

Jeremy Dayton, a resident of Janesville for the past forty-six years, died at his home in that city, aged 69 years.

The dwelling house of Ole Hanson, of McFarland, Dane County, was destroyed by fire. The loss will reach $2,000.

Thomas Dougherty, who was found guilty of larceny at Janesville, was sentenced to two years in Waupun.

The depot was broken into by burglars at Shiocton, Outagamie County, and $6 in cash and a gold watch taken.

During the past season the Peshtigo Milling Company, at Peshtigo, have sawed 42,054,778 feet of lumber.

The residence of S. B. Spencer, near Berlin, was destroyed by fire, together with all the contents.

Michael Killian, of Fort Howard, was seriously injured in a runaway accident. His head was badly cut.

Burglars entered the residence of William Daw, of Oak Hill, Jefferson County, and secured $40 in cash.

A new school house building is to be erected at Plymouth to cost $22,000. Work will not begin until next spring.

The residence of Wm. Breitung, at Plymouth, was destroyed by fire. A small shoe store adjoining was also burned.

Garret Barry, a resident of Madison, had his right arm broken and his body badly scalded by a boiler explosion in South Dakota, where he was engaged in threshing.

Miss Annie Philbrick, of La Crosse, will likely be maimed for life as a result of a runaway accident at that place a few days ago. Her knee cap was badly injured.

Thomas Doyle was arrested at Fond du Lac on a charge of forging a check. He was bound over for trial in $200 bail, in default of which he went to jail.

A young man named McIntyre, living at Depere, was killed by the accidental discharge of a gun while hunting. Deceased was 20 years old.

Thieves entered the residence of a family named Wilmath, at Janesville, and got away with a few dollars in cash and a number of valuable articles of clothing.

Oliver A. Hegg, of Whitehall, passed away at the age of 50 years. Deceased was clerk of the court of Trempealeau County and served as a soldier during the late war.

The Rev. Father Frank, pastor of the Princeton Polish Catholic Church, was found dead on the walk in front of his house. Heart disease was the cause of his demise.

Mrs. Helen Kamrath, of Oshkosh, was arrested on a charge of assault preferred by Charles Noe. It is alleged that Mrs. Kamrath pointed a revolver at Mr. Noe's little boy.

George Warren & Co., of Warren's Mills, Monroe County, have notified their employes of a reduction of working hours from eleven to ten, with no cut in wages. No demand had been made for any such action.

Harry, the 4-year old son of Gustave Lehnhoff, of La Crosse, fell under the wheels of a heavy lumber wagon and received injuries from which he will likely die. A blood vessel in the brain was ruptured.

George Kinlon, of Hebron, Jefferson County, fell from a load of buckwheat onto the prong of a pitchfork that penetrated its whole length from the ankle into his leg. The wound is serious.

Fred Jorgenson, of Racine, was held up by two toughs, who attempted to rob him. He managed to strike one of the fellows and knocked him down, whereupon the other fellow lit out.

J. C. Metcalf, a Janesville baker, was surprised a few days ago to have a rare coin, which had been stolen along with some other money from his place three months ago, returned to him by a man making a purchase.

A novel bet has been made between John Heid, of Kaukauna, and Arnold Peerenboom, of Appleton. In case Peck is elected Mr. Peerenboom will give Mr. Hied a ride about the streets of Kaukauna on a wheelbarrow, accompanied by a brass band.

Nicholas Naumer was arrested and taken to Oshkosh for trial on complaint of Frank Domel charged with malicious mischief and threatening to kill the plaintiff. Both are residents of Winnebago County, residing near Oshkosh.

Henry J. Jarvis, the young man who passed a forged check for $178 on the Bank of Milton, pleaded guilty in the circuit court at that place and was sentenced to Waupun for five years. This is his second offense, he having served a year and a half for larceny in Jefferson County.

Charles Kellar, an 18-year-old boy residing at Watertown, was robbed of $17 in cash by a companion in Janesville. Young Kellar had been traveling with a circus all summer and was returning home. He put up at the Forest Hotel with his friend, but in the morning his companion was gone and his money also.

North Dakota.

Dr. G. Virgo, a prominent druggist at Cooperstrom, and a well known politician, was arrested on a charge of incest.

A. A. Dresser, keeper of the Northern Pacific round house at Oakes, was kicked in the head by a horse and his skull fractured. He will probably die.

Mrs. P. V. Laberge, of Grafton died recently. She was the wife of Dr. Laberge, and sister of Mayor Deschenes. She leaves two small children.

Three boys, Reed, Thornton and Smith, convicted of robbing the mails at Sterling, were sentenced by Judge Thomas. Reed and Thornton got sixty days at Sioux Falls, and $25 fine each. Smith was given six months in jail, and fined $90.

Two accidents happened on the Soo extension from Valley City northwest the other day, one of them fatally. While working on a bridge about 40 miles from here about 1,500 feet of the 1,600 foot bridge blew down and one of the workmen with it. Both wrists and one of his legs were broken. The leg was amputated. The other man was a brakeman who, while coupling two cars, was caught by two projecting timbers and instantly killed.

Martin Zarwoski, a young farmer living six miles east of Grafton, was awakened the other morning by flames which were devouring his property. His loss is $4,000, with $250 insurance. All his outbuildings were destroyed. A fine barn, 2,500 bushels of wheat, 1,000 bushels of barley, six horses, 100 tons of hay and a sleigh were burned. He says his barn was set on fire. His loss about cleans him out.

Iowa.

Gus Swanson fell down an elevator shaft at Sioux City, sustaining fatal injuries.

George Bartling, a well digger of Manning, took an imitation Keeley cure, went home and attempted to kill his wife and family and fell dead.

Fire wholly destroyed the plant of the Sioux City and Sergeant's Bluff Brick and Tile Company, of Sioux City. The loss is $30,000. Insurance $9,000. Origin unknown.

Elijah Morgan, an aged blind man, was sentenced in the federal court at Oskaloosa to pay a fine of $300 and 11 months imprisonment for forging the name of a deceased brother to an application for a pension.

Andrew Ryan was working at Keokuk with a hammer and chisel when the latter tool flew out of his hand and into his eye, splitting the ball and sticking in his head until removed by a physician.

At Sioux City, two women of the town are under arrest at the instance of the Chicago Sun, the representative of which George Crosby, says that the paper will undertake to close all the bawdy houses in the city and enforce the prohibitory law, a thing never yet done.

A Des Moines special says:—James Roberts, of the poor farm, is dying from a wound in the body from a gunshot. A revolver went off while Mrs. Roberts was handling it. No physician was called. The man's life might have been saved. The authorities are investigating the case.

John Arndt of Kensett, carried a torpedo used by his father in railroad work into the yard, laid it on a rock and struck it with a hatchet when the thing exploded, blowing all the flesh off of the boy's face and head and laying bare the bone. The child is literally scalped. He may recover but will be disfigured for life, losing the sight of one eye at least.

F. L. Blood was induced to refrain from mailing a check for $10,000 to a firm in New York city, with whom he was negotiating with a view to securing a $2,000,000 estate in England. Prominent men finally induced him to investigate the swindle, saving to him the $10,000. He is a big farmer near Runnels.

A traveling lecturer, named White, was mobbed at Muscatine for insulting ladies. He attacks Catholicism. When he had attacked the ladies of this city most vilely in his address the husbands and brothers rose in a body from the audience and made a rush for the speaker. He was badly hurt and a panic ensued. A mob surrounded the man's hotel all night and he escaped by stealth.

James Williams, a colored man, fell from the deck of a steamer some weeks ago and was drowned. It is supposed he fell overboard. Charles Garnett is under arrest at Davenport, now as the murderer of Williams. A witness named Charles Stewart testifies that Garnett without provocation, struck Williams with a club. Williams fell and got up. Garnett struck him twice more and knocked him down into the hole where ashes are dumped.

THE SAME BOY.

He is Always With his Following in the Footsteps of his Father.

If your boy amounts to a continental you will notice that when he comes home evenings now his lips are stained a yellowish brown, and his fingers are the color of a fresh Egyptian mummy. You have had the same outlandish color on your own hands, no matter how white and soft they may be now, Boys are boys the world over, and the boy of to-day manages to get out among the thickets in the creek bottoms, much as the boy has done for years and years.

In the creek bottoms butternut trees grow. Large trunks, broad, sweeping branches, sticky, queer fruit and ample shade. By some strange but wise provision of nature butternut trees always grow along the creek banks and stones are plentiful in the streams. They are plentiful also beneath the butternut trees, for many generations of boys carrying big flat stones to points where they would do the most good has brought Mahomet and the mountain together. When your hopeful comes home with his fingers brown and his face looking like a yellow fever patient's, he has only been down to the creek bottoms. He has been climbing the crooked trunks and out upon the strong limbs of the butternut trees. He has stolen the developing milky fruit not yet ripe, but delectable nevertheless as the lips of a bride.

He has gathered his store beneath the tree, and with a flat stone to hammer on and, a carefully selected stone to hammer with, he has sat and robbed the nut of its kernel and its stain. It is not very satisfactory to the appetite. It's a good deal on the green apple order of feasting. The stains hang on the boy's hands for weeks. But what's the difference? Boys have eaten green butternuts since there were boys, just as ostriches eat glass or billy goats chew circus posters off the dead walls. Nobody can account for it any more than we can tell why a pig runs about with a wisp of hay in his mouth before a storm, or why a dog turns round before he lies down. It is enough that it is so.—Buffalo Era.

A FULL HAND.

Indicates That a Girls Limbs Are Pretty and Round.

"They say, Mr. Kiralfy, that you look at a girl's thumb and tell just what her legs are like. Is that so?

"Oh, yes," said Bolossy Kiralfy, the great spectacularizer. There is nothing remarkable in that. Not her thumb, but the shape and character of her hand. I find by experience that certain kinds of hands always go with certain kinds of figures. You see, I take the hand and look at it, judging first of all the size of it. That isn't very hard. Some have small and some have large hands. Where the hand is short, and goes in at the wrist, and tapers off slightly toward the finger-tips, and when the fingers are pretty well covered with flesh, there is the hand which denotes the perfect female figure. When I get a girl with this sort of a hand I can tell that she will go in with the plump girls with a good shape and is a prime candidate for the front row. Now, fingers which are long, but well covered with flesh, indicate that the girl has a good figure but a slender one! She has well-turned legs and her lines are good, but she is not very stout. She is the long, slightly thin type.

"Short fingers, which are only moderately covered with flesh, indicate a good figure, but not a particularly well-rounded one.

"When the fingers are thin and bony the girl's legs are thin and shaggy, and she won't do. So you see the thing I look to is to see whether the woman has a full hand."

It is seldom that a man knows himself so thoroughly as does Rudyard Kipling. A reporter attempted to interview him the other day and he reaped a fine harvest of blackguardism, which closed by the young man saying: "Tell them I am a boor, for I am, and I want people to learn it and let me alone." As an analyst of character, Rudyard is entitled to some credit.

HAD A THIRST FOR BLOOD.

TERRIBLE DEED OF AN ARCTIC EXPLORER.

Bartlett, a Survivor of the Jeannette Expedition, Kills His Wife's Niece, Shoots His Wife and Commits Suicide.

A Triple Tragedy.

San Francisco, Oct. 31.—Early this morning James Bartlett, one of the survivors of the Jeannette expedition, shot and killed his wife's niece, Lottie Carpenter, shot his wife in the shoulder and then shot and killed himself. Mrs. Bartlett was aroused by a pistol shot in her niece's room, and as she rushed out in the hall she met her husband, who, without a word, shot her through the shoulder, inflicting a painful but not dangerous wound. Then he shot himself through the head. When the neighbors rushed in they found Miss Carpenter dead by the side of her bed, where evidently she had sunk down when shot as she was trying to escape. Since his return from the Arctic regions Bartlett's mind has been weak, as the result of hardships experienced, and yesterday he threatened to murder his wife and niece.

Burned Vessels.

Philadelphia, Oct. 31.—Point Breeze was visited again by fire this morning and the wharves and shipping docks were damaged to the extent of nearly $200,000. The iron bark Felix, Capt. Raines, which was lying at the wharf awaiting a load of refined oil, was sunk, and the bark Ellen G. Loaded with cased oil, was badly damaged. A lighter bark, loaded with cases of oil, was burned to the water's edge; Charles Houseman's lime barge was destroyed, 500 feet of wharf property was destroyed, a house and barn belonging to the city were wiped out and other property was destroyed or damaged. The fire burned stubbornly all day, and it was not until late this evening that it had been extinguished. Shortly after 4 o'clock this morning the firemen at the pumping station were startled by the sound of an explosion. A moment later the flames shot up from the river and a pall of dense black smoke began to gather over the harbor. The explosion heard was caused by the bursting of a pipe connecting the Philadelphia & Atlantic oil refineries, located on the east side of the gas works. The oil pipes are buried under the roadway above the wharves. The escaping oil worked down through the coal and collected beneath the furnaces at the pumping station in such quantities that when it became ignited it exploded with sufficient force to break down the retaining wall and the whole volume of oil spread in a burning mass over the surface of the water. Almost immediately the flames were headed off before they reached the works of the Atlantic Refining company, and the firemen saved the gas plant and the Philadelphia Refining works. The greater part of the damage to the shipping is covered by insurance, but the other losses will be total.

Will Turn Out in Force.

London, Oct. 31.—The Socialist committee of six met to arrange for the Trafalgar Square demonstration on Nov. 6, the anniversary of Bloody Sunday, has formulated a resolution which will be formulated and undoubtedly adopted at all platforms on that day. It affirms that the number of unemployed workmen in the United kingdom, and especially in London, is increasing with alarming rapidity; that the suffering during the coming winter is likely to be unprecedented, and that, therefore, the imperial government, county councils and all the other bodies of local authorities ought to prepare to supply employment on needed public improvements. The Trafalgar Square demonstration is being "boomed" and organized by H. M. Hyndman, J. Hunter Watts, Shaw Maxwell and other conspicuous social Democrats. The fund for the demonstration is under the care of William Saunders and he reports that the contributions have far exceeded expectations.

No Place For Partisanship.

New York, Oct. 31.—William F. Rounds, who has just returned from Europe, where he went as an United States delegate to the international prison conference, made an address on reform this evening at the Waverly Prison Presbyterian church. He attacked the political system prevailing in this city, county and state prisons. He said that the law forbids partisan appointments in the prisons on penalty of expulsion from office; on examination of Clinton prison he found fifty-seven officers to be intensely Democratic partisans who had no experience in prison work, but who were drawn from the industrial trades. The greater number of these were from Edward Murphy's district. Warden Tuber, with fifteen years' of satisfactory experience, was thrown out of his position on forty-eight hours' notice to make room for a man with no experience whatever. After this came the escape of Bunco Steerer O'Brien.

A Raisin Grower Fails.

Fresno, Cala., Oct. 31.—A. D. Barling, a rising grower and shipper, has filed a petition in the superior court asking to be declared an insolvent debtor. The failure is a very serious one and one of the largest that has ever taken place here. Barling's liabilities aggregate $113,000. At the commencement of the fruit season Barling bought heavily. He made big shipments East, but just then the cholera scare came on and the bottom dropped out of the fruit market, seriously embarrassing him. A number of fruit and raisin growers will lose considerable by the failure. A large number of merchants are also among Barling's creditors.

Idaho Rich in Marble.

Boise City, Idaho, Oct. 31.—F. B. Schermerhorn, the mineralogist and geologist employed in collecting and classifying Idaho's exhibit for the world's fair, has arrived here from Cassia county. In that county he ran across a wonder in the shape of a vast marble quarry fifteen miles one way by twenty-two the other, and in some places 800 feet in thickness. Twenty kinds of marble are to be found within the boundaries of this vast field of unhewn headstones. There are still other vast quarries beside this yet unclaimed and owned by the government, which consist of pure white marble equal to the famous Italian article.

His Wealth Faded Like a Dream.

Chicago, Oct. 31.—L. W. Mozingo, a furniture dealer of Bloomington, Ill., came to this city to-day with $900 to pay some bills. He showed his money to a crowd of people, but he cannot show it to anybody now. When he left his hotel he was met by a nice young man who knew all about him. They took several drinks, and Mr. Mozingo showed his wealth only to see it fade like a dream. The young man grabbed it and went his way with all possible speed, while Mr. Mozingo trudged slowly to the police station to tell the police all about the passing of his $900.

A Hole in the Boiler.

Alexandria, Va., Oct. 31.—The steamer Wakefield, of the Potomac river line, while on her way up the river to-day and when off Maryland Point blew a hole in her boiler where the steam chimney connects. The accident caused the death of three colored men and the serious injury of two others, all members of the crew. Engineer E. L. Germond was painfully scalded about the hands and face. There were about thirty passengers on board, but none of them were injured nor was there much excitement among them.

Boats Aground.

Cheboygan, Mich., Oct. 31.—A tremendous Northwest gale has prevailed since last evening. The scow Essex is on the lighthouse point and a raft of 2,000,000 feet of logs belonging to Pelton & Reid is reported to have been lost. Other rafts have been broken up. There will probably be a big list of disasters to record when the wind goes down.

Sale of Pine Lands.

Chippewa Falls, Wis., Special, Oct. 31.—The Chippewa Valley Land company of this city has just closed the sale of 2,800 acres of pine lands in Itasca county, Minn., to the Hall & Sheldon Lumber company and the Carpenter Bros. company, the consideration being $220,000.

THE DEACON SCANDAL.

Again Before the Public.

London, Oct. 31.—Edward Parker Deacon has come to the city to pass a few days, after which he will go to the Riveria to consult with his lawyers as to the hearing of his wife's appeal from the court in Grasse, where she was to have been tried for criminal adultery. The appeal will be heard in about three weeks before a full bench of seven judges. Mr. Deacon has engaged M. Colrard of Aix to assist M. Piliate of Nice and M. B. Bret of Cannes in looking after his interests. Should the appeal be dismissed, the adultery case against Mrs. Deacon will be heard as soon as the witnesses can be got together, about one week later. Mr. Deacon has been approached since the prosecution in Grasse by M. Barboux, Mrs. Deacon's counsel, through whom she has offered to compromise matters. If Mr. Deacon would abandon the criminal adultery case she signified her willingness to allow him to obtain a divorce in France.

Mr. Deacon rejected the offer, as the French divorce laws allow both parties equal rights over the children. As soon as he refused to compromise, Mrs. Deacon's counsel sent out detectives to hunt up Mr. Deacon's career in America and France. It is said that efforts are being made to bribe Blanchard, Mr. Deacon's valet, who stated at the trial that Mrs. Deacon used to tell M. Abeille that he should come when her husband went out, and that all the servants knew of it and laughed about it. Not long ago Blanchard received an offer of 1,500 francs, to be paid as soon as he would pledge himself to disappear from France. In consequence of the many complications involved in the discussion of the appeal in the Grasse court recently, the nature of the proceedings has been unintentionally misrepresented in French and American newspapers.

The following statement is authoritative: The object of the appeal is to determine whether or not Mr. Deacon condoned Mrs. Deacon's unfaithfulness and abandoned all idea of getting a divorce when he wrote a certain letter to Mrs. Baldwin, Mrs. Deacon's mother. M. Barlow contends that by writing that letter Mr. Deacon did condone Mrs. Deacon's offense and did express his decision to abandon all idea of divorce proceedings and thus forfeit all rights to prosecute. In opposing the appeal, Mr. Deacon will place in evidence an extract from a letter which he wrote to Mrs. Baldwin on the day before he wrote the above letter. In this letter, March 20, he said: "When you know from the evidence how my wife used the children to cover her adultery I think you will not consider her a proper woman to have charge of them. If she behaves with decency I will not have her arrested, but will proceed for a divorce in the ordinary manner."

A Sensible View.

New York, Oct. 31.—Mme. Hyacinthe Loyson of France, who for several years has been engaged in evangelical work and advocating Christian unity, is registered at the Fifth Avenue hotel. She has just returned from a tour in the West. Mme. Loyson is taking unusual interest in the Sunday question at the World's Columbian exposition. Speaking about it to-day she said:

"The fair should and must be kept open on Sundays for the multitudes of visitors who will crowd the city of Chicago. Closing the fair on Sunday would compel them to seek diversion in theaters, concert halls and saloons and lead to all kinds of vicious amusements. But if the fair is kept open on that day it is not proposed to make it like a continental Snday nor like the Sunday that was found at the Paris exposition. The idea that is advocated by Christian men and women is that all the machinery and the different work should be stopped and perfect quiet consistent with the crowds should be observed and maintained, that there should be services and songs in twenty different languages for the benefit of all nationalities and chiming bells in various parts of the fair grounds—in short it must be a holy Sunday. We think we shall succeed in our efforts to have such a Sunday at the fair."

Fifty Mexicans Drowned.

Pueblo, Mex., Oct. 31.—Further particulars of the damages and loss sustained by the recent overflow of the Salida river in the hacienda of Pedro Cells 2,000 head of cat- Thousands of acres of coffee and cane lands were inundated and fully $300,000 damage to these crops alone was done. On the hacienda of Pedro Cells 2,000 head of cattle were caught in the torrent of water and swept into the ocean. Fifteen employes on the hacienda de Yotta were overtaken on the flood while at work in the field and all were drowned. Hundreds of families were made homeless.

Neighborly Intentions.

Seattle, Wash., Oct. 31.—Twenty citizens of Ballard, a suburb of this city, hunted Friday night for Policeman Thomas Henry, who had been tried here for murder in third degree, intending to lynch him. Henry was not at his home. The mayor of Ballard was at Henry's home with a well armed posse, and there would have been bloodshed if an attack had been made. Late in the evening Henry went back to his home prepared to defend his life if attacked, but the citizens did not attempt to molest him. Henry was afraid to go to Ballard last night and remained at the sheriff's office in this city.

Killed by His Father's Mistress.

Bristol, Tenn., Oct. 31.—At Wallin's Switch, five miles west of here, A. Coundsdorf was fatally stabbed by a woman named Plas Mill. Coundsdorf's father, who is said to be keeping this woman, is said to be an accessory to the crime. Coundsdorf went to the house of the woman in search of his father. When he entered the house the old man knocked him down with a chair and the woman pulled a knife, which she plunged into the young man's back. Coundsdorf is dead.

Mexican Railway Building.

Monterey, Mex., Oct. 31.—Hon. Delfin Sanchez, who is know as the railroad king of Mexico, arrived here from an extended visit in Paris and London. He states that while in England he was successful in securing the capital necessary for the construction of the extension of the Interoceanic railroad from Puebla to Acapulco. The work on the new line is now actively in progress, the grading and tracks having been laid to a point about fifty miles beyond Matamoras.

His Last Balloon Voyage.

Harper, Kan., Oct. 31.—L. H. Driscoll, an aeronaut, was fatally injured while making an ascension at this place yesterday. When the balloon had reached a considerable height it suddenly collapsed. Then Driscoll started to come down in his parachute. At the height of eighty feet the balloon struck the parachute, knocking it sideways and causing the balloonist to fall to the earth. When picked up Driscoll was insensible and his injuries were pronounced fatal.

Entire Crew Safe.

Marquette, Mich., Oct. 31.—The scow with ten men on board which broke away from the tug Edward Fiske off Granite island last night drove safely ashore on a sand beach north of Little Presque Isle this morning with the men all safe. The life-saving crew from this station, which had gone up the shore with a surf boat on a wagon, reached the spot just after the scow was beached. The men on the scow suffered severely from cold and exposure.

A Long List Extended.

Chicago, Oct. 31.—Yet another name has been added to the already long list of deaths in Hyde Park from gas asphyxiation. The ninth victim is John G. Reynolds, who was found dead in his room at the Hotel Bernard this afternoon. Reynolds had been employed at the world's fair grounds as a Columbian guard since last May.
-sbuaT, ofe-nrwbahngibnt., eshimrf smhfash

The Schooner Ironton Aground.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Special, Oct. 31.—The schooner Ironton, up-bound, light, went aground last night abreast the lumber dock of the Hay Mills. A heavy sea is running and the tugs cannot work on her. The Northern Light arrived down to-night and reports seeing nothing of the schooner Chandler, which broke away from the John Mitchell last night. It has been blowing a heavy northwest gale and snowing hard on Lake Superior all day.

Wanted on a Serious Charge.

Yankton, S. D., Special, Oct. 31.—Joseph Murphy, sixteen years old, is wanted by Sheriff Wyman for rape. He escaped before a warrant could be procured. A reward is offered for his capture.

GREAT NORTHERN

TIME CARD.

NO. 8 Daily		NO. Daily
7 40 p m	Lv.........St. Paul...........Ar	6 55 am
8 10 " 11	......Minneapolis..........	6 25 am
05 a m 215	......Barnesville..........	10 25 pm
*10 45 am 70	Lv.....Crookston.....Ar	4 00 pm
*11 15 " 20	........Shirley.......	3 30 "
*x11 45 " 31	........Ives	x3 00 "
x12 20 pm	.........Wylie.......	x2 25 "
*12 45 " 32	Ar.....St. Hilaire.....Lv	2 00 "

*Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

S. S. Buzza Agt,

Dr. H. GRUNDY.

Physician & Surgeon.

Graduate of the University of Toronto Canada and member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario.

Messages from the surrounding country attended to,

Office in Drug Store

THIEF RIVER FALLS,

NORTHERN PACIFIC

THE

GREAT TRAMSCONENTAL ROUTE.

Passes through Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, Manitoba, Montana, Idaho, Oregon and Washington.

THE DINING CAR LINE

Dining cars are run between Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Winnipeg, Helena, Butte, Tacoma, Seattle and Portland.

PULLMAN SLEEPING CAR ROUTE.

Pullman service between Chicago St. Paul Montana and the Pacific Northwest; and between St. Paul, Minneapolis and Minnesota North Dakota and Manitoba points.

THE POPULAR LINE.

Daily Express Trains carry elegant Pullman sleeping Cars, Dining cars, Day Coaches, Pullman Tourist Sleepers and Free Colonist Sleeping Cars.

YELLOWSTONE PARK ROUTE.

The Northern Pacific R. R. is the rail line to Yellowstone Park; the popular line to California and Alaska; and its trains pass through the grandest scenery of seven states

THROUGH TICKETS Are sold at all cupon offices of the Northern Pacific Railroad to points North, East, South and West in the United States and Canada

TIME SCEDULE,

	Leave Crookston Daily	Arrive Crookston Daily
For Staples, Minneapolis, St. Paul Duluth Ashland and points East and South	7:05 p. m.	8:20 a m.
For Grand Forks Grafton Drayton, Winnipeg and points in North Dakota and Manitoba	8:27a. m.	7:10 p. m

For Rates, maps, Time Tables or special information, apply to Agent Northern Pacific R R. at Crookston Minn., or

CHAS. S. FEE,
Gen. Pass. Agent
St. Paul Minn.

ST. HILAIRE MEAT MARKET.

All kinds of fresh and salt meat always on hand.

I make a specialty of buying and selling cattle of all kinds.

If you want to buy or sell anything in that line it will pay you to give me a call.

JAMES DAINARD.

FRED Eikhof

DEALER IN CHOICE

WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS.

Beer always on tap.

Pool Room in Connection.

Broadway St. Hilaire.

FRANK IVES,

Attorney and Counselor AT LAW,

CROOKSTON and ST. HILAIRE, Minn.

Will Practice in ALL The Courts, OF THE STATE and and before the U. S. Land Office at Crookston and at Washington.

Will give special attention to contests of claims.

BREVITIES.

Wheat is 60 cents.

J. L. Johnson was at Crookston the first of the week on business,

K. O Gigstad made a business trip to Crookston the first of the week.

Yesterday was the last registration day. Fifty-five voters were registered in this village.

Mrs. C. G, Rapp returned to-day from Goodhue county where she has been visiting friends a couple of weeks while on her way home from Europe. She was accompanied by her sister Miss Alice Holmes,

Mrs, Minton Holmes returned last Friday from a visit to relatives at Angus.

Village Marshall Johnson has been sick the past week and Christ Hall has been taking his place.

Elmer Stranahan was around last week with the cigars stating that it was his twenty-first birthday,

If you want some nice fresh oysters call on W. A. Arthur.

John Kupol, of Thief River Falls, was in town to-day visiting friends.

C. G. Rapp went down to Crookston yesterday on business.

The weather still continues to be fine but is getting rather cold.

Milwaukee, Wis., suffered a ten million dollar fire last week.

Fresh Oysters at W. A. Arthurs, try them.

M. E. Bjerk and Carl Johnson was down to Crookston the first of the week

Co. Supt. of Schools V. D. Carruth was in town last Monday. Mr. Carruth is a candidate for re-election on the Republican ticket.

Messrs, Brosseau and Mead, of Red Lake Falls, were in town a short time last Monday.

Frank Gravel, of Crookston, was in town to-day selling groceries to our merchants.

O. H. Peters returned home from St. Paul last Friday.

Miss B. Kyle came up from Crookston to-day and will teach a term of school about five miles east of here,

Farmers, vote for the reform party and let us try to reform things so that farming will be a profitable business and we will then have a prosperous country and not before.

Let your vote be cast for Ignatius Donnelly, the poor man's champion, and it will be a vote in favor of justice and against monopoly and dishonesty.

Vote for Donnelly and you vote against elevator robbery, railroad robbery, tariff robbers and all other robbers.

VOTE STRAIGHT.

Those who voted with the alliance two years ago and who are hoping that the Peoples party will be successful in inaugurating a reform in the country should see that their ballots and the ballots of all their friends are voted straight. The Peoples party is a new party and has a record to make. If its voters present a solid front this year, and gain in numbers or even hold their own the future success of the great reform party is assured. The old parties especially the Republican party will try in every possible manner to break up and if possible corrupt the new party. Be watchful from now on. All kinds of campaign lies will undoubtedly be circulated after it is too late to deny and expose them. Money will be very freely used. Be watchful and energetic and victory is assured.

The construction department has turned over the Thief River Falls line to the operating department of the Great Northern and in a few days regular trains will run to Thief River River Falls. On Wednesday of this week, under the direction of Supt. J. W. Speelman, engine 123 made the first trip under special orders, Conductor A B. Stilwell in charge of train, Jerry Hurley engineer. The train left St. Hilaire at 4:12 p. m. and made the run of 8 miles in 11 minuets. The line is in first class condition, solid roadbed, long tangents and well balanced. The work is of the best and is a credit to the construction company of which Col. Wm. Crooks is the head, assisted by a corps of able and experianced railroad men. The Red Lake Falls extension will be completed in a few days.

WANTED: A NEW DEAL.

From the Albert Lea Standard Independent Republican:

There ought to be a new deal in Minnesota. It conduces to good government to make frequent changes in the officers of state, and it fosters rings and corruption to entrust any political party with unchecked power for a long term of years. In all departments of the state government there should be a change, and it would be healthy for the body politic to make it this year.

Grave complaints and well founded charges have been made for many years against the board of railroad and warehouse commissioners, against the state prison management, against the insane asylums, the dairy and food inspectors, the boiler inspectors and against other departments in which altogether a great horde of office holders are employed.

There are rings, and bad ones, in some of these official spheres that ought to be busted.

They ought to be busted wide open and exposed to the gaze of honest citizens.

The only way to bust them; the only way to secure a new deal is

To make a clean sweep,

Turn the g. o. p. out, from governor down to the most dependent clerk in the state house and take a fresh start.

Turn them all out to grass, and let us see if it is not possible once more in this state to enjoy a government administered with a fair and decent regard for the rights and interests of the people.

Knute Nelson it seems has become so exasperated at the way the people are turning against him that he has lost his head. During a speech at Elbow Lake the other evening, a people's party man present asked a question with reference to a statement Wilson had made. Instead of answering the question Nelson told the man to "shut up," and when he insisted upon an answer to his question Nelson jumped from the platform, caught the man by the throat and choked him severely before he was pulled off by some of the audiance. Nelson then left the hall, to avoid arrest but afterwards a warrant was served upon him and he is now under arrest charged with assault and battery. Even in his present exasperated condition there is no excuse for this disgraceful act upon the part of Mr. Nelson and he will lose many additional votes on account of it.—Crookston Times.

Knute Nelson has at last become alive to the fact that his countrymen are deserting him and is desperate. He has lost his head and fallen to abusing them, In his recent speech at Benson he made use of the following language, which was addressed to Norwegians:

"In the old country you wore wooden shoes, breeches coming to your knees, fastned at the hip with a belt, sheepskin coats and drank sour milk. Now you are prosperous; you raise wheat, take it to town, sell it, go to the saloons get drunk and raise hell."

The language was carefully reported by E. S. Aldrich, of Benson. Mr. Aldrich was in St. Paul yesterday and said that the language was in the mouth of every Norwegian in that part of the state and that the few who remained on his side are announcing that they will support him no longer. Such a gratuitous insult they will not endure, and, propose, not only to vote against him, but to do everything in their power to defeat him. The Scandinavian papers all over the state will publish the language and Mr. Nelson will have to look to other nationalities for votes if he gets any.

The Cincinnati Post to-day prints a letter from Terence V. Powderly, grand master workman of the Knights of Labor, of which the following is an extract:

"I will venture the assertion that 1,000,000 working men in the United States would make ready to march to Scranton to hang me for being a traitor if I did not vote for Weaver. They would be right. I would be a traitor and I really believe that I should be hanged for not voting for Weaver if my vote would decide the contest. I would agree with any man who would hang me for treason, they should not refuse to agree with me when I say that each workingman who will not vote for him (Weaver) should be regarded in the same light.

I have written no campaign documents for either the Democratic or Republican party: I will not write any nor support the candidates of any party but the one which had the honesty and manhood to lay claim to the votes of the Knights of Labor by adopting the preamble of the Knights of Labor in its national platform, the Peoples party candidates, Gen. James B. Weaver and Gen. James G, Field."

The farmers of this country are to-day reaping the result of the McKinley tariff The European countries have been discriminated against so that they cannot sell us their manufactured goods and all the prominent wheat men plainly state that the reason that wheat is so low is that the European countries absolutely refuse to buy any wheat from the United States. Who can blame them, if we enact laws which prohibits them from doing business with us, do you not suppose that they will refuse to buy anything from us? As long as the present tariff law exists they will not buy wheat here if they can possibly get it anywhere else, and consequently as long as the law exists we will have low prices for our wheat. If the farmers and business men of this country want fifty cents a bushel for wheat and high prices for other things let them vote the Republican ticket. If not, vote for reform and the People's party,

Ground feed, shorts and barley for sale. Inquire of E. T. Spafford & Co.

ASTRAY.

Taken up on the premises of the undersigned in St. Hilaire 3 steers past two years old red and white spotted and 1 red steer past three years old. Owner can have same by paying expense of keeping and for this notice.

M. Hendrickson

STRAYED.

From the premises of the undersigned one red bull with a hole in the right ear. A reward will be paid for the return of the above described animal to

M. Hendrickson,

ESTRAY.

Taken up on the premises of the undersigned in the town of River Falls, 3 calves. Owner can have same by paying expenses and for this notice.

P. O. Hagglund.

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn. Oct. 20 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on December 1 1892 viz Gustaf Anderson H D 11680 for the SW ¼ Sec 32 Tp 153 R 44.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land viz:

A. Sture of Crookston, E. M. Svenson, A M. Ekstrom, P. A. Ekstrom all of St. Hilaire Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

LINCOLN AND WEAVER.

Peculiar Similarity of the Campaigns of 1860 and 1892.

During the early part of September 1860, the outlook for the election of Abraham Lincoln by the Republican party was not as favorable as for the People's party to elect their candidate for president in the coming election. Those who proposed to vote for Lincoln were assured that the contest was between Breckenridge and Douglas, and that a vote for Lincoln was to insure the election of Breckenridge. The October elections gave evidence that the people were in earnest in their desire for change in administering the affairs of the government, and a desperate situation presented itself to the leaders of the organized political forces.

Instead of its being an issue between the northern and southern wings of the Democratic party the lines were drawn between the Republican party and all others. In order to defeat the will of the people fusion became the order of the day, and every possible combination was entered into for the purpose of defeating the "rail splitter" and "ignoramus boor" of the parties. The "Know Nothing" party, headed by Bell, was making its last effort under the banner "Americans to Rule America," and the Douglas party derived its greatest strength from the foreign vote, which was concentrated under the Douglas lead for the purpose of opposing and defeating the Bell party, yet the situation became so desperate that the Douglas and Bell party united forces as a last resort to defeat Lincoln in some doubtful states. This served to show the success of the people's movement, and with renewed hope the Lincoln cohorts marched on to victory.

So persistent had been the cry of Lincoln's incapacity, ignorance and unfitness to administer the affairs of the government that many opposed him in the honest belief that his election would be a disgrace to the nation and that the government by the people would cease with his inauguration. A parallel is presented in this opposition to the election of General Weaver, and the supporters of the old and found wanting parties are working the same old scheme to prejudice the people, and with about the same result. Every election and and caucus held since the nomination of General Weaver gives evidence of a growing popularity of the People's ticket, and the few who came out of the old ranks because they believed the interests of the nation demanded a change find themselves almost crowded out of the ranks by the efforts of raw recruits in their zeal to get to the front.

So far as is possible the People's movement is ignored by the eastern press, yet evidence of their alarm of the result from the uprising of the people is not wanting. In the western states the cry of neither protective tariff nor tariff reform catches the ear, and in the mining states the bugaboo of the repeal of the lead tax fails to mislead the people. Listening to the appeal of the politicians while taking the toboggan for a lower plane of prosperity is not practiced by the people to the extent it has been in the past, and the dulcet tones of the alarmed officeholder are not being responded to by the measured tread of the heretofore slaves of the old parties.—Colorado Herald.

People's Party in the East.

The People's party in the east is not asleep and, though as a matter of course the greater interest is centered in the west and south, eastern members of the national committee have not been inactive in the stronghold of the gold bugs. There are People's electoral tickets in each of the Atlantic and New England states, and in most of them full state and congressional tickets.

The state committees in New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts, and Connecticut are hopeful of securing a good vote for Weaver and Field, and claims are made that a congressman or two will be elected in New York and New Jersey.

People's Party Ticket

For President, JAMES B. WEAVER, of Iowa.

For Vice President, J. G. FIELD, of Virginia

For Presidential Electors—First District W. H. Norton. Second District—F. M. Currier. Third District—C. P. Carpenter, Fourth District—Dr. E. Fish. Fifth District—Dr. E. F. Clark. Sixth District—C. F. Bodahl.

STATE TICKET.

For Governor, IGNATIUS DONNELLY, of Dakota.

For Lieutenant-Governor, KITTLE HALVORSON, of stearns.

For Secretary of State, H. B. MARTIN, of Hennepin.

For State Treasurer, P. M. RINGDAL, of Polk.

For Attorney General, J. L. McDONALD, of Ramsey.

For Judges of the Supreme Court: Thomas Canty, of Hennepin, Daniel Buck, of Mankato and W. N Davidson, of Rock.

CONGRESSIONAL.

For Congress, H. E. BOEN, of Otter Tail.

JUDICIAL.

For Judge, 14th Judicial District FRANK IVES, of Polk.

LEGISLATIVE.

For Representatives to the Legislature—J. D, Knuteson, of Polk. B. M. Chesley and O. E. Olson, of Norman,

POLK COUNTY TICKET,

For Auditor—C U. Webster,

For Treasurer—J. T. Beaudry.

For Register of Deeds—J. Amundson.

For Sheriff—Arne Grandysen.

For County Attorney—A. R, Holton.

For Judge of Probate—C. M Benson.

For County Surveyor—O, L, Hamery

For Supt. of Schools—A. A. Lommen

For Court Commissioner—J. G. Mcgrew.

For Coroner—H, Shepard.

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONERS,

First District John E. Oppegaard.

Third District—Christopher Anderson

Fifth District—Robert Anderson.

INTERESTING ITEM.

It is to the interest of parties contemplating going east to consider the great advantages the Great Northern offers them through its fast passenger service to St. Paul and to all points west to the Pacific coast, their free colonist cars, and magnificent Dining and Sleeping cars. The shortest route, close connections, quickest time and fare as low as the lowest, Any information cheerfully given,

S. S. Buzza
Agent.

MONEY TO LOAN.

I am prepared to make a few choice loans on real estate at 10 per cent straight.

H.E. IVES.

FIFTY CENTS IN CASH

Will secure the Spectator from now to Jan. 1st 1893, a hot political campaign is now on and we will try to make the Spectator interesting we make this low offer so that every farmer in this part of the country can afford to subscribe.

STRAYED

From my pasture on the 9th, day of October, one bay colt four years old, one bay mare 6 years old both branded F L on shoulder, Liberal reward offered for information.

S. M. Dainard.

FORSALE,

A dapple-gray stallion seven years old, weight about 1,600, Will sell or trade.

Peter Lindbloom
Bray Tp, Sec. 28.

WANTED. Salesmen. Local and Traveling, To represent our well known house. You need no capital to represents a firm that warrants nursery stock first-class and true to name. WORK ALL THE YEAR. $100 per month to the right man. Apply quick stating age. L. L. MAY & CO.
Nurserymen, Florists and Seeds men,
St. Paul Minn.
(This house is responsible.)

U. S. LAND OFFICE.
Crookston Minn September 15 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on December 8 1892 viz: Charles Will Heden D S no. 11561 for the NE ¼ Sec 29 Tp 150 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of said land viz:

Ole J. Johnson, A. G. Mostrom. John Mostrom, Knut Steen all of St. Hilaire, Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

CLOSING OUT SALE!

At E M Hoff's Store

My whole stock of

Dry Goods and Notions

Gents Furnshing, Goods

$5,000 worth of ready made clothing

Foot wear of all kinds and everything belonging to a full stocked general merchandise store will be closed out at cost in the next 90 days.

COME EVERY BODY

AND

SECURE GOOD BARGAINS.

E. M. HOFF

CROWN ROLLER MILL.

EQUIPPED WITH THE LATEST AND BEST IMPROVED MACHINERY.

Manufactures the well known,
PERFECTION FANCY PATENT and WHITE ROSEFLOUR.
Rye and Feed mill in connection.
Flour and Feed always kept on hand
Custom work a specialty.
FRICKER & WELCH Prop,
HILAIRE MINNESOTA

CHAS G. RAPP.

A large and complete line of

General Merchandise.

CONSISTING OF

Dry Goods, Groceries, Clothing Boots & Shoes, Hats & Caps Notions

THE ST. HILAIRE SPECTATOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY EVENING
H. E. IVES, Propr.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE:
In Advance, $1.50 Per Year
If not in Advance, $2.00 Per Year

Entered in The Post Office at St. Hilaire, as Second Class Mail Matter

WEDNESDAY November 2 1892

THE LEADING ISSUES

CLEARLY PRESENTED BY A POPULIST CONGRESSIONAL CANDIDATE.

Questions of Finance, Land and Transportation as Viewed by J. H. Turner—How the Producers Are Robbed by the Barons—The Tariff Humbug.

Mr. J. H. Turner, national secretary of the Farmers' Alliance and Industrial union and also secretary of the national committee of the People's party, has been nominated for congress from the Fourth congressional district of Georgia. He was born and reared in the district. Mr. Turner's letter of acceptance is a masterly document, showing that the writer fully understands the causes of and remedies for the present deplorable and threatening conditions which obtain in our beloved country. Following is a liberal extract from the letter:

If the tariff be the great robber, as pictured by the Democratic party, instead of cutting it down 7 per cent. every vestige of it should be blotted out forever. But I have found the great trouble with this party on this subject to lie in the fact that the controlling element of the party, being interested in these protected industries, is just as much in favor of protection as the Republican party itself. There is no perceptible difference, so far as the record goes on this subject, between an eastern Democrat and an eastern Republican. This sham battle over the tariff has been going on for more than a half century. The people have been arrayed on either side loyally—and I might say blindly—following their leaders with a devotion unparalleled in political history, while both sides have been systematically robbed by a system purposely kept in the background and almost entirely ignored as a political issue. I refer to the financial system which has so ruthlessly snatched away the comfort and happiness of so many of our business men and brought desolation and ruin to the once happy homes of so many farmers and mechanics.

In proof of the above statement as regards the business men of the country I submit the following from Bradstreet's Commercial Bulletin: "In 1865 there were 620 failures, with liabilities of $17,625,000. In 1875, after silver had been demonetized and the currency of the country had been contracted from $52.01 per capita in 1866 to $14.64 in 1875, there were 7,740 failures, with liabilities of $201,000,000, and in 1889 number of failures 13,277, with liabilities of $312,423,742."

Let us now examine into the condition of the farmers and working people of the country.

We find from the census bulletins of 1890 that there were 9,000,000 mortgages recorded between 1880 and 1890 on the homes of the people. From statistics already given out estimates fairly made show that from $9,000,000,000 to $15,000,000,000 yet remain unpaid. This sum at 8 per cent. interest would amount to $1,200,000,000 that must be paid from the products of labor annually into the coffers of the usurer. Allowing 8,000,000 bales of cotton for an average crop, it would take three entire crops of cotton to pay this interest alone. How long will the farmers and business men of the country continue to vote to continue in power political parties that propose to continue present conditions?

Of the lands of the United States, aliens own outside of railroad grants, 61,000,000 acres; railroad corporations own 191,432,385 acres which, added to the amount owned by aliens, makes 253,312,385 acres, a sufficient amount, if reclaimed by the government, to provide a comfortable home for every man, woman and child in the United States who is today without a home. It is the home owner that develops the resources of a country, defends its laws, builds its schools and makes society contented and happy. The history of all countries and times teaches us that when the lands of a country drift into the hands of the few and the many are mere tenants and serfs, bloodshed and revolution have been the invariable results.

Are the people of this country to stand idly by and permit their homes to be absorbed by aliens and corporations, simply because the political boss says that it would be communism to offer a protest? If the people would not see their children the tenants of alien landlords, let them put their protests in the ballot box, which is the only remedy left except the musket. Both the old political parties are so completely dominated by these corporations that they dare not open their mouths on the land question. Examine their platforms and see.

The transportation question is one of the most vital that is now engaging the attention of the American people. Railroad corporations have become so exacting that almost every state in the Union has been compelled to create a railroad commission and the national government an interstate commission, in order to protect the people, and they are still unprotected, as every one knows who has endeavored to investigate the matter. According to the price the people are receiving for their products, the railroads are charging more today for passenger and freight traffic than they ever did since there was a railroad in the country. It will take twice as many pounds of cotton or bushels of wheat to carry a passenger 100 miles or a carload of freight 100 miles than it did twenty years ago. For example, it would then cost five cents per mile, or five dollars to ride 100 miles. The five dollars would cost twenty-five pounds of cotton at twenty cents per pound. Now it will cost only three cents per mile or three dollars for 100 miles. The three dollars will cost fifty pounds of cotton at six cents per pound.

Railroad control as now practiced is a sham and a fraud, and the experience of some of the wisest railroad men in this country and the old country teaches us that the only way to control railroads is for the government to absolutely own and operate them in the interest of the people. "Poor's Manual" for 1892 is just out, and is recognized authority on railroad statistics all over the world. It gives the number of miles of railroad in the United States to be 170,601; actual cost, $4,740,170,651; watered stock, $5,056,140,370; total valuation, $10,765,623,011. By fictitious or watered stock they are compelling the people to pay more than twice as much for service as they should pay in order that they may reap dividends upon fraudulent investments.

I find in the same manual that the gross earnings of the roads are $1,138,021,450. Cotton at six cents per pound, it would take 42,149,054 bales, or about five entire crops, to pay this enormous sum. Wheat at sixty cents per bushel, it would take 1,896,707,681 bushels to pay it. The net earnings are $358,200,880. At the present price of cotton it would take 13,192,258 bales, or about 1¼ crops to pay these net earnings.

The annual earnings of the four principal classes of corporations in this country are as follows:

Railroads	$350,910,880
Insurance	115,451,278
Banks	75,760,514
Telegraphs	25,917,026
Total	$578,374,548

This vast sum paid in cotton at the present price would require 21,230,086 bales of cotton, or about 2½ crops.

The wheat crop for 1891 was in round numbers 400,000,000 at sixty cents per bushel; the price that the farmer is now receiving would amount to $240,000,000.

The earnings of these corporations paid in wheat would require 955,623,913 bushels, or two and one-fourth crops. If an entire cotton and wheat crop should be applied to the payment of the earnings of these corporations it would lack $117,374,348 of paying it. I give these facts to show how the products of the country are being consumed. It accounts for the thousands of failures among business men and the universal bankruptcy among the farmers. Both of the old political parties claim that it would be unconstitutional for the government to lay its hands upon these corporations, and have entirely ignored these issues in their platforms; therefore I accept your nomination pledged, if elected, to do all in my power to remedy these evils and rescue the government from the hands of these corporations and restore it to the people, if the constitution has to be changed to do it.

PREVARICATOR BEN.

CONTRADICTIONS AND MISREPRESENTATIONS IN HIS LETTER.

Falsehoods That Are Apparent to Every Sane Man—Telling the Wheat Raiser That He Gets More and the Wheat Eater That He Buys for Less.

President Harrison's letter of acceptance contains statements so utterly at variance with truth and common sense that one doubts whether he really dares to be guilty of such statements and scans the letter again and again only to be convinced in the end that he actually does say them. Just hear him:

And now a few words in regard to the existing tariff law. We are fortunately able to judge of its influence upon production and prices by the market reports. The day of the prophet of calamity has been succeeded by that of the trade report. An examination into the effect of the law upon the prices of protected products and of the cost of such articles as enter into the living of people of small means has been made by a senate committee, composed of leading senators of both parties, with the aid of the best statisticians, and the report signed by all the members of the committee has been given to the public. No such wide and careful inquiry has ever before been made. These facts appear from the report.

It is very evident that Harrison is determined to knock out the calamity howler. Well, here is how he does it:

First—The cost of articles entering into the use of those earning less than $1,200 per annum has decreased up to May, 1892, 3.4 per cent., while in farm products there has been an increase in prices, owing in part to an increased foreign demand and the opening of new markets. In England during the same period the cost of living increased 1.9 per cent. Tested by their power to purchase articles of necessity the earnings of our working people have never been as great as they are now.

It looks rather contradictory of course to tell the working people that their cost of living has decreased and the farmers that the price of their products has increased, especially when over three-fourths of the things purchased by poor people are farm products, from the clothes and shoes they wear to the food they consume, except salt and fish, while other necessaries, such as stoves, tinware, glass, crockery and pearl buttons that are not produced on the farm, form but a very small portion of their outlay.

But this does not seem to bother Harrison and his advisers. The average old party dupe does not seem to think, but swallows such bait whole without thinking and so Harrison can lay the soft soap on a little thicker. Here is another dose:

Second—There has been an average advance in the rate of wages of 1.55 of 1 per cent.

Jewhillikens! How happy the poor fellow must be, who has been earning ten dollars a week, to find that Harrison and the senate committee tell him that he gets five cents a week more now! He doesn't get it of course, but then it must be so, for great is the Republican party, and Benjamin Harrison is its prophet.

Now comes the biggest whopper of 'em all. He quotes:

Third—There has been an advance in the price of all farm products of 18.67 per cent. and of all cereals 33.59 per cent.

Is it actually possible that Harrison has the supreme impudence to father such a statement as that?

Ask the farmers what they get for their produce and their grain. Here are the New York prices on wheat and corn as given in the telegraphic reports:

	Sept. 12, 1891.	Sept. 17, 1892.
Wheat, No. 2 red	$1 01	73
Wheat, No. 3 red	93	72½
Wheat, ungraded red	97-1 05	63-78½
Wheat, No. 1 northern	1 08½	85
Wheat, No. 1 hard	1 05	88
Corn, No. 2	72	54¼-55

These figures are taken from the market reports. And the president of the United States, in order to squelch the calamity howler, deliberately quotes and indorses a statement that as a result of the McKinley bill the price of all cereals has advanced nearly 34 per cent.

Ye gods and little fishes!

If the leader of a party holding the highest office in the land, dare do this, it is no wonder his big and little followers resort to the most barefaced and infamous lying to keep their party in power.

If the McKinley bill is to be judged by these results, then it has proved a dismal failure, and this is the logic of Harrison's statement. It would be ridiculous to call it argument.

These things show that the whole tariff fight between the old parties is a disgraceful fake. If the Democrats are honest in their opposition to the "famous McKinley bill" as they call it, why did they fail even to introduce a bill to repeal it, although they had a brutal majority of 153 in congress?

Both parties are guilty of gross falsehood and deception in discussing the McKinley bill or the tariff. Neither has an appreciable bearing on prices of farm products or wages. Else why do workingmen in free trade England get higher wages for nine hours' work a day than they do for thirteen hours' work a day in protected Germany?

These matters are regulated by the money market, and that is controlled by a comparatively few bankers and money kings. Study the money question and you will learn why a few who do no labor become millionaires, while the many who do all the work remain poor. Study these figures given by Mr. Thomas G. Shearman in The North American Review:

Thirty-five thousand people hold 83 per cent. of the wealth of the country.

Sixty-five million hold 17 per cent. of the wealth of the country.

And then vote the People's party ticket to stop this robbery of the people.—Milwaukee National Advance.

"A Fine Italian Hand."

John E. Milholland, one of the Republican machine's understrappers, tried to capture the People's party organization of New York city by some slick, underhanded methods, but his game was discovered and defeated. Milholland's was the "fine Italian hand" which engineered the deal to pose Whitelaw Reid before the workingmen of this country as a repentant foe to organized labor. He failed in that as well as in his latest scheme to pack and undermine the People's party.

Weaver City.

A new town has been started near Creede called Weaver City. Nobody is given a deed to a lot in the town without a clause in it holding the purchaser to a pledge to vote for Weaver and silver. The town is already quite an imposing one, and the whole of Colorado is thinking of locating there.—Denver Road.

A Little Bit of Record.

It is thought by some that this plan (the subtreasury) conflicts with the constitution of the United States, because they affirm that "the government has no money except what it obtained from the people by taxation." To this we reply: Did the government obtain by taxation the $5,000,000 treasury notes issued in 1812, the $10,000,000 issued in 1813, the $35,000,000 issued in 1814, the $25,000,000 issued in 1815, the issues of 1838, 1840, 1842, 1843, 1846, 1847, 1857, 1860, 1861, 1862 and 1863? Did not the government issue these amounts simply by fiat, at no expense whatever to the people?—Southern Mercury.

The Vote in Arkansas.

The Populist vote in Arkansas proves to be 31,177 instead of 15,000, as the dispatches have said. The new party carried three counties and elected seven members to the legislature. The Populist vote is heaviest in the northwestern part of the state, where there are comparatively few colored men. This is another indication that the majority of the white voters in this and several other southern states have broken away from the Democratic party.—New Nation.

There'll Be Gnashing of Teeth.

"What a gathering that will be" when the People's party reinforcements stand up to be counted in the Fifty-third congress. Coming from the west and the south to sit down in the seats of national power they will take Abraham, Isaac and Jacob of the effete east, and the golden calf of Wall street and thrust them into outer darkness where there will be weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth.—Nonconformist.

Think of Murat Halstead as an adviser of the People's presidential nominee! In a recent article in the New York Herald Halstead suggests that "Weaver can get even with the Macon egg thrower" by withdrawing from the contest and assisting to defeat Cleveland. This looks like Halstead has read Harrison's doom. Others have read Cleveland's.

National Politics Mixed.

Senator Peffer, while passing through Kansas City, in an interview said: "We shall carry all the silver and many of the southern states. Our majority in Kansas will be anywhere from 25,000 to 40,000. I think there is no doubt of Jerry Simpson's election. The present state of national politics is mixed. It may be Cleveland, and may be Weaver. Harrison has very little prospect of reelection. If settled outside of the house, Mr. Cleveland will be the man; but if decided in the house, the great popular uprising in favor of Weaver may change the mind of many southern Democrats already elected and make them fear to thwart the will of the people by voting for Cleveland."

"The Popgun Party."

In Colorado adherents of the People's party are called "Populists." Some of the old party papers, realizing that the new movement will make a clean sweep in that state this year, try to get up a sickly smile by speaking of it as "the popgun party."

A gentleman who was a Republican until this year was twitted by a goldbug officeholder with belonging to "the popgun party." He quietly replied that he preferred "the popgun party" to the Winchester party.

Trades unionists who have suffered from Pinkertonism should stick a pin here.

Mr. Blaine says, "The tariff on imports is the first issue." Well, if age is any cause for priority it certainly is.—Iowa Tribune.

Ask Your Dealer For

WHIPS.
FEATHERBONE is made from Enameled Quills—nature's own toughest, and strongest elastic material. Best wearing whips made for 35c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50. All styles for Buggy, Cart, Track, Team and Riding. Be sure and ask for a FEATHERBONE.
FOR SALE BY
S. M. HOFF
St. Hilaire

Going to Buy
A Dictionary?
GET THE BEST,
Webster's International.
A Choice Gift
A Grand Family Educator
A Library in Itself
The Standard Authority
WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY
SOLD BY ALL BOOKSELLERS.
The International is a new book from cover to cover, fully abreast of the times, and is the successor of the authentic "Unabridged." Ten years were spent in revising, 100 editors employed and over $300,000 expended before the first copy was printed.
Do not buy reprints of obsolete and comparatively worthless editions.
Send for free pamphlet containing specimen pages and full particulars.
G. & C. MERRIAM CO., Publishers,
SPRINGFIELD, MASS., U. S. A.

U.S. LAND OFFICE.

Crookston, Minn., Nov. 12 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn on November 29 1892. viz:

Theodore Halvorson D S 11948 for the SE¼ Sec. 29 Tp 152 R. 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Knut Steen, Anton Lee, Ole J. Hegg, Ole J. Johnson: all of St. Hilaire Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

E. T. SPAFFORD S. M. DAINARD
E. T. SPAFFORD & CO.
DEALERS IN
LUMBER, LATH AND SHINGLES.
A complete stock of all kinds of Lumber Lath, Shingles, Mouldings, Building Paper Sash, Doors and Screens, Lime, Cement Stucco, Plastering Hair, Brick etc. always hand at the lowest market prices.
S. M. Dainard, Manager.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE, MINN.

E. T. SPAFFORD & CO.
WILL ALWAYS PAY THE
HIGHEST MARKET PRICES
FOR
All kinds of
CATTLE.
Also for Cord wood, Hay, Oats, Barley and flax.
Ground Feed for Sale
S. M. DAINARD.
Manager.

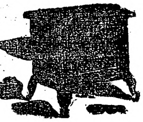
Reserved For
THE
ST. HILAIRE
TOWNSITE
COMPANY

W. A. ARTHUR.
DEALER IN
FRUITS, CONFECTIONARY
TOBACCO AND CIGARS
STATIONARY OF ALL KINDS
Lunch Counter
Warm meals at all hours.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE MINNESOTA

JUSTUS L. JOHNSON
DEALER IN
pure medicinas Fancy articles, perfumer and stationary, paints oils and dye stuffs.
Cigars, Candy, Fruit and Soft Drinks always on hand.
Barbershop in connection
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE

I CAN SAVE YOU
MONEY
If you wish to make
REAL ESTATE
LOANS
For full particulars call on or address
H. E. IVES.
SPECTATOR OFFICE ST. HILAIRE.

HOLMES BRO'S
Dealers in
HARDWARE, TINWARE,
We are carrying a heavy and complete line of Heating and Cooking stoves.



GOOD GOODS LOW PRICES.
CALL ON US FOR BARGAINS
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE MINN.

FARMERS STORE
NEW GOODS AT HARD PAN PRICES.
If you want to save money do your trading with
HALL BROS.
DEALER IN
Dry Goods, Groceries Notions.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE

S. M. HOFF
DEALER IN
HARDWARE
A new and complete stock of all kinds of Hardware, Tinware, Stoves, Fencing wire, Nails, in fact everything usually kept in a first-class Hardware Store,
AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES
Call and examine Goods and Get Our Prices.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE.

DR. PRICE'S Cream Baking Powder.

The only Pure Cream of Tartar Powder.—No Ammonia; No Alum.

Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

CHOKED BY GHOSTS.

Spirits of Murdered Miners Get Their Revenge.

The Ozark mountains of Missouri present a field for the curious which is not to be found this side of Mexico. The whole country was at one time under the domination of the Spanish when they first explored that part of the contient, and their relics are to be found all over the hills in the shape of excavations and old mines, and in many instances their very tools are to be found just where they left them over 100 or 200 years ago.

But it is not only their relics and tools that are left as a reminder of the Spanish explorers, but they have left legends and stories which have been handed down with implicit faith from generation to generation until they have become part of the history of the country.

About 18 miles southeast of Galena is an old Spanish mine which is reputed to be rich with gold and silver, as well as with lead; yet no man has ever had the temerity to work the mine on account of the story which is attached to it and the certain uncanny feeling which is said to overcome any one who dares to profane the place with his presence.

The story is that in this mine, great riches were found by seven men, who were so overcome by their good fortune that they could not agree as to the division of the find, but each was eager to have the whole for himself, and the result was that one by one they were killed by their companions until but one was left, and then it is related that during the night he was set upon by the whole ghostly band and choked to death by the spirits of the men whom he had helped to murder.—Cincinnati Commercial-Gazette.

SETTLED AT LAST.

How Old Abner Coles Died Without Even Getting Justice

"I never knew when the accident happened. It was on the books of the railroad company when I first went to work for the attorney of the road.

Year after year every six months the old fellow used to come down to the city to see if we were ready to settle. He had lost his leg in a smashup.

"We are not liable; but we will do something for you," would be his greeting from the astute railroad attorney. You must be patient, there are so many ahead of you."

One day he hobbled into the general offices and declared that he would not leave unless he was attended to.

"Your claim is for $20,000?" asked the lawyer, kindly.

"That's it; every decision of the courts has been agin you; it is now nine years since you told me you would settle. My wife has died. Poor soul, I thought some of the money would do her good. The boys had grown up. Lightnin' struck the barn. Fire swept away all I had. Jim my favorite son went down with liquor."

"We will settle," said the lawyer, kindly, "but you must be patient."

And years swept by; and the lawyer himself went to his reward. The road changed hands, was sold under a mortgage, and was reorganized. New officers filled the places of the old ones. A newer life and a newer generation held sway.

They said the claim was to be settled.

Yes.

Well, that funeral you just saw passing the door from the county poor farm was the last of earth for old Abner Coles, who lived and died without justice between man and a soulless corporation.

CURING A TANTRUM;

A Sketch Which Will Be Appreciated by Some Married Folks,

Mrs. Murdoc had one of her peculiar attacks the other day. She felt it coming on all afternoon, but restrained herself until her docile spouse came home at six o'clock, when she got the word and started off on a kite-shaped track. She went to the quarter without a slip, turned into the backstretch at a ball-bearing gait, passed the three-quarter pole going smooth and was coming down toward the wire like an old campaigner when Mr. Murdock, who was feeling unusually brisk, attempted to call her back with a mild protest. That started her off again and she trotted another heat. As she came up the stretch again the old man began to feel a sort of pneumatic tire and ventured:

"But Eliza—"

"Don't talk to me, you miserable brute," she shouted.

The old man sighed apologetically.

"You know you're a lazy, good fur nuthin'—"

"All right, 'Liza—"

"Ole varmint without one spark o' manhood."

He did not question the statement.

"You'd let yer wife work 'er hands off and die in the poor 'ouse."

There was no protest filed.

"You great hulkin', round-shouldered, lopsided, lantern-jawed, knock-kneed—Oo-oo-ooh!"

She clenched her hands as if she longed to strangle him. He didn't seem to mind it now. He was waiting for the storm to subside.

"Oh, you baldheaded—"

"See here, now, 'Liza," said the old man, solemnly, "see here—now who'n thunder's to blame fer thet?"

And Eliza did not answer.

Why It Was Refused

"Jack," said the young man's father, "your house seems to me to be insufficiently heated. Don't you want me to put in a furnace for you?"

"No, thanks, pop," said Jack.

Later, Jack's wife asked him, Why on earth did you refuse the furnace?"

"Why? Because, if I'd said yes, pop would have had his old one cut down for us. That's why. I know pop."

An Experienced Hand.

"I'd like a job, sir as waiter," said the applicant.

"You have had experience in waiting, I suppose?" queried the restaurant proprietor.

"Indeed I have."

"For how long?"

"Why, sir, I've taken meals at a restaurant for twelve years."—Chicago News.

Robert Franz, the well-known composer, died in Berlin.

Lumbago cured by two applications. Mr. H. C. Rigby, Baltimore, Md., Special Agent of the mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York says: "I take pleasure in stating that two applications of Salvation Oil cured me of a severe attack of lumbago."

Justin McCarthy has finished a novel with the Irish question in it.

It is a great domestic remedy, and should be kept in every home. Mr. Norman Cheatham, Waverly, Sussex Co., Va., who has never been without it for twelve years subscribes to this opinion. He says: "Our family has been using Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup for twelve years and are never without it in the house. It is invaluable."

Boston wins the National league base ball championship.

How's This!

We offer One Hundred Dollars reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions and financially able to carry out any obligations made by their firm.

WEST & TRUAX, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O. WALDING, KINNAN & MARVIN, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Testimonials sent free. Price 75c. per bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

Mrs. Humphrey Ward has been an invalid for several months.

Are You Yellow?

If so, of course you are bilious, which also implies that you have a dull pain and tenderness in the right side, nausea, sick headache, furred tongue, sour breath and indigestion. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is what you want. Prompt relief follows its use in liver complaint, dyspepsia, constipation, malaria, rheumatism, kidney trouble and nervousness. Physicians unqualifiedly recommend it.

Maurice Bernhardt's wife has applied for a divorce.

DR. HAMILTON'S ENGLISH MAGNETIC RING!
—FOR—
Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica,
And Diseases of the Nervous System.
Generating a Mild, Continuous and Absolutely Even Current of Electricity.
Sent by mail on receipt of Price, $2.00.
Agents Wanted In Every City and Town.
A. H. SIMON, Jeweler,
Cor. 7th & Jackson Sts., ST. PAUL, MINN.
General Agent for the U. S. and Canada.

WE WANT 1,200 ACRES.
Largest in the West. Valuable Specialties.
$100,000.00
Responsible, Highest Com. & Salaries.
SALESMEN
For our immense stock of NORTHERN GROWN FRUITS, Ornamental Trees, Shrubs, Etc. Experience not necessary. PAY WEEKLY. Apply at once for terms, etc., stating age. THE JEWELL NURSERY CO., Lake City, Minn.
Name this Paper every time you write.

SHORTHAND thoroughly taught by mail or personally. SITUATIONS PROCURED all pupils when competent. Send for catalogue. J. D. HESS, Pioneer Press Building, St. Paul, Minn.

ST. JACOBS OIL
CURES
SCIATICA BackAches
all Aches
NEURALGIA.
IT HAS NO EQUAL!

"August Flower"

"I have been afflicted with biliousness and constipation for fifteen years and first one and then another preparation was suggested to me and tried, but to no purpose. A friend recommended August Flower and words cannot describe the admiration in which I hold it. It has given me a new lease of life, which before was a burden. Its good qualities and wonderful merits should be made known to everyone suffering with dyspepsia and biliousness." JESSE BARKER, Printer, Humboldt, Kas.

N. W. N. U. No 45—1892

"WELL BRED, SOON WED." GIRLS WHO USE
SAPOLIO
ARE QUICKLY MARRIED. TRY IT IN YOUR NEXT HOUSE-CLEANING.

WORD AND VOICE AND HEART.

When word, and voice, and heart are one,
The poet has his work begun.
But when these three are not in place,
As well might bard his shadow chase.

Great Homer, Milton, all the train
Forged with these three the golden chain
Of soul-lit fancies that have bound
The lofty thought to sweetest sound.

Fair-haired Europa, on her reed
With these made music down the mead;
And young Columbia long may rest
Content the secret she possessed.

With these three unit parts of song
Is left the epic line that long
Shall lead the nations to the light,
And teach the rising bard to write.

A WOMAN OF BUSINESS.

FIELDS gave a croupy chuckle. She had passed young Paxton without returning his bow. There could be no doubt of it, for Fields had seen the whole proceeding, from the moment when she turned the corner, the stiff river breeze blowing about her face certain stray locks of the soft, short hair under her beaver hat.

She had looked very sweet to Fields, coming in sight against the tall Cumberland cliffs. It seemed to him that she had been smiling, but he surmised this from the change which struck across her face upon passing Paxton's store. Her very coat-collar stood about her ears aggressively, and though Fields was not commonly given to humorous perceptions of things, he saw in his daughter's small human assumption of ignorance a certain incongruity with the bleak hills hedging the town, their tops flat, as if they crouched to keep their bald heads from striking the hard autumnal sky.

"Look like thar's something that feller ain't gitting, if trade is a whooping his way," considered Fields, staring toward Paxton's store, which occupied the river corner just above the landing, at which Nashville boats stopped on their way to the head of navigation. It was a new building, that store, which in Field's old age had risen to place his own commercial merits in the eye of scorn. Among the weathered cottages of the town its yellow walls rose with great dignity its clear windows gay with pyramids of tomato cans, festooned in bright prints and cotton laces.

With so many odds in his favor it was natural enough that things should be going Paxton's way. His way indeed meant radicalism and reform, and all the rash ventures of young blood and unlicked ideas. The village at first blush had fought very shy of Paxton. He was "up No'th;" he advertised; he was good-looking, a yellowish mustache barring his face like a streak of sunshine. The town decided against taking stock in so insidious a combination.

Paxton, however, kept right on. It was a good point for country and river trade. Fields had made money, apparently by natural methods and without the vaguest effort.

His store included the postoffice and stood some forty paces above Paxton's. Time had breathed long and asthmatically upon the window panes of Fields's store, covering them with a veil of gray which effectually concealed the fact of dust on the commodities behind it. Inside were some boxes and barrels, an odor of tobacco, a pot-bellied stove, and Fields himself a slow man in his fifties.

With these superannuated attractions Paxton felt he could scarcely fail of successful competing, if only he could hold out long enough to win the town's confidence. But confidence is not an easy thing to win in a Kentucky town in which the war is considered as barely over and freshly discussable.

It took Paxton several months to down the native conservatism, but once the first wariness of the burgers was overborne, they gave way on a sudden to the delight of getting better things for less money than Fields had charged, and Paxton found an unexpected victory in his plumes.

Fields took his defeat calmly. He took everything, even his whisky and water, in that sort of a way. He seemed to lack a capacity for any kind of action, and it was a common wonder as to where that girl of his, that Louisa M., got her spirit.

For her spirit commanded instant recognition. Fields himself stood in awe of it, and as Louisa M. rushed up the store steps, he drew back with a sense of impending unpleasantness.

"Say, Louisa M.," he broke out in a conciliating tone "I saw yeh give Paxton the go-by. You're kind-eh hard on him, ain't yeh?"

The girl flung her soft hat on the counter and plunged into a chair.

"Oh!" she said, "pappy!—I've just been down to see the new boat land. They sent an order to him for something they'd run out of. I can't stand it! I won't!—that man coming down here and taking everything and doing you out of your rights and—oh!" She gasped a little, tossing her hair with an excited hand, her eyes strangely blue in the darkness of her vivid little face.

Field's jaw assumed an amiable laxity.

"Don't take on so," he said. "I hain't got nobody but you, and I reckon I got enough laid by to keep us. I'd kinder like to quit business anyhow, and hev a gyarden and raise things. 'Course I s'pise to see my old friends a-chasing into Paxton's store, but I ain't a-complainin'. He keeps ez good a grade o' tobacco ez ever I smoked after, and sells it reasonable."

His daughter flashed round a startling glance. "I am going to stop all this," she said. "Yes, pappy, I am not going to stand it. I won't see you trampled on. He may be 'smart'—that Paxton. So am I. I've got as much natural wit as he has any day of the world. I will show him!" She held out a rigid little hand. "Do you know the last mean trick he's been up to? He's had his name painted along all the pike fences and cliffs. 'Come to Paxton's for new goods.' That's what he's put up. It's an insult!—it means that our goods are old!"

Fields looked around.

"Well," he said, "our stuff is pooty tol'able seasoned, Louisa M." She wheeled about.

"We'll get new. We'll paint the store and order a whole stock of everything. I'll go to the city myself and order what is necessary. I won't hev no one get ahead of you, pappy." Field's looked miserable, but it never occured to him to make head against Louisa M. Ruin would doubtless be the issue of the reckless enterprise, but Fields was helpless.

"I'll show him how to do business," said Louisa M., standing erect, her nostrils dilated. Fields shook his head. He continued to shake it solemnly at intervals in the days that followed, when boxes and bales to his direction began to tumble off the boats which carried the Southern road's freight down the river.

"Gittin' a move on yourself, hur, Uncle Jimmy?" suggested the village idlers, observing these signs of trade. But Field's jaw only elongated the more, while his brow became a network of conflicting wrinkles.

It was remarked in open council at Paxton's store "that Uncle Jimmy Fields warn't lookin' jest up to the notch."

"Mebby he misses that girl o' his'n" suggested some one. "She's away som'ers. He sets everythin' by, that er Louisa M. Say, Paxton, I like to died that night at Wilson's dance when you ast fer a cudrille, and she jest sized you up and says she's engaged fer every set! Lord, the look she gave yeh, doubled-barreled and self-iodin! But, say, Paxton, you ought'nt of give her the comfort of seein' you make a home-sneak on account of it."

Paxton's cheek reddened. He was slight and tall and his shoulders twitched a little.

"She has a right to pick her friends," he said. The other man strapped on a spur, his foot on his knee.

"Fields is paintin' his house," he said. "They tell that he's fixin' up inside, too. Reckon Louisa M.'s ben stirrin' him up."

After Louisa M.'s return the changes became more marked. Two shades of pea green illuminated the house without. Inside a new stove and a complete stock of dry goods invited the villagers. Even the window underwent a startling metamorphose from grayness and grime to gaudiness. When it was found that prices were hapily in accord with all this enliving prospect, town sages remarked that "Uncle Jimmy, when it comes to rale tradin,' kin whip any young dozen o' Paxton's sort with one hand tied behind him."

Matters began to look dark for Paxton. Public favor is an uncertain thing, impermanent as the sudden rush of bloom on an apple bough in spring. Paxton's hour of blossoming seemed past. He thought often of removing to another town, but he had a certain sense of surrender in departure. He knew well enough that she was at the bottom of this overthrow—that daughter of Field's—that little gipsy-faced creature with her black silk locks. He could see the memory in her oddly blue eyes, the scorn of her lips when she should hear that he had given up the battle.

She never spoke to him now. Since he painted advertisements on the fences she had not as much as looked at him in passing. But she could be gentle enough. Paxton remembered how pleasant she had been when he first came to town, the year be'ore, looking for a place to establish himself. When he decided to stay it had been with more thought of Fields's daughter than of Fields. He had not thought of competition, but this had been thrust upon him before he considered what it meant. It meant everything adverse, and after Paxton read this in the open disdain of Louisa M., he felt there was nothing for him but to go on and be successful, though success now had bitter dregs, and broke in sharp, spiteful sparkles at his lips.

One morning in May, Fields, surveying from his door the rocky hills, no longer rugged, but rounding with spring greenery to a virginal softness of curve, fetched a big sigh.

"Mebbs it's only the time o' year," he speculated, "but somehow I don't feel jest right—'spech'ly when I git to studyin' 'bout young Paxton.

Louisa M. gave the back of his grey head a glance of challenge. She was setting things to rights in the show-case, and she thrust a bone hairpin rather angrily into a bolt of ribbon.

"Why?" she exclaimed.

"We've run him too hard," said Fields, uncomfortably. "A friend of his named it to me yistiddy that he couldn't holt out much longer. I feel this way: I had my chance and he had ought to hev had his. He hadn't no ill will to'des me. He was gitten trade fa'r and squar', and he could of kep' it ef I hedn't ondersold him cl'ar below cost price. I feel ez mean and or' nry ez a fice dog that sucks eggs. I hain't treated him white."

"Business is business," said Louisa M., shaking back her hair. She was a little thing in a gathered pink frock, but she looked to Fields as immutable as the austere Justice on the coin of the realm. Perhaps, after all, she was right, and he himself was swayed from judgment by a sort of limp tendency to see other folk comfortable. Field designedly modeled his big clay conceptions upon the tiny marble models of Louisa M.'s ideals, but somehow, though his unwieldy notions were grotesquely like the pattern, they were soft and unstable and required constant bolstering into shape.

Though Paxton might be, as Louisa M. declared him, the evilest of Adam's brood, it hurt Fields to see the handsome young fellow going about the village with drawn face and downcast eyes.

"I'm a losin' flesh!" he complained to his daughter. "Thet feller hes got away with my appetite. I'd rather see him hev a picked buzzard than keep this up. I'd feel a heap better, Louisa M., to hev that last lot o' calicoes up a little"—but under his daughter's chastising eye he drew a sighing breath.

"You leave things to me," commanded Louisa M. "You don't know anything about business, pappy! We are only turning his own blade against Paxton. He deserves to fail. He came here a year back honeying round and never saying he was looking for a place to locate. I was nice to him. I used to talk to him free an' air, never suspecting he was aiming to do my own father in." Her voice choked. She had paled under her coppery skin, and her wet eyes were like violets that have been caught in a swart March bank.

Finally along toward the summer the end came. Paxton assigned for the good of his creditors. A lawyer from Burksville came to take charge of things and the steamboat landing was deserted, as men gathered in Field's store to discuss the happenings. The river was sinking and traffic was nearly suspended. Cows grazed on the sun-burned pastures of the lower hills. Tan-colored hogs idled about the paveless streets, and children of corresponding tint of complexion played shrilly on the perilous river slope.

"Wa'al, he 'peared a likely young rooster."

"Yaas. Erthough I'm jest ez willin' he busted. K'ntucky fer K'ntuckians, says I. I'm a pertectionis' every time—' don't keer nothin' 'bout the platform." Fields, listening to this acute philosophy, suddenly cut in, his broad face curiously sunken.

"Confound it, I say, a fair chance fer every one." He stopped to pad his brow with a bunched red handkerchief, his views shortened by two circumstances. He had remembered that Louisa M. was somewhere in the back of the store, and just then, too, a throng of men had opened to admit a young fellow who came across the porch at a run, his hat off.

"Say!" he panted, the exhilaration of bad news in his face, "why say!"—did any of ye' hear about Paxton. He's went to work and shot hisse'f. That feller from Burksville was talkin' to a rait of us outside Paxton's store and we heered a rifle go off up steers in Paxton's room, and he tore up thar and busted in the door and—Lord! wait till I get my breath!—I got it from Smith thet—"

There was a little sound behind the huddle of men, a sound like a sharp breath and a clatter of tin and a heavier resonance.

In front of the molasses barrel an overturned quart measure and a long-nosed funnel rolled on the bare floor in lessening arcs. Nearby in the gloom of the inner apartment something had fallen, something which looked like a limp heap of pink calico, and which as Fields lifted it trailed flaccid arms, its little neck letting the head back in a sickening way of lifelessness.

Outside the sunshine lacquered the river with a milky gleam. A delicious blueness misted distant hills, and near by Field's store a bluejay flashed its wings, uttering rasping cries. Two men coming up the road were laughing as they sauntered along—one, an elderly person, mopping his face.

"You scared me out of a year's growth, just the same!" he said. "I knew you were down-in-the-mouth, and when that shot rang out—I—well I naturally thought you had done for yourself. I went up those stairs four steps at a time, shouting to those fellows below to run for a doctor."

Paxton gave rather a grim smile.

"I believe you're disappointed that it was only a chicken hawk I was firing at!" he said. "Mrs. Wick had just called to me from the back yard to shoot it. She's been missing pullets lately.

"So you let go. Say, Paxton, something must be the matter down at field's! Look! isn't that Fields crossing the road? He's carrying—it looks like a woman!"

Fields lived opposite his store in a white cottage. Paxton, staring ahead, caught a vanishing glimpse of the old man's clumsy figure, his arm's overflowing with the spring-like freshness of Louisa M.'s gown.

"Hello!" said a fellow on the skirts of the little group of men at the store steps, as Paxton strode forward. "Yeh aint hurted then? What's thet? Oh, about Fields—why, it's Louisa M. She's a little fainty, I believe. Some of them fool-boys kem in and blurted out about you bein'—waal, the boy only told what he heered—I don't blame him——but Louisa M. she just swouned agin the merlasses bar'l and Uncle Jimmy he—"

But Paxton was not listening any longer. He had crossed the road and gone up the path to Field's front door, and he had gone with so vague a premeditation that when Fields himself lumbered toward the threshhold, a look of relief on his stolid face, the younger man could only stammer at the reason of his presence:

"They were telling me—of her—of your daughter. I wanted to ask—" After all he stopped feebly enough, and left Fields to fill out the sentence as he might.

"She's all right now, thanky, Mr. Paxton," said Fields. "We got word az they wasn't no truth in them reports." He waved his hand behind him. "She's in thar."

Paxton had already seen her, the stern young foiler of his commercial prowess sitting back in a rocking chair, her lips rather white, her eyelids drooping.

She managed to lift them as Paxton came into the room. She even held her hand out and glanced up at him just once. It was the merest half glance, but Fields, who chanced to be looking, had a queer, unwonted sense of being startled.

He went out, his jaw speculatively let down.

"I wouldn't of believed," he pondered. "She could of looked that sugarfied at the angel Gabriel! I reckon I ken hev a gyarden now! They won't need me in the store. She's business, Louisa M. is."

The Trouble With Many Women.

Women are always flying off the handle. This is American slang, but excellent to convey my meaning, says a writer in the Detroit Free Press. If a woman stands on a street corner as passive as if there were no slumbering feline instincts in her makeup, and the driver of a passing car does not know by intuition that she wants him to stop, she flies all to pieces. She is going to find out if the public has any rights. She has taken the number of his car and will report him to the office. Did he suppose she was standing on that corner for amusement? By this time another car has come in sight. She waves her hand or an umbrella, or the driver has intuitions and asks her in dumb show if she wants to ride. But she goes on her way and doesn't report the affair or do anything but work herself into a passion that makes her feminine and incongruous. All these little personalities give that arrogant animal—man—a chance to laugh at her.

Children of Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Soller
Altoona, Pa.

Both Had Eczema
In Its Worst Form
After Physicians Failed, Hood's Sarsaparilla Perfectly Cured.

Great mental agony is endured by parents who see their children suffering from diseases caused by impure blood, and for which there seems no cure. This is turned to joy when Hood's Sarsaparilla is resorted to, for it expels the foul humors from the blood, and restores the diseased skin to fresh, healthy brightness. Read the following from grateful parents:

"To C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"We think Hood's Sarsaparilla is the most valuable medicine on the market for blood and skin diseases. Our two children suffered terribly with the Worst Form of Eczema

for two years. We had three physicians in that time, but neither of them succeeded in curing them or even in giving them a little relief. At last we tried Hood's Sarsaparilla and in a month both children were perfectly cured. We recommend as a standard family medicine, and would not be without it." MR. AND MRS. M. M. SOLLER, 1412 2nd Avenue, Altoona, Pa.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

HOOD'S PILLS cure liver ills, constipation, biliousness, jaundice, sick headache, indigestion.

BRAVERY OF A DENVER GIRL.

Risking Life to Save Her Pet Horse From Death by Fire.

The daughter of the late W. J. Kinsey, performed an act of cool bravery in Denver recently. She saved her pet, the family horse, from burning to death. The scene of the fire was the stable joining the costly residence at Eleventh avenue and Pearl street, belonging to the Kinsey estate, where live the son and daughter with a housekeeper and coachman. Miss Nettie Kinsey returned from a few days' visit at Manitou. She was accompanied home by two young friends, and at 8:45 when they reached the house they found it locked. The young ladies were afraid to attempt to enter the house by a window, and the Republican says Miss Kinsey concluded to wake the coachman, Arthur George, whose sleeping room was in the barn. When she approached the window she was apprised by the smell of smoke and heat that the barn was on fire.

Quickly the young lady recognized the gravity of the situation. She thought of the family horse, a valuable animal, and one to which she was much attached, standing in his stall with fright, while the smoke and flames were nearly enveloping him. Giving the alarm to her friends, the brave little lady broke the window with her umbrella and climbed in regardless of wounded or bleeding fingers. She rushed through the blinding smoke to the door, which she unbarred. Then stripping off her jacket, she blindfolded the frightened horse and led him to the open air. By this time the screams of the young ladies had brought a crowd to the scene, and some one had turned in the alarm. The fire department quickly responded, and the flames were subdued before the building was wholly destroyed although the damage, which included the destruction of two costly buggies, amounted to from $3000 to $4000.

A Mere Suggestion.

"Have you repaired my umbrella yet?"

"Not yet, sir; it will be done today."

"Well, I've got to have it. I don't want to get soaked every day."

"Then you should swear off."—New York Globe.

An immense run of mackerel is reported from Provincetown, Mass. In a single day 75,000 large and medium fish were taken. A number of nets sank with the weight of the fish.

SYRUP of FIGS

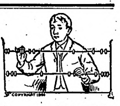
ONE ENJOYS

Both the method and results when Syrup of Figs is taken; it is pleasant and refreshing to the taste, and acts gently yet promptly on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, cleanses the system effectually, dispels colds, headaches and fevers and cures habitual constipation. Syrup of Figs is the only remedy of its kind ever produced, pleasing to the taste and acceptable to the stomach, prompt in its action and truly beneficial in its effects, prepared only from the most healthy and agreeable substances, its many excellent qualities commend it to all and have made it the most popular remedy known. Syrup of Figs is for sale in 50c and $1 bottles by all leading druggists. Any reliable druggist who may not have it on hand will procure it promptly for any one who wishes to try it. Do not accept any substitute.

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
LOUISVILLE, KY. NEW YORK, N.Y.

PENSION JOHN W. MORRIS, Washington, D.C.
Successfully Prosecutes Claims.
Late Principal Examiner U.S. Pension Bureau.
3 yrs in last war, 15 adjudicating claims, atty since.

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till cured. DR. J. STEPHENS, Lebanon, Ohio.



COPYRIGHT 1891

Can be counted on to cure Catarrh—Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. It's nothing new. For 25 years it has been doing that very thing. It gives prompt and complete relief—but you want more than that. And you get it, with this Remedy—there's a cure that is perfect and permanent. The worst chronic cases, no matter of how long standing, yield to its mild, soothing, cleansing and healing properties. "Cold in the Head" needs but a few applications. Catarrhal Headache, and all the troubles that come from Catarrh, are at once relieved and cured.

You can count on something else, too—$500 in cash.

You can count on it, but it's more than doubtful whether you earn it.

The proprietors of Dr. Sage's Remedy, in good faith, offer that amount for an incurable case of Catarrh. Don't think that you have one, though.

They'll pay you, if they can't cure you. That's certain.

But they can cure you. That's just about as certain, too.

Can you ask more?

STYLISH DRESSES Your Dressmaker may be "perfection" but she can't make a Stylish Dress of old-fashioned goods. Our departments are replete with Fashionable Dress Fabrics from the most famous mills of Europe and America. Our CASH PRICES are very low. We sell everything necessary to clothe man, woman and child from head to foot—to furnish a home from Parlor to Kitchen—and many things besides. If you're too far away to come, send us this coupon.

CATALOG Every housekeeper in the Northwest, living out of the Twin Cities, should have one of our large illustrated Catalogues. HOW TO GET ONE Cut out and send this coupon with your name and address and you will receive a catalogue, FREE of charge, by return mail. Samples sent if you mention kind, colors and about what price. Big mail order business—we save selling expense. 40 departments. Reliable Goods. Lowest Prices. Satisfaction Guaranteed. 39 FREE

SCHUNEMAN & EVANS, ST. PAUL.

Ask your doctor what happens to cod-liver oil when it gets inside of you.

He will say it is shaken and broken up into tiny drops, becomes an emulsion; there are other changes, but this is the first.

He will tell you also that it is economy to take the oil broken up, as it is in Scott's Emulsion, rather than burden yourself with this work. You skip the taste too.

Let us send you an interesting book on CAREFUL LIVING; free.

SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists, 132 South 5th Avenue, New York.

Your druggist keeps Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil—all druggists everywhere do. $1.

TRADE TOWER'S MARK.
FISH BRAND
This Trade Mark is on the best
WATERPROOF COAT
in the World!
Illustrated Catalogue Free. A. J. TOWER, BOSTON, MASS.

Tutt's Tiny Pills enable the dyspeptic to eat whatever he wishes. They cause the food to assimilate and nourish the body, give appetite and develop flesh. Price, 25 cents. Exact size shown in border.

Ely's Cream Balm WILL CURE CATARRH
Price 50 cents.
Apply Balm into each nostril.
ELY BROS., 56 Warren St., N.Y.

CURES CATARRH
LONDON BALM
LONDON BALM CO. NEW YORK
SOLD BY YOUR DRUGGIST.

Asthma The African Kola Plant, discovered in Congo, West Africa, is Nature's Sure Cure for Asthma. Cure Guaranteed or No Pay. Export Office, 1164 Broadway, New York. For Large Trial Case, Free by Mail, address KOLA IMPORTING CO., 132 Vine St., Cincinnati, O.

ALLEN'S IRON TONIC BITTERS
The most Elegant Blood Purifier, Liver Invigorator, Tonic and Appetizer known. The first Bitters containing Iron ever advertised in America. J. P. ALLEN, Druggist & Chemist, St. Paul, Minn.

$125.00 A Month and Expenses to Agents to Sell CIGARS TO DEALERS. SAMPLES FREE!
JOHN G. RISING & CO. St. Paul, Minn.

FAT FOLKS REDUCED
Mrs. Alice Maple, Oregon, Mo., writes "My weight was 320 pounds, now it is 195, a reduction of 125 lbs." For circulars address, with 6c., DR. O. W. F. SNYDER, McVicker's Theatre, Chicago, Ill.

PISO'S CURE FOR
Consumptives and people who have weak lungs or Asthma, should use Piso's Cure for Consumption. It has cured thousands. It has not injured one. It is not bad to take. It is the best cough syrup. Sold everywhere. 25c.
CONSUMPTION.

Minn Hist Society

St. Hilaire Spectator.

VOLUME XI. ST. HILAIRE, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1892. NUMBER 16.

THE WEEKLY NEWS DIGEST.

EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK IN A CONDENSED FORM.

The Latest and Most Important News of the World, Culled From the Telegraph Reports of the Press Associations.

Thanksgiving Proclamation.

President Harrison has issued the following proclamation naming Nov. 24 as Thanksgiving day:

The gifts of God to our people during the past year have been so abundant and so special that the spirit of a devout thanksgiving awaits not a call, but only the appointment of a day when it may have a common expression. He has stayed the pestilence at our door. He has given us more love for the free civil institutions in the creation of which His directing providence was so conspicuous; He has awakened a deeper reverence for law; He has widened our philanthropy by a call to succor the distress in other lands; He has blessed our schools, and is bringing forward a patriotic and God-fearing generation to execute His great and benevolent designs for our country. He has given us great increase in material wealth, and a wide diffusion of contentment and comfort in the homes of our people; He has given His grace to the sorrowing.

Wherefore, I, Benjamin Harrison, president of the United States, do call upon all our people to observe, as we have been wont, Thursday, the 24th day of this month of November, as a day of Thanksgiving, to God for His mercies, and of supplication for His continued care and grace. In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand, and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington, this 4th day of November, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and seventeenth.

BENJAMIN HARRISON,

By the President:
JOHN W. FOSTER, Secretary of State.

The Capital.

Gen. W. S. Rosecrans, register of the treasury, is quite ill.

The public debt was decreased $195,430 in October.

Attorney General Miller confirms a report that he will soon retire from the cabinet.

The civil service commission recommends the criminal prosecution of Treasurer Thomas, of the New York Republican state committee, for soliciting campaign funds from government clerks.

Record of Casualties.

A severe storm rages on the great lakes, causing much damage to shipping. Several lives are lost.

The recent northwestern gale caused great havoc to shipping and over $1,000,010 worth of property was wrecked on the lakes.

A terrible explosion took place in Pittsburg recently. Mrs. Arthur Ormond and her two children and a daughter of Mrs. Hewett were frightfully burned.

While a funeral procession was crossing the bridge over Oil Creek, English, Ind., the bridge gave way and precipitated seven two-horse buggies into the creek, severely injuring Anthony Robertson and Thomas Rathbone.

George Gates, while hunting near Uniontown, Pa., used a turkey call. A hunter named Dills fired into the bush where Gates was concealed, killing him.

At Oliver Springs, Tenn., the house of Mrs. Lewis was completely destroyed by fire. A crowd of miners marched into town and openly set the house on fire. Mrs. Lewis was very kind to the soldiers, and that is given as the cause of the miners' deed.

At Muskegon this side of the state was swept by a furious Northwest storm recently. Considerable damage to buildings about the city resulted. The schooner Nellie Hammond from Milwaukee loaded with 3,000 bushels of wheat was wrecked against the piers while attempting to enter the harbor. Two of the crew got off in safety, but Capt. Louis Michaelson was drowned.

People in Print.

Mrs. Langtry draws the designs for most of her theatrical costumes.

Congressman Sherman Hoar of Massachusetts is soon to wed Miss Mary D. Buttrick, an estimable young lady of Concord.

James McCormick, of Seymour, Ind, who is reputed to be 109 years of age, claims to have talked with George Washington.

Lieut. Frederick Schwatka, of arctic fame, dies suddenly at Portland, Or., from the effects of an overdose of morphine.

Mrs. Susan Shepherd, aged 103 years, probably the oldest person in the state, and who was still hale and hearty, met her death by her clothes catching fire at the home of her grandson in Bowling Green.

Henry M. Cutting, of New York, well known in the financial world and in New York society, died very unexpectedly at Francis barracks, St. Augustine, Fla.

Diego Xeruinies, a Spaniard more than 100 years of age, died at Phœnix, Arizona. He was a participant in all the Mexican revolutions since 1824, and at one time had a colonel's commission. After the treaty of Guadeloupe Hidalgo he was banished from Mexico and spent the remainder of his uneventful life in Phœnix dying in a hovel.

Sinful Doings.

The Illinois Supreme court has rendered a decision in the O'Sullivan case denying the application of the attorneys for a new trial.

Dr. G. W. Kelly, of Jefferson County, Ga., is under arrest for throwing his daughter into a well and shooting his sister-in-law, who sought to rescue the child. He is insane.

George Moross, a stationary engineer, was shot and killed at Detroit by George O. Fredericks, a blacksmith. The tragedy was the result of an old quarrel.

At Corydon, Ind. Marshal W. G. Peath was shot and killed by Sheriff Clabe Schuck. Schuck was drunk and did the shooting without provocation.

T. A. Gleason, a New Orleans cotton-buyer, is under arrest charged with securing $15,000 from the Whitney National Bank on forged cotton press receipts.

Charles Harrison and Henry Parker quarreled over a plug of tobacco at Adamsboro, Ind., and Harrison struck Parker on the head with a stone, from which injury he died.

H. Rogers, confined in jail at Lexington, Neb., on a charge of horse stealing, attempted to escape. Deputy Sheriff Lamma shot Rogers through the heart.

John Gerco and Peter Carbaugh, of South McAllister, I. T., quarreled over the ownership of some coal, and Gerco shot and killed Carbaugh.

The badly decomposed body of Mrs. J. Johnson and her fifteen-year-old son Gustave were found at their home in San Francisco. Neither had been seen for some time and as the family was in destitute circumstances it is believed to be a case of double suicide.

Ernst Voss, who stole 2,000,000 marks from a savings bank at Verden, Germany, in 1884, was recently found dead in his room in Hoboken, N. J. Voss was a director of the bank which he robbed. His theft wrecked it.

Mrs. William Root, who could not dance, became jealous of her husband, who was a fine waltzer and frequently attended balls. When she put up his lunch she placed crushed glass in his sandwiches. An emetic saved his life. The couple live at Elizabeth, N. J.

Dorsey Goodin, of Timminsville, S. C., deliberately beat his seven-year-old daughter to death with a large leather strap, having an iron buckle on the end, in twenty minutes, and then picking the little one up hurled her to the floor. She died shortly afterwards. Goodin is in jail, and may be lynched.

The Foreign Budget.

By the collision of a train with an engine near Liverpool, Eng., three persons were killed and fifty injured.

Anton Whitman killed Rosa Sewald, aged 16, in Vienna, with a bludgeon because she refused to marry him.

The Belgian steamer Caucase, which sailed from Philadelphia October 5 for Seville, Spain, has run ashore near Seville.

The bodies of the people drowned by the loss of the steamship Roumania were buried at Obidos, near the scene of the wreck.

Lady Randolph Churchill has recovered from her illness; so much that the physicians have ceased to issue daily bulletins.

Henry B. Ryder, formerly United States consul at Copenhagen, is sentenced to eighteen months at hard labor for theft, fraud and perjury.

The Mexican supreme military council has confirmed the death sentence passed upon Col. Nievez Hernandez, who was charged with treason in failing to capture Garza, the revolutionist.

A panic occurred in the church of the village of Vinaroza Austria upon the raising of a false alarm that the tower was collapsing. In the mad struggle to get out twenty-five persons were trampled to death.

The London Observer announces that it has learned on the best authority that at the last cabinet meeting it was definitely decided not to retire from Uganda.

Rioting occurs in Granada, Spain, because the queen failed to visit the town after preparations to receive her had been made.

Cardinal Lavigrie, who has been ailing for some time, is reported to have become suddenly worse. His physicans consider his condition critical.

Floods have occurred in the lowlands and fens of Lincoln, Essex and the midlands in England. In Licolnshire people are going about from place to place in boats.

A railway accident occurred near Thirsk, in Yorkshire, England, by which ten persons were killed and a large number injured. The express train which leaves Edinburgh every evening for London was running at full speed as it approached Thirsk, when it ran into a heavily-laden goods train. The cars took fire and the bodies were insinerated. The accident was due to a signal man being asleep. He has been suspended from duty pending an investigation.

Labor.

The great strike of teamsters, loaders and warehousemen of New Orleans, which was to have taken place, has been declared off, pending negotiations.

The Schuylkill Coal exchange, in calculating the wages and hours of the miners of the Schuylkill region for the last half of October and the first half of November, has fixed the rate at 8 per cent above the $2.50 basis. This is an advance of 2 per cent over last month's wages.

About the Railroads.

The Davenport, Iowa & Dakota was sold at auction to the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern for $620,000, to satisfy a judgment for that amount held by the Farmers' Loan & Trust Company of New York.

It is reported that William M. Burgard, general agent of the Chicago & Northwestern in Buffalo, is to be promoted to the position of assistant general freight agent.

The shipment of grain and stock from the Northwest this season have taxed the full carrying capacity of the transcontinental railroads. There has fortunately been no blockade, but every freight car has been called into requisition.

The Columbus, Hocking Valley & Toledo and the Columbus, Shawnee & Hocking have given notice of their intention to withdraw from the Ohio Coal Traffic association Dec. 31. This action is alleged to be due to the secret rate cutting, in which the two roads claim to have been getting the worst of it. It is believed in railroad circles that the withdrawal will seriously affect freight rates.

Gossip of the Sports.

Pudge Heffelfinger is playing foot ball with the All Chicago eleven.

The Yale-Princeton foot ball game on Thanksgiving will be played on the grounds of the Manhattan Athletic club in Harlem, N. Y.

Iroquois, a stallion belonging to Gen. W. H. Jackson of Nashville, is the leading sire of the year, his get having won nearly $17,000.

"Pudge" Heffelfinger and "House" Janeway, the two giant guards who played for years on rival college foot ball teams, are now in the same line on the All Chicago eleven and are the best of friends.

General News.

Arizona has produced $3,000,000 in gold, $2,200,000 in silver and $4,500,000 in copper during the year.

A company has been organized to mine the sulphurs in the crater of the volcanoes of Popocatapetl, which is said to be in a quiescent state.

An Automatic telephone connection system is in successful operation at La Porte, Ind. The services of operators are dispensed with.

The world's fair directors will declare that the fair should be kept open Sundays, and will inagurate a movement for the repeal by congress of the Sunday-closing clause of the law.

Leland J. Webb, formerly national commander-in-chief of the Sons of Veterans, was declared insane at Topeka, Kan., and sent to the asylum. It is said that the morphine habit is the cause of his insanity. He attempted to commit suicide by shooting himself, but the wound was not serious.

While exploring the territory of the cliff-dwellers' territory in Arizona, Frank Conroy, of Brooklyn, fell over a cliff and was attacked and killed by eagles. His companion, J. B. Barkelow, has reached Ogden, Utah.

Thirty Chinese passengers on the Northern Pacific steamship Zambesie were refused passports at Port Townsend because their certificates did not have photographs attached as law requires. They were bound for Portland, Or.

NORTHWEST NEWS BUDGET.

THE WEEKLY ROUND-UP OF IMPORTANT NEWS.

A Concise Account of the Happenings of the Past Week in Minnesota, North Dakota, Iowa and Wisconsin.

Minnesota.

Bad prairie fires are reported in Benton County.

A fire on the farm of John Hamill, Lake Crystal, destroyed $4,000 worth of property. No insurance.

The Winona Willow Works will erect a large factory, the building to be of brick, three stories high and 50x150 feet in size.

Galvin Grant, of Pine Creek, Houston county, died recently. He was injured in a runaway accident several days ago.

Logan's saw mill at Lincoln was set on fire, and burned to the ground; loss $2,000; no insurance.

H. C. Rowley, living 10 miles north of Litchfield, was gored by a Jersey bull and will probably die.

Five cars of wheat and flour were wrecked in the Northern Pacific yards at Carlton by a broken journal.

Peter Huntzigher fell off the mast of the Montana at Duluth and broke his leg, arm and jaw. He will recover.

Mail messenger service has been established to Greene Valley, Lyon county, from the Wilmar & Sioux Falls railway route.

Wm. Henke, living four miles west of Echo, accidently shot himself in the shoulder, the shot coming out at the back of his neck. He is in a precarious condition.

The house of S. Welch of Carlton was entered by a sneak thief during the absence of the family. A gold watch, necklace and gun were stolen.

The residence of John Shannes, nine stacks of grain and farm machinery, were destroyed by fire at New Prague. Loss, $1,000; no insurance.

Jacob Hovorka, a farmer, was thrown from his wagon at New Prague, and his collar bone and three ribs were broken. His condition is critical.

An incendiary fire at Faribault destroyed a large barn owned by a Mr. Russel and a small frame house adjacent to it in the northern part of the city.

Miss Elizabeth E. Nichols, of Tower, aged 22 years, committed suicide by shooting herself with a revolver. The motive can only be conjectured.

It is estimated that over 100,000 bushels of potatoes have been marketed at Albert Lea this fall, selling on an average of between 40 and 50 cents per bushel.

State Auditor Adolph Biermann, while walking home from a meeting at St. Paul, was set upon by a crowd of roughs and brutally assaulted.

Mrs. Jennie Evarts, of Minneapolis, was awarded a verdict of $5,000 against the Minneapolis & Manitoba Railroad for the death of her husband, who was killed in the company's yards.

John Larson, of Stillwater, employed by the thresher company, was run over by a switch engine and had his right arm torn out and his side crushed in. His injuries proved fatal. He was married and has several children.

A new Episcopal church dedication will take place at St. Cloud during the Northern convocation to be held Nov. 16, 17 and 18. Bishop Whipple and Assistant Bishop Gilbert will both be present.

Edwin Dunn's house at Eyota was burglarized recently. The thieves got away with about $200. They took a suit of clothes, gold watch and chain worth $100 and two 1,000-mileage tickets.

At Red Wing, in the case of The State vs. Andrew Bergman, charged with assault with intent to kill, the outcome of the Goodhue liquor cases, the jury found the defendant guilty as charged.

A man named Walters, in the employ of W. S. Londen, of Denmark, fell from the trestle work across the river after alighting from a train and received serious injuries.

The Steele county commissioners have appointed J. N. Niles, county auditor to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Auditor Burke, Mr. Niles was the deputy auditor.

Albert Barth, who has been running a thresher at Echo this fall, has disappeared and his whereabouts are not known. He left without paying his crew and collected all his bills but about $50. His brothers are trying to straighten his accounts.

Twenty bids were opened at a recent meeting of the Duluth city council for a special issue of $100,000 30-year 4½ per cent general fund bonds. W. J. Hayes & Son, of Cleveland, were the highest bidders, offering $105,800 for the issue.

William Kueler, a well known farmer residing a few miles south of Winona, committed suicide by hanging. No cause can be assigned except that Kueler was given to fits of despondency. He was fifty years of age.

Mrs. Warner, the aged mother of Dr. C. F Warner, of Mankato, who was badly burned by her clothing catching fire, the other day, has since died from the injuries. She came to Minnesota in 1860, and lived in St. Paul 20 years before coming to Makato to live with her son.

Intelligence was received at Winona recently that H. Smythe, the United States express messenger who disappeared from his train between Winona and Green Bay about two months ago with $1,100 of the company's money, turned up recently in Chicago. No further particulars have been learned.

E. E. Cross, while out with a companion in a boat at Worthington, shooting ducks at Round Lake, was accidently shot and instantly killed. Part of his head was blown away. A sad feature is that he was to have been married in two days. All the preparations for the wedding were completed.

John Sebring, a brakeman on the Doon branch of the Omaha road, was instantly killed at Luverne. While switching he stepped on the brake beam of an engine to ride back to the train and his foot slipped, throwing him under the wheels, completely severing his head from the body. He leaves a wife and two children living in Doone, Iowa.

Will Kenna, of Clontarf, had Conductor Cunningham, of the Great Northern, arrested at Benson on charge of larceny. Kenna boarded the train at Clontarf and tendered payment of fare, but refused to pay additional 10 cents usually charged, whereupon Cunningham took possesion of a suit of clothes to cover fee. Cunningham furnished bond and the case was continued until Nov. 1.

Wisconsin.

Francis Connohan was seriously injured in a runaway accident at Madison.

Joseph Cook, of Kaukauna, had his collar-bone broken by a fall.

George McFarland was arrested at Oshkosh on a charge of burglarizing Julius Schmidt's jewelry store at that place.

Dave Thompson is in jail at Appleton, charged with assaulting Martin Steigenberger with a saloon row.

J. H. Gœlzer, of Oakwood, was stricken with paralysis and died shortly afterwards. He was a former resident of Appleton.

Enock B. Fargo, one of the oldest and wealthiest settlers of Lake Mills, died at the age of 71 years.

Fred Fawcett, a young farmer living near Sparta, who shot himself because he was disappointed in a love affair, died from the effects of his wound.

A man giving the name of Timothy Bowser was arrested at La Crosse on a charge of working the "green goods" racket.

John Butler, a veteran engineer on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, died at his home in Madison, aged 60 years

A young man giving his name as Charles E. Hir, of Minneapolis, was arrested at Racine on a charge of forgery. He passed a check for $105 on one firm, and attempted to pass three others.

Two dredges are at work deepening the channel in the Fox River above the Milwaukee & Northern Railroad bridge at Appleton. Considerable blasting has been done to remove the rocks that line the river bed.

John P. Purdy, who is wanted at Janesville for alleged swindling operations, has been arrested in New York. Requisition papers have been issued, and he will be taken to Janesville for trial. He is also wanted in Chicago on a similar charge.

The first national bank to open its doors in Bayfield County will start at Bayfield January 1, the charter having already been secured. The capital will be $50,000. A. E. Jefferson, of Hudson, is the prime mover in the enterprise.

Frederick Freckenstein, a resident of Madison, although 85 years old, can perform a day's work as well as many persons fifty years his junior. Recently he built the foundation for a large residence in ten days, doing the work alone.

The Oconomowoc Electric Light Company, of Oconomowoc, has been organized with a capital stock of $20,000. The incorporators are H. H. Shufeldt, G. S. Wilsey, W. Parks and J. L. Wilsey.

Cecilia, the four year old daughter of Mrs. Edward Jenson, of Appleton, was scalded to death. The little one was playing on the floor, and in some manner upset a bucket of boiling water that the mother was using. The child was literally boiled, and died a few minutes later.

Henry Knox, a Populist speaker, residing at Browntown near Monroe, was run over by the cars and killed. He had been to Monroe where he addressed a meeting. On his way home he became tired and sat upon the track to rest and fell asleep. He was struck by an evening freight train and badly mangled.

George Armor, a young man aged 18 years and residing at Marinette, was drowned in the Menominee River at that place. He was rafting logs and was knocked into the river by a heavy tow line on a tug. The body was recovered about twelve hours afterwards. He is the third member of the family that has been drowned.

North Dakota.

Dennis O'Leary of Dickinson, committed for offering stray cattle at the Twin City markets, died in jail.

Dell Case, a resident of Baraboo, was arrested on a charge of burglary. He was held in $200 bonds.

Patrick Burr had his left hand crushed while coupling cars at La Crosse. It was necessary to amputate part of the hand.

A large number of summer cottages are under course of construction at Bayfield for occupation by tourists next season.

Mrs. Peter Consol, formerly a resident of Portage, died at her home in Brockport, N. Y., aged 50 years.

William McDonald, residing near Pardeeville, Columbian County, has been arrested on a charge of larceny.

James Furgus, a well known farmer living near Jamestown, who fell from his wagon and was run over, died.

Otto Herath, a young man living near Appleton, shot himself in the leg by the accidental discharge of his gun while hunting.

Jeff Kenniston, of Altoona, while boarding a train at that place, fell backwards on his head, fracturing his skull. He is in a serious condition.

The mills in the Ashland district cut 300,000,000 feet of lumber the present season, and the lumbermen there expect to put in 450,000,000 feet of logs the coming winter.

The State University regents held a meeting recently, the principal business being the securing of a new director for the Conservatory of Music.

Nellie Dunn, accused of the murder of John Wagner, at Pembina, was defended by Judge Conmy and M. Brynjolfson, and was discharged after an examination before a magistrate.

Charles Eyler the young man arrested at Racine, charged with passing a forged check, has been held for trial in $1,000 bonds. He claims Indianapolis as his home.

The large and well known clothing house of David Goodman, at Jamestown, was closed by the sheriff under attachment proceedings. Nothing is known as to the extent of the liabilities.

The Menominee River Boom Company, of Marinette, have scaled this year, to November 1, 525,000,000 feet of logs, (which is 90,000,000 feet more than they scaled during the entire season of 1891, which was 430,000,000 feet.

Hon. A. N. Roach, of Grand Forks, while driving to Ardock, where he was announced for a Democratic campaign speech, was thrown from his buggy by the team taking fright and sustained severe muscular contusions.

The Economic Gas company of Grand Forks has begun the erection of a plant 89x48 feet, built of brick and iron, with a daily capacity of 25,000 to 40,000 cubic feet. The mains are already laid, its service to begin in January. The capital is $50,000.

The Fargo Board of Trade is now corresponding with two companies who intend erecting factories here in the spring. One is a Baltimore, Md., firm, which proposes to erect a large branch vegetable canning factory. The other is a Sioux Falls firm which is seeking a location for the manufacture of mittens, kid gloves, underwear, etc. The Board of Trade will make concessions to secure both of these.

Iowa.

J. Thompson, of Letts, was fatally hurt at Muscatine by a sign falling on him.

Wm. Reddelph, an old settler, dropped dead on the sidewalk at Dubuque, while returning home.

John Allen, a wiper in the Rock Island shops in East Des Moines, fell under the cars and was instantly killed. He leaves a wife and two children.

Mrs. Minnie L. Durbin died at Sioux City from the effects of a dose of morphine, which she took with suicidal intent. Domestic infelicity was the cause.

A workman named Shaw at Davenport was hurt badly by a falling telegraph pole. He was removing the pole when it slipped from his hands and crushed him to the ground. He is hurt internally.

The body of an unknown man was found in a clump of trees in Beacon Hollow at Sioux City, by Jack Farrelson. He had evidently suicided, as an empty bottle of laudanum was found near him.

The skeleton of a man has been found just beneath the surface in an alley in the rear of the Palace Park Hotel, Sioux City, by a workman. The authorities are investigating the case.

Burglars entered Lew Lanworth's house, in Covington, across the river from Sioux City, while the occupants were gone, and stole a bed, bureau, wash stand, three stoves, a sofa, four upolstered chairs and $200 worth of bed clothing.

A wild train on the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha road ran into a hand car near Sibley, killing two section men and fatally injuring one other. Their names are not known.

J. H. Pigman, a brakeman on the Burlington road, was horribly mangled by a freight train near Ely and instantly killed. He was a young man, unmarried, and lived at Columbus Junction.

The father of Charles Carpenter, of Des Moines, while going to his son's house from the train on which he came from Nebraska, fell under an overturned carriage in which he was riding and was injured internally. He is not expected to live.

Ed. Hausen, an engineer, was probably fatally scalded while at work in the engine room at the packing house at Sioux City. The plug blew out of the boiler and the escaping steam cooked the man's flesh so that it fell from his bones.

A Tama special says that J. H. Lauderdale of Richland township was thrown from a wagon in a runaway and received injuries from which he died. He was one of the leading pioneers of the county.

The parents of Mary Fleming, rich people living in South Dakota, came to Sioux City to get their daughter who was an inmate of a bagnio, she refused to go with them and they were compelled to take her by force. The girl had attempted to kill herself with laudanum.

Will Jones was fatally injuried in Musser's lumber mill, at Muscatine. In working an edging machine he attempted to run through a piece of timber full of knots which flew out as soon as struck. One struck the young man in the forehead, crushing the skull. Both arms were also broken.

John Duede has been arrested at Dubuque on two charges of assault with intent to commit rape. Duede is six feet tall and 22 years old. The charges against him are preferred by a farmer of Iowa township named Steffens. He says that on Oct. 23, Duede pursued his two girls Kate and Rose Steffens, 13 and 11 years old, caught them and assaulted them.

As a result of Hallow'een foolishness Clarence Hall, a young man of Nora Springs, received an ugly wound in the side. Hall was out with some other young men having a high old time, changing signs and overturning outbuildings, etc., when Frank Krampa, of Krampa Bros., fired a shot at them hitting Hall in the side.

LOVE TAKES A BACK SEAT.

The Man Who Tried To Be Fair With His Wife.

"I read in the paper," he said to his wife, "that there were four cases of cholera in the city, so I just took a little nip."

"Go on; you break my heart."

"Then I walked a block or two and a newsboy said he had an extra with information of nine new cases. I took another drink to ward off the germs."

Weeping, she did not reply.

"I went along half a mile when I read on a big bulletin board that the cholera was spreading with alarming rapidity. I then took two bows, and half pint of old Tom as a preventive."

"Oh, you brute."

"Then I heard one man say to another that it was awful, and so I took another drop or two."

"That is enough."

"Well, it should have been, but it was not. I heard another fellow say that they died like sheep in an epidemic. I took two more horns, and that is all I recall."

"I will tell you the rest. You came home last night as full as a goat. Is that the way to set the example to the rising generation?"

"It is not; but it is better than the cholera. I married for love, but when love comes in contact with the cholera germs, love must take a back seat. Fair warning now, for I'll be tight till frost comes."

Her Picture

"Charlotte, my dear, how is it I find you weeping? Have you had bad news from your husband?"

"Oh! worse than that! Arthur writes me from the country that he would die with grief at being absent from me, were it not that he gazes at my picture, and covers it with a thousand kisses every day."

"That is very nice of him; but surely you are not crying about that? Most women would give anything to have such a poetic and devoted husband."

"Oh, yes! Arthur is very poetical But you don't know. Just to try him I put mother's photo into his travelling bag instead of my own, and the wretch has never found it out. Boo-hoo-hoo!"

MR. JOHNSON'S DIVORCE.

A DOUBT IS CAST UPON ITS VALIDITY.

Judge Otis Grants the Application for Alimony Made by Mrs. Johnson of St. Paul—Some Interesting Affidavits.

"If Ever I Cease to Love."

St. Paul, Special Telegram, Nov. 8.—The divorce secured last summer in Chicago by Aleck E. Johnson may be valid, but the order filed yesterday by Judge Otis throws considerable suspicion upon it. His order granted the application for alimony made by Mrs. Johnson, of 306 South Exchange street, and gave Mr. Johnson five days within which to pay $450 as temporary alimony and counsel fees. The alimony is fixed at $150 a month, commencing Oct. 15, the date of the commencement of the divorce suit, and to continue until the action is determined. Mrs. Johnson is also awarded the possession of the homestead, the household furniture and the custody of her eleven-year-old daughter, Florence.

The order of Judge Otis has a greater bearing upon the case than the usual granting of alimony in divorce cases where the wife is plaintiff, because of the peculiar circumstances of the case and the nature of the defense. Mrs. Helen M. Johnson applied for divorce from A. E. Johnson, the well known immigration agent and traffic man, and alleged adultery with Emma Drabble, committed on Aug. 8 last, and at various other times since that date. After the action had been commenced the ordinary application for an allowance of alimony pending the suit was made, and there was nothing extraordinary in the formal pleadings to give the public an intimation of the sensational story behind the case. Mr. Johnson opposed the allowance of alimony on the ground that the marriage relation did not exist between them. This was the point which injected into the case the sensational feature and made the issue partially determined by Judge Otis. And it was the argument of the motion for alimony that brought into notice the details of the relationship.

Is Mrs. Helen M. Johnson the wife of A. E. Johnson? This preliminary question must be answered before the question of a divorce can be considered.

If the question is decided in the affirmative, then what relationship exists between A. E. Johnson and Emma Drabble. A marriage ceremony was had between them and they are living together as man and wife. Johnson is under every obligation to support the validity of that ceremony. He owes it to the woman whom he swears to love, honor and protect, and he owes it to himself to avoid prosecution for bigamy. These reasons are enough to induce a defense of the most vigorous kind.

And Mr. Johnson will not lack the necessary sinews of war. He is said to be worth $200,000, and to have an annual income of over $25,000. He conducts offices in St. Paul, Chicago, New York, Duluth, Minneapolis, Tacoma and Seattle, and is said to be very successful in business matters. That he does not propose to spare money in fighting the divorce case is to be inferred from the expense to which he has gone in fighting the preliminary motion decided yesterday. The affidavits of a large number of persons living in various parts of the country were read to the court, and the contents of the affidavits related to events extending through a period of years. They were filed in the clerk's office yesterday in company with the judge's order, and their contents are not confined to a defense of Mr. Johnson.

Mrs. Johnson is assailed directly and by innuendo. Acts of indiscretion are given in detail, and from some of them inferences of the most serious kind are drawn. It is true that this feature of affidavits did not have a direct bearing upon the validity of the Chicago divorce, but they showed the bitterness with which Mr. Johnson proposed to go into the legal fight with his former wife. The ashes of family quarrels between Mrs. Johnson and different members of her household are raked over, and ancient sparks of animosity are kindled into flames.

Several sample affidavits show the tenor of the large bundle of such documents. A Mrs. Mary A. Farnum, the plaintiff's sister, swears to Mrs. Johnson's two matrimonial experiences prior to her marriage to Johnson at Lake City, Minn., in 1870, and to the fact that both ended in the divorce court. This fact is supposed to reflect upon the plaintiff. Mrs. Mary Cotherman of Essex county, New Jersey, knew of several damaging things. She was a daughter of one of Mrs. Johnson's former husbands and had lived with her in St. Paul during Johnson's married life with the fair plaintiff. Mrs. Johnson had married the deponent's father when Mrs. Cotherman was a child of four years, and when the divorce occurred two years later the stepdaughter remained with the wife. She was raised in ignorance of her father's existence and learned of his whereabouts since her marriage. The treatment of the child is given at length by the woman, and as a climax Mrs. Johnson is said to have driven the girl of seventeen from 300 South Exchange street. The subsequent and vain efforts of Mary to find employment in St. Paul either as a clerk or as a servant are related. The depths to which she sunk are expressed by telling how she married "a mechanic."

Another grave charge was that Mrs. Johnson, during Mr. Johnson's absence, would go out in carriages alone at 9 o'clock in the evening and return home late at night—and alone. She would also go to the theater in a carriage alone. This crime was committed in Chicago as well as in St. Paul.

Nannie Olen, who was a servant in the Exchange street house from the fall of 1887 to November, 1889, knew about intoxicating liquors being kept in the house, of which liquors Mrs. Johnson "partook liberally." Cigarettes were also smoked during the two years. The same state of facts had been sworn to by Colt Johnson, a stepson, now twenty-six years old. He had been driven from the house in November, 1884, and he tells an interesting story about the matter. He played private detective and followed his stepmother to her dressmaker's. She was in a partly intoxicated condition when she entered the dressmaker's and talked in a loud tone of voice. The dutiful stepson concealed himself outside of the house beneath the window and overheard Mrs. Johnson threaten to expel the eavesdropper from her house. She also said that she was tired of the father, Mr. Johnson, and referred to him in "uncomplimentary terms." That same night Mrs. Johnson kept her threat to expel the stepson, and he, so the affidavit relates, went to Texas, in spite of Gen. Sheridan's well known recommendation of that state, where he endured many hardships. The connection between the Texas hardships in 1884 and the validity of the Chicago divorce in 1892 is not made clear in the affidavit.

Many of the affidavits related to the place of Mr. Johnson's residence, whether here or Chicago. This was the point really at issue. If he has his legal residence in Chicago then the Illinois court had jurisdiction and the divorce secured last summer may be valid. Exactly what the Ramsey county district court may think about the place of residence cannot be known until further proceedings are had in the case, and the order filed yesterday does not determine the point. It is only a straw showing the wind's direction. The fact of the divorce having been granted for desertion while Mrs. Johnson was being supplied with money by Mr. Johnson and was in correspondence with him may also be of importance when the case comes on for trial.

Elections in Italy.

Rome. Nov. 8.—The returns of yesterday's elections for members of the chamber of deputies show that 184 government supporters and 71 members of the opposition were elected. Reballots will be necessary in seventeen districts, in which the government candidates stand the best chance of being elected.

Negroes Fatally Shot.

Augusta, Nov. 8.—Five negroes were shot at a ball Saturday night and will probably die. The affray occurred at a dance on Berry's plantation, six miles from this city. A gang of men who had not been invited went there to get even with those who were. A pitched battle ensued, in which five men were fatally wounded.

AT THE WHITE HOUSE.

Receiving the Returns.

Washington, Nov. 8.—The usual arrangements have been made for supplying early information of the result of the elections today to the president. In a corner room on the second floor of the executive mansion are a number of telegraph instruments, and to-day one of these circuits, which runs into the Western Union telegraph office, will receive the exclusive attention of Executive Clerk Montgomery, who manipulates the wires. By means of this link communication is to be had between the White House and any city or hamlet in the land where there is a telegraph office. If any of the party managers desire to communicate with the president he can do so almost as quickly as if he were in the presence of Mr. Harrison. In addition to this means of acquiring information as to the progress of events to-morrow the complete and accurate bulletins of the Associated Press will be sent into the White House by another wire. After the details of the day are over, when prognostication and speculation are at rest and the actual returns begin to come in the president will have the company of Secretary John W. Foster and Attorney General Miller and possibly one or two personal friends, and together they will sit up and read the returns until it is time to retire, or until some tangible result is in sight. No one else will be present, and on this occasion, contrary to his usual custom, the president will deny himself to the members of the press to whom he has uniformly extended a courteous invitation to be present. The reason for departing from his usual practice is obviously attributable to his recent bereavement and the desire to avoid a public manifestation of his feelings. People who saw the president to-day say that if he feels any anxiety he does not show it. He is cool and collected and there is no sign of worry.

Held At Quarantine.

New York, Nov. 8.—The treasury department's construction of the president's proclamation of Sept. 14, which quarantines all ship's emigrants for twenty days, caused the detention of the Hamburg-American steamer Suevia, and the Hill line steamer Richmond Hill in the bay all day yesterday. The Suevia has 248 cabin passengers. Among them are 89 citizens and 150 aliens. Some of the latter intend to settle in the United States. The steamship arrived at quarantine Saturday night. The quarantine officials inspected and fumigated her and fitted her to proceed to dock. She was intercepted by the cutter Washington and ordered to remain until orders were received from Washington permitting her to go up.

The Richmond Hill from London was also passed by the quarantine officials. She has sixty-nine cabin passengers and six steerage passengers, who are cattlemen. Sixty of her cabin passengers are aliens, who intend to take up permanent residence in the United States. As the treasury department was closed yesterday, the agents of the steamship companies could not get an order releasing them. They remained at anchor all night. As they have clean bills of health they will doubtless be allowed to land.

Eight liners are due to-day with about 1,000 steerage and 600 cabin passengers aboard. Among the fleet are the Aurania, of the Cunard line, from Liverpool with 212 cabin and 500 steerage; the Aller, of the North German Lloyd line, from Bremen and Southampton with 230 cabin and 220 steerage; the Trave, of the North German Lloyd line, from Bremen and Southampton with 194 cabin and six steerage passengers (all American citizens); La Bretagne, of the French line, from Havre with 254 cabin and 14 steerage; the Pennland, of the Red Star line, from Antwerp with 225 cabin and 80 steerage; the Devonia, of the Anchor line, the Glasgow and the Zaandam, of the Netherlands-American line, from Amsterdam. Each of these ships after being cleared by the health officer will be able to get special permission from the treasury department to proceed to her dock.

Promotions in the Army.

Washington, Nov. 8.—Nine aspirants from the ranks for commissions as officers in the army have succeeded in passing the prescribed examination. Eleven in all passed the examinations by preliminary boards, but in the first examination just concluded at Fort Leavenworth two failed. Gen. Schofield is preparing a new set of regulations governing the promotion of enlisted men to be officers in the army. Heretofore selections from the ranks for second lieutenancies have been confined to non-commissioned officers. Now the competition is open to every soldier in the army who has served two years and who is under thirty years of age. This means that a larger percentage of promotions from the ranks than formerly will hereafter be made and that there will be no chance for the civilian obtaining a commission unless he first undergoes the hardship of army life for two years. It is understood that the examinations prescribed by the law regulations are to be more severe than hitherto prescribed for non-commissioned officers. Preliminary boards are to be convened in each military department to inquire into the moral character of the candidates before and after enlistment and otherwise determine whether it is worth while for them to enter in the competition. The examinations are required by law to be competitive.

The Brussels Conference.

Dubuque, Iowa, Nov. 8.—Senator Allison leaves here Tuesday, and after a conference with President Harrison and Secretary Foster in Washington, will leave New York with Congressman McCreary of Kentucky and President Adams, of Brown University. These three, with Senator Jones of Nevada and H. W. Cannon of New York, constitute the United States commissioners to the international monetary conference, which opens at Brussels, Nov. 22. Senator Allison expects it to last four to six weeks, and he will return to Washington the second week in January. He has had no intimation concerning the attitudes the foreign nations may assume and, until the conference at Washington this week, he cannot tell what proposition this government will offer. He merely expressed the hope to-day that the conference would result in the enlarged use of silver.

For America's Cup.

New York Nov. 8.—It is now quite certain that some English yacht will come over here next fall to contest with a selection from the New York club for America's cup. The secretary of the committee of five of the New York Yacht clubs said to-night that he had received a cablegram from Lord Dunraven in reply to a cable sent to him Nov. 4. In it Lord Dunraven expresses his satisfaction with the conditions of arrangements. The arrangements will be given out as soon as Lord Dunraven's letter is received.

A Possible Way Out.

Washington, Nov. 8.—The state department thinks it has opened before it a way out of the Chinese immigration difficulty. Edwin M. Conger of Iowa, United States minister to Brazil, cables the department that Brazil has passed a law encouraging Chinese immigration.

A Yale Kicker Injured.

New Haven, Nov. 8.—George F. Sanford, the big left guard of the Yale university foot ball eleven, broke one of the bones of his ankle at the regular practice of the team this afternoon. He will be unable to play any more this year. A. M. Beard, a sophomore, is likely to be chosen to fill the vacant place.

Poor Little Eskimo.

Chicago, Nov. 8.—The Eskimo baby born the other day at the world's fair grounds, died to-day from the effects of a sore throat.

Trouble in Georgia.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 8.—Gov. Northern ordered the militia of this city under arms to be in readiness to go the Thomson, the home of Representative Watson, third party candidate for re-election. The mayor of the town telegraphs that Watson threatens violence this evening to the extent of burning the town. Many women have been moved out of the town and a state of terror prevails there. The troops will go down on special trains if the mayor finds he is right. Watson is candidate for congress, and the canvass has been unusually bitter. Trouble will likely occur to-morrow in different parts of Watson's district. This is the only district where the third party candidates are making a determined fight.

GREAT NORTHERN

TIME CARD.

NO. 3 Daily.				NO. Daily
7 40 p m	Lv	St. Paul	Ar	6 55 am
8 10 "	11	Minneapolis		6 25 am
06 a m 218		Barnesville		10 25 pm
10 45 am	Lv	Crookston	Ar	4 00 pm
11 15 "	89	Shirley		3 30 "
x11 45 "	81	Ives		x3 00 "
x12 20 pm		Wylie		x2 20 "*
12 45 "	32 Ar	St. Hilaire	Lv	2 00 "

*Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

S. S. Buzza Agt,

Dr. H. GRUNDY.
Physician
& Surgeon.

Graduate of the University of Toronto Canada and member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario.

Messages from the surrounding country attended to,

Office in Drug Store

THIEF RIVER FALLS,

NORTHERN PACIFIC
THE
GREAT TRAMSCONENTAL ROUTE.

Passes through Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, Manitoba, Montana, Idaho, Oregon and Washington.

THE DINING CAR LINE

Dining cars are run between Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Winnipeg, Helena, Butte, Tacoma, Seattle and Portland.

PULLMAN SLEEPING CAR ROUTE.

Pullman service between Chicago St. Paul Montana and the Pacific Northwest; and between St. Paul, Minneapolis and Minnesota North Dakota and Manitoba points.

THE POPULAR LINE.

Daily Express Trains carry elegant Pullman sleeping Cars, Dining cars, Day Coaches, Pullman Tourist Sleepers and Free Colonist Sleeping Cars.

YELLOWSTONE PARK ROUTE.

The Northern Pacific R. R. is the rail line to Yellowstone Park; the popular line to California and Alaska; and its trains pass through the grandest scenery of seven states

THROUGH TICKETS are sold at all cupon offices of the Northern Pacific Railroad to points North, East, South and West in the United States and Canada

TIME SCEDULE,

	Leave Crookston Daily	Arrive Crookston Daily
For Staples, Minneapolis, St. Paul Duluth Ashland and points East and South	7:05 p. m.	8:20 a m.
For Grand Forks Grafton Drayton, Winnipeg and points in North Dakota and Manitoba	8:27 a. m.	7:10 p. m.

For Rates, maps, Time Tables or special information, apply to Agent Northern Pacific R R. at Crookston Minn., or

Chas. S. Fee,
Gen. Pass. Agent
St. Paul Minn.

ST. HILAIRE
MEAT MARKET.

All kinds of fresh and salt meat always on hand.

I make a specialty of buying and selling cattle of all kinds.

If you want to buy or sell anything in that line it will pay you to give me a call.

JAMES DAINARD.

FRED Eikhof

DEALER IN CHOICE

WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS.

Beer always on tap.

Pool Room in Connection.

Broadway St. Hilaire.

FRANK IVES,
Attorney and Counselor
AT LAW,

CROOKSTON and ST. HILAIRE, Minn.

Will Practice in ALL The Courts, OF THE STATE and before the U. S. Land Office at Crookston and at Washington.

Will give special attention to contests of claims.

Wheat is 60 cents.

Cleveland is our next president,

Fresh Oysters at W. A. Arthurs. try them.

Peter Hall left to-day for Crookston on business.

C. G. Rapp went down to St. Paul today on business.

James Dainard is in Crookston this week on business.

E. M. Hoff went down to Crookston to-day on business.

Prof. Gambell was visiting friends at Crookston last Sunday.

Dr. H. Grundy was down from Thief River Falls last Friday.

Geo. McManus, of Crookston, was in town last Friday on business,

H. Royem, of Warren, is visiting friends in town this week.

Miss Lizzie Zarracher spent Sunday at Crookston visiting friends.

If you want some nice fresh oysters call on W. A. Arthur.

Emil Holmes was doing business in Crookston the first of the week.

The first regular passenger train was run to Thief River Falls last Friday,

Ground feed, shorts and barley for sale. Inquire of E. T. Spafford & Co.

Election passed off very quietly here yesterday. Fifty-three votes was cast.

Very little wheat has been marketed so far this fall, the farmers holding for better prices.

The election returns from the surrounding towns show a heavy People's party majority.

The weather has been rather cold the past week and it looks as if winter had set in in earnest.

Mr Johnson, late of Barnsville, arrived on to-day's train and will take the position of assistant to Agent Buzza.

Miss Ihlsing left for Dalton Minn today in response to a telegram stating that her father was dangerously ill,

Adam Zeh, of Thief River Falls, was in town a short time to-day on his way home from Red Lake Falls.

A. R. Holston delivered a People's party speech to a large number of our voters last Thursday evening.

H. T, Murry, conductor on the construction train, was taken sick last Saturday and was taken to Crookston for medical attendance. His many friends here hope for his speedy recovery,

A. Grindeland of Warren delivered a a republican speech to a small audiance at the village hall last Friday evening

Everybody who is familiar with the map of Minnesota knows that, nearly one-half the area of the state lies north of the Northern Pacific and that with the exception of the praire district along the Red River of the North, where railroad lines have been built, paralleled and reparalleled the northern part of the state is almost without railway lines. That is, maps most familiar to the public shows this condition. But a wonderful development is going on in the northern part of the state. About all the railroad building that is being done is being done in that district. Some of these lines are being built for logging railroads and some to bring out the recently discovered iron ore. Two lines are headed for the Red Lake reservation and are likely to tap it on the east before it is fairly open. These lines will open besides pine and iron lands stretches of hardwood timber and an agricultural district which will some day be populous and prosperous. Indeed there is reason to believe that the time will come, and that soon, when the railroad lines now in process of construction will be vastly more profitable than the prairie lines in the Red River Valley district. Railroad managers have fairly fought over territory there while neglecting a great area further east that is destined to furnish far more profitable business, if the experiance with the timber country lines in Wisconsin may be accepted as any criterion. And the lumbermen have been and are the vanguard in this new railroad construction. The logging railroad is an eye opener to railroad men as well as lumbermen.—Lumberman.

HOSPITALITY AMONG WOODSMEN.

Where the Stranger Is Taken in and Made to Feel at Home.

Among the genuine woodsmen in eastern America great hospitality to strangers is the most distinguishing trait. By woodsmen is meant those who make their living by chopping and hauling logs, and who live all winter in log camps, half buried up in the snows of a vigorous northern climate, far away from the outer world. Among these people there is no law against tramps. The solitary hunter or the lonely traveler whom night has overtaken in his journey always receives a cordial welcome, not from one, but from all of the crew.

As soon as the stranger's head is inside of the low door by which the hut is entered, the cook calls out to him to walk in, for it is this functionary who does the honors of the camp. He is then invited to take a place on the "deacon seat," that he may be better able to warm his feet before the fire. The question is then put, "Have you had your supper?" and the wanderer is asked to step up and have a bite; even if he has already supped he will be almost forced to take a piece of sweet cake and to drink a cup of tea.

The teakettle always sits beside the fire, and on the stranger's arrival the cook gives this "a good boil," for woodsmen want their tea boiled. Some fat pork is cut and put into the pan and is soon simmering over a cheery fire. While the stranger is taking off his moccasins and putting on a dry pair of socks, with which the cook is always ready to furnish him, the cook is plying him with questions as to what is going on out in the settlement.

So soon as the "boss" or owner of the camp and crew come in at night, their day's work over, the stranger is cordially greeted by all; in fact he becomes one of themselves and is expected to walk up to the bean pot or the frying pan and to help himself to anything that suits his palate without asking anybody. He not only becomes as one of the crew, but the best place in the berth is reserved for him, some one turning out of it and sleeping on the deacon seat (the hewn plank on which the crew sit when eating their meals). Sometimes the deacon seat is preferable to the berth.

Many years since, late one stormy winter night, I arrived at Mr. W Richard's logging camp at the "Otter Slide," on the Nashwalk river, New Brunswick. The crew had retired When I entered the camp Mr. R. raised his head from the fir boughs on which he was lying and said to me, "Come, take this place." I caught at the moment a glimpse of a bed of snow beneath the green boughs. "No, thank you, I prefer the deacon seat." On this I gladly stretched my weary limbs with my boots for a pillow and coat thrown over my shoulders for covering; and yet, after all, my sleep was sounder and more refreshing than that of one amid all the luxuries of the town.—Forest and Stream.

A Substitute for Canal Locks.

H. G. Ketchum, engineer of the Chignecto ship railway, is credited as the author of a scheme by which vessels drawing upward of twenty feet of water can be pushed through the present St. Lawrence canals from Port Arthur to Quebec, and through the Soo canal now being excavated, without deepening the canals or enlarging the locks, thus obviating the expenditure of millions of dollars upon canal deepening.

Mr. Ketchum proposes that large vessels be placed upon steel rafts or pontoons, and thus floated through the canals and over river shallows, the vessels to be placed upon the pontoons by means of hydraulic lifts established at the entrance of each canal. He says $500,000 would provide pontoons and lifts for all the existing canals; but these lifts could be used as graving docks; but little time would be lost in placing the vessels upon the floats, and the plan has been successful elsewhere.—New York Telegram.

The Doctor's Retort.

One of the brightest physicians of Portland and one of the ablest theologians of Bath were in the physiological room at Bowdoin Medical school not long ago examining, in company with others, microscopic slides, showing certain peculiar glands of the intestines. The physician at once launched out into a brilliant discussion of the glands and their relation to various diseases.

The theologian grew tired after a time, and finally said: "You doctors know so much about the uncertainties of this world that I should think you would not want to live." "You theologians," came the quick reply, "tell us so much about the certainties of the next that we don't want to die."—Lewiston Journal.

Sharing His Bed.

A Grub street friend of Johnson's was Derrick, of whom he wrote, "I honor Derrick for his strength of mind." One night when Floyd, another poor author, was wandering about the streets he found Derrick asleep upon a bulk. Upon being suddenly awakened Derrick started up. "My dear Floyd," said he, "I am sorry to see you in this destitute state. Will you go home with me to my lodgings?" And they turned in on the bulk together like the good fellows they were.—Collector.

Soapsuds Are Valuable.

Few persons know how very useful soapsuds prove when employed as manure. Applied to the roots of vines, fruit trees, roses, etc., they impart a vigor and rapidity of growth which is perfectly surprising. No one who is so lucky as to have a garden should waste this valuable form of manure. It is an excellent plan to have a large tub, and put the soapsuds and dirty water into it till required upon the garden.—Philadelphia Ledger.

ASTRAY.

Taken up on the premises of the undersigned in St. Hilaire 8 steers past two years old red and white spotted and 1 red steer past three years old. Owner can have same by paying expense of keeping and for this notice.

M. Hendrickson

STRAYED.

From the premises of the undersigned one red bull with a hole in the right ear. A reward will be paid for the return of the above described animal to

M. Hendrickson,

ESTRAY.

Taken up on the premises of the undersigned in the town of River Falls, 8 calves. Owner can have same by paying expenses and for this notice.

P. O. Hagglund.

U. S. Land Office

Crookston Minn. Oct. 29 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn, on December 8 1892 viz: Gustaf Anderson H D 11690 for the SW ¼ Sec 22 Tp 153 R 44.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land viz:

A. Sture of Crookston, E. M. Svenson, A. M. Ekstrom, P. A. Ekstrom all of St. Hilaire Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

Council Proceedings

Regular meeting of council, all members present.

Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

The following bills were allowed.

J. M Hanson work on hall	$9 75
C. E. Johnson marshall salery	60.00

On motion Dan Patterson was appointed constable until next election.

Moved to adjourn until the next regular meeeting.

J. L. Johnson
Village Recorder.

QUICK TIME AND BEST ROUTE

The route to Western Iowa, Nebraska Colorado, Kansas and the southwest is via the Great Northern to Sioux City Leave St. Hilaire at 3 p. m.. Leave St. Paul 6.40 p. m., Minneapolis 7.15 p. m arrive Sioux City 7.15 a. m.; Leave on Union Pacific at 8.25, reach Denver in thirty-six hours, Ogden and Salt Lake two and a half days, and other points in the southwest in quick time.

For further information see Agent S. S. Buzza.

U. S. Land Office

Crookston Minn Oct. 29 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on Dec. 20 1892 viz:

Peter Anderson H D 13740 for the W ½ NW ¼ and W ½ SW ¼ Sec 28 Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Ole J. Johnson, Ole J. Hegg Halvor T. Omot, Knut Steen all of St. Hilaire Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register

U. S. Land Office

Crookston Minn. November 1 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his inention to make final proof in support of his claim and has said proof will be made before the Register or Receiler of the U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn, on December 15 1892. viz:

A. P. Sandberg administrator of estate of Peter G. Allsson deceased H D 11173 for the NW ¼ Sec. Tp, 20 Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land vis:

S. Johnson, Haakon, Johnson, J. Lind, E. Petterson all of St, Hilaire Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

$7,000 a Year for Remembering Names.

To remember people's names is a great thing. I know a man in a great wholesale establishment in Chicago who gets $7,000 a year just for remembering names. His business is to speak to every one who comes in by name and to introduce the customer to the clerk of the department sought. If he does not introduce the person to the clerk by name, the clerk is expected to find out the name and communicate it quietly to the gentleman near the door, who bids him or her goodby by name. This always flatters people and they come back again.—Washington Star.

Styles of Architecture.

In their architecture the Moresque strove for the negation of the weight altogether; the Egyptian placed the weight firmly on the ground; the Greek lifted it up in the air with an assertion of graceful power; the Roman confused weight and support; the Byzantine represented weight without support; the Moor suggested that there was no weight at all.—London Tablet.

No Heirlooms.

Mrs. Maiflour (after proudly showing her family treasures to new neighbor's little daughter)—Have you any such heirlooms at home, my little dear?

Little Dear (with dignity)—No'm. I guess our folks was always rich 'nough to trow away their old things an buy new ones.—Good News.

People's Party Ticket

For President, James B. Weaver, of Iowa.

For Vice President, J. G. Field, of Virginia.

For Presidential Electors—First District W. H. Norton. Second District —F. M. Currier. Third District—C. P. Carpenter. Fourth District—Dr. E. Fish. Fifth District—Dr. E. F. Clark. Sixth District—C. F. Bodahl.

STATE TICKET.

For Governor, Ignatius Donnelly, of Dakota.

For Lieutenant-Governor, Kittle Halvorson, of stearns.

For Secretary of State, H. B. Martin, of Hennepin.

For State Treasurer, P. M. Ringdal, of Polk.

For Attorney General, J. L. McDonald, of Ramsey.

For Judges of the Supreme Court: Thomas Canty, of Hennepin, Daniel Buck, of Mankato and W. N Davidson, of Rock.

CONGRESSIONAL.

For Congress, H. E. Boen, of Otter Tail.

JUDICIAL.

For Judge, 14th Judicial District Frank Ives, of Polk.

LEGISLATIVE.

For Representatives to the Legislature—J. D, Knuteson, of Polk. B. M. Chesley and O. E. Olson, of Norman,

POLK COUNTY TICKET,

For Auditor—C U. Webster,

For Treasurer—J. T. Beaudry.

For Register of Deeds—J. Amundson.

For Sheriff—Arne Grundysen.

For County Attorney—A. R, Holston.

For Judge of Probate—C. M Benson.

For County Surveyor—O, L, Hamery

For Supt. of Schools—A. A. Lommen

For Court Commissioner—J. G. McGrew.

For Coroner—H. Shepard.

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONERS,

First District John E. Oppegaard.

Third District—Christopher Anderson

Fifth District—Robert Anderson,

INTERESTING ITEM.

GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY LINE

It is to the interest of parties contemplating going east to consider the great advantages the Great Northern offers them through its fast passenger service to St, Paul and to all points west to the Pacific coast, their free colonist cars, and magnificent Dining and Sleeping cars. The shortest route, close connections, quickest time and fare as low as the lowest, Any information cheerfully given,

S. S. Buzza
Agent.

MONEY TO LOAN.

I am prepared to make a few choice loans on real estate at 10 per cent straight.

H. E. IVES.

FIFTY CENTS IN CASH

Will secure the Spectator from now to Jan. 1st 1893, a hot political campaign is now on and we will try to make the Spectator interesting we make this low offer so that every farmer in this part of the country can afford to subscribe.

STRAYED

From my pasture on the 9th, day of October, one bay colt four years old, one bay mare 6 years old both branded F L on shoulder, Liberal reward offered for information.

S. M. Dainard.

FOR SALE,

A dapple-gray stallion seven years old, weight about 1,600, Will sell or trade.

Peter Lindbloom
Bray Tp, Sec. 23.

WANTED. Salesmen. Local and Traveling, To represent our well known house. You need no capital to represents a firm that warrants nursery stock first-class and true to name. WORK ALL THE YEAR. $100 per month to he right man, Apply quick stating age. L. L. MAY & CO.

Nurserymen, Florists and Seeds men, St, Paul Minn.

(This house is responsible.)

U. S. LAND OFFICE,

Crookston Minn September 15 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on December 8 1892 viz: Charles Will Heden D S no. 11561 for the NE ¼ Sec 26 Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of said land viz:

Ole J. Johnson, A. G. Mostrom, John Mostrom, Knut Steen all of St. Hilaire, Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

CLOSING OUT SALE!
At E M Hoff's Store

My whole stock of

Dry Goods and Notions

Gents Furnshing Goods

$5,000 worth of ready made clothing

Foot wear of all kinds and everything belonging to a full stocked general merchandise store will be closed out at cost in the next 90 days.

COME EVERY BODY

AND

SECURE GOOD BARGAINS.

E. M. HOFF

CROWN ROLLER MILL.
EQUIPPED WITH THE LATEST AND BEST IMPROVED MACHINERY.

Manufactures the well known,
PERFECTION FANCY PATENT
and WHITE ROSEFLOUR.
Rye and Feed mill in connection.
Flour and Feed always kept on hand
Custom work a specialty.

FRICKER & WELCH Prop,

HILAIRE MINNESOTA

CHAS G. RAPP.

A large and complete line of

General Merchandise.

CONSISTING OF

Dry Goods, Groceries, Clothing
Boots & Shoes, Hats & Caps
Notions

THE ST. HILAIRE SPECTATOR.
Published every Wednesday evening.
H. E. Ives, Propr.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE:
In Advance, $1.50 Per Year
If not in Advance, $2.00 Per Year

Entered in the Post Office at St. Hilaire, as Second Class Mail Matter.

WEDNESDAY November 9 1892

CHATS ABOUT MEN.

Senator Manderson plays a strong game of chess.

Carlyle's two brothers reside on farms near Grand Rapids, Mich.

Joseph Arch, the pioneer in the agricultural laborers' movement in England, is only sixty-six, but is said to be quite broken down.

Roch and Ruhm, two American cadets, carried off first honors in naval architecture at the last commencement of the University of Glasgow.

Mr. Gladstone is very much attached to a little black Pomeranian dog, Pete by name, which was given him some years ago by a friend in Germany.

The largest child ever born, it is said, was the son of Bates, the "Kentucky Giant," and his wife, the "Nova Scotia Giantess." This infant Hercules weighed 23¾ pounds.

Roscoe Conkling's fine portrait, by Cuyler Ten Eyck, has been placed in the vice president's room at the Capitol in Washington, and obtains as much praise as attention from visitors.

Frederick L. Ames is said to be the richest man in New England, and there is no man in any part of the country who gets more comfort out of his home or takes greater pride in its surroundings than he does.

A gentleman whom scarcely any one recognized had the privilege of the floor of the senate chamber on the day of Senator Barbour's funeral. He looked about sixty years of age. He proved to be the ex-senator from Iowa, Mr. Jones, who has reached his ninetieth year.

The late historian Freeman had a great liking for architectural sketches, and at his death had accumulated a large collection of drawings made by himself of notable buildings in England and on the Continent. But he cared nothing for paintings, and never on his journeys through Europe went into a picture gallery.

THE NEWEST NOVELTIES.

In receptacles of all sorts the shel takes the lead.

Column clocks are for boudoirs and Louis XVI rooms.

Lamps of glass are six feet high and mounted in brass.

Three swans—blue, pink and white—with linked necks, form a new table ornament for flowers.

A great deal is done in faience with appliques of metals. There are flower ornaments or grotesquerie.

Small articles, as vases, cups, bowls covered with flowers with spread petals such as daisies have been brought over.

The English gold ornamented glass is having great vogue. The German glass is much more finely ornamented. The contours in the English glass are bolder.

Onyx clocks in the shape of green porticoes, with round columns supporting pediments, are exquisite. Some clocks have the pillars and pilasters covered with gilt and colored tracery.

There are numerous displays of ornamental glass. The Webb cameo glass is striking, but has many successful imitations in cheaper glasses which would deceive all but the cognoscenti.

There are new mechanical clocks. One represents the engine of a ferryboat, another a pile driver with the figure of a man. The materials are silver and bronze, and the workmanship is exquisite.—Jewelers' Circular.

AROUND THE THRONES.

The Princess of Wales fits and makes gowns for herself and family.

There are fourteen great gates to the Escurial, the palace of Spanish kings, and the building is lighted by 1,110 outer and 1,578 inner windows.

No nihilist will ever get a chance at the czar of Russia with a razor, at least in the guise of a barber. The autocrat has his whiskers carefully trimmed, but with scissors.

Emperor William has given 15,000 marks to aid the publication of an elaborate literary souvenir of the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America. The work will be edited by the Berlin Geographical Society.

The Shah of Persia has more than $35,000,000 worth of ornaments, gems and precious stones in one strong room, 20 by 4 feet. There are scabbards in this treasury said to be worth $1,000,000 each. When leaving home the Shah, it is said, locks up his jewelry and travels "in paste."

Tip-O-Tip, son of the late Zulu King Cetewayo, is in this country and aims to secure an education here before returning to his own people. To pay his expenses in college he is giving small entertainments of native songs, chants, translations of the English to the Zulu tongue and in answering questions.

ODDS AND ENDS.

It is said that three-fourths of the entire manufacturing capital of the United States is based on patents.

France has had thirty-eight embassadors to England since 1814, while in the same period the queen has had but eight representatives at Paris.

More than a fourth of the gold and more than a third of the silver produced throughout the world in the year 1891 was mined in the United States.

A mob of seventy-five women prevented a wedding in a town in Kentucky recently, for the reason that the bride's husband had been dead but two weeks.

The next lord mayor of London will be a Roman Catholic and he will appoint a Catholic priest as his chaplain. It will be the first instance of a Roman Catholic holding the latter position since the Reformation.

The streets of London are cleaned between 8 in the evening and 9 in the morning. Many of the carriageways are washed daily by means of a hose, and the courts and alleys inhabited by the lower classes are cleaned once a day.

A Church Strikes Oil.

"The best paying church I know of is probably a little country church in Washington county, Pa.," said A. L. Rutledge, of Pittsburg. "It's a Presbyterian church and is near McDonald. Two years ago McDonald was a milk station. Passing by there on a train all one could see were a few hundred milk cans on the station platform and the little church on the hillside, with its little parsonage alongside. Well, oil and coal and natural gas were discovered around McDonald, and today there is an ideal oil town there, with miners' camps scattered about.

"Productive? Why, oil wells were struck that flowed 25,000 barrels a day. There was no tankage big enough to hold the supply and the oil was allowed to run down the hillside and into the streams. Outsiders banked up the creeks and scooped enough oil out of the dams they made to net them $100 a day, carrying the oil away by the bucketful. Natural gas? Why, the pressure was so strong that the greatest difficulty was experienced in boring the oil wells. The gas formed a cushion that it was absolutely impossible in some cases to drive the augers through.

"Derricks were put up all about the little church. The pastor did not enjoy any increase of salary and the church income did not grow until some of the enterprising elders conceived a brilliant idea and carried it out. They bored for oil on the church lot and they struck it—struck it rich. At first the oil poured out at the rate of 1,000 barrels a day. The society grew rich, of course, and the income is still flowing in smooth as oil, and the little church on the hillside is one of the wealthiest religious organizations in the state."—Chicago Tribune.

A Whirlwind in Kensington Gardens.

On a recent Sunday afternoon a curious phenomenon was witnessed by those persons who were walking in Kensington Gardens. A rough, grating sound suddenly filled the air. It appeared to come from the north side of the park, and those who looked in that direction in order to discover its cause saw an immense column, a dozen feet or more in diameter and nearly a hundred feet in height, rapidly approaching them. It was a genuine whirlwind on a small scale. The column appeared to consist of sand, gravel, dust, leaves of trees and twigs of wood, and it approached with a centrifugal motion. As it swept onward it was seen to be quite opaque, any object which it passed being hidden from view.

An unfortunate lady who was in the Broad Walk in Kensington gardens suddenly found herself caught in the grasp of the strange monster. People at a short distance from her lost sight of her for a moment, and then she became visible again, but it was seen that her dress was flying wildly in the air, and that she herself was positively revolving just as the column itself had done. Fortunately no damage was done.—London Tid-Bits.

What Was It?

A bird, the body of which was about the size of that of a quail, whose plumage was of "changeable black"—changing from black to green and blue and purple; whose beak was an inch in length, pointed with yellow and based in scarlet, and over which was a bony disk of blue; whose tail was the length of that of the mocking bird, and whose legs were long and slender like those of the snipe—altogether a strange bird for this section of country, was given Prosecuting Attorney Elliott by Frank Baker, of Concord Settlement, Saturday. It was alive and "chipper" when Elliott got it, but after it was placed in a cage that night it beat itself almost to death against its prison bars, and on Sunday it died. It was probably a species of the rail.—Charleston Democrat.

Venerable Trees.

A very interesting work is in course of publication by M. Gadeau de Kerville on the ancient trees of Normandy. The most remarkable trees yet described are two yews of La Haye de Routot, in the department of Eure. They are, respectively, about 31 and 27 feet in circumference at the base of the trunks and about 57½ and 47½ feet high. Their ages are estimated by the author to be not less than 1,500 years. A chapel has been constructed in the hollow trunk of one of these trees about 10 feet high and 6½ feet deep.—Popular Science Monthly.

Americans in China.

There are at present in China only 1,022 citizens of the United States, nearly half of them women. Of this number 400 reside at Shanghai, 186 at Tien Tsin and 75 at Canton. Nearly one-half, 506 in all, are missionaries, 23 are in the diplomatic and consular service, 6 are mining engineers, 23 are in mercantile occupations, 28 are in the Chinese customs service, 73 are seafaring men, 7 are ministers, 8 are machinists, 2 are professors and 345 are "unclassified."—Washington Star.

A Russian Band.

There is now playing in Paris a Russian horn band, each horn being capable of producing a single note only. So perfect is the training that the band produces the effect of one equipped with ordinary instruments, and even running scales with the rapidity and precision of a violin.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A New Electric Railroad System.

Edward H. Brown, a member of the Salem (Mass.) common council, has invented a method of operating electric street railways which does away with the present unsightly and dangerous poles and overhead wires, all wires being securely buried underground.—New York Telegram.

Olive Oil Adulterated.

Of thirteen samples of California olive oil examined by the board of horticulture only two were found to be pure. The oil of sunflowers and cottonseed enters largely into the adulteration.—Chicago Tribune.

Then and Now.

Jones (in the honeymoon)—I cannot imagine, wifey, what is the matter with my razor. It has an edge on it like a saw.

Mrs. Jones (timidly)—Oh, darling, can you forgive me? I cut off some hooks and eyes from an old waist with that razor, but it wasn't real sharp then.

Jones (quietly)—Dearest, you must be careful. You might happen to cut off one of your pretty little fingers.

Ten Years Later: Jones (crossly)—Some infernal idiot has been tampering with my razor.

Mrs. Jones (icily)—It must have been yourself, then, as no one ever touches it but you.—Exchange.

Fast.

John Quincy Washington—Miss Lucinda, is you gwine foh a boat ride wi' me?

Miss Lucinda—Not in dat ole tub.

J. Q. W.—Dis yere ain't no tub. It's de fas'est boat on Ches'peake bay.

Miss L.—Yes—de fas'est in de mud.—Jester.

He Would Starve First.

At Perryville a thin old man with a mouth like a cruller climbed on board a south bound train. He carried an umbrella tied up with a shoestring, and an old valise.

He sat down on a cross seat near the door, deposited his property and beckoned to a train boy who who was passing with a basket of sandwiches.

"Got anything ter eat, young feller?"

"Sandwiches—ham, chicken and tongue."

"Are they fresh?"

"Certainly."

"There ain't no 'certainty' about it," objected the old man emphatically; "the sandwich business is ticklish in hot weather."

"They're fresh," said the boy impatiently; "only been made an hour."

"I'd rather like a chicken sandwich," remarked the old man, "if I knowed I wouldn't draw a wing."

"No wings, sir; all clear meat."

"'Spose you let me see one of them sandwiches."

"Can't sir; they are all wrapped up. Take one?"

"How much do you ask fer em?"

"Ten cents."

"Not by the dozen, young feller; how much for one?"

"Ten cents."

"Great day 'n mornin," gasped the old man, horror stricken, "ten cents fer two bites of bread and a smell of chicken? I'm hungry enough to eat a pickaxe, but I'm game, and I tell you, boy, before I pay ten cents for one little sandwich, I'll set here and roll my eyes and swoller all the way to Bowltermer."—New York Tribune.

The Right Man After All.

A head adorned with shaggy and unmanageable whiskers was thrust out of the window and a voice that fitted the beard inquired:

"What is it?"

"Oh, is this Mr. Higgins?" came a still, small voice from the shade of the doorway below.

"Yes."

"Please come right up to 414 —— street just as quick as you can, and bring your instruments."

"Oh!———! I ain't no doctor. I'm a carpenter. Dr. Higgins lives two doors below," and the window came down with a slam that told of former experiences of the same kind on the part of the humble artisan.

But Carpenter Higgins had not got comfortably back into his bed before the bell rang again, and uttering some remarks that were afterward expunged from the record he rose once more and went to the window.

"Well, what the deuce do you want now?" he ejaculated.

"Please, sir," said the little voice, "it's you we want. Pa and ma is shut up in the foldin bed, an we can't get 'em out."—Detroit Tribune.

Ask Your Dealer For FEATHERBONE
WHIPS.
FEATHERBONE is made from Enameled Quills—nature's own toughest, and strongest elastic material. Best wearing whips made for 35c., 50c., 75c., $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50. All styles for Buggy, Cart, Track, Team and Riding. Be sure and ask for a FEATHERBONE.
FOR SALE BY
S. M. HOFF
way

Going to Buy
A Dictionary?
GET THE BEST,
Webster's International.
A Choice Gift
A Grand Family Educator
A Library in Itself
The Standard Authority
WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY
SOLD BY ALL BOOKSELLERS.
The International is a new book from cover to cover, fully abreast of the times, and is the successor of the authentic "Unabridged." Ten years were spent in revising, 100 editors employed and over $300,000 expended before the first copy was printed.
Do not buy reprints of obsolete and comparatively worthless editions.
Send for free pamphlet containing specimen pages and full particulars.
G. & C. MERRIAM CO., Publishers,
SPRINGFIELD, MASS., U. S. A.

U.S. LAND OFFICE.

Crookston, Minn., Nov. 12 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn on November 29 1892. viz:

Theodore Halvorson D S 11948 for the SE¼ Sec. 20 Tp 153 R. 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Knut Steen, Anton Lee, Ole J. Hegg, Ole Johnson, all of St. Hilaire Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

E. T. SPAFFORD S. M. DAINARD
E. T. SPAFFORD & CO.
DEALERS IN
LUMBER, LATH AND SHINGLES.
A complete stock of all kinds of Lumber Lath, Shingles, Mouldings, Building Paper Sash, Doors and Screens, Lime, Cement Stucco, Plastering Hair, Brick etc. always on hand at the lowest market prices.
S. M. Dainard, Manager.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE, MINN.

E. T. SPAFFORD & CO.
WILL ALWAYS PAY THE
HIGHEST MARKET PRICES
FOR
All kinds of
CATTLE.
Also for Cord wood, Hay, Oats, Barley and flax.
Ground Feed for Sale
S. M. DAINARD.
Manager.

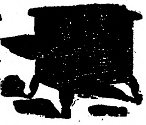
Reserved For
THE
ST. HILAIRE
TOWNSITE
COMPANY

W. A. ARTHUR.
DEALER IN
FRUITS, CONFECTIONARY
TOBACCO AND CIGARS.
STATIONARY OF ALL KINDS
Lunch Counter
Warm meals at all hours.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE MINNESOTA

JUSTUS L. JOHNSON
DEALER IN
pure medicines Fancy articles, perfumer and stationery, paints oils and dye stuffs.
Cigars, Candy, Fruit and Soft Drinks always on hand.
Barbershop in connection
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE

I CAN SAVE YOU
MONEY
If you wish to make
REAL ESTATE
LOANS.
For full particulars call on or address
H. E. IVES.
SPECTATOR OFFICE ST. HILAIRE.

HOLMES BRO'S
Dealers in
HARDWARE, TINWARE,
We are carrying a heavy and complete line of Heating and Cooking stoves.



GOOD GOODS LOW PRICES.
CALL ON US FOR BARGAINS
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE MINN.

FARMERS STORE
NEW GOODS AT HARD PAN PRICES.
If you want to save money do your trading with
HALL BROS.
DEALERS IN
Dry Goods, Groceries Notions.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE

S. M. HOFF
DEALER IN
HARDWARE
A new and complete stock of all kinds of Hardware, Tinware, Stoves, Fencing wire, Nails, in fact everything usuay kept in a first-class Hardware Store,
AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES
Call and examine Goods
and Get Our Prices.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE

DR. PRICE'S
Cream Baking Powder.
The only Pure Cream of Tartar Powder.—No Ammonia; No Alum.
Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

THE TITAN OF CHASMS.

A Mile Deep, 13 Miles Wide, 217 Miles Long, and Painted Like a Flower.

The Grand Canon of the Colorado River, in Arizona, is now for the first time easily accessible to tourists. A regular stage line has been established from Flagstaff, Arizona on the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad, making the trip from Flagstaff to the most imposing part of the Canon in less than 12 hours. The stage fare for the round trip is only $20.00, and meals and comfortable lodgings are provided throughout the trip at a reasonable price. The view of the Grand Canon afforded at the terminus of the stage route is the most stupendous panorama known in nature. There is also a trail at this point leading down to the Canon wall, more than 6,000 feet vertically, to the river below. The descent of the trail is a grander experience than climbing the Alps, for in the bottom of this terrific and sublime chasm are hundreds of mountains greater than any of the Alpine range.

A book describing the trip to the Grand Canon, illustrated by many full-page engravings from special photographs, and furnishing all needful information, may be obtained free upon application to Jno. J. Byrne, 723 Monadnock block, Chicago, Ill.

Information Not Appreciated.

Countryman: "This is horrid weather, isn't it?"

Passenger hard of hearing: "What's that?"

C.: "I say it is shocking bad weather."

P.: "I don't catch what you say."

C. roaring with the full force of his lungs; "It is awfully—wretched—weather."

: "Oh! is that all you've got to say? I can see that for myself!"

A Physician in a Bad Fix.

Constantinople, Special Mavroyeni Pasha, the sultan's favorite physician, has been arrested in consequence of his revengeful wife sending to the sultan her husband's diary, in which daily notes were made of the variable conditions of the sultan's mind. Mavroyeni Pasha has been a trusted friend and confidant of the sultan since the latter's childhood. He married a French Jewess, whose scandalous life has twice involved him in disgrace and finally compelled him to apply for a divorce.

MME. CARNOT, wife of the French President, smokes cigarettes after her meals, but only a mild and sweet-scented variety.

The Belgian delegates to the international monetary conference includes three monometallists—Senator Weber, Supt. Saint Cette, of the Belgian mint, and M. Monte Fiore Levy, a banker, and one bi-metallist—M. Allard, director of the mint.

Look at the Clock!

See how regularly its pendulum swings to and fro. With kindred regularity do the bowels move when the habit of body is reformed by the thorough laxative and promotor of digestion and secretion, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. The liver, too, always affected in constipation, resumes its activity when this medicine is used. Not less efficacious is it in malarial and kidney trouble, rheumatism and nervousness.

Ten moonshiners were arrested in the mountain districts of Kentucky by raiding federal marshals.

Allen's Iron Tonic Bitters is the grand appetizer of the age. All genuine bear the signature of J. P. Allen, Druggist, St. Paul Minn.

Fred Dress shot and killed an alleged horse-thief named Dean McVeagh, at St. Henry's, O. The latter resisted arrest.

Three Bright Boys

From each of the States of Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Missouri have an unexcelled chance to visit the World's Fair next year. See advertisement of Chicago Weekly Columbian, on this page. 3,000 Boys Wanted.

Deputy Sheriff Homberg was convicted at Baltimore, Md., for assaulting negroes with the object of keeping them from registering.

TOWER'S FISH BRAND The Best Waterproof Coat in the WORLD!
SLICKER
The FISH BRAND SLICKER is warranted waterproof, and will keep you dry in the hardest storm. The new POMMEL SLICKER is a perfect riding coat, and covers the entire saddle. Beware of imitations. Don't buy a coat if the "Fish Brand" is not on it. Illustrated Catalogue free. A. J. TOWER, Boston, Mass.

WE WANT 1,200 ACRES. Largest in the West. Valuable Specialties. $100,000.00 Responsible, Highest Com. & Salaries. SALESMEN
For our immense stock of NORTHERN GROWN FRUITS, Ornamental Trees, Shrubs, Etc. Experience not necessary. PAY WEEKLY. Apply at once for terms, etc., stating age. The JEWELL NURSERY CO., Lake City, Minn.
Name this Paper every time you write.

Garfield Tea Overcomes results of bad eating. Cures Sick Headache, Restores Complexion, Saves Doctors' Bills. Sample free. GARFIELD TEA CO., 319 W. 45th St., N.Y.
Cures Constipation

MOTHERS Dr. Snyder's Kidney Balsam cures Enuresis (BEDWETTING.) For circulars and testimonials address, with stamp, Dr. O. W. F. SNYDER, McVicker's Theatre, Chicago, Ill.
For sale by all Druggists. Price $1.00.

DOUBLE Breech-Loader $7.50. RIFLES $2.00 WATCHES GUNS BICYCLES $15 All kinds cheaper than elsewhere. Before you buy, send stamp for catalogue to The POWELL & CLEMENT Co., 166 Main St., Cincinnati, O.

Asthma The African Kola Plant, discovered in Congo, West Africa, is Nature's Sure Cure for Asthma. Cure Guaranteed or No Pay. Export Office, 1164 Broadway, New York. For Large Trial Case, Free by Mail, address KOLA IMPORTING CO., 132 Vine St., Cincinnati, O.

Chip From a German Workshop.

Maker of musical instruments, cheerfully rubbing his hands: "There, thank goodness, the bass fiddle is finished at last!" after a pause, "Himmel—Donnerwetter! If I haven't gone and left my glue-pot inside!"—Renchthaler.

Dairymen, stockmen, livery-stable men and horse-car men unite in saying that no such horse and cattle liniment as Salvation Oil has ever been put upon the market. It should be kept at every stable and stock yard in the land. 25 cts.

A vigilance committee has been formed at Sedalia, Mo.

It is too plain to need a demonstration by chart or diagram, that Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is what the people need everywhere, for cure of bronchial and pectoral troubles. It is a sure cure.

To Cleanse the System

Effectually yet gently, when costive or bilious or when the blood is impure or sluggish, to permanently cure habitual constipation, to awaken the kidneys and liver to a healthy activity, without irritating or weakening them to dispel headaches, colds or fevers, use Syrup of Figs.

Cholera has appeared at Belgrade, Servia.

A Sore Throat or Cough, if suffered to progress, often results in an incurable throat or lung trouble. "Brown's Bronchial Troches" give instant relief.

The English cabinet decides not to retire from Uganda.

Have You Asthma?

DR. R. SCHIFFMANN, St. Paul, Minn., will mail a trial package of Schiffmann's Asthma Cure free to any sufferer. Gives instant relief in worst cases, and cures where others fail. Name this paper and send address.

Evictions are going on at a terrible rate in Ireland.

How's This!

We offer One Hundred Dollars reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions and financially able to carry out any obligations made by their firm.

WEST & TRUAX, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.
WALDING, KINNAN & MARVIN, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Testimonials sent free. Price 75c. per bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

A direct telephone line will be constructed between Detroit and New York.

Warning.

Many internal remedies are glibly advertised, to shorten the labor and lessen the pains of Child-Birth, and with wonderful inconsistency to regulate menstruation. Common sense should teach any woman that a preparation adopted for menstrual disorders will not prepare the system for Child-Birth. We earnestly say, beware of all such; they can at this critical time do no good, and their use may be fatal. It is only by persistent external treatment, thus relaxing and softening all the parts, that the dread hour is robbed of its pain and terror, and no remedy on earth does this but "Mother's Friend." Bradfield Reg. Co., Atlanta, Ga. Sold by all druggists.

"German Syrup"

I must say a word as to the efficacy of German Syrup. I have used it in my family for Bronchitis, the result of Colds, with most excellent success. I have taken it myself for Throat Troubles, and have derived good results therefrom. I therefore recommend it to my neighbors as an excellent remedy in such cases. James T. Durette, Earlysville, Va. Beware of dealers who offer you "something just as good." Always insist on having Boschee's German Syrup.

MOTHER'S FRIEND

LESSENS PAIN—INSURES SAFETY to LIFE of MOTHER and CHILD.

My wife, after having used Mother's Friend, passed through the ordeal with little pain, was stronger in one hour than in a week after the birth of her former child. J. J. McGOLDRICK, Beans Sta., Tenn.

Mother's Friend robbed pain of its terror and shortened labor. I have the healthiest child I ever saw.
MRS. L. M. AHERN, Cochran, Ga.

Sent by express, charges prepaid, on receipt of price, $1.50 per bottle. Book "To Mothers" mailed free.
BRADFIELD REGULATOR CO., ATLANTA, GA.
For sale by all Druggists.

CATARRH
THE CURE FOR CATARRH COLD IN HEAD
HAY FEVER
DEAFNESS
HEADACHE
ELY'S CREAM BALM
50c
HAY-FEVER

ELY'S CREAM BALM IS WORTH $500 TO ANY MAN Woman or Child suffering from CATARRH
Not a Liquid or Snuff.
A particle is applied into each nostril and is agreeable. Price 50 cents at Druggists or by mail. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren St., New York.

"WELL BRED, SOON WED." GIRLS WHO USE
SAPOLIO
ARE QUICKLY MARRIED. TRY IT IN YOUR NEXT HOUSE-CLEANING.

3,000 BOYS WANTED Who wish to go to the World's Fair. THE WEEKLY COLUMBIAN will give three equal premiums to three boys in each of the following States: Mich., Ind., Ill., Ia., Minn., Wis., Mo., who will sell the greatest number of Columbians between now and May 1st, 1893, each a R. R. Ticket from his home to Chicago and return, pay his board and admission to the World's Fair for one week while in Chicago. The Weekly Columbian is an 8 page paper filled with all the startling events of the day, illustrated stories and plain facts, the most readable paper in the United States. Sells Quick. We sell to newsboys at 3c per copy; they sell for 5cts, thus making $2.00 on every 100 sold. We to take back all unsold copies, so our newsboys have no risk to run. A boy in a town of over 100 inhabitants can successfully compete for these. Send for sample copy and full particulars to
J. BRINKERHOFF, Business Manager, Room 515, Manhattan Bldg., CHICAGO, Ill.

WHITTIER.

His four score years and five,
Are gone, like a tale that is told.
The quick tears start, there's an ache at the heart,
For we never thought him old.

Straight as a mountain pine,
With the mountain eagle's eye,
With the hand-clasp strong, and the unhushed song—
Was it time for him to die?

Prophet and priest he stood
In the storm of embattled years;
The broken chain was his heart's refrain
And the peace that is balm for tears.

The hills and the valleys knew
The poet who keep their tryst.
To our common life and our daily strife
He brought the blessing of Christ.

And we never thought him old,
Though his locks were white as snow,
O, heart of Gold, grown suddenly cold,
It was not time to go!

—Harper's Bazar.

AN ILL WIND.

Denhard's Romancir cus. Greek hippodrome and oriental caravan started out very much handicapped in the spring. There was a legacy of debt hanging over it from the previous disastrous season, and it had been prophesied that it would evern move from its winter quarters; but it did, contrary to general prediction.

The receipts at the opening were next to nothing and Denhard looked glum. It would be tedious to detail the movements of the show for the first month. It moved, but salaries and remittances to the printer were omitted. The manager did manage to keep his advance corps moving and hold his company together.

Forrest Marsh, the press agent, was one of the advance men who remained in Denhard's employ, not so much from choice as from necessity. No offers for his services had reached him from other managers and being broke and, more than that, in debt, he made the best of things as they were, and remained under the old banner.

For nearly three months the manager stood the strain with a bold front, but the anxiety was telling on him and when he received a visit from the printer, who was importunate for funds, he felt that the end had come. And it was near.

The arrival of the printer caused dismay in the dressing room, and the musicians discussed the situation in more languages than ever heard before since Babel.

Denhard talked long and eloquently to the printer, but he was importunate.

Then came to an end Denhard's Roman circus, Greek Hippodrome and oriental caravan, and all the agents in advance were notified of the disaster by wire.

Philosophic and Bohemian Forest Marsh was shaken when he received the news, as he was penniless and awkwardly placed. Ten days before he arrived at the little Mississippi town, when at the hour of his expected departure he had received a telegram from the general agent in advance instructing him to "wait orders." And he had waited without hearing further from his superior.

It was a dull place to be hanging about in for days. The majority of the inhabitants were Germans, and the hotel at which he was stopping was combined with a mill, the proprietor of which was a gruff old fellow with a voice of a basso profundo, and very much of a tyrant in his way.

The only person about the premises who seemed to have control or influence over the miller and landlord was his pretty blonde daughter, Lena, and when he got into one of his guttural tantrums she would wind her plump arms about him and lead him captive.

Forrest Marsh was quite skilled at the piano, and when the old man was in good humor he would thump out a German waltz as Lena tripped about the room.

Forrest Marsh had another annoyance besides the delay. On his arrival his finances were in a low state, and when the telegram from his manager arrived informing him of the end he was bankrupt.

No matter how many times he read over the telegram, the fact remained. He was stranded, but he would return to the show.

He examined his railroad pass and made a discovery which quite took his breath away. It did not call for a return trip. It should have done so, for it is often necessary that the principal agents of a circus have the privilege of passing up and down the line.

Marsh's long stay at the hotel had been a surprise to his proprietor, but the show was billed, and other agents and the bill posters and programmers had come and gone, else the landlord would have long before called on the sojourner for an explanation or a settlement.

When the press agent did make an explanation, as he was forced to, the German fairly exploded and filled the air with a mixture of oaths rarely heard even in the tavern or the mill in its wildest moods winding up by denouncing his guest as a "swindler."

And when he yelled "swindler" you could have heard it half over the town.

Denhard's misfortune had bequeathed as a memory a good big bill for the entertainment of his advance, and the fury of the loser was visited upon the head of the unfortunate Forrest Marsh.

In his rage, the old man might have done the young man violence but for the opportune arrival of Lena, who exercised her wits and when he had cooled down a bit said:

"Papa, you are unreasonable. Poor fellow, you can't blame him; it is not his fault."

"Vell, if it ain't hish fault," returned the father, "he had not petter not go avay from here."

As Lena led him away he turned and thundered:

"You stay right here! Don't you dare to go away!"

Marsh had expected to be turned out of doors, and the command furnished some satisfaction, even though it was uttered in anger.

The next day the circus man in distress was put in a small room under the roof and became a handy man about the premises instead of a guest. There was plenty to do about the hotel and mill, and the way that the proprietor kept him hazing was wearying.

As the boss' good humor grew Forrest Marsh gained in the stern old Dutchman's good graces and being ready and willing and apt besides, he proved so useful to the jailer, not employer, that one day he heard the father remark to the daughter:

"Dot fellow is a pretty smart fellow, Lena so he ish, py jiminy."

As the retained and detained guest won favor in the eyes of the father, he, too, grew in the esteem of the fair-haired daughter.

It was not long before it was Forrest here and Forrest there all over the place. Forrest could do everything, everybody wanted him, and never was here a more willing helper than the factotum.

One night over his pipe the stern old fellow unbent as Lena and the young man sung to the latter's accompaniment, and the ruler of the establishment broke out:

"Mister Marsh——"

He had never addressed the young man so formally before, and Forrest picked up his ears to listen to what followed.

"When you vas first come here and not pay your hotel bill I vas purty mad of you, put ven I got me over mad I say me to myself dot vas not your fault, but dot fault of dot circus vot got bust up."

"Oh, that's all right," returned Marsh, deprecatingly.

"Nien, nien," protested the old man, "it vos all wrong, put I makes dot right mit you; to-morrow we have some talk. Good night."

With that the old man tramped off to bed, leaving the young folks to chat until the mother's call of "Lena!" warned them that the time was getting into the small hours.

On the morrow a very satisfactory arrangement was made with Forrest Marsh, and he was at once placed in the position of a paid employe, and it was "put next to the throne" and the moving and active spirit about the double establishment.

The old man as time passed lived more at his ease and gave less personal attention to his business, and at the end of a year all callers on business were referred to "Mr. Marsh," with the additional remark: "He's ter poss."

Lena was a great match, but none of the beaux or the swells of the little city by the river gained favor in her eyes, which were all for Forrest Marsh.

Lena's parents had not been blind to the growing affection of the young folks, neither did they object to it; they just remained passive and let events take their natural course, and events went tending rapidly toward matrimony.

So it was no surprise when the young man asked for the hand of Lena. The answer almost caused the lover to faint.

"How could my torter marry a fellow what has got nodding?"

The next moment the old man broke forth into a roar of laughter at Marsh's glum visage, and then he said, reassuringly:

"My tear boy, I fix dot. I vos too old and too lazy to run ter pizness. You vos ter poss. I can't git along mitout you any longer. I trust you mit my pizness and my money. You vos a nice fellow. You vos smart. You vos honest. Vot more vould I vant? Put my Lena must never marry a poor man. I fix dot. I give you Lena—all of Lena—and half the mill and half the hotel and the biggest vedding vot was ever of this town since it was porn."

And the wedding was an event and will ever be remembered in that locality and vicinity. Forrest Marsh by his affability had made himself exceedingly popular and everybody declared he was a "lucky fellow," but the girls in their view of the alliance said "lucky Lena."

In after years, in his happiness and prosperity, Forrest Marsh looked back upon the circumstances which brought him to the spot. An event which impoverished Denhard and blasted his life had enriched him and crowned him with happiness, and at such times as he mused he was wont to repeat to himself the familiar adage: "It is an ill wind that brings no one good."

CURIOSITIES OF BOILING WATER.

There Are Places Where It Won't Cook Eggs in an Open Vessel.

The American, with his English cousin, ascertains temperature by the Fahrenheit thermometer; the Frenchman by the centigrade, and the German by the Raumer. In these thermometers the boiling points are marked 212 degrees, 100 degrees, and 80 degrees, respectively. According to the Youth's Companion nothing is more variable than the temperature at which water boils. Indeed there are places where eggs cannot be boiled in an open vessel, because the water, when it boils in the open air, is not hot enough to cook them. Such places are easily reached by means of a balloon or by climbing a high mountain. The ebullition of water is affected by the pressure upon its surface. When the atmospheric pressure is diminished, as it is in ascending from the earth, water boils much more easily. In other words, less heat is required to make it boil. As a certain amount of heat is required to coagulate the albumen of the egg—to "cook" it—that portion of one's breakfast might have to be prepared in some other manner—say by baking or frying. However, if oatmeal or some similar substance were mixed with the water, its point of ebullition could be raised sufficiently to boil the eggs in spite of the altitude.

Other causes besides altitude may vary the boiling point of water. As is shown by the barometer, atmospheric pressure varies considerably with the weather. Hence, when the breakfast eggs are not boiled to our liking we should remember that the trouble may be with the weather and not with the cook. Perhaps some of our young readers have heard how

The man in the south
Burnt his mouth,
Eating cold plum porridge;

but have they ever heard of the possibility of freezing one's fingers in boiling water? To do this the experimenter may need to cut off the finger, but no matter. Place it in a saucer of water beneath the bell-jar of an air pump and exhaust the air. When the pressure is sufficiently reduced the water will begin to boil, and will so continue until its temperature, being rapidly reduced by the vapor given off, it finally freezes.

THIS IS HAPPINESS.

Some Definitions Sent to an English Paper.

Some time ago the London Tit-Bits offered a prize for the best definition of "Happiness." The following definition was adjudged the best and received the prize.

Wanting nothing and knowing it.

Among the best definitions sent in were the following:

The mental sunshine of content.

A "will-o'-the-wisp" which eludes us even when we grasp it.

Excelsior!—The ever-retreating summit on the hill of our ambition.

The prize at the top of a greasy pole, which is continually slipping from one's grasp.

The only thing a man continues to search for after he has found it.

The bull's-eye on the target at which all the human race are shooting.

The goal erected for the human race, which few reach, being too heavily handicapped.

A wayside flower growing only by the path of duty.

A bright and beautiful butterfly which many chase but few capture.

The interest we receive from capital invested in good works.

The birthright of contentment.

A treasure which we search for far and wide, though ofttimes it is lying at our feet.

The summer weather of the mind.

The dancing of the heart to its own music.

HOUSEBOATING ON LAND.

An English Pastime Which May Be Transplanted to America.

"Caravaning," like "houseboating," is a recreation indigenous to the English soil. A caravan is a sort of houseboat on wheels, a fashionable and modernized gypsy cabin, or an improved photographer's car. It is drawn by horses, and develops a speed something between a canal-boat and an express train, according to the number and going qualities of the steeds before it. It is not distance, however, but time that a caravan is looked to to annihilate, so the matter of speed is secondary. The vehicle, is filled with a carefully selected company of picnickers, rambles along a lovely country road until some sweet retreat is encountered, when it stops, and there you are for as long as you want to be and sometimes longer.

In the carvan you may eat, sleep, but not live; that you must do out of doors. If it should rain you may exist within its shelter, if you can, till the sun shines again. When everybody is tired of the sweet retreat—and one of the thorns of caravaning is that there is a chance of your getting tired of it before everybody—the party moves on like the snail, with its house upon its back. There is talk of introducing this pastime over here but it seems hardly suited to the lively American temperament.—New York Times.

Those Helpless Little Women.

"Don't you worry about the little woman! Just analyze her a bit before you waste any great amount of sympathy upon her. That baby mouth wasn't made in vain. Ever see one of those little women stand up in a street car, or carry her own parcels home, or get in or out of a carriage without having half a dozen men run to assist her? And all just because she is a little woman, and has that helpless, imploring look, as if she couldn't stand the least bit of trouble in the world. And every man she meets feels sorry for her, and is ready to extend his sympathy and assistance. I've watched her—I've made a study of her tricks and her ways. She just looks at a man out of those appealing eyes, and he would walk over red-hot plowshares to assist her. When I am born again I want to be one of those meek, helpless, sorrowful-eyed little women, and be helped to all of the good things of life because I look so small, and sweet and helpless. Little woman! Little humbug."—St. Louis Republic.

Strength of Hands in the Two Sexes.

To determine how the average strength of the hands of men and women compares, French ingenuity some time ago devised a special instrument, on which the palm of the hand is placed, and the greatest downward pressure which the individual can give it is exercised upon it, the force thus produced being recorded by clockwork mechanism. In a test including some fifty robust men and the same number of healthy women, both belonging to the middle class of society, with ages varying from twenty-five to forty-five years, the strongest man of the company was able to produce with his right hand a pressure equivalent to eighty five kilograms, or about one hundred and seventy-five pounds, and the weakest to forty kilograms, the average being fifty-six. The force of the strongest woman of the fifty who were selected amounted to only forty-four kilogram, and that of the weakest to sixteen, while the average was thirty-three kilograms.

The Queen's Workroom.

The sitting-room in which the Queen works during her residence at Balmoral is very large, and a prominent object on an easel near the writing table is an admirable portrait of Prince Albert. The huge writing table is usually covered with papers, and letters and telegrams, and there are several family photographs on it. The Queen has a table at her right hand which bears numerous dispatch boxes, and on another table is a silver tray, on which her majesty deposits documents which she has dealt with, and when the tray is full it is carried off to Sir Henry Ponsonby, who arranges and packs the contents. Another table is covered with books, and close to it is the Queen's favorite easy-chair.—New Orleans Picayune.

THE PERFECT FUEL.

A Fuel That Burns Anywhere Without a Chimney or Flue.

Some of the bravest, most inventive minds of the day have long studied over the question of a cheap clean fuel. Now and then one would think he had succeeded in solving the question, but there has always been some point not considered that would doom it to failure.

But at last a process has been discovered, and the result is a perfect fuel which will burn anywhere, without reference to draught. This fuel is appropriately called carbonite, being almost pure carbon. It sends forth no gases, and is, therefore safe and wholesome. Physicans indorse it, as it is particularly adapted to the requirements of the sick-room, where an even temperature is necessary.

Almost every house has some room that it is impossible to heat, and the value of a small portable heater, which can be carried from room to room, cannot be over-estimated. For bath rooms, halls, and light housekeeping, too, the comfort of having a cheap, wholesome and pleasant fire for cooking and heating, will be greatly appreciated. Last, but not least, it is inexpensive, costing but one cent per hour.

She Took Them All Back.

They had quarrelled, and the high-spirited girl said, as she handed him a package: "There, Mr. Ferguson, are the presents you have given me. Now that all is over between us, sir, there should be no reminders of the foolish past."

"You are right, Miss Keezer," he said, humbly, "and I suppose I must return the gifts you have presented to me."

"I never gave you anything, sir, that I remember."

"Indeed you did."

"Sir, I——"

"Miss Keezer—Katie!" he exclaimed with something that sounded like a sob; "I value them beyond everything else in the world! It would break my heart to return them, but there is nothing else left for me to do."

"Will you kindly tell me, sir, what you are speaking of!"

"I am speaking, Katie, of the kisses you have given me! They are not mine now. It's my duty to restore them. Forgive me, darling, but I can not go away without——"

"Oh, George!"

When the clock struck eleven, about three hours later, George was still returning them.

Iceland Has a Milk-White Lake.

Herr Thorodden announces that he has found "a very long lake," stretching from the margin of the mighty glacier which forms the western side of the Vatna-Jokull, in Iceland. It is milk-white, from the glacier water of which it is composed, and has been named the Langisjor. The scenery around it is described as very beautiful, though the discoverer adds that "vegetation is quite absent." On the other side of the chain which terminates the lake in the south there is an extensive plateau, on which was seen the glitter of a large watercourse, probably the Skepta, and far to the south some great lava stream, dating, probably, from the 1783 eruption.

Washington, Special—It is said at the treasury department that every possible effort is being made to satisfy the steadily increasing demands from all parts of the country for $1 and $2 notes. The amount of these notes now in circulation is $65,673,000, being an increase of $4,000,000 during the last fiscal year. In addition to this amount there is also in circulation $61,672,455 standard silver dollars and $65,985,408 in fractional silver coin. Acting Treasurer Whelpley says the great demand for notes of small denomination indicates unusual business activity in anticipation of an increased trade during the coming holidays. The shipments of the currency have averaged $200,000 a day for some days past.

A Steamboat Line to Honolulu.

Seattle, Wash., Special—The steamer Cutch, Namipi, B. C., passed here last night, bound for Quartermaster's Harbor dry dock. Among the passengers on board were C. S. Cargill, one of the directors of the Union Steamship Company of New Zealand, and Capt. Webster, the British Columbia manager of the company. They go to Tacoma to arrange for the placing of two of the company's steamers on a route between that city, Seattle and Honolulu. The line will be run under the direction of the Puget Sound and Hawaiian Steamship company.

Notorious Desperado Killed.

Tahlequah, I. T., Special—Christie, the notorious outlaw, is dead. Late yesterday afternoon the officers resorted to dynamite and succeeded in blowing down part of the house and setting fire to the ruins. While the blaze was at its fiercest Christie was seen to emerge from under the floor and start to run, but was ordered to halt. He did not stop and was riddled with bullets.

On the road to health—the consumptive who reasons and thinks. Consumption is developed through the blood. It's a scrofulous affection of the lungs—a blood-taint. Find a perfect remedy for scrofula, in all its forms—something that purifies the blood, as well as claims to. That, if it's taken in time, will cure Consumption.

Dr. Pierce has found it. It's his "Golden Medical Discovery." As a strength-restorer, blood-cleanser, and flesh-builder, nothing like it is known to medical science. For every form of Scrofula, Bronchial, Throat, and Lung affections, Weak Lungs, Severe Coughs, and kindred ailments, it's the only remedy so sure that it can be guaranteed. If it doesn't benefit or cure, in every case, you have your money back.

"You get well, or you get $500." That's what is promised, in good faith, by the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, to sufferers from Catarrh. The worst cases, no matter of how long standing, are permanently cured by this Remedy.

Mrs. A. A. Williams
Lynn, Mass.

For the Good of Others

Rev. Mr. Williams Heartily Endorses Hood's Sarsaparilla.

We are pleased to present this from Rev. A. A. Williams, of the Sillsbee street Christian Church, Lynn, Mass.:

"I see no reason why a clergyman, more than a layman, who knows whereof he speaks, should hesitate to approve an Article of Merit and worth, from which he or his family have been signally benefited, and whose commendation may serve to extend those benefits to others by increasing their confidence. My wife has for many years been a sufferer from severe Nervous Headache for which she found little help. She has tried many things that promised well but performed little. Last fall a friend gave her a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla. It seems surprising what simply one bottle could and did do for her. The attacks of headache decreased in number and were less violent in their intensity, while her general health has been improved. Her appetite has also been better. From our experience with Hood's Sarsaparilla I have no hesitation in endorsing its merits."
A. A. WILLIAMS.

HOOD'S PILLS are the best family cathartic, gentle and effective. Try a box. Price 25c.

How to Furnish a 9-Room House FOR $251 85/100
Our little Pamphlet, "Facts and Figures," tells how to furnish a 9-room house handsomely for $251.85, and contains other information valuable to every housekeeper. Mailed FREE to any address. We sell everything necessary to clothe man, woman and child from head to foot—to furnish a home from Parlor to Kitchen—and many things besides. If you're too far away to come, send us this coupon:
CATALOG Every housekeeper in the Northwest, living out of the Twin Cities, should have one of our large Illustrated Catalogues. HOW TO GET ONE: Cut out and send this coupon with your name and address and you will receive a catalogue, FREE of charge, by return mail. Samples sent if you mention kinds, colors and about what price. Big mail order business; 2 acres selling space; 56 departments. Reliable Goods. Lowest Prices. Satisfaction Guaranteed. FREE
SCHUNEMAN & EVANS, ST. PAUL.

S.S.S. CURES SCROFULA
MRS. E. J. Rowell, Medford, Mass., says her mother has been cured of Scrofula by the use of four bottles of S.S.S. after having had much other treatment, and being reduced to quite a low condition of health, as it was thought she could not live.
S.S.S. Cured my little boy of hereditary scrofula which appeared all over his face. For a year I had given up all hope of his recovery, when finally I was induced to use S.S.S. A few bottles cured him, and no symptoms of the disease remain. INHERITED SCROFULA
MRS. T. L. MATHERS, Mathersville, Miss.
Our book on Blood and Skin Diseases mailed free.
SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., Atlanta, Ga.

Tutt's Tiny Pills act as kindly on the child, the delicate female or infirm old age as upon the vigorous man.
Tutt's Tiny Pills
give tone and strength to the weak stomach, bowels, kidneys and bladder.

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till cured. DR. J. STEPHENS, Lebanon, Ohio.

IMPORTED Percheron & Shire Stallions first class $800. 1, 2 & 3 years' time. Imported mares cheap. Hiram C. Wheeler, Odebolt, Sac Co., Iowa.

SHORTHAND Thoroughly taught by mail or personally. SITUATIONS PROCURED all pupils when competent. Send for catalogue. J. D. HESS, Pioneer Press Building, St. Paul, Minn.

CURES CATARRH LONDON BALM LONDON BALM CO. NEW YORK CURES CATARRH HAY FEVER PRICE 50c.
SOLD BY YOUR DRUGGIST.

MEN We will send you the MARVELOUS and UNFAILING French Preparation, CALTHOS FREE by MAIL, and a legally executed guarantee that CALTHOS will STOP Discharges and Emissions, CURE Varicocele, and RESTORE Lost Vigor.
Use it & pay if satisfied.
Von Mohl Co., Importers, Cincinnati, Ohio.

LEWIS' 98% LYE
Powdered and Perfumed (PATENTED)
The strongest and purest Lye made. Unlike other Lye, it being a fine powder and packed in a can with removable lid, the contents are always ready for use. Will make the best perfumed Hard Soap in 20 minutes without boiling. It is the best for cleansing waste pipes, disinfecting sinks, closets, washing bottles, paints, trees, etc.
PENNA. SALT M'F'G CO. Gen. Agts., Phila., Pa.

FREE MEDICAL TREATMENT.
In order to thoroughly and quickly introduce our London System of treatment and the Bio-Chemical Remedies, we will give FREE medical services until cured, to all sick persons who will send us this advertisement by mail. No charge for the OLD DOCTOR'S skilled professional services. No expense whatever to patients except for medicines actually taken. We expect you to recommend us to your friends after you are cured. Diseases of a chronic, scrofulous or private nature affecting the Eye, Ear, Nose, Throat, Lungs, Liver, Stomach, Skin and Generative Organs, Gout, La Grippe, Catarrh, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Spermatorrhoea, Seminal Weakness, Piles, Fistulas, Secret Diseases, etc., quickly, safely and permanently cured. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed. Cut this "ad" out and send it for free treatment to Dr. A. L. COLE, Room 21, 468 Nicollet Ave., Minneapolis, Minn., Medical Director of the London Medical and Surgical Clinic.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.
CATARRH
Sold by druggists or sent by mail, 50c. E. T. Hazeltine, Warren, Pa.

N. W. N. U. No. 46—1892.

Minn Hist. Society

St. Hilaire Spectator.

VOLUME XI. ST. HILAIRE, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1892. NUMBER 17.

THE NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

DIGEST OF THE NEWS FROM ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

All Important Occurrences of the Past Week, Boiled Down and Arranged for Rapid Reading.

Washington.

The department of agriculture estimates the corn crop at 1,600,000,000 bushels.

The new cruiser Cincinnati is launched at the Brooklyn navy yard.

The agricultural department of the United States government begins experimenting with hydrophobia.

By a decision of the general land office thirty-five settlers on the Mille Lacs lands lose their claims.

Democrats are talking of an extra session of congress, that the McKinley law may be immediately repealed.

Accidental Happenings.

Patrick Egan, a car repairer, was crushed between cars at Wichita, Kan.

An accident on the Milwaukee in Iowa results in the death of four persons.

Fire in Smith, Farrell & Co.'s store at St. Paul caused a loss of $40,000.

James Quinn was run down at Lima, O., by a Fort Wayne train, and ground to pieces.

Eliza Elliot, aged 14 years, deaf and dumb, was killed by a train at Jeffersonville, Ind.

The machine and pattern shop of the Atlas Iron Works, at San Francisco, were destroyed with a loss of $70,000.

The whaling bark Helen Mar is crushed in the ice in the Artic and thirty-five of her crew are crushed to death or drowned.

Conductor John Dougherty was killed in a collision between a passenger train and a gravel train on the Cincinnati & Jackson road, near Greenville, O.

The south-bound passenger train and the north-bound freight train collided near Pleasant Hill, Mo. Postal Clerk Joe Ellen, was slightly injured.

Arthur Deshet and Victor Bench, each aged 13 years, were playing highway robber at Pueblo, Col., when Arthur was shot in the temple and instantly killed by his playmate.

A freight train and a construction train collided in a tunnel on the Wabash road near St. Louis. Pat Carmody, a fireman, was killed and two other train employes were slightly injured.

James Whalen, a C. & N. W. Brakeman, was severely injured at Gary, S. D. While jumping to open a switch he fell under the train, one car passing over his body. His recovery is doubtful.

A train on the Mexican National Railroad ran into a rock that had fallen onto the track. The engineer and fireman and twenty passengers were injured. The accident occurred near Rinconada, Mex.

The trestle spanning a forty-foot ravine at Honey Brook, Pa., broke, precipitating to the bottom ten loaded cars and seven men. At noon the men were on their way to their dinner on a train, and while crossing the trestle the timbers gave way. Michael Karko was killed and seven others were injured.

Twenty-five buildings were destroyed by fire at Brooklyn, at the corner of Columbus Street and Tiffany Place. The heavier losers were: Walther & Co., $3,000,000; Hobbs & Co., $150,000; Sperry & Beales, $40,000; B. Wagner, $24,000; Milo Hines, $20,000.

Personal Mention.

Gen. Ferdinand Vandever, a veteran of the Mexican war and the war of the rebellion, died at Hamilton, O.

Gov. Buckely of Connecticut is said to be anxious to succeed Mr. Hawley in the United States senate.

Robert Hinton, the colored statesman, of Indianapolis, expired at Brazil, Ind., while making a Republican political address.

Private Iams who lost his criminal case at Pittsburg, will sue the officers who hung him by the thumbs for $10,000 damages each.

Alanson Sheley, one of the oldest, wealthiest and most respected citizens died at Detroit, aged 87 years. He was formerly in the wholesale drug business. He leaves an estate amounting to $3,000,000.

Pasteur, they say, is so deeply absorbed in his professional work that he forgot his wedding day, and had to be hunted up in a hospital by the bride's relatives on that festal occasion.

Whittier's homestead is now owned by a retired merchant of Haverhill, who is willing to sell it on condition that it shall be properly and permanently cared for as a memorial of the poet.

Amherst college has received an interesting relic, being the original subscription list used at the founding of the college, and is dated June 28, 1822. The signature of Daniel Webster is there for $10.

Among the Wicked.

Oscar Leap was murdered by a gang of negroes at Vevay, Ind., while returning from a political meeting.

Bert Tingley committed suicide at Jackson, Mich., by shooting. At the same time his wife took poison.

Charles Kingsley, a San Francisco bookmaker, was robbed of $5,300 in gold, which had been placed in his safe.

Ernest Kroeger committed suicide at San Francisco by shooting. He sat in front of a mirror to direct the course of the bullet.

The post-office at Hickory Valley, Tenn., was robbed of money, stamps and registered letters.

In a quarrel over politics at Caseyville, Ind., Mike Hanlon struck Ed. Kirkwood a blow on the head, causing instant death.

C. Delingez stabbed to death Jack Wilfong a prominent stockman, in a political quarrel at Catawba, N. C.

Incendiaries attempted to burn the hotel Columbia at Norway, Mich. The flames were extinguished before great damage resulted.

Yaqui Indians attacked the ranch of Alexander Lacy, in Sonora, Mex. Mrs. Lacy was wounded and two Indian servants were killed.

W. H. Main, a lunatic who escaped from the work-house at St. Joseph, Mo., set fire to several buildings before he was recaptured. All the fires were extinguished with small loss.

William Russell, was arrested for robbery at Martinsville, Ind. When taken into custody Russel had a marriage license which authorized his marriage to Miss Laura Hawkins, the wedding having been fixed for the next day.

From Other Shores.

Ex-Premier Mercier will sue Canadian officials for damages for causing his arrest.

The Gagul Indians in Mexico are preparing for war. About 200 Mexican renegades are with them.

Advices from Honolulu say that the cabinet was voted out after having been in power only two hours and a half.

Harper Bros. doubt the reported death of Theodore Child, the critic, at Teheren, Persia, of cholera. They received a letter from him under date of October 8.

Late dispatches from Dahomey bring the news that the Dahomeyans although repeatedly defeated are apparently determined to resist until the last.

Victor Raindl, legal adviser to the imperial family of Austria, has surrendered himself to the police, confessing the embezzlement of trust funds in his possession. His deficit amounts to about $165,000.

Advices from Chili say that war is imminent between Peru and the Argentine republic on one side and Chili on the other, the three countries are making active preparations.

Thirty-five or forty people were killed in the collapse of a mill at Oprau, Moravia, recently. The mill was flimsily built and the operation of heavy machinery on the second floor caused the accident. The police are looking for the builder, and will arrest him.

A republican demonstration took place in the streets of Lisbon after the departure of the king and queen to visit the queen regent of Spain. The offenders were arrested and remanded without bail. The spectators in court cheered for the prisoners.

According to Free Russia ships are being built on the Clyde for the Russian government, which are fitted out with iron cages in which it is designed to transport prisoners to Siberia by way of the Lena river and the Artic ocean.

Gov. Juan Abumada, the new executive of the state of Chihuahua, Mex., discovers that Gov. Enrique Rodriguez, his predecessor, pawned the revenues of the state to the amount of $110,000 and that he had also contracted a floating indebtedness of $110,000.

Henry Raymond, a well-known sporting man, was arrested on a railway train at Leige, Belgium, while in the act of stealing bonds valued at £4,000. He lived in high style in London, moving in the best sporting circles and enjoying the proceeds of many larcenies. He belongs to a clique of thieves well-known to Paris and New York detectives. He figures in Inspector Byrne's book on criminals as "Adam Worth."

Spurgeon's tabernacle was crowded the other day with persons anxious to hear the first sermon preached by the Rev. Dr. Pierson since his return. Dr. Pierson referred only indirectly to the division in the church. He said in this connection that he desired "lovingly to represent the whole church and not part of it," and he asked for the prayers of the whole congregation that his labors might be effective.

Labor.

A general strike of cotton mill operatives takes place in England, 55,000 being idle.

The St. Paul press feeders satisfactorily settle their differences with their employers

The strike of the labor unions composing the working Amalgamated council assumed alarming proportions at New Orleans, and the prospect now is that all the city industries, with possibly one or two exceptions, in which union labor is employed, will be at a standstill.

Railroad Circles.

General managers of Western roads meet in Chicago for the purpose of forming a new agreement.

Sporting Trifles.

New rules are observed by the Western turf congress.

Anna Bramble, the racing filly owned by J. W. Levy, died at West Side Park, Nashville. She was valued at $5,000.

Lord Melrose, the largest St. Bernard dog in the world, died at the Melrose, Mass., kennels of gastric colic. He was thirty-five inches high, and weighed 210 pounds.

Miscellaneous Itesm.

Typhoid fever is epidemic at Hillsboro, Ill.

Southern Illinois and Indiana was visited by a heavy fall of snow recently.

Virginia will have but half a peanut crop.

Small-pox is prevalent at Seattle and Tacoma, Wash.

Burges McLuckie, of Homestead has resigned his office.

Ex-Congressman A. M. Alexander died at Paris, Mo.

Work is to be resumed at the Carnegie mills at Beaver Falls, Pa.

The Boston Furniture Company has failed. Assets, $110,000; liabilities, $106,000.

Cruiser No. 6 is launched at San Francisco and named the Olympia.

Ground is broken at Atlanta, Ind., for the largest tin factory in the United States.

Private Iams loses his suit against Col. Streator and other military officers at Pittsburg.

Campaign excitement caused Joel Davidson, of Richmond, Ind., to become insane.

H. R. Ives, a foundry man of Montreal, has caused a meeting of creditors. He owes about $100,000.

J. W. Duryee, a New York lumber dealer, has assigned. Creditors will be paid in full.

The body of an unknown man was found in the sand bar in the Illinois river at Ottawa, Ill., recently.

A. & J. Levy, wholesale dealers in clothing at New York, failed for $170,000, with $130,000 liabilities.

J. H. Murphy, general agent of the United States Furniture Company, of Chicago was found dead in his room at Des Moines Ia.

Gen. Miles predicts that Cheyenne and Arapahoe Indians will go on the warpath unless promptly supplied with rations by the government.

The Pennsylvania supreme court has affirmed the judgment of the lower court, convicting Dennis Cloonan of Pittsburg, of murder in the first degree, for the murder of his wife

Fred, and E. P. A. Mollinger, heirs of the late Father Mollinger, say they are going to sell the relics owned by their uncle. The members of the church claim the property, as do the heirs, and the matter will probably be referred to the courts.

BY A REDUCED MAJORITY.

THE NORTH STAR STATE IS REPUBLICAN.

While Nelson's Vote Shows a Decided Decrease Over That Cast Four Years Ago, Republicans Gain in the Legislature.

One of Many.

St. Paul, Special Telegram, Nov. 10.—Chairman Jamison, of the Republican state central committee, is confident that the Republican party has elected Knute Nelson governor by a large plurality—about 20,000. There are indications that there has been a large falling off in the People's party vote, and the majority of the slumping vote has gone largely back to the Republican party. Chairman Jamison said last night that the returns were coming coming in slowly, but those which have been received have given the committee every reason to expect a handsome plurality for their candidate for governor. In the southeastern part of the state he has received a very large vote, and in the Alliance districts in the northwestern part of the state he has made a big cut into the Owen vote of two years ago. In Norman county two years ago Gov. Merriam received only 309 votes, and Owen 1,040; but Mr. Nelson goes out of Norman county this election with a plurality of 25. In Dodge county, in the southern part of the state, where Gov. Merriam had a plurality of 258 over the Owen vote two years ago, Knute Nelson, it is said, will receive a plurality of over 600 votes. The committee feels that a good majority of the congressmen are elected. O. M. Hall's election in the Third district is not conceded.

The Democratic state central committee does not claim Lawler's election, nor do they concede the electoral vote to Harrison.

"We have not given up the state," said Chairman Baker last evening, "and if Nelson is elected it will be by a very small vote. The returns are coming in slowly, and it is difficult to estimate the vote. I have observed that outside of Hennepin county Lawler has made a uniform gain. We think Hall, Harries and Baldwin are elected to congress; and Hennepin, I hear, is close, Lawrence claiming an election."

"I think Donnelly has succeeded in doing what he always does with every following he has ever had," said Secretary P. J. Smalley. "His followers are no sooner gathered than he scatters them. The returns indicate that his party has gone to pieces. Lawler has received a part and Nelson a portion. We must now wait for returns, and we have not given up Mr. Lawler. Our candidate is receiving gains in Southern Minnesota up to the big woods. I think we shall elect Baldwin, Hall and Lawrence, and Harries has a close fight in the First district."

All was dark about the People's party headquarters last night.

FIRST DISTRICT.

Fillmore County.

Chatfield, Minn, Secial, Nov. 10.—Three hundred and eighty-eight votes cast. Plurality electors: Carlson 4, Fox 2, Gray 3, Huntington 2, Jennings 4, Meighen 4, Stromberg 1, Calkin 6, Holloway 2. State, Lawler 4, Clough 1, Peter Nelson 8, Leicht 4, Netheway 4. Supreme court justice vote: Davidson 19, Buck 183, Canty 175, Mitchell 268, Dickinson 123 majority. Amendments, first 66 yes, second 90 no.

Preston, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—Tawney 151, Harries 118, Harsh 22, Vermillya 59, Langum 106, Woodbridge 153, Nelson 104, Smith 159, Gilmore 138, Hodland 141.

Spring Valley, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—Harrison 321, Cleveland-Weaver 148, Bidwell 47, Weaver 14, Nelson 280, Lawler 104, Donnelly 14, Dean 47.

Preston, Special, Nov. 10.—Fillmore township gives Nelson 49, Lawler 118, Donnelly 29, Dean 12. Carimona township gives Tawney 25, Harries 41, Harsh 5, Vermillya 67.

Lanesboro, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—Holt township results as follows: Harrison 89, Cleveland 34, Weaver 10; governor, Nelson 90, Lawler 33, Donnelly 5, Dean 11; congress, Tawney 90, Harries 34, Vermillya judge, Whytock 82, Wells 51; representatives, Republican, Nelson 89, Langum 89; People's, Woodbridge 34. Republicans carry the county ticket by a full party vote.

Rushford, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—Total vote 213; Harrison 131, Nelson 130, Bobleter 130, Cleveland fusion 51, Lawler 51, Dean 18, Donnelly 1; first amendment, yes 92, no 52; second amendment, yes 30, no 89. Democratic vote is five below 1890.

Rushford, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—Five adjoining towns in an estimate of 1,365 votes give the Republicans 925, People's 260 and Democrats 180.

Lanesboro, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—The vote for Lanesboro and Carrollton township is as follows: Harrison 182, Cleveland 97, Weaver 13, Knute Nelson 178, Lawler 103, Donnelly 13. Congressman, Tawney 178, Harries 103, Vermillya 16. Judge of the Tenth district, Whytock 150, Wells 121. Legislative ticket, Republicans, Nelson 180, Wooldridge 170, Langum 172; People's, Hadland 105, Gillmore 90, Smith 100. The Republican county ticket received the full party vote.

Preston, Min., Special, Nov. 10.—Eleven polling precincts show: Tawney 1,107, Harries 575, Vermillya 239. Six precincts: Nelson 532, Lawler 302, Donnelly 147. Fillmore county has surely elected a Republican ticket from top to bottom.

Spring Valley, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—The townships of Jordan, Sumner and York give Harrison 314; Cleveland, 95; Bidwell, 34; Nelson, 298; Lawler, 87; Donnelly, 69.

Wabasha County.

Wabasha, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—Reports on head of ticket very meager. The probabilities are that Lawler and Harries will carry the county by about 250 majority. The local ticket is badly scratched. The Democrats elect O'Laughlin auditor, McGovern county attorney, Keating superintendent of schools, Aeimerskirch sheriff. The Republicans elect Kennedy judge of probate, Cook register of deeds, Guerre treasurer. French, Democrat, and Greer, Republican, are elected to the legislature.

Houston County.

La Crescent, Minn., Special, Nov 10.—The vote was as follows: Presidential, Harrison 82, Cleveland 63, Prohibition 2, Fusion 74, People's 16; congressional, Tawney 78, Harries, 71, Hard 3, Vermillya 20; for governor, Nelson 60, Lawler 62, Donnelly 30, Dean 4.

Houston, Special, Nov. 10.—Yucatan: Cleveland 41, Harrison 107, Weaver 48, Bidwell 8, Nelson 108, Lawler 38, Donnelly 3, Dean 5, Tawney 105, Harries 43, Vermillia 3, Hohl 168, Busee 54, Weom 2.

Waseca County.

Waseca, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—Returns are coming in slowly. Complete returns from twelve voting precincts and remaining districts estimated, give Harrison electors 954, Cleveland straight 1,030 and fusion electors 920. For governor, Lawler 988, Nelson 888, Donnelly 140, Dean 112, Tawney, congress, 981, Harries 1,031, Vermillya 146. District estimated to be Democratic and was carried by the Democrats in 1890. Buck (Rep.), for representative, receives 1,186 votes, Jordan (Dem.) 1,174. The local ticket is almost equally divided between Democrats and Republicans.

Freeborn County.

Albert Lea, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—Thirteen precints in Freeborn county, including two wards of this city, give Knute Nelson 843, Lawler 337, Donnelly 150, Dean 45. Nelson's plurality in the county will be nearly 1,000. Eight precincts give Harrison 500, six precincts give Cleveland 182, four give Weaver and Fusion 111, sixteen precincts give Tawney 1,800, same precincts give Harries 585, Harsh 112, Vermillye 177. Tawney will have about 1,200 plurality in the county. On the legislative ticket one Republican has 990. The other 1,161, while the Fusion candidates have 780 and 647 respectively. This is part of the county and both Republicans will be elected by good majorities. The Fusion electors and the rest of the state ticket cannot be had until the official count, which will be taken to-morrow. Judge Whitock of this city carries every county in the district for judge.

Steele County.

Blooming Prairie, Minn., Nov. 10.—Ja-cobson (Rep.) 453, Bentley (Rep.) 448, Claggett (Dem.) 400.

Pipestone County.

Pipestone, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—Harrison 462, Cleveland 1,073, Bidwell 23, Fusion 320, Lawler 225, Nelson 412, Donnelly 262, Hammond 100, McCleary 300, Long 102, Brunson 28. McCleary's gain in the county is 200 over Lind's vote of 1890. The county ticket elected as follows: Auditor, C. Cunningham, People's; G. H. Gurlay, Republican, city marshal; sheriff, Ed Sheppard. For county superintendent and register it will take the official vote to decide, but the People's party candidate is probably elected.

Yellow Medicine County.

Granite Falls, Special, Nov. 10.—The returns received from twenty-one precincts in Yellow Medicine county estimate of whole county gives Republican electors 831 votes, straight Democratic electors 823, straight Populist electors 340, fusion electors 618, Nelson 840, Lawler 290, Donnelly 441, Dean 102. For congress, McCleary 836, Long 455, Hammond 230. This county gives Ole Lende, Republican, a majority for representative. Of the county officers Republicans elect all but attorney and register of deeds. Two precincts to be heard from.

THIRD DISTRICT.

Carver County.

Young America, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—Returns from Young America town: Harrison 65, Cleveland 172, fusion electors 161, People's 10, Prohibition, 1 to 9; governor, Nelson 63, Lawler 178, Donnelly 10, Dean 7. Balance of state ticket about same. Judges, fusion 156, Republican 40; congress, Heatwole 60, Hall 180; legislature, Muehlberg 98, Boyle 163.

Rice County.

Faribault, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—Returns from Rice county give majorities as follows: Harrison 450, Nelson 400, Heatwole 400. The Republicans elect three representatives and the entire county ticket, with the exception of clerk of the court and county attorney. Four precincts have not been heard from, which, however, will not change the above figures.

Le Sueur County.

Le Sueur, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—Total vote for town, 420. Harrison 201, Weaver 8, Nelson 150, Donnelly 6, Cleveland 130, Bidwell 50, Lawler 150, Dean 43; representatives, Lloyd (Rep.) 212, Krenik (Rep.) 154, Salls (Dem.) 134, Wacek (Dem.) 117, congressman, Heatwole 103, Hall 144.

Renville County.

Bird Island, Min., Special, Nov. 10.—Harrison 98, Cleveland straight 150, fusion electors 140, Weaver 18, Nelson 92, Lawler 130, Donnelly 28. Brookfield: Harrison 16, Cleveland 3, Weaver 35; state ticket the same. Kingman: Harrison 12, Cleveland 16, Weaver 15; state ticket the same.

Dakota County.

Hastings, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—Hastings gives Harrison 367, Cleveland 367, Weaver 31, Bidwell 36. Governor—Nelson 271, Lawler 310, Donnelly 181, Dean 24. Aside from Hastings the returns from nine precincts in Dakota county give Harrison 253, Cleveland 643, Weaver 87, Bidwell 104. There are seventeen more precincts to hear from. Aside from Hastings the vote on governor from twelve precincts give Nelson 225, Lawler 314, Donnelly 188, Dean 56, with fifteen precincts to hear from. Vote on member of congress—Hastings: Heatwole 422, Hall 318, Borchert 14, W. B. Reed 88. Aside from Hastings the vote of eleven precincts give Heatwole 270, Hall 380, Borchert 53, W. B. Reed 77, with sixteen precincts to hear from.

Scott County.

Shakopee, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—Complete returns from seventeen of the nineteen precincts in Scott county give Cleveland 1,538, Harrison 594, Weaver 40, fusion 1,432, Nelson 489, Donnelly 105, Dean 33; congress, Hall 1,515, Heatwole 571, Borchert 46, Reed 31. The two precincts to hear from cast 690 votes. Probable plurality for Cleveland 1,250, fusion 1,100, Hall 1,250, Lawler 1,300. F. J. Leonard, Democrat, is elected representative.

Meeker County.

Litchfield, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—Estimates give Harrison electors a plurality of 300, Nelson 100 and Heatwole 200. Republicans elect Doroner (Rep.) to the legislature; Bigelow, auditor; Holm, register of deeds; Marsh, county attorney; Col. Bissell, coroner; Taylor, county surveyor. Democrats elect Maher, sheriff; Dart, county treasurer; Forder, judge of probate; Winnings (Dem. and Peop.) county superintendent.

Sibley County.

Henderson, Min., Special, Nov. 10.—The returns are not all in, but the Democratic congressman has a majority. The Democratic representative also has a good majority. Cleveland and Lawler carry the county.

FOURTH DISTRICT.

Chisago County.

Center City, Min., Special, Nov. 10.—Returns from 14 precincts out of 15 in Chisago county give Harrison electors 1,893 votes, Cleveland 270, Fusion 275, Weaver 92, Bidwell 49. Knute Nelson 126, Lawler 278, Donnelly 70, Dean 88, Kiefer 1,333, Castle 264. Anderson, Republican candidate to legislature, has 1,000 majority in these 14 precincts.

SIXTH DISTRICT.

St. Louis County.

Duluth, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—Returns are coming in very slowly. All will not be counted until to-morrow morning. The vote, so far as can be judged from the returns, has fallen off greatly from the registration. In the city of Duluth about 72 per cent was cast. In Ely it fell off at least one-third from the registration and about the same for the rest of the iron ranges. All the Democrats voted, but the Republicans remained at home. Returns from thirteen precincts in St. Louis county show 773 for Harrison, 436 for Cleveland, 248 for Weaver, 127 for Bidwell and 315 for fusion electors. The same precincts give Nelson 1,163, Lawler 635, Donnelly 238, Dean 70. The districts are not the same as in 1888 or 1890 and cannot be compared. The Republican vote fell off greatly, however, on the iron ranges. Twelve precincts give Searle 850, Baldwin 774 and Parsons 174. The indications are that Searle will go out of this county slightly ahead of Baldwin and that Nelson will carry it by about 1,500 to 2,000. The legislature will be close, but safe for the Republicans. One or two county officials will be defeated.

SEVENTH DISTRICT.

Marshall County.

Warren, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—Returns from seven precincts give the Republican electors 162, straight Democratic electors 113, fusion 226, Nelson 165, Lawler 92, Donnelly 204, Dean 17. For congress Feig gets 220, Boen 182, Kelso 113, Hampson 25. For representative: Wagoner 330, Democrat and Populist; Westerson 246, Republican. For judge of the district court: Mills 354, Ives 196. The returns are coming in slowly. Many errors were made in voting. Donnelly will carry the county with a good majority and will run 200 or 300 votes ahead of Lawler.

Otter Tail County.

Fergus Falls, Minn., Special, Nov. 9.—Otter Tail county will give the fusion electors a small plurality. The county will give Nelson 800 plurality, while Feig for congress will have 500 plurality. Clough will lead Hawkins by about 600, and the rest of the state ticket is up with Clough. The total vote is less than was expected, and will be about as follows: Nelson 2,200, Donnelly 1,400, Lawler 1,200, Dean 400. Vanderburgh and Canty will get about the same vote. The People's party elects the county ticket entire. The legislative ticket is in doubt. More than half the vote is in and the Republicans are but 200 behind, and it is believed that there are irregularities which will when corrected elect two of them. Last year the People's party had 2,000 majority on the legislative ticket.

Pope County.

Glenwood, Minn., Special, Nov. 9.—Glenwood village gives Harrison 120, Cleveland 75, Weaver 16, fusion electors 64.

Norman County.

Ada, Minn., Special, Nov. 9.—Ada gives Nelson 100, Lawler 85, Donnelly 21, Dean 12. The whole number of votes cast is 134. Harrison 72, Nelson 71.

Owatonna, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—Figures on the state and national ticket not yet obtained, but are about even on national. Tawney has thirteen plurality. Lawler about the same. The Republicans elect Martin treasurer, Barnard sheriff, Sloan register of deeds, Chadwick judge of probate, Sawyer county attorney, Mitchell county surveyor and Adair coroner. The Democrats elect Virtue representative, Leick auditor and Williams county superintendent of schools.

SECOND DISTRICT.

Cottonwood County.

Windom, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—The county is all heard from but three precincts. Harrison 630, Cleveland 152, Weaver 268, fusion 242, Bidwell 78, Nelson 547, Donnelly 894, Dean 67, McCleary 634, Long 333, Hammond 133. This county gives Paulson (Rep.) for the house 210 majority, and the three towns to hear from cannot materially change the result, though probably they will raise that figure. The Republicans elect every county officer.

Brown County.

Springfield, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—Democrats carry Springfield by a majority of seventeen votes. The vote on the state ticket is as follows: Donnelly 17, Lawler 77, Dean 6, Nelson 60. National ticket: Harrison 65, Cleveland 81, Weaver 41.

Sleepy Eye, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—This village gives McCleary, Republican candidate for congress, and all county candidates except the judge of probate and attorney Republican majorities ranging from 8 to 103.

Lincoln County.

Tyler, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—Count of Hope township just completed this morning. Harrison 47, Cleveland 52, Weaver 82, Bidwell 14, Nelson 47, Lawler 52, Donnelly 41, Dean 13; for congress, McCleary 50, Hammond 52, Bronson 10; representative, Lende (Rep) 44, Tyler (Rep.) 51, Wilson and Gibbs (Dem.) 84 and 75.

Lake Benton, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—Partial returns from four precincts give the Republican electors 131, Democratic 165, Donnelly 70, Lawler 90, Dean 32, Nelson 122.

Watonwan County.

Madella, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—The count on the electoral and state ticket was completed at 10:30 a. m., Republicans getting 100, Democrats 90, Prohibitionist 34, People's 0, blank 15; for governor, Nelson 191, Lawler 90, Dean 31, Donnelly 8; amendment No 1, yes 75, no 70; amendment No. 2, yes 75, no 70. The county ticket is only two-thirds counted. So far McCleary has 116, Hammond 107.

St. James, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—Vote in St. James: Donnelly 13, Lawler 98, Dean 16, Nelson 203; Nelson 9, Clough 154; Canty 71, Vanderburgh 139.

St. James township: Donnelly 13, Lawler 98, Dean 16, Nelson 203; Nelson 9, Clough 184; Canty 71, Vanderburgh 139.

Faribault County.

Wells, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—The count complete gives Harrison 200, Bidwell 25, Cleveland 140, Nelson 169, Lawler 146, Donnelly 4, Dean 25, Brown and balance of state ticket have 182.

Blue Earth City, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—Eighteen towns out of twenty in Faribault county give Nelson 1,526, Lawler 602. The majority for Republican electors in the county estimated at 800.

Winnebago City, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—This town gives Harrison 237, Cleveland 60, Bidwell 48, Weaver 8. For governor, Nelson 194, Lawler 64, Dean 53, Donnelly 15. For lieutenant governor, Clough 204. For secretary of state, Brown 215. Attorney general, Childs 213. For judges, Mitchell 221, Dickinson 200, Vanderburgh 183, Canty 47, Buck 64, Davidson 13. For congress, McCleary 232, Hammond 65, Long 15. Representative; Abbott (Rep.) 201, Shultis (Dem.) 73.

Nobles County.

Worthington, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—Returns are coming in very slowly. This county stands as follows, with one district to hear from: Knute Nelson 787, Donnelly 370, Lawler 560. The full returns will be sent just as soon as obtained. The village polled a large vote.

Nicollet County.

St. Peter, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—Returns received from all precincts in Nicollet county. Estimates of whole county gives the Republican electors 1,065; straight Democratic electors, 971; straight Populist electors, 131; fusion electors, 1,027; Nelson 1,022; Lawler 1,001; Donnelly 100, Dean 80; for congress, McCleary 1,080, Hammond 965, Long 144. This county gives Diepolder, Republican, 355 majority for representative to legislature. Of the county officers the Republicans elect all but recorder, surveyor and two commissioners, which were elected by the Democrats.

Martin County.

Fairmont, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—14 precincts, including Fairmont and Sherburn, give Harrison 907, Cleveland 480, fusion 442, Prohibition 96, Weaver 53, Nelson 838, Lawler 479, Donnelly 103, Dean 90. Congress, McCleary 1,001, Hammond 506, Long 86, Bronson 107. Hopkins, Republican, for representative, has about 500 plurality over Cooley, Democrat. Other towns yet to hear from will not materially effect the result in the county. The Republicans elect the county ticket except the judge of probate.

Redwood County.

Redwood Falls, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—Returns are coming in slowly, but Redwood county will come out with a handsome Republican plurality. Prof. McCleary received a good vote and is undoubtedly elected to congress. O. B. Turrell came out with 380 majority for representative, and present indications point to the election of the entire county ticket.

Lyon County.

Marshall, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—Harrison 218, Bidwell 32, Cleveland 104, Weaver 14, fusion 85, Donnelly 200, Lawler 135, Dean, 10, Nelson 187. Four other precincts give Republican 144, Democrat 87, Prohibition 24, People's 35.

Marshall, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—Nineteen precincts in Lyon county out of twenty-four give Harrison 860, Bidwell 172, Cleveland 415, Weaver 226, fusion 475; Donnelly 256, Lawler 440, Nelson 860; Long 271, McCleary 677, Hammond 298; for the legislature, Tyler 563, Linde 458, Gibbs 529, Wilson 448. The remaining five precincts will probably give 100 Republican majority.

Rock County.

Luverne, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—Twelve precincts give Republican electors 811, Democratic 340, fusion 337, Donnelly 281, Lawler 202, Dean 62, Nelson 708; congress, Democratic 311, Republican 832, Populist 205. The Republicans elected the entire county ticket except superintendent of schools.

Murray County.

Slayton, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—Ten towns in Murray county give McCleary 347, Hammond 324, Long 251. Fourteen townships give the following vote for representatives: Gilden 632, Maxwell 632, Holman 619, Lockwood 421, Shell 388, McGilvary 500. Slayton gives Nelson 101, Lawler 63, Donnelly 18, Dean 10, Harrison 110.

Currie, Minn., Special, Nov. 10—The township of Shetek gives Harrison 20 majority, Lawler 10 majority.

Jackson County.

Jackson, Minn., Special Nov. 10.—Des Moines township, Cleveland 40, Harrison 33, Weaver 50, Bidwell 4, Lawler 42, Nelson 32, Donnelly 15, Dean 2.

Heron Lake, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—In this precinct McCleary (Rep.) received 180 votes for congress and Hammond (Dem.) 62.

Jackson, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—In fifteen precincts Nelson received 771 votes, Lawler 611, Hammond 600, McCleary 725, Meyckel (fusion) 175, Paulson (Rep.) 770. Donnelly received less than 100 votes in the county.

Chippewa County.

Milan, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—With few exceptions the Republican ticket is victorious. Nelson leads by a large plurality. This is a Populist stronghold.

Monticello, Minn., Special, Nov. 10.—Ten precincts give Harrison 468, Cleveland 328, Weaver 100, Nelson 513, Lawler 327, Donnelly 103, McCleary 513, Hammond 331. For the legislature Young (Rep.) 420, Ja-

HANGED THIS MORNING

THE TRAP IS SPRUNG AT 9 O'CLOCK.

Neill, the American Doctor Who Poisoned Several Girls, Expiates His Crime on the Gallows in Newgate Prison This Morning.

Jerked Into Eternity.

London, Nov. 15, 9 a. m.—Promptly at 9 a. m. the black flag was hoisted over Newgate prison, indicating that Neill had been executed.

Neill's Last Night.

London, Nov. 15.—All the preparations for the execution to-morrow morning of Thomas Neill, otherwise Cream, are completed. The execution will be strictly private, the only persons who will be present being Kynaston Metcalf, under sheriff of the county of London, the executioner and the prison officials. Since Neill was sentenced the closest watch has been kept upon him at Newgate prison. The wardens will not permit access to the prisoner beyond the corridor which leads to the condemned man's cell. Through this corridor Neill will pass alive to-morrow to be brought back a corpse soon afterward. The wardens vouchsafed only the information that Neill, though ill, had recurred to writing throughout the day, frequently leaving off, being obliged to rest. He is silent, irritable and moody. The wardens hail their early relief from the responsibility of their charge. Their vigil has been one of anxiety and they are haunted with the suspicion that this adept in the use of poison has some unknown resources which he can effectively use at the last moment to cheat the avenger of justice.

Billington, the hangman, saw Neill today through an inspection wicket taking note of his height and build while the convict paced to and fro in his cell. Usually the hangman has an interview with the condemned, making the closest possible survey of his physique and taking an eye measurement of the strength of the neck and gauging the weight of his body. This appears to have been spared Neill. The hangman will not appear at the cell until nearly 9 o'clock. Billington performs the work of pinioning in five minutes.

From the Cell to the Scaffold along the flagged corridor, is a minute's walk. The scaffold, which has a movable gibbet, is erected in the court yard within an enclosure making it invisible from any point on surrounding buildings. The drop will be made promptly at 9 o'clock and at the same instant a black flag will be hoisted on the prison flagstaff to make known to the outside world that justice has been satisfied. The formal inquest will take place at noon, and will be followed immediately by the burial. The body will be encased in a coffin filled with quicklime and placed under the flagstones in the corridor over which the doomed man treads on his way to the scaffold. This is perhaps the ghastliest spot in the world. Under the flagging of this corridor have been buried the bodies of a long succession of notable and obscure criminals. Initials, or numbers cut in the walls, indicate the more recent sepultures. Earlier inscriptions have been defaced by the time and the grime.

Neill had two interviews to-day with his solicitor, Mr. Waters. In the first he gave instructions for the drawing up of his will. Mr. Waters called again tonight with the document for Neill's signature. Neill made no confession, but Mr. Waters urged him to give heed to the ministrations of the chaplain during the short time remaining to him, and advised him if he desired to unburden his mind to do so to the chaplain. It was only when Mr. Waters finished exhorting him that Neill seemed to fully realize his position. He broke down completely and expressed his indebtedness to the solicitor, and admitted that the lawyer had spared no effort to save his life. The scene at parting was painful.

Artists Disrupted.

Berlin, Nov. 15.—A divergence of opinion regarding the exhibition of the works of the Swedish painter, Munch, has caused the disruption of the Berlin society of artists. A number of members of the society had denounced Munch's paintings as worthless as works of art; declared that the exhibition should never have been opened, and insisted upon its being closed forthwith. Other members were equally persistent in upholding the merit of the Swedish painter's productions, and would not listen to any proposal to close the exhibition before the date originally named. Matters became serious and a special meeting was called yesterday to decide whether the show should continue or not. Prof. Eschke, the president, occupied the chair. After warm and somewhat personal speeches had been made by both the friends and opponents of Herr Munch, a vote was taken and it was decided—120 to 105—to close the exhibition. A scene of excitement followed and the action of the majority was vehemently denounced by the admirers of the Swede's work. Finally Herr Koepping arose, and, followed by seventy prominent young artists, left the hall. As a result of the trouble over Munch's exhibition it has been resolved to found a new society.

Imperial Federation.

London, Nov. 15.—The special committee appointed by the council of the Imperial Federation league to consider definite proposals for a federation of the self-governing bodies of the British empire has presented an exhaustive and very important report. The committee suggests the formation of an imperial council which should consist, the committee urges, of members appointed by each of the self-governing colonies, together with the British prime minister, the secretaries of state, foreign affairs, war, the colonies and India, the first lord of the admiralty, and the chancellor of the exchequer. The method of retiring funds at the outset should be left to the choice of the self-governing states, but a uniform principle might afterward be found and substituted. The committee proposes that an imperial conference be summoned to consider the question, the conference, if it is deemed necessary, to be preceded by a royal commission. The committee closes its report with a strong appeal to the ministry to take action in this direction.

Marlborough's Funeral.

London, Nov. 15.—The funeral of the duke of Marlborough took place to-day at Blenheim palace, the Marlborough seat at Woodstock, Oxfordshire. Among those present were Lord Randolph Churchill, the duke's brother, the marquis of Londonderry, Lord Wimborne, Viscount Curzon, the duke's brother-in-law, Lord De Ramsey, the duke of Abercorn and other members of the nobility. The duke's son and heir was the chief mourner. The duchess was present in the balcony of the chapel throughout the service.

Army of the Tennessee.

St. Louis, Nov. 15.—The arrangements were nearly completed to-night for the twenty-fourth annual reunion of the Society of the Army of the Tennessee, which will be held at the Lindell hotel on Wednesday and Thursday. The programme of entertainment will provide for a round of pleasures for the soldier guests, to conclude with an elaborate banquet on Thursday night. The delegates will begin to arrive to-morrow, and among the number it is hoped to have Secretary of War Stephen B. Elkins of West Virginia, Secretary of the Interior John W. Noble of Missouri, Secretary of Agriculture Jeremiah Rusk of Wisconsin. The oration is to be delivered by Maj. Gen. John M. Schofield of New York.

THE LATEST RETURNS

Regarding the Electoral College.

New York, Special Telegram, Nov. 11.—Further returns increase Cleveland's majority in the electoral college and decrease Harrison's vote. California has joined the Democratic column, which with West Virginia makes Cleveland 277. Idaho and North Dakota are taken from Harrison and placed in the doubtful column, while Wyoming and Nebraska are taken from the doubtful column and given to Harrison, making his total vote 122. The vote is as follows:

Democratic.
Alabama	11
Arkansas	8
Delaware	3
Connecticut	6
California	9
Florida	4
Georgia	13
Illinois	24
Indiana	15
Kentucky	13
Louisiana	8
Maryland	8
Mississippi	9
Michigan	6
Missouri	17
New York	36
New Jersey	10
North Carolina	11
South Carolina	9
Tennessee	12
Texas	15
Virginia	12
Wisconsin	12
West Virginia	6
Total	277
Republican.
Iowa	13
Maine	6
Massachusetts	15
Michigan	8
Minnesota	9
Nebraska	8
South Dakota	4
New Hampshire	4
Montana	3
Washington	4
Pennsylvania	32
Rhode Island	4
Vermont	4
Oregon	4
Wyoming	3
Total	122
For Weaver.
Nevada	3
Colorado	4
Kansas	12
Total	19
Doubtful.
Idaho	3
Ohio	23
North Dakota	3
Total	29

Contract Labor.

New York, Nov. 11.—The Ellis Island officials to-day made an important detection of a crowd of contract laborers who were coming to this country to take the places of strikers at Pittsburg. Several days ago Contract Labor Inspector R. D. Layden of Pittsburg telegraphed to the contract labor bureau that half a dozen Belgian glass blowers had left Antwerp Oct. 29 for this port, under contract to work at a glass-blowing establishment at Pittsburg. The men had been engaged to take the places of strikers and work for less pay. The steamship Friesland arrived from Antwerp Wednesday, and it was reported that there were no steerage passengers on board the vessel. The labor inspectors found Francis Videl, a former foreman in the Pittsburg gas works, with the five contract workmen in the second cabin. Afterwards labor inspectors discovered twenty four more glass blowers under contract among the second cabin passengers on the Friesland. To-day the men were taken to Ellis Island and accused of coming here in violation of the alien contract laws. They were placed in detention. The capture of the thirty glass blowers is considered the most important that has been made in a long time. If a good case is made out against the owner of the glass blowing factory he will be tried.

Thought to Be Murder.

St. Paul, Special Telegram, Nov. 11.—The police have their hands full just now unraveling the mystery surrounding the death of William J. Dunneback, the well known proprietor of a restaurant at 181 1-2 East Third street, who died at the city hospital Wednesday evening. The police claim to have strong evidence that a murder has been committed under circumstances so extraordinary as to stamp it one of the most remarkable crimes ever committed in St. Paul.

Alice Ballard and Charles Bazille are locked up at the county jail on the charge of murdering William J. Dunneback on the night of Nov. 1, 1892. It is alleged that they enticed the murdered man to the rooms of Mrs. Ballard, in the Habighorst block, and after kicking and beating him to insensibility, threw him down the stairs into the street, where he was found by a friend and taken to the rooms over the restaurant which Dunneback conducted at 181 1-2 East Third street. The woman then secured a place in the bedroom of the injured man, and it is alleged that under the pretense of nursing him she made his condition worse by removing the bandages which had been placed on him and preventing the healing of the wounds and fractures, which eventually caused his death Wednesday evening at 11 o'clock.

Four Burned Alive.

Ottumwa, Iowa, Nov. 11.—A fearful catastrophe occurred on the Milwaukee road last night at Highland Center, a small station north of this city. A fast freight train dashed into the caboose of a local freight train standing on the track, telescoping the caboose and four cars. The caboose caught fire and the scene was heartrending. Four people were burned alive and a number of others had narrow escapes. The most pitiful case was that of Miss Lizzie Butler of this city, who had her head out of the window and pleaded with those about to save her, but it was impossible. Mrs. Jones, also of this city, tried to escape through a window, but she was an unusually large woman and could not succeed. The other victims were an unknown woman and an unknown man. The latter is thought to be a butcher at Oskaloosa. The injured are Mrs. Clyde Millsack and Mrs. Pickett of this city and Miss Lizzie Corry of Sigourney. They were badly burned but not fatally. A curious incident was that one of the passengers was disguised and when the crash came the disguise came off, revealing a noted crook. He quickly disappeared in the excitement.

The accident was caused by the local freight train being behind time. The fast freight was due at the switch south of Highland Center to meet a passenger train. Engineer Richardson says he saw no lights on the caboose, but testimony before the coroner's jury states that the lights were out. None of the injured will die.

Assets Sold.

Dubuque, Iowa, Special, Nov. 11.—The remaining assets of the Commercial National bank, $300,000 in judgments, were sold at auction to-day by Receiver Welles and were bought for $10,472 by the Messrs. Stout, the lumbermen, who had previously bought all claims against the bank at 70 to 77½ cents, they being the only solvent directors and stockholders left. A judgment for $20,000 against the Church-Graves company, Minneapolis, went for $70 and one of $7,000 against the Matt Clark Transportation company, Minneapolis, for $50.

Married at Le Sueur.

Le Sueur, Minn., Special, Nov. 11.—Miss Agnes Smith, daughter of H. C. Smith of Le Sueur, was united in marriage to Scott McDonald of Vancouver, B. C., on Tuesday evening. They left on the night train for Denver, and will go from there to their future home at Vancouver.

Advocate General Appointed.

Milwaukee, Nov. 11.—Commander-in-chief Weissert, of the Grand Army of the Republic, authorizes the statement that Corporal James Tanner of Brooklyn, N. Y., has been appointed judge advocate general of the organization, and the appointment will be officially announced in forthcoming orders. This completes the personal staff of the commander-in-chief.

GREAT NORTHERN

TIME CARD.

NO. 3 Daily		NO. Daily
*40 p m Lv	St. Paul Ar	6 55 am
*8 10 " 11	Minneapolis	6 25 am
06 a m 218	Barnesville	10 25 pm
10 45 am 279 Lv	Crookston Ar	4 00 pm
*11 15 " 291	Shirley	3 30 " *
*x11 45 " 301	Ives	x3 00 " *
x12 20 pm	Wylie	x2 20 " *
*12 45 " 321 Ar	St. Hilaire Lv	2 00 " *

*Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

S. S. Buzza Agt.

Dr. H. GRUNDY.

Physician & Surgeon.

Graduate of the University of Toronto Canada and member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario.

Messages from the surrounding country attended to,

Office in Drug Store

THIEF RIVER FALLS,

NORTHERN PACIFIC

THE

GREAT TRAMSCONENTAL ROUTE.

Passes through Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, Manitoca, Montana, Idaho, Oregon and Washington.

THE DINING CAR LINE

Dining cars are run between Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Oinnipeg, Helena, Butte, Tacoma, Seattle and Portland.

PULLMAN SLEEPING CAR-ROUTE.

Pullman service between Chicago St. Paul Montana and the Pacific Northwest; and between St. Paul, Minneapolis and Minnesota North Dakota and Manitoba points.

THE POPULAR LINE.

Early Express Trains carry elegant Pullman sleeping Cars, Dining cars, Day Coaches, Pullman Tourist Sleepers and Free Colonist Sleeping Cars.

YELLOWSTONE PARK ROUTE.

The Northern Pacific R. R. is the rail line to Yellowstone Park; the popuirr line to California and Alaska; and its trains pass through the grandest scenery of seven states

THROUGH TICKETS Are sold at all coupon offices of the Northern Pacific Railroad to points North, East, South and West in the United States and Canada

TIME SCEDULE,

	Leave Crookston Daily	Arrive Crookston Daily
For Staples, Minneapolis, St. Paul Duluth Ashland and points East and South	7:05 p. m.	8:20 a m.
For Grand Forks Grafton Drayton, Winnipeg and points in North Dakota and Manitoba	8:27 a. m.	7:10 p. m.

For Rates, Maps, Time Tables or special information, apply to Agent Northern Pacific R. R. at Crookston Minn., or

CHAS. S. FEE,
Gen. Pass. Agent
St. Paul Minn.

ST. HILAIRE MEAT MARKET.

All kinds of fresh and salt meat always on hand.

I make a specialty of buying and selling cattle of all kinds.

If you want to buy or sell anything in that line it will pay you to give me a call.

JAMES DAINARD.

FRED Eikhof

DEALER IN CHOICE

WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS.

Beer always on tap.

Pool Room in Connection.

Broadway St. Hilaire.

FRANK IVES,

Attorney and Counselor AT LAW,

CROOKSTON and ST. HILAIRE, Minn.

Will Practice in All The Courts, OF THE STATE and and before the U. S. Land Office at Crookston and at Washington.

Will give special attention to contests of claims.

BREVITIES.

Wheat is 60 cents.

Skating is said to be excellent on the river.

Fresh Oysters at W. A. Arthurs, try them.

Contractor Brenion was in town today on business.

Peter Hall made a business trip to Crookston last week.

C. G. Rapp and wife were at Thief River Falls yesterday.

If you want some nice fresh oysters call on W. A. Arthur.

C. G. Rapp is having an addition built on his office in the rear of the store.

The election is over and the result known and now business can resume.

All good Democrats have already commenced to figure on their reward.

Dr. Grundy, of Thief River Falls, was in town on professional business to-day

---

James Dainard and Miss Carrie Stranahan were at Thief River Falls to-day.

George Ossman is in town this week buying the usual amount of furs and hides.

C. G. Rapp returned last Monday from St. Paul where he had been on a business trip.

W. E. Kelsey, the Crookston collector was in town a couple of days the first of the week.

E. M. Hoff returned last Friday from Crookston where he had been taking in the election returns.

The weather has been quite warm the past week and it looks as if we are going to have a late fall,

---

Business has been lively in town the past week large numbers of farmers being in town every day,

---

Julius Hills was up from Red Lake Falls yesterday doing some surveying for the railroad company.

Mrs. Knut Kvande and daughter left to-day for Audobon Minn. where they will visit friends and relatives.

S. Lindner, representing the Commercial Bulletin, was in town the first of the week on business.

The ladies of St. Hilaire will give an oyster supper in the M. E. Church on Thursday Nov. 24th. All are cordially invited to attend.

The price of wheat took a turn for the better last week but is again on the down hill slide this week with prospects of going lower than ever.

We are in receipt of several copies of the Daily East Grand Forks Review, edited by D. P. R. Strong. The Review is bright and newsy and we wish Editor Strong success.

Wheat is coming in very slowly this fall. The light crop and the low price is probably the cause. At present only about five hundred bushels per day is being marketed.

J. S. Lee of Crookston, representing the Osborne Binder Co, was looking after that company's collections in this vicinity this week. Mr. Lee is accompanied by his wife.

Knute Nelson is elected governor and it might as well have been Banker Bill Merriam or Railroad President Jim Hill for all the good he will do the farmer or laboring man,

---

THE PEOPLE'S PARTY.

The electoral vote of five states and the balance of power in the U. S. senate is glory enough for any new party that makes its initial bow to the American people. The Peoples party is bound to become the party of the toilers and its supremacy is assured. It will grow and thrive and the reign of gold will die.

Christopher Sandmoen imbibed too freely of the spirits that inebriate last Monday evening and went home and loaded his shot gun and proceeded to make things lively in the family. His wife and children got out of the house and Constable Williams was sent for and he was landed in the cooler, Justice Hanson the next morning said ninety days and Constable Williams left to-day for Crookston with his prisoner, where he will have a chance to supervise the construction of the new county jail.

Thief River Falls Nov. 13th 1892.

Ed. SPECTATOR
St. Hilaire Minn.

I learn that we are defeated in the state. The saloon element has fought us right and left. Our "milk and water" policy on this accursed traffic has resulted in our defeat in this state, How long will we tolerate in our midst an institution that is certain ruination, positive disintegration, and demolition of all good society and certain destruction of the soul and body of the individual? Are we so spellbound by this monster demon that we can take no action in self defense? Have a majority of us already lost our manhood and our finer feelings and nobler aspirations, reached that degree of dissolution that we have no will of our own but are slaves to a morbid appetite, slaves to an accursed custom of semi-civilization? If our villages and cities insist in having this worse than nuisance among them, then the farmers must take a hold of it and pledge themselves not to trade, make any exchanges, or in any way give their support to any village or city that will not rid itself of the saloon traffic. I hope that all of our sub-alliances will take this matter into consideration and report progress, The Agawam alliance no. 464 will meet at Knut Kvande's school house Saturday Nov, 26th for the purpose of taking initiative steps in this matter,

Yours truly
C. A. Johnson,

Crookston Times, As the American people are irrepressible they will now turn from the campaign, which has just closed, to the World's Columbian Exposition, and boom that instead of politics for the next year, all joining hands and rallying around the old flag just as if there never had been any political difference between them, When they stand next year among the assembled representatives of all nations and declare that their country has bigger lakes, longer rivers broader plains, more extensive forests, bigger farms, more fertile soil, richer mines, batter schools, more ingenius men and prettier women than all other countries, the visitors will scarcely dream that these same exceedingly patriotic citizens were in a most bitter political fight only a year before. It is exceedingly fortunate that the Exposition was deferred until next year for if foreigners had been here this season they would have seen some very peculiar illustrations of American methods during political contests. Next year the nation will be in holiday attire and on its good behavior acting as host to the world and no people has ever made so fine a showing during all past history as Americans will do while receiving and entertaining their many-languaged guests who come from all lands to see our big show.

S. M. Owen says some interesting things about the Democratic victory in the country last Tuesday. He thinks the situation now is similar to the situation now is similar to the situation from 1852 to 1860 and explains himself in this way:

"When the two old political parties, Whig and Democratic, were dominated by the power of slavery, the same as the present old parties, both of them, are dominated by corporate power and monopoly. Neither has the power to shake itself free from this control, and the Democratic party having by a temporary landslide returned to power, will be less inclined to do so than ever before. The Republican party as at present controlled will not be inclined to do so, but I can foresee that the element which we know exists among the rank and file of the Republicans may shape itself to bring about a readjustment of its party on such lines as may find the millions of the country who see these things, but do not act rushing into party organization with them."

Mr. Owen does not say in so many words that the Republican party may become the People's party, but puts it thus: "Such a re-adjustment might still be called the republican party The name matters very little. There may be no more People's party by name and the leaders of the present movement may be no more than very weak John Browns in the economic reform to come. In that view the Republican party would purge not revolutionize itself."

The Democratic party, according to Mr. Owen, is dominated by the power that has dominated by the power that has dominated the Republican party. "Look at the great coal combine, the Boston and Maine," he says. "There is Depew in it side by side with Whitney who has engineered Cleveland's election Unfortunately the Democratic party believes that all besetting woes spring from the protective tariff—which they do not. They spring from the concentration of wealth in the hands of a few. It is a change in the entire economic system that is needed and the protective tariff is only incidental to it. Among the real evils are fallacious financial systems, colossal subsidies, princely franchise granting, permitting the absorbtion by private parties and syndicates of all resources, the growth of corporate monopoly to such strength that it is now a matter of grave doubt if it is not more powerful than the government: the organization of trusts and combines that are more autocratic and oppressive than monarchial rule, the monopolization of land and other kindred crimes and evils that cruelly wrong the masses that small classes may be rapidly and enormously enriched. It is these enemies of the republic and of humanity that must all be destroyed, and the party pledged to do that is to be the party of the future, whatever its name."

The above opinions, from the man who two years ago polled the high water Alliance and populist vote for governor in this state cannot fail to be of interest.

THE ELECTION

The Democrats seem to have captured nearly everything in sight this year, and Cleveland and Stevenson will have votes to spare in the electoral college. The result has been a big surprise for the Republicans who hardly realize what a land slide there has been The Democrats carry all the states they carried in 1888 besides New York, Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin. Ohio and California being yet doubtful. The People's Party comes in for a share and Weaver carries North Dakota, Kansas, Colorado, Nevada and Wyoming, a good showing for a new party with a ticket in the field for the first time. Congress has gone Democratic by a majority not so large as two years ago and latest returns indicate that the People's party will have after March 4th the balance of power in the U. S. Senate. In Minnesota the Republicans carried the nine electors for Harrison and Knute Nelson is elected governor by about 13,000 plurality. The Republicans elect four congressmen and the Democrats two, The contest between Feig, Republican, and Bowen, People's party, in this district being so close that the official count to decide. Yesterday's Minneapolis Evening Journal claims Feig's election by 141 plurality. The Republicans have elected a majority of the legislature and will elect a Republican U. S. senator, In this judicial district the People's party candidate for district judge Frank Ives was elected over Mills, Independent, by about 1.200 majority, In Polk county the People's party made a clean sweep electing every man on their ticket except county commissioner in the Crookston district, M. E. Kirsch, Democrat, being elected. Every man on the county ticket had a clear majority over all other candidates and the People's party is to be congratulated on the good fight made for the legislature the People's party candidates Messrs. Knudson, Chesley and Julson all have handsome majorities.

ASTRAY.

Taken up on the premises of the undersigned in St. Hilaire 3 steers past two years old red and white spotted and 1 red steer past three years old. Owner can have same by paying expense of keeping and for this notice.

M. Hendrickson

STRAYED.

From the premises of the undersigned one red bull with a hole in the right ear. A reward will be paid for the return of the above described animal to

M. Hendrickson,

NOTICE.

The Clydesdale Horse Co. of St. Hilaire Minn., will meet at St. Hilaire on Nov. 30th 1892 for the purpose of settling all accounts against said company, Any stockholder failing to pay up all assessments including an assessment to be made on the stock shares of said Co. on said day to pay up all out-standing accounts against it, will forfeit his stock shares in said company. If necessary in order to pay up the debts of said company the stallion Pride of Huron will be sold on that day.

C. A. Johnson, Sec'y.

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn. Oct. 29 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on December 1892 viz Gustaf Anderson H D 11669 for the SW ¼ Sec 32 Tp 153 R 44.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land viz:

A. Sture of Crookston, E. M. Svenson, A. M. Ekstrom, P. A. Ekstrom all of St. Hilaire Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn Oct. 20 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on Dec. 20 1892 viz:

Peter Anderson H D 13710 for the W ½ NW ¼ and W ½ SW ¼ Sec 28 Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Ole J. Johnson, Ole J. Hegg, Halvor T. Omot, Knut Steen all of St. Hilaire Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn. November 1 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and has said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver of the U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn, on December 15 1892. viz:

A. P. Sandberg administrator of estate of Peter G. Allsson deceased H D 11173 for the NW ¼ Sec. Tp. 20 Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land viz:

S. Johnson, Haakon Johnson, J. Lind, E. Pettersons all of St. Hilaire Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

People's Party Ticket

For President, JAMES B. WEAVER, of Iowa.

For Vice President, J. G. FIELD, of Virginia.

For Presidential Electors—First District W. H. Norton. Second District —F. M. Currier. Third District—C. P. Carpenter. Fourth District—Dr. E. Fish. Fifth District—Dr. E. F. Clark. Sixth District—C. F. Bodahl.

STATE TICKET.

For Governor, IGNATIUS DONNELLY, of Dakota.

For Lieutenant-Governor, KITTLE HALVORSON, of stearns.

For Secretary of State, H. B. MARTIN, of Hennepin.

For State Treasurer, P. M. RINGDAL, of Polk.

For Attorney General, J. L. McDONALD, of Ramsey.

For Judges of the Supreme Court: Thomas Canty, of Hennepin, Daniel Buck, of Mankato and W. N. Davidson, of Rock.

CONGRESSIONAL.

For Congress, H. F. BOEN, of Otter Tail.

JUDICIAL.

For Judge, 14th Judicial District FRANK IVES, of Polk.

LEGISLATIVE.

For Representatives to the Legislature—J. D. Knutesm, of Polk. B. M. Chesley and O. E. Olson, of Norman,

POLK COUNTY TICKET,

For Auditor—C. U. Webster,

For Treasurer—J. T. Beaudry.

For Register of Deeds—J. Amundson.

For Sheriff—Arne Grundysen.

For County Attorney—A. R. Helson.

For Judge of Probate—C. M. Benson.

For County Surveyor—O. L. Hamery

For Supt. of Schools—A. A. Lommen

For Court Commissioner—J. G. McGrew.

For Coroner—H. Shepard.

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONERS,

First District John E. Oppegaard.
Third District—Christopher Anderson
Fifth District—Robert Anderson.

INTERESTING ITEM.

GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY LINE

It is to the interest of parties contemplating going east to consider the great advantages the Great Northern offers from through its fast passenger service to St. Paul and to all points west to the Pacific coast, their free colonist cars, and magnificent Dining and Sleeping cars. The shortest route, close connections, quickest time and fare as low as the lowest, Any information cheerfully given,

S. S. Buzza
Agent.

MONEY TO LOAN.

I am prepared to make a few choice loans on real estate at 10 per cent straight.

H. E. IVES.

FIFTY CENTS IN CASH

Will secure the Spectator from now to Jan. 1st 1893, a hot political campaign is now on and we will try to make the Spectator interesting we make this low offer so that every farmer in this part of the country can afford to subscribe.

STRAYED

From my pasture on the 9th, day of October, one bay colt four years old, one bay mare 6 years old both branded F E on shoulder, Liberal reward offered for information.

S. M. Dainard.

FOR SALE,

A dapple-gray stallion seven years old, weight about 1,600, Will sell or trade.

Peter Lindbloom
Bray Tp, Sec. 23.

WANTED. Salesmen. Local and Traveling, To represent our well known house. You need no capital to represent a firm that warrants nursery stock first-class and true to name. WORK ALL THE YEAR. $100 per month to the right man. Apply quick stating age. L. L. MAY & CO. Nurserymen, Florists and Seedsmen, St. Paul Minn. (This house is responsible.)

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
Crookston Minn September 15 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on December 8 1892 viz: Charles Will Heden D S no. 11561 for the NE ¼ Sec 28 Tp 153 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land viz:

Ole J. Johnson, A. G. Mostrom, John Mostrom, Knut Steen all of St. Hilaire, Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

CLOSING OUT SALE!

At E M Hoff's Store

My whole stock of

Dry Goods and Notions
Gents Furnshing Goods
$5,000 worth of ready made clothing
Foot wear of all kinds
and everything belonging to a full stocked general merchandise store will be closed out at cost in the next 90 days.

COME EVERY BODY

AND

SECURE GOOD BARGAINS.

E. M. HOFF

CROWN ROLLER MILL.

EQUIPPED WITH THE LATEST AND BEST IMPROVED MACHINERY.

Manufactures the well known,
PERFECTION FANCY PATENT
and WHITE ROSEFLOUR.

Rye and Feed mill in connection,
Flour and Feed always kept on hand
Custom work a specialty.

FRICKER & WELCH Prop,

HILAIRE MINNESOTA

CHAS G. RAPP.

A large and complete line of

General Merchandise.

CONSISTING OF

Dry Goods, Groceries, Clothing
Boots & Shoes, Hats & Caps
Notions

THE ST. HILAIRE SPECTATOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY EVENING.
H. E. IVES, Propr.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE:
Advance, $1.50 Per Year
If not in Advance, $2 00 Per Year

Entered in the Post Office at St Hilaire, as Second Class Mail Matter

WEDNESDAY November 16 1892

BUYING PICTURES.

A REPORTER CHATS WITH SEVERAL WELL KNOWN ARTISTS.

The Painters Pretty Generally Agree That One Should Buy the Paintings Which Please Him—Judgment Is Capable of Cultivation and Will Improve.

"How do people buy pictures?" Colin Campbell Cooper repeated. "Well, I suppose the majority of collectors consult the advice of a dealer or some artist, and yet there are those, not pretentious connoisseurs, either, that know a good thing when they see it, and evince unusual wisdom in their purchases. To some, however, self reliance in investing on a large scale in paintings has proved rather a disastrous experiment. The other day a collection made by a man thirty or forty years ago was sold. There was hardly half a dozen good things in it, simply because he bought and he did not know what he was getting.

"Art in this country is gradually waking up. Perhaps the Centennial might be called the American Renaissance. We know infinitely more about art than our grandparents did, and with opportunities increasing from year to year it is fair to suppose our children will show a still more marked improvement in taste. Greater facilities for traveling have done much to bring about a change in our little world, and the tendency of our art is rather toward the cosmopolitan than provincial. Naturally, time is required to educate the public taste along artistic lines.

"I think people will buy more pictures when they understand painting is not an accomplishment merely a pleasure to the eye, but that it is a part of education, of civilization. It will require time to realize this. Exhibitions are visited and the majority like to look at pictures with an admiration rather ephemeral. When the picture is out of sight the impression is gone. With a general diffusion of art paintings will be bought not solely because they appeal to the senses, to personality, but for their artistic qualities; not simply because the subject illustrated is rather a pretty idea, but because the work is technically a good art production."

Stephen Ferris said: "The world is full of good pictures to be bought for reasonable prices, but unfortunately many thousands of dollars, many fortunes, are spent for nonsense, while good work remains unsought and unbought. Common sense is happy capital in picture buying as in any other business. One can hardly provide a set number of rules to be observed in buying. Many books have been written on military science, yet the world has seen comparatively few fine generals. Judgment rules the world, and in picture buying one person is more successful than another because a spirit of superior intelligence dictates his purchases."

Thomas Eakins would like to have people buy pictures that please them and appeal to their taste. "The majority are afraid to buy what they like; they must have some one else's advice. Well, if they start with bad art, perhaps before long they will come to the good. Let people buy what they want."

"I have not thought much about buying pictures," said Mr. Frederick Waugh. "We artists are more chiefly concerned in trying to sell them. It is the privilege of the artist to paint pictures which appeal to people; which they understand and want to have for their own. But he should have a high standard, and he cannot succeed if he lower it to cater to the popular taste. He is fortunate if in working out his ideas he pleases the public and yet does not lose his independence nor forfeit his originality. His work may be appreciated by large numbers, but it is always certain that some few will recognize his endeavor and will want to buy it.

"In the Old World art is accessible to all. The Luxembourg and the Louvre are filled permanently with the masterpieces of all ages, the best that have been done. There, too, the spirit of union is strong among artists. They gather together and talk of everything pertaining to the art world, consequently they live entirely in a congenial climate and they grow and develop in an essentially art atmosphere. Impressionism? Yes, this is the great word nowadays. Many have an idea that it is a synonym for vaguely treated and partially unfinished pictures. Impressionism claims to record facts as observed by the artist. Sincerity to nature is its aim. After all, there is nothing so beautiful as truth, and the nearer we get to it, as we find it in nature, the better artists we are."

"Many Americans buy pictures," Mr. F. de B. Richards responded, "because they have accumulated money, and pictures are the proper thing to have. Generally they know very little about it, and a dealer does the work for them. If people purchase pictures to flatter their vanity, let them spend big sums and buy high priced pictures. If they buy for pleasure, let them buy what interests them. I remember meeting Edwin Forrest after a sale. 'I've bought a picture,' said he. 'They told me not to do it, because very likely it is not original. But it pleases me, and I should buy it if it were by somebody I never heard tell of.' A picture pleasing to the eye is a source of education for the time being at least. Adverse criticism may lead a man to scrutinize it and study it more closely than if he had bought one he did not like half so well."

"I think I should be inclined to buy what I liked personally," was the opinion of Edwin Swift Balch, "not forgetting that the pictorial qualities should not be lost sight of in the desire to get a pleasing subject. Good handling, the proper placing of values and meritorious color, allied to a sympathetic subject, will tend to keep our interest in a painting alive."—Philadelphia Times.

The oldest mine, which is now worked as a copper mine, is in the Musashi province of Japan. It was opened 1,182 years ago.

HOSPITALITY AMONG WOODSMEN.

Where the Stranger Is Taken In and Made to Feel at Home.

Among the genuine woodsmen in eastern America great hospitality to strangers is the most distinguishing trait. By woodsmen is meant those who make their living by chopping and hauling logs, and who live all winter in log camps, half buried up in the snows of a vigorous northern climate, far away from the outer world. Among these people there is no law against tramps. The solitary hunter or the lonely traveler whom night has overtaken in his journey always receives a cordial welcome, not from one, but from all of the crew.

As soon as the stranger's head is inside of the low door by which the hut is entered, the cook calls out to him to walk in, for it is this functionary who does the honors of the camp. He is then invited to take a place on the "deacon seat," that he may be better able to warm his feet before the fire. The question is then put, "Have you had your supper?" and the wanderer is asked to step up and have a bite; even if he has already supped he will be almost forced to take a piece of sweet cake and to drink a cup of tea.

The teakettle always sits beside the fire, and on the stranger's arrival the cook gives this "a good boil," for woodsmen want their tea boiled. Some fat pork is cut and put into the pan, and is soon simmering over a cheery fire. While the stranger is taking off his moccasins and putting on a dry pair of socks, with which the cook is always ready to furnish him, the cook is plying him with questions as to what is going on out in the settlement.

So soon as the "boss" or owner of the camp and crew come in at night, their day's work over, the stranger is cordially greeted by all; in fact he becomes one of themselves and is expected to walk up to the bean pot or the frying pan and to help himself to anything that suits his palate without asking anybody. He not only becomes as one of the crew, but the best place in the berth is reserved for him, some one turning out of it and sleeping on the deacon seat (the hewn plank on which the crew sit when eating their meals). Sometimes the deacon seat is preferable to the berth.

Many years since, late one stormy winter night, I arrived at Mr. W. Richard's logging camp at the "Otter Slide," on the Nashwaak river, New Brunswick. The crew had retired. When I entered the camp Mr. R. raised his head from the fir boughs on which he was lying and said to me, "Come, take this place." I caught at the moment a glimpse of a bed of snow beneath the green boughs. "No, thank you, I prefer the deacon seat." On this I gladly stretched my weary limbs with my boots for a pillow and coat thrown over my shoulders for covering; and yet, after all, my sleep was sounder and more refreshing than that of one amid all the luxuries of the town.—Forest and Stream.

A Substitute for Canal Locks.

H. G. Ketchum, engineer of the Chignecto ship railway, is credited as the author of a scheme by which vessels drawing upward of twenty feet of water can be pushed through the present St. Lawrence canals from Port Arthur to Quebec, and through the Soo canal now being excavated, without deepening the canals or enlarging the locks, thus obviating the expenditure of millions of dollars upon canal deepening.

Mr. Ketchum proposes that large vessels be placed upon steel rafts or pontoons, and thus floated through the canals and over river shallows, the vessels to be placed upon the pontoons by means of hydraulic lifts established at the entrance of each canal. He says $500,000 would provide pontoons and lifts for all the existing canals; but these lifts could be used as graving docks; but little time would be lost in placing the vessels upon the floats, and the plan has been successful elsewhere.—New York Telegram.

The Doctor's Retort.

One of the brightest physicians of Portland and one of the ablest theologians of Bath were in the physiological room at Bowdoin Medical school not long ago examining, in company with others, microscopic slides, showing certain peculiar glands of the intestines. The physician at once launched out into a brilliant discussion of the glands and their relation to various diseases.

The theologian grew tired after a time, and finally said: "You doctors know so much about the uncertainties of this world that I should think you would not want to live." "You theologians," came the quick reply, "tell us so much about the certainties of the next that we don't want to die."—Lewiston Journal.

Sharing His Bed.

A Grub street friend of Johnson's was Derrick, of whom he wrote, "I honor Derrick for his strength of mind." One night when Floyd, another poor author, was wandering about the streets he found Derrick asleep upon a bulk. Upon being suddenly awakened Derrick started up. "My dear Floyd," said he, "I am sorry to see you in this destitute state. Will you go home with me to my lodgings?" And they turned in on the bulk together like the good fellows they were.—Collector.

A Tiny Timepiece.

M. Morquet, a friar of the Florentine order in Paris, has constructed a perfect watch only a quarter of an inch in diameter. Besides the two hands seen on all watches it has a third which marks the seconds, besides a microscopic dial which indicates the days, weeks, months and years. It also contains an alarm, and on its front lid is an ingeniously cut figure of St. Francis. On the back cover, by aid of a powerful glass, you can distinctly read two verses of the "Te Deum."—Philadelphia Press.

It All Depends.

"What kind of a man is he—good, bad or indifferent?"

"Well, that depends a good deal who teeters on the other end of the plank with him."

"How so, sir?"

"Well, if you size him up alongside of Judas Iscariot he looms up middling fair; but when you come to sit him down between such fellows as you an me, judge, he does dwindle terrible surprisin—he does, for a fact."—Texas Siftings.

The Annex Girl's Mistake.

She was at the college tea, telling the poor sophomore all about the recent schools of German philosophy. As they talked, a piano on the floor below began to sound.

"Oh, that is Wagner, isn't it?" she exclaimed.

"No," said the '94 man, whose knowledge came in handily, "that is Jonesy."—Harvard Lampoon.

The Wonderful Shad.

The most wonderful thing about a shad is how the meat ever got in between the bones.—Texas Siftings.

DO YOU WANT TO ADOPT A BABY?

Maybe you think this is a new business, sending out babies on application; it has been done before, however, but never have those furnished been so near the original sample as this one. Everyone will exclaim, "Well! that's the sweetest baby I ever saw!" This little black-and-white engraving can give you but a faint idea of the exquisite original, which we propose to send to you, transportation paid. The little darling rests against a pillow, and is in the act of drawing off its pink sock, the mate of which has been pulled off and flung aside with a triumphant coo. The flesh tints are perfect, and the eyes follow you, no matter where you stand. The exquisite reproductions of this greatest painting of Ida Waugh (the most celebrated of modern painters of baby life) are to be given to those who subscribe to Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893. The reproductions cannot be told from the original, which cost $400, and are the same size (17x22 inches). The baby is life size, and absolutely lifelike. We have also in preparation, to present to our subscribers during 1893, other great pictures by such artists as Percy Moran, Maud Humphrey, Louis Deschamps, and others of world-wide renown. Take only two examples of what we did during the past year, "A Yard of Pansies," and "A White House Orchid" by the wife of President Harrison, and you will see what our promises mean.

"I'M A DAISY."

Those who subscribe for Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893 will possess a gallery of exquisite works of art of great value, besides a Magazine that cannot be equaled by any in the world for its beautiful illustrations and subject matter, that will keep everyone posted on all the topics of the day, and all the fads and different items of interest about the household, besides furnishing interesting reading matter, both grave and gay, for the whole family; and while Demorest's is not a fashion Magazine, its fashion pages are perfect, and we give you, free of cost, all the patterns you wish to use during the year, and in any size you choose. Send in your subscription at once, only $2, and you will really get over $25 in value. Address the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York. If you are unacquainted with the Magazine, send 10 cents for a specimen copy.

Ask Your Dealer For

WHIPS.

FEATHERBONE is made from Enameled Quills—nature's own toughest, and strongest elastic material. Best wearing whips made for 25c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50. All styles for Buggy, Cart, Track, Team and Riding. Be sure and ask for a FEATHERBONE.

FOR SALE BY

S. M. HOFF

Going to Buy
A Dictionary?
GET THE BEST,
Webster's International.

A Choice Gift
A Grand Family Educator
A Library in Itself
The Standard Authority

WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY

SOLD BY ALL BOOKSELLERS.

The International is a new book from cover to cover, fully abreast of the times, and is the successor of the authentic "Unabridged." Ten years were spent in revising, 100 editors employed and over $300,000 expended before the first copy was printed.

Do not buy reprints of obsolete and comparatively worthless editions.

Send for free pamphlet containing specimen pages and full particulars.

G. & C. MERRIAM CO., Publishers,
SPRINGFIELD, MASS., U. S. A.

U.S. LAND OFFICE.

Crookston, Minn., Nov. 12 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn on November 29 1892. viz:

Theodore Halvorson D S 11948 for the SE ¼ Sec. 29 Tp 152 R. 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Knut Steen, Anton Lee, Ole J. Hegg, Ole Johnson, all of St. Hilaire Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

E. T. SPAFFORD S. M. DAINARD

E. T. SPAFFORD & CO.
—DEALERS IN—
LUMBER, LATH AND SHINGLES.

A complete stock of all kinds of Lumber Lath, Shingles, Mouldings, Building Paper Sash, Doors and Screens, Lime, Cement Stucco, Plastering Hair, Brick etc. always hand at the lowest market prices.

S. M. Dainard, Manager.

BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE, MINN

E. T. SPAFFORD & CO.
WILL ALWAYS PAY THE
HIGHEST MARKET PRICES
FOR
All kinds of
CATTLE.
Also for Cord wood, Hay, Oats,
Barley and flax.
Ground Feed for Sale
S. M. DAINARD.
Manager.

Reserved For
THE
ST. HILAIRE
TOWNSITE
COMPANY

W. A. ARTHUR.
DEALER IN
FRUITS, CONFECTIONARY
TOBACCO AND CIGARS.
STATIONARY OF ALL KINDS
Lunch Counter
Warm meals at all hours.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE MINNESOTA

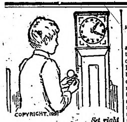
JUSTUS L. JOHNSON
DEALER IN
pure medicines Fancy articles, perfumer and stationerv, paints oils and dye stuffs.
Cigars, Candy, Fruit and Soft Drinks always on hand.
Barbershop in connection
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE

I CAN SAVE YOU
MONEY
If you wish to make
REAL ESTATE
LOANS.
For full particulars call on or address
H. E. IVES.
SPECTATOR OFFICE ST. HILAIRE.

HOLMES BRO'S
Dealer in
HARDWARE, TINWARE,
We are carrying a heavy and complete line of Heating and Cooking stoves.
GOOD GOODS LOW PRICES.
CALL ON US FOR BARGAINS
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE MINN.

FARMERS STORE
NEW GOODS AT HARD PAN PRICES.
If you want to save money do your trading with
HALL BROS.
DEALERS IN
Dry Goods, Groceries
Notions.
BROADWAY ST. HILA

S. M. HOFF
DEALER IN
HARDWARE
A new and complete stock of all kinds of Hardware, Tinware, Stoves, Fencing wire, Nails, in fact everything usualy kept in a first-class Hardware Store,
AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES
Call and examine Goods
and Get Our Prices.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE



Set right—all the proper functions of womanhood. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the remedy. It regulates and promotes their action, and removes the obstructions and suppressions which cause trouble and misery. At the two critical periods in a woman's life—the change from girlhood to womanhood, and, later, the "change of life"—it is a perfectly safe and an especially valuable remedial agent, that can produce only good results.

It's a powerful, invigorating tonic, and a soothing and strengthening nervine; a legitimate medicine—purely vegetable, perfectly harmless—and carefully adapted, by an experienced physician, to woman's delicate needs.

For all the derangements, irregularities, and weaknesses peculiar to the sex, the "Favorite Prescription" is a remedy so certain that it can be guaranteed. If it doesn't give satisfaction in every case, the money is returned. No other medicine for women is sold in this way.

No other medicine can be.

MONEY SAVED—if you pay cash for everything you buy. We sell for cash only; that's the secret of our LOW PRICES.

We sell everything necessary to clothe man, woman and child from head to foot—to furnish a home from Parlor to Kitchen—and many things besides. If you're too far away to come send us this coupon:

ALOG Every housekeeper in the Northwest, living out of the Twin Cities, should have one of our large illustrated Catalogues. HOW TO GET ONE: Cut out and send this coupon with your name and address and you will receive a catalogue, FREE of charge, by return mail. Samples sent if you mention kinds, colors and about what price. Big mail order business; 5 acres selling space; 54 departments. Reliable Goods. Lowest Prices. Satisfaction Guaranteed. FREE 39

SCHUNEMAN & EVANS, ST. PAUL.

We pay the printer to give you good advice about health and to lead you to careful living.

Our reason is that Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil is so often a part of careful living.

If you would go to your doctor whenever you need his advice, we might save our money. He knows what you need.

Let us send you a book on CAREFUL LIVING; free.

Scott & Bowne, Chemists, 132 South 5th Avenue, New York.
Your druggist keeps Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil—all druggists everywhere do. $1. 37

THE LAST MINUTE.

How people do work at the last minute! For hours and days they will delay and neglect and dawdle their time away until they come to the point where delay is no longer possible, and then they will develop a most astonishing power and capacity for work throwing their whole souls into matter which they have long neglected and finally coming out flurried and often belated, suffering loss and causing inconvenience to others by their procrastination and neglect. This is especially true with matters connected with health. People take cold and think that it will soon wear away. It may do so, but it is at the expense of their own constitution. A cold is only a congestion of the blood vessels and the oftener these blood vessels become congested, the worse it is for them to withstand any attack the second time. Reid's German Cough and Kidney Cure relieves this congestion, restores the circulation to its normal condition, and thus enables the system to throw off the disease. It is the only cough remedy on the market of which it can be truthfully said it is impossible to take an over dose. Get this remedy of any dealer. Small bottles are 25 cents, the large ones are 50 cents. SYLVAN REMEDY CO., Peoria, Ill.

TOWER'S FISH BRAND

This Trade Mark is on the best

WATERPROOF COAT
In the World!
Illustrated Catalogue Free.
A. J. TOWER, BOSTON, MASS.

WE WANT SALESMEN 1,200 ACRES. Largest in the West. Valuable Specialties, $100,000.00 Responsible, Highest Com. & Salaries. For our immense stock of NORTHERN GROWN FRUITS, Ornamental Trees, Shrubs, Etc. Experience not necessary. PAY WEEKLY. Apply at once for terms, etc., stating age. The JEWELL NURSERY CO., Lake City, Minn.
☞ Name this Paper every time you write.

Telegraphy and Electric Engineering

Taught by practical Telegraphers and Electricians. No department of a business College, but a thorough special course. Circulars Free.

McALLISTER'S
SCHOOL OF TELEGRAPHY.
819 Nicollet Av. Minneapolis Minn.

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till cured. DR. J. STEPHENS, Lebanon, Ohio.

FAMOUS CAVALRYMEN.

Murat, Hodson, Lasalle, Skobeloff and Roberts as Swordsmen.

Time was when to be an expert swordsman was looked upon as one of the most essential qualifications an officer could possess, says the Sunday Review, and several of our most celebrated soldiers at the commencement of the century were remarkable as much for their personal prowess with the sword as for any of the larger gifts which go to form a great commander. Sir William Napier could run or jump with any of the gallant members of his regiment, and records how, in the race for the rocks at La Rhune, he was "not a foot behind" the most active of them. And he could hold his own with the foils, the single-stick or the bayonet, as well as in mere bodily activity.

Marshal Beresford was a man of magnificent physique, and owed his life to his thews and sinews when he found himself engaged in a rough-and-tumble that would have shocked Von Moltke with the Polish lancers at Albuera. Lord Anglesey was also a typical "beau sabreur," and even when he lost a leg could sit a horse with more grace than most mortals can display with two. During the Mutiny and Sikh wars hand-to-hand encounters, in which the leaders on either side set shining examples to their followers, were by no means uncommon, and almost all the men on our side who came to the front could hold their own, and more than did so, even with the expert hereditary swordsmen who rode against them.

Nicholson was as efficient with his arm and wrist as with his quick decision and active brain. Hodson, of Hodson's Horse, was the very ideal of a cavalry leader, and his name was terrible to the natives, as much perhaps, by reason of his reputation as a swordsman as because of any of the other soldier-like qualities of which he was possessed. Sir Dighton Probyn, when he was at the head of his native cavalry squadrons, was looked up to by his followers as a very Paladin, and could beat the best of them at tent-pegging, lemon-slicing, or any of the tests of horsemanship dear to men who are soldiers by tradition, birth and predilection.

Last, but not least, there were few men in India twenty years ago who would have cared to meet Lord Roberts, as we must now learn to call him, at any of these exercises if a heavy stake depended on the issue. Even now, when years and the cares of office may reasonably be supposed to have somewhat dimmed his eye, it is a refreshing sight to see the commander-in-chief take the first "peg" as he usually does, at the Simul gymkhanas, and to note that he can wield a lance with a dexterity which none of those who follow him will surpass, and not a man of his age in all India equal.

Nor is it in our armies alone that such qualities in officers have ever commanded admiration. The brilliant Murat, vain and theatrical as he was in dress and manner, when the battle was at its height was never more thoroughly at his ease, and never showed more strikingly to advantage. The handsome figure, covered with lace and frippery, was always wont to shoot far ahead of the squadron behind him in the melee, and regard a chance thrown away which did not enable him to lay several opponents low, by the superior skill he could display with the saber.

Lasalle, young, brilliant and intelligent, who fell at Wagram, the best leader of cavalry of Europe, with the one exception we have just been speaking of, at two-and-thirty years of age, owed much of his influence and authority to his fine riding and his cunning of fence. In our own times Skobeloff was just such another, and the halo of romance which played about him arose in a large degree from the physical advantages he could boast of among his uneducated troopers. Valentine Baker's is another name which will occur among several others, some of whom are happily with us still, and we may hope that, unless the character of Englishmen widely alters, we may never lack a plentiful supply of men of the same quality.

A WONDERFUL WORM.

In the Winter a Caterpillar and in the Spring a Plant.

In winter Cordyceps Chinensis is a nine-segmented caterpillar spending the principal part of his time in the loose earth just under the surface. As spring approaches he burrows deeper, and finally stretches out or curls up in a comatose state at a depth of about four inches beneath the sod. While in this enforced sleep he is attacked by a species of parasitic fungus, the aforesaid parasitic fungus fastening itself upon the helpless worm's head. From this vantage ground the fungus shoots in two directions; a long, pulpy stem starts for sunlight, and a thick, hard and woody substance proceeds to fill the skin of the sleepy worm. None escape; it is simply a clear case of the transformation of animal into vegetable tissue. When the proper season arrives the Chinese herb-hunters repair to favorable localities with sharp sticks and other instruments for removing the vegetable worm from his last resting place. It is highly esteemed as a medicine, and at one time was thought to have even more potent effects in certain sicknesses than ginseng, which is well known as a Mongolian panacea. In the market Cordyceps is sold in small bundles which consist of two distinct portions—the larger part, the worm itself, being of a yellowish brown color and an inch in length. The upper portion is the spur of the fungus, a rough filament of a grayish color, very flexible, more or less twisted and distorted. The "root" or that portion of this fungus medicine which is composed wholly of the poor worm's body, is the exact counterpart of what the insect was when endowed with animal life, the "root" plainly showing the segments, bands, rings, legs, breathing holes, etc. It is a curiosity well worth seeing.

An American State.

The principal of a school in Liberia recently made a request on London missionary societies for a gratuitous supply of bibles for the negro republic, and was told that he would have to apply to an American bible house, as Liberia was a state founded by Americans.

Mr. Geo. W. Turner

Simply Awful

Worst Case of Scrofula the Doctors Ever Saw

Completely Cured by HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

"When I was 4 or 5 years old I had a scrofulous sore on the middle finger of my left hand, which got so bad that the doctors cut the finger off, and later took off more than half my hand. Then the sore broke out on my arm, came out on my neck and face on both sides, nearly destroying the sight of one eye, also on my right arm. Doctors said it was the Worst Case of Scrofula

they ever saw. It was simply awful! Five years ago I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. Gradually I found that the sores were beginning to heal. I kept on till I had taken ten bottles, ten dollars! Just think of what a return I got for that investment! A thousand per cent? Yes, many thousand. For the past 4 years I have had no sores. I

Work all the Time.

Before, I could do no work. I know not what to say strong enough to express my gratitude to Hood's Sarsaparilla for my perfect cure." GEORGE W. TURNER, Farmer, Galway, Saratoga county, N. Y.

HOOD'S PILLS do not weaken, but aid digestion and tone the stomach. Try them. 25c.

"Not a Voice Was Heard."

Mistress: "Johann, how could you be so clumsy as to spill the gravy on Frau B——'s dress at the table yesterday?"

Johann: "Please, ma'am all the company seemed so dull and quiet, I thought I would just waken them up a bit."

The roof of the Olsen Hotel, at Berlin, was carried away by a severe wind-storm.

He declares it to be "the best remedy for cough and croup." Mr. D. T. Good, Columbia, Tenn., writes: "I keep Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup in the house all the time. It is the best remedy for cough and croup I ever used."

The Plato Roller Mill Company, of Plato, is in the hands of a receiver.

Mr. Chas. Carman, from Petersburg, Ill., writes: "I know Salvation Oil to be a very good remedy for neuralgia, rheumatism, burns, toothache and cuts. We are never without it."

The October shipments of ore from Northern Minnesota points were 126,047 tons.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.
F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
☞ Sold by Druggists, 75c.

Albert Popenfuss, a wealthy farmer residing near Winona, was killed in a runaway.

The St. Luke's Hospital of St. Paul in its finely equipped new buildings affords young women an excellent opportunity to fit themselves as nurses by entering its training school, now open under the direction of a graduate of the New York Hospital. No tuition fee required. For information address the Directress of Nurses, St. Luke's Hospital, St. Paul.

SYRUP of FIGS

ONE ENJOYS

Both the method and results when Syrup of Figs is taken; it is pleasant and refreshing to the taste, and acts gently yet promptly on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, cleanses the system effectually, dispels colds, headaches and fevers and cures habitual constipation. Syrup of Figs is the only remedy of its kind ever produced, pleasing to the taste and acceptable to the stomach, prompt in its action and truly beneficial in its effects, prepared only from the most healthy and agreeable substances, its many excellent qualities commend it to all and have made it the most popular remedy known.

Syrup of Figs is for sale in 50c and $1 bottles by all leading druggists. Any reliable druggist who may not have it on hand will procure it promptly for any one who wishes to try it. Do not accept any substitute.

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
LOUISVILLE, KY. NEW YORK, N.Y.

CURES CATARRH

SOLD BY YOUR DRUGGIST.

Tutt's Hair Dye

Gray hair or whiskers changed to a glossy black by a single application of this Dye. It imparts a natural color, acts instantaneously and contains nothing injurious to the hair. Sold by druggists, or will be sent on receipt of price, $1.00. Office, 39 Park Place, N. Y.

PISO'S CURE FOR
Consumptives and people who have weak lungs or Asthma, should use Piso's Cure for Consumption. It has cured thousands. It has not injured one. It is not bad to take. It is the best cough syrup. Sold everywhere. 25c.
CONSUMPTION.

DR. PRICE'S Cream Baking Powder.

The only Pure Cream of Tartar Powder.—No Ammonia; No Alum.
Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

A Constant Plague.

Indigestion is, in many instances, a constant plague, giving the sufferer no peace night or day. To banish the tormentor, don't deluge your stomach with pepsins and sour or acidulous tonics. Use the genuine invigorant and appetizer, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, approved and recommended by physicians of distinction. Use it, too, for malaria, rheumatism, constipation, liver complaint and nervousness.

Galvin Grant, of Hokah, who was injured in a runaway accident, died of his injuries.

For Bronchial, Asthmatic and Pulmonary Complaints, "Brown's Bronchial Troches" have remarkable curative properties. Sold only in boxes.

A fued is in progress in Kemper county, Miss. Several men have been killed.

Wanted a well selected stock of General Merchandise, dry goods, or boots and shoes, doing a good business. Will give for same Minneapolis real estate improved and income paying, or unimproved, clear of incumbrances, strictly confidential. ELMER E. COAL, 531 Guaranty Loan Minneapolis, Minn.

Brazil has passed a bill for the encouragement of Chinese immigration.

Don't give up and say there is no help for Catarrh, Hay Fever and Cold in head, since thousands testify that Ely's Cream Balm has entirely cured them.

I have been bothered with catarrh for about twenty years; I had lost sense of smell entirely, and I had almost lost my hearing. My eyes were getting so dim I had to get some one to thread my needle. Now I have my hearing as well as I ever had, and I can see to thread as fine a needle as ever I did, my sense of smell seems to be improving all the time. I think there is nothing like Ely's Cream Balm for catarrh.
—Mrs. E. E. Grimes; Rendrill, Perry Co., O.

Apply Balm into each nostril. It is quickly Absorbed. Gives Relief at once. Price 50 cents at Druggists or by mail.
ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren St., New York.

The campaign at Fort Scott, Kas., ended in a riot. People who had attended People's party and Republican meetings engaged in a hand-to-hand fight. Several persons were injured.

A Four-Footed Hitching Post.

A gentleman with a handsome equipage, followed by a fine English mastiff, drove up in front of a Cincinnati hostelry the other day jumping from his buggy, snapped the hitch strap into the ring of the horse's bit and then placed the other end of the strap in the mouth of the mastiff, which by this time had seated himself on the curbstone. There the mastiff sat like a statue of stone holding the strap securely while his master went in to "see a man." On the gentleman's exit the dog yielded up the strap and the gentleman drove off closely followed by the faithful four-legged lackey.
—Times Star.

Consoling.

An invalid undertaker is visited by a friend who is in the same business.

Sick Man—Ah, my friend, this is the most terrible attack that I have ever had.

Friend—Yes, poor fellow, and I hope it will be your last.

NO USE Denying There is no Remedy the equal of ST. JACOBS OIL, for the Prompt and Permanent Cure of Pains and Aches

OAK BALM! The most wonderful cure for all Female Diseases. Oak Balm is a permanent cure, and the use of one sample will prove the superiority over all other remedies. 10c. for sample or $1.00 for one months treatment. 518 Nicollet Av., Department "D." Mme. Bu CHANE, Minneapolis, Minn.

WRINKLE REMOVER.

Lavender Blossom will positively remove the deepest Wrinkles, prevent them from appearing. Cures Oily Skin, Moth, Tan and Freckles. One box will cure in most cases. 10c for sample treatment. Big pay to Agents. 518 Nicollet Avenue. Department "D." Madam Bu CHANE, Minneapolis, Minn.

FAT FOLKS REDUCED

Mrs. Alice Maple, Oregon, Mo., writes: "My weight was 320 pounds, now it is 195, a reduction of 125 lbs." For circulars address, with 6c. Dr. O. W. F. SNYDER, McVicker's Theatre, Chicago, Ill.

Asthma The African Kola Plant, discovered in Congo, West Africa, is Nature's Sure Cure for Asthma. Cure Guaranteed or No Pay. Export Office, 1164 Broadway, New York. For Large Trial Case, Free by Mail, address KOLA IMPORTING CO., 132 Vine St., Cincinnati, O.

FREE FORMULA FACE MASSAGE to patrons ordering our $2 or $3 Beauty Box, containing every requisite for beautifying the Face and Scalp. Removing all Blemishes. Two cent stamp for particulars. Samples 50 cts. to any part of U. S.
CAROLINE VON WERNER, M. D.,
Syndicate Block, Minneapolis, Minn.

N. W. N. U. No. 47—1892

"August Flower"

"I am happy to state to you and to suffering humanity, that my wife has used your wonderful remedy, August Flower, for sick headache and palpitation of the heart, with satisfactory results. For several years she has been a great sufferer, has been under the treatment of eminent physicians in this city and Boston, and found little relief. She was induced to try August Flower, which gave immedaite relief. We cannot say to much for it." L. C. Frost, Springfield, Mass.

ALLEN'S IRON TONIC BITTERS

The most Elegant Blood Purifier, Liver Invigorator, Tonic and Appetizer known. The first Bitters containing Iron ever advertised in America. J. P. ALLEN, Druggist & Chemist, St. Paul, Minn.

"WELL BRED, SOON WED." GIRLS WHO USE
SAPOLIO
ARE QUICKLY MARRIED. TRY IT IN YOUR NEXT HOUSE-CLEANING.

3,000 BOYS WANTED Who wish to go to the World's Fair. THE WEEKLY COLUMBIAN will give three equal premiums to three boys in each of the following States: Mich., Ind., Ill., Ia., Minn., Wis., Mo., who will sell the greater number of Columbians between now and May 1st, 1893, each a R. R. Ticket from his home to Chicago and return, pay his board and admissions to the World's Fair for one week while in Chicago. The Weekly Columbian is an 8 page paper filled with all the startling events of the day, illustrated stories, and is, in fact, the most readable paper in the United States. Sells Quick. We sell to news boys at 3cts per copy; they sell for 5cts, thus making $2.00 on every 100 sold, we to take back all unsold copies, so our news boys have no risk to run. A boy in a town of not over 100 inhabitants can successfully compete for these premiums. Send for sample copy and full particulars to
J. BRINKERHOFF, Business Manager, Room 515, Manhattan Bldg., CHICAGO, Ill.

UNIVERSITY Commerce AND FINANCE.
619–21 NICOLLET AVE., MINNEAPOLIS.

Students are flocking in. It is becoming generally known that this Institution qualifies its students to merit and receive permanent and remunerative employment. Earnest, painstaking, efficient teachers in English, Business and Shorthand branches. Send for artistic prospectus. HOWARD L. RUCKER, Presd't.

PENSION JOHN W. MORRIS, Washington, D. C. Successfully Prosecutes Claims. Late Principal Examiner U.S. Pension Bureau. 3 yrs in last war, 15 adjudicating claims, atty since.

FREE MEDICAL TREATMENT.

In order to thoroughly and quickly introduce our London System of treatment and the Bio Chemical Remedies, we will give FREE medical services until cured, to all sick persons who will send us this advertisement by mail. No charge for the OLD DOCTORS skillful professional services. No expense whatever to patients except for medicines actually taken. We expect you to recommend us to your friends after you are cured. Diseases of a chronic scrofulous or private nature affecting the Eye, Ear, Head, Throat, Lungs, Liver, Stomach, Skin and Generative Organs, effects of La Grippe; Catarrh, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Spermatorrhoea, Seminal Weakness, Piles, Fistulas, Secret Diseases, etc., quickly, safely and permanently cured. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed. Cut this "ad" out and send it for free treatment to
Dr. A. L. COLE, Room 21, 403 Nicollet Ave. Minneapolis, Minn.
Medical Director of the London Medical and Surgical Clinic.

The Youths Companion

The last year has been the most prosperous of the Sixty-five years of THE COMPANION'S history. It has now over 550,000 subscribers. This support enables it to provide more lavishly than ever for 1893. Only a partial list of Authors, Stories and Articles can be given here.

Prize Serial Stories.

The Prizes offered for the Serial Competition of 1892 were the Largest ever given by any periodical.

First Prize, $2,000. Larry; "Aunt Mat's" Investment and its Reward; by Miss Amanda M. Douglas.
Second Prize, $1,000. Armajo; How a very hard Lesson was bravely Learned; by Charles W. Clarke.
Third Prize, $1,000. Cherrycroft; The Old House and its Tenant; by Miss Edith E. Stowe (Pauline Wesley).
Fourth Prize, $1,000. Sam; A charming Story of Brotherly Love and Self-Sacrifice; by Miss M. G. McClelland.
SEVEN OTHER SERIAL STORIES, during the year, by C. A. Stephens, Homer Greene and others.

The Bravest Deed I Ever Saw, will be described in graphic language by Officers of the United States Army and by famous War Correspondents.

General John Gibbon. General Wesley Merritt.
Captain Charles King. Archibald Forbes.

Great Men at Home.

How Mr. Gladstone Works; by his daughter, Mrs. Drew.
Gen. Sherman in his Home; by Mrs. Minnie Sherman Fitch.
Gen. McClellan; by his son, George B. McClellan.
President Garfield; by his daughter, Mrs. Molly Garfield Brown.

Your Work in Life.

What are you going to do? These and other similar articles may offer you some suggestions.

Journalism as a Profession. By the Editor-in-Chief of the New York Times, Charles R. Miller.
Why not be a Veterinary Surgeon? An opportunity for Boys; by Dr. Austin Peters.
In What Trades and Professions is there most Room? by Hon. R. P. Porter.
Shipbuilders Wanted. Chats with great shipbuilders on this Subject; by Alexander Wainwright.
Admission to West Point; by the Supt. of U. S. Academy, Col. John M. Wilson.
Admission to the Naval Academy; by Lieut. W. F. Low, U. S. N.
Young Government Clerks at Washington. By the Chief Clerks of Six Departments.

Things to Know.

What is a Patent? by The Hon. Carroll D. Wright.
A Chat With Schoolgirls; by Amelia E. Barr.
Naval Courts-Martial; by Admiral S. B. Luce.
Patents Granted Young Inventors; by U. S. Com. of Patents.
The Weather Bureau; by Jean Gordon Mattill.
Newly-Married in New York. What will $1,000 a year do?
Answered by Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher and Marion Harland.

Over the Water.

How to See St. Paul's Cathedral; by The Dean of St. Paul.
Windsor Castle. A picturesque description by The Marquis of Lorne.
A Glimpse of Belgium. The American Minister at Brussels.
A Glimpse of Russia; by The Hon. Charles Emory Smith.
Adventures in London Fogs; by Charles Dickens.
London Cabs. "Cabbies;" their "Hansoms." Charles Dickens, Jr.
A Boy's Club in East London. Frances Wynne.

Short Stories and Adventures.

More than One Hundred Short Stories and Adventure Sketches will be given in the volume for 1893.

Knittin' Susan.
In the Death Circle.
A Mountainville Feud.
Mrs. Parshley's First Voyage.
Bain McTickel's "Vast Doog."
An Able Mariner.
Uncle Dan'l's Will.
On the Hadramaut Sands.
An April First Experience.
Riddling Jimmy, and other stories.
Quality's Temptation.
A Bad Night in a Yacht.
Leon Kestrell: Reporter.
Uncle Sim's Clairvoyance.
How I Won my Chevrons. W. J. Baker.
The Cats of Cedar Swamp. A Boy's Proof that he was not a Coward; by Strong "Medicine." The amusing effect of a brass instrument on a hostile Indian; by Capt. D. C. Kingman, U. S. A.

"How I wrote Ben Hur," by Gen. Lew Wallace, opens a series, "Behind the Scenes of Famous Stories." Sir Edwin Arnold writes three fascinating articles on India. Rudyard Kipling tells the "Story of My Boyhood." A series of practical articles, "At the World's Fair," by Director-General Davis and Mrs. Potter Palmer, will be full of valuable hints to those who go. "Odd House-keeping in Queer Places" is the subject of half a dozen bright and amusing descriptions by Mrs. Lew Wallace, Lady Blake, and others.

All the well-known features of THE COMPANION will be maintained and improved. The Editorials will be impartial explanations of current events at home and abroad. The Illustrated Supplements, adding nearly one-half to size of the paper, will be continued.

FREE Send This Slip with $1.75. to 1893

To any New Subscriber who will cut out and send us this slip with name and address and $1.75, we will send The Companion Free to Jan. 1, 1893, and for a Full Year from that date. This offer includes the Double Holiday Numbers at Thanksgiving, Christmas, New Year's, Easter and Fourth of July. The Souvenir of The Companion illustrated in colors, 42 pages, describing the New Building, with all its 10 departments, will be sent on receipt of six cents, or Free to any one requesting it who sends a subscription for one year. 40

Specimen copies sent free on application. THE YOUTH'S COMPANION, Boston, Mass. Send Check or Post-Office Order at our risk.

Minn Hist. Society

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

THE

St. Hilaire Spectator.

VOLUME XI. ST. HILAIRE, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1892. NUMBER 18.

THE NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

DIGEST OF THE NEWS FROM ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

All Important Occurrences of the Past Week, Boiled Down and Arranged for Rapid Reading.

Washington.

Another circular regarding quarantine regulations is issued to customs officers by the treasury department.

William Potter of Pennsylvania and David P. Thompson of Oregon are appointed ministers, respectively, to Italy and Turkey.

A special agent of the state department is found to have given the government false information regarding the seal industry of Alaska which is being used in the Bering sea controversy.

The Belgian government, through its consul, has protested against sending back the thirty-seven glass blowers who arrived at New York en route for Pittsburg, and, pending a decision from the secretary of the treasury, they will be held on Ellis Island.

The increase in our exports of live cattle, beef and hog products continues. Last month we sent out live cattle to the value of $2,350,000, which was $250,000 more than last year. Our total exports of beef, hog and dairy products for the month were $10,543,000, against $9,900,000 for October 1891.

Assistant Secretary Spaulding has made a customs ruling of considerable interest to importers and merchants generally. It is that a consignee at the port of first arrival of imported merchandise shipped under the immediate transportation act may properly designate the consignee at the interior port of destination, provided no other consignee is mentioned in the bill of lading.

Accidental Happenings.

George Grill and Lawrence Mayer were instantly killed at Ft. Collins, Col., by the premature explosion of a blast in the 200-foot tunnel of the Greely mine.

Fire destroyed the large furniture warehouse of B. M. Howe & Son, Brooklyn. The building is a four-story brick structure 60x100. Before the flames were checked the building was gutted. The loss is $150,000.

The establishment of the Kock & Loeb company, jobbers in willow ware and paper, was destroyed by fire at Milwaukee. Loss on the stock will probably reach $100,000 and on the building $10,000; fully covered by insurance.

The Sissler building on Centre street Pottsville, Pa., was completely destroyed by fire. The total loss is about $50,000; divided about equally between the following: Pollock's Bon Ton millinery store; Feigley, hatter; Breiz, photographer, and Keyser, carpets.

Personal Mention.

The czar of Russia is the largest land owner in the world. The area of his possessions is far greater than France.

Rev. Dr. Talmage preached a sermon recently in which he attacked the old superstition concerning Friday. This caused the Thirteen Club of New York to elect him an honorary member.

Mr. Cleveland found time during the innumerable duties of the campaign to be regularly treated by a massage operator. He has acquired an enormous amount of fat, which he does not hesitate to tell his friends is very uncomfortable.

Mr. Fink, the Victorian ex-member of parliament who has just achieved the phenominal feat of failing for a million and a half sterling and offered his unsecured creditors the magnificent compensation of a half-penny on the pound, is a Jew who began the battle of life as an assistant in a Melbourne furniture house.

Dr. Leonard Ereeman, a prominent young physician of Cincinnati and one of the Cincinnati quarantine officers, has been stricken with consumption. He is an enthusiastic student of bacteriology, and has been giving especial attention to the Koch cures for consumption, and it is supposed that through the contact with the consumption germs he contracted the disease.

Among the Wicked.

W. S. Dennis, of the firm of Dennis Bros., of Chambersburg, Ill., who recently made an assignment, committed suicide by shooting himself twice through the head.

Mrs. Marjaret was awarded $300 in a suit against Louis Gauss, a Huntington, Ind., saloon-keeper. Mrs. Marjaret's son bought whisky of Gauss and while intoxicated fell into the river and drowned.

Rolla Bucher, a 13-year-old lad, suicided at Hicksville, O., by shooting himself through the head with a rifle. He lost the power of speech by illness when a mere child, and beame despondent when his parents wanted him to attend school.

Louis Marke, a passenger on the La Bourgogne, was arrested at New York, having in his possession sixty-eight watches he was trying to smuggle from Switzerland.

Eltham Hoover and George Dontsville, charged with stealing a valuable horse from Del Seraine at Manitoba and selling it in North Dakota, were remanded to jail at Sarnia, Ont., to wait for the arrival of Manitoba officers to convey them to Winnipeg.

A. M. Swarthout, a prominent and wealthy farmer, living near Lydon, Ill., was brutally murdered and his body burned on a straw stack. His two sons, John and Ernst, deny all knowledge of the affair, but they have been arrested and are believed to be guilty.

William Williams, a Sugartown, Pa., farmer, bet $300 on Harrison and, of course, lost it. He had borrowed the cash, and his inability to pay it so preyed upon his mind that he shot himself. His family found him lying in his room with a bullet hole in his head.

From Other Shores.

A divergence of opinion regarding the exhibition of the works of the Swedish painter Munch, has caused the disruption of the Berlin society of artists.

Near the village of Peterlavey, Devonshire, Eng., William Williams shot and killed Emily Doidge, who had refused his attentions, William Rowe, his successful rival, and himself.

It is stated in Berlin on reliable authority that the emperor has assured Caprivi that he will not personally separate from him in the event of the defeat of the military bill.

Six hundred houses have been destroyed by fire in the city of Tokio, Japan. The houses are mostly of the cheap native variety, and, while much privation has been caused, the loss of property is not great.

The Sailors and Firemen's union of England has issued a manifesto warning the public to avoid steamers that are manned by Lascars. The manifesto says that recent disasters have shown that Lascars are unable so stand rough weather.

The police of Sydney, N. S. W., while searching the house of the alleged baby farmers, found a bundle of long needles, wrapped in a blood-stained piece of calico. The theory of the doctors is that the babies were killed by having their hearts or spines pierced with needles.

The prohibition against the emigration of Hebrews that was enforced in Russia during the cholera epidemic has now been withdrawn. A number of parties of emigrants has started for Hamburg from various parts of the country, and other parties are making preparation to start.

The presence of the Emperor Francis at the banquet given at Vienna to the czarewitch is much commented upon. His majesty had not been tendered such a state function since 1888. He was not present in the festivities in honor of Emperor William in his recent visit to the city.

A London cable says: Prince Louis of Battenburg, commander of the Royal navy, has been appointed naval advisor to the inspector general of fort works. The post, which is a sinecure, will add $4,450 yearly to his income. His appointment was due to the queen. Prince Louis desires to again command a sea-going ship. He has begged off from the appointment to command the royal yacht which was offered to him.

The adoption of a man's saddle by a number of ladies at Somerset House England is a prominent topic in society. It is startling to see these ladies, attired in divided skirts, blouses and mannish hats, foremost in the hunt as they ride their horses. Some of them appear in long riding coats, boots and breeches. The most generally accepted form of riding habit, however, is the divided skirt. The style meets with approving comment from the men.

Officials of the bimetallic say that Mr. Balfour's silver speech boomed the subject beyond all precedent. The office of the league is flooded with inquiries, especially regarding the coming conference at Brussel's. Members of the league are jubilant, and profess to believe that the recent discussion of bimetalism that caused a change of front on the part of many eminent English bankers, who hitherto ignored or opposed the question of silver coinage.

Sporting Trifles.

President Noel, of the Crescent City club, it is said to have put up the sum of $90,000 to secure the Hall-Fitzsimmons and the Corbett-Mitchell fights which will occur in New Orleans.

Budd Doble, the veteran reinsman, has bought the runner Artist, who will be used for a runner-up for Nancy Hanks. Artist was put after the mare recently at Sedalia and proved quite steady.

The prospects of Joe Choynski getting on a match with anybody in the near future is very poor inasmuch as there is no man in America anywhere his weight who could make a respectable showing with him.

The father of James Corbett, the pugilist, says that he had recently had a talk with his son, urging him to leave the ring for good. The champion, after much talk, agreed to retire after he had fought just once more, and he wanted that fight to be with Mitchel.

William O'Connor, single skull oarsman, intends to organize a four-oared crew to row in the international regatta at Chicago next year. O'Connor will shortly visit St. John, N. B., and Halifax, N. S., to select four strong, able-bodied fishermen who can row, and train and prepare them to row against any four from England, Australia and the United States.

Railroad Circles.

The Transcontinental association gives up the ghost.

The operating department of the Great Northern is taking measures to have the western extension properly equipped with rolling stock by the time the line is completed.

The gross earnings of 132 roads for October were $51,685,330, an increase of $937,665; of 125 roads from Jan. 1 to Oct. 31, $422,812,810, an increase of $23,822,415; of 74 roads for the fourth week of October $12,386,713, a decrease of $164,680; and of 23 roads for the first week of November $4,321,632, an increase of $27,939.

The Political World.

Important election contests are begun in Nebraska.

The attorney-general-elect of Montana is a woman—Miss Ella L. Knowles.

Congress at its coming session will have to provide for a large deficit in the revenues.

It is claimed that Mr. Cleveland and conservative Democrats will prevent any radical tariff legislation.

Chairman Carter advances an interpretation of the meaning of the recent election.

With Vice President Stevenson's vote and without the Populists the Democrats will control the senate after March 3.

Labor.

Lowell cotton manufacturers announce an increase in wages not to exceed 7 per cent. Providence manufacturers also grant an increase.

The second week of the English cotton lockout opens with increased prospects o the trouble being long continued. There are 6,000,000 spindles still at work on full time; 750,000 on short time, and 12,600,000 are stopped.

Miscellaneous Itesm.

The court at Albany sustained the demurrer in the case of Labor Commissioner Peck, of New York, and he was discharged.

Several plate-glass manufacturers met at Pittsburg to discuss plans for the formation of a trust.

Prohibition is a dead letter in Kansas, and the wide-open policy will be adopted by the saloonkeepers.

Six hundred men, at Grayson, Ky., made a demonstration against a sale of lands seized under the railway tax law. The sale was postponed and peace restored.

During the month of October there were only 4,601 steerage passengers landed at New York, the lowest number since 1877. In the same month in 1891 there were 30,798.

Burglars repeatedly robbed G. W. Burnsworth's store at Washington, O., and Burnsworth armed himself and laid in wait. Two men entered the place and were fired upon. William Jones, of Fort Wayne, Ind., was killed.

The National Wall Paper Company stockholders are to meet December 7 to consider an increase in the capital stock from $14,000,000 to $30,000,000, and also a proposed amendment to the company's charter to provide for the issue of debenture stock to the total extent of $8,000,000.

Another wrecking company has started to dig for the treasure supposed to have been carried to the bottom of Long Island Sound, off Port Morris, by the English man-of-war Hussar. This time it is the third company that has begun a search for the Hussar treasure since spring.

Union Theological Seminary has just been presented with $175,000. The gift is to be used to complete the endowment of the seven professorships in the seminary. The doners are John Crosby Brown, A. E. Dodge, D. Willis and Morris K. Jesup.

NORTHWEST NEWS BUDGET

THE WEEKLY ROUND-UP OF IMPORTANT NEWS.

A Concise Account of the Happenings of the Past Week in Minnesota, North Dakota, Iowa and Wisconsin.

Minnesota.

The Democrats of Winona celebrated the election of Cleveland and Stevenson, the other night, with a monster parade.

A destructive fire wiped out the business part of Lamberton, the other night. There is but little insurance. The fire is thought to have been set in the barn of John Haas.

During the first seven days of the hunting season one hundred deer were brought into Park Rapids. Deer are unusually plentiful in that vicinity this season.

The Democrats held a big celebration at St. Cloud, recently, there was an immense procession with torches, fireworks and innumerable transparencies.

Bert Roberts and W. B. Miller, lately employed at the insane hospital, have absconded with $400 which was wagered on the election and was entrusted to their keeping.

The Atwood mill, at Stillwater was closed for the season with a cut of 32,000,000 feet of lumber, 24,000,000 shingles, and 10,000,000 laths. Two hundred men were employed.

George Depew, of Brainerd, was found dead under a tree where he had been left watching for deer near Mille Lacs. The supposition is that he accidently shot himself. He was a single man.

Mat Roden, of St. Joseph, while driving across the track at St. Cloud, was struck by a freight train. One horse was killed and the other injured. Roden had a leg broken in two places, and was otherwise injured.

Judge Williston at Red Wing sentenced Thomas Smith, indicted as Gardoner, found guilty of larceny, for stealing a draft of $900, to five years' imprisonment in the state penitentiary.

The semi-annual meeting of the Minnesota conference of the Augustana synod of the Swedish Lutheran church met at Cokato recently. Over 100 ministers were present, representing this state, the Dakotas and part of Wisconsin.

The Green Bay, Winona and St. Peter Railroad company has completed negotiations for the purchase of $11,000 worth of property in the east end of Winona, where they will establish their city headquarters and machine shops.

Masked men robbed the bank of Woodstock recently, they held the cashier and his assistant at bay with revolvers while they went through the vault, they secured about $300. There is no clue to the robbers.

Mrs. Ellen T. Hawkins, widow of the late O. P. Hawkins, of Ashley, died at the residence of her son-in-law, Alfred Calony, of Fergus Falls. She had accidentally shot herself two or three days before and had been on the point of death [illegible]. She and her husband were old settlers in the neighborhood.

The Red Wing Brewing Company has been organized and incorporated for a term of 30 years, beginning Nov. 18. The incorporators are: Franz Sommers, J. F. Oliva and Dan Metzler. The capital stock is $50,000. The company has bought Mrs. Christ's brewery on Main street.

Col. C. H. Thompson, special United States Indian agent, who is stationed at Detroit on temporary agent duty, while on his way to his lodgings from the agency office slipped and fell on the icy ground and suffered the probable fracture of the left hip bone, and otherwise seriously injured.

A number of Southwestern Minnesota clergymen met at Winona and organized what is known as the Winona Conference Minister's club, which has for its object mutual assistance along ministerial lines. Rev. L. L. West of this city was elected président and Rev. M. Strothers of Mazeppa secretary. The next meeting will be held at Rochester.

John Flynn, arrested at Red Wing for murder in the first degree for killing Charles Carlson and indicted for manslaughter in the second degree, was found not guilty in the district court. His former good record and circumstances surrounding the case saved him.

Delia M. Dixon, totally deaf, while walking on the Green Bay, Winona & St. Paul road near Alma Center, was struck by an engine and fatally injured. No signs were present of serious injuries and no bones were broken, but the accident caused internal complications.

Wisconsin.

The summer hotel at Idlewilde, near Sturgeon Bay, was destroyed by fire.

Peter band was arrested at Ashland on a charge of stealing an overcoat. He was sent to jail to await trial.

Mrs. J. P. Davis, Jr, aged 80 years, and residing at Menasha, fell off a sidewalk and broke her leg.

Joseph Rollo, a homesteader residing near Rhinelander, was found frozen to death in the woods.

The Eau Claire Mill supply Company, of Eau Claire, has increased its capital to $25,000.

A Racine tailor named Johnson claims to have been held up by highwayman and robbed of $1 and a silver watch.

Mrs. M. Jensen, of Racine, cut off part of her hand while chopping some wood with a new axe.

D. W. Britton's steam dye house at Green Bay was damaged to the extent of $400 by fire.

E. Schradenbach, of North Dakota, has about completed arrangements to put up a barrel factory at Superior with a capacity of 6,000 barrels per day.

Gottlieb Lehman, a pioneer of Fond du Lac County died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. William Warleben, in Fond du Lac, age 77 years.

The body of the unknown man found in the dry-dock at Manitowoc, has been identified as Wenzel Pilz, a shoemaker of that city.

Mrs. August Pfeiffer, of Racine, had several ribs broken and received serious injuries in a runaway accident.

Edward Frier, a Western Union Junction boy, fell upon the blade of an open knife. It went through his wrist and broke off.

The Diamond Match Company's works at Oshkosh were damaged to the extent of $500 by fire.

Part of the goods which were recently stolen from Hauest & Hagen's store, at Appleton, has been recovered at Manitowoc, where the thieves had hidden it.

William Johnson, an electric light repairer at West Superior, was severely shocked while fixing a wire. He was unconscious for an hour.

B. D. Smith, who was sent up for six months, from Oshkosh, for larceny, was rearrested on his release from jail on a charge of forgery.

The Blair Patent Wheel and Axle Company, of Superior, has been organized with a capital stock of $100,000; incorporators Joseph Lemieux, Gelix Bernard and J. C Archambeault.

The new M. E Church edifice which was completed a few days ago at Florence at a cost of $4,000 was dedicated in the presence of a large number of people from neighboring towns.

W. S. Russell, postmaster at Oakfield for the past sixteen years, died at the age of 51 years. He served in the Fourteenth Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry during the late war.

William Neufield, Albert Hyde, and George McDonald, the three men who broke into the Marquette Club House at Chicago and nearly killed Eugene Falhe, of Racine, waved examination and were held to the criminal court in $3,000 bonds each.

The city of Oconomowoc will be lighted by electricity by July 1, 1893, the council having accepted the contract proffered by the Oconomowoc Electric Light Company to light the streets for ten years. A circuit will also be run around Lac La Belle.

According to the shipments of lumber that have been made from Menominee and Marinette the present season it would indicate that the cut by the twenty saw-mills on the river would exceed the amount cut in 1889, which was over 537,000,000 feet.

The report that J. H. Jenkins, of Fort Howard, has been killed in a threshing machine accident in North Dakota was unfounded. The parents of the young man have received word that he is alive and well.

North Dakota.

Postoffice at Valhall, Wells county, has been discontinued.

The house of H. A Loomis, a farmer residing near Henry, was consumed by fire. No insurance.

Gov. Burke, will, at the end of his term of office, associate himself with the Osborne Grocery Company recently formed, and remove to Superior, Wis.

In the district court at Mandan, Henry Nelson was found guilty of shooting Aug. Katske, and sentenced to the penitentiary for four years.

The Northwestern elevator, at Glaston, containing 50,000 bushels of grain, has been destroyed by fire. It is expected that about 25,000 bushels will be saved.

The body of a farmer named Siverson, residing some fifteen miles northwest of Steele, was found frozen stiff about three miles from his home. Siverson leaves a wife and two children.

Gov. Burke has pardoned Rob Roberts, the desperado who was serving a four years' term in the penitentiary at Bismarck for an attempt to murder. Roberts is a chum of Alex McKenzie and it is generally believed he owes his release to McKenzie's intercession.

Iowa.

James Harlik, a young boy, was knifed by a drunken man named Kirz on the public street at Sioux City. He bled almost to death.

Wm. Benzin has been indicted by the grand jury at Council Bluffs for attempting to murder Officer L. Lench, who attempted to arrest him while drunk.

It is understood at Dubuque that Archbishop Satolli will provide that Bishop Hennessy of Dubuque shall become coadjutor to Archbishop Kenrick of St. Louis, with the right of succession.

One of the biggest land deals ever consumated in Mona county was made recently. The land is near Blencoe and comprises 1,200 acres for which the owner, J. J. Yeomans, got $31,000 E. M. Donaldson purchasing property.

The employes of the upper Hershey saw mill, at Muscatine, numbering 100, are out on a strike and will not allow the mill to run. The hours were reduced from 11 to 10 per day and wages accordingly, which caused the strike.

Mine Inspector Thomas, who has charge of the central Iowa coal district, has made his regular annual report which shows that seven counties employ 2,570 men and pay them $1,129,708 annually. They produce coal valued at $1,519,055.

Christopher Ehlers, of Front and Warren streets, Davenport, attempted to cut his throat the other morning. He was caught before he could make a second gash, but is seriously injured. Domestic troubles was the cause.

Another social sensation was sprung at Des Moines when an evening paper announced the discovery of the marriage of Carrie Masser, a clerk in the postoffice, to a butcher named Jones, one year ago. Both live here and the marriage was kept a secret from their parents and friends. The girl was a social favorite in this city.

Magzie Johnson and Wm. O'Brien were parties to a sensational marriage in the magistrate's office at Davenport, recently. The girl had followed O'Brien all over the country and at last located him here, where she forced him to right her wrongs.

Dr. Henry A. Slade, the spiritualist, whose career in London and subsequent trial for fraud created a sensation fourteen years ago, and who in late years has been the leading medium of Paris was taken to the Samaritan hospital in Sioux City, recently, suffering from nervous prostration, bordering on insanity. He is without money and utterly friendless.

Keokuk is threatened with a coal famine, Owing to trouble in the Illinois mines, and a professed scarcity of railway cars, dealers have trouble in supplying the demands for soft coal. The Keokuk Brick and Tile Company had to shut down for an indefinite period on account of a lack of fuel.

The unknown lady who was among the four victims burned to death in the railroad accident at Highland Center, has been identified as Mrs. Finney, of Blakesburg, and is an aunt of Ed. Weir, of this city. The lady left Winfield and had a ticket to Hendrick. She did not arrive at her home in Blakesburg and no word from her was received, which led to an investigation and the ultimate identification.

A Couple of German Jokes.

Corporal (to soldier)—Why is the blade of the saber curved instead of straight?

Soldier—It is curved in order to give more force to the blow.

Corporal—Humbug! The saber is curved so it will fit the scabbard. If it was straight how would you get it in the crooked scabbard, blockhead!

THE DEADLY WINCHESTER.

ONE MAN AND ONE GUN—THREE VICTIMS.

I. M. Van Sickler of Becker County Shoots His Wife Dead, Fatally Wounds a Fargo Man and Kills Himself.

Caused by Jealousy.

Detroit, Minn., Special, Nov. 21.—A horrible tragedy was committed in the town of Silver Leaf, seven miles east of Frazee City, Becker county, between 10 and 11 o'clock Saturday night. A young man named Frank C. Brown, a printer by trade, who last worked on the Fargo Forum, has been camping and hunting for the past month near the house of I. M. Van Sickler, a farmer aged forty years. Saturday night Van Sickler, his wife, a woman of twenty-four, Edward Buel, a hired man, and Brown had a keg of beer and were having a carousal and all were more or less under the influence of liquor. What occurred is told in the testimony of Buel before the coroner's jury, which Brown corroborated. The house is an ordinary log house, with bed room on the side of the sitting room and the kitchen in the rear.

Van Sickler and wife about 10 o'clock became very abusive of each other and he told her to shut up or he would shoot her and she said: "Shoot ahead." He then went into the bed room, brought out a revolver and told his wife if she didn't shut up he would shoot her. She again answered: "Shoot ahead." He fired and broke her wrist and she ran through the open door into the kitchen, but before she could escape Van Sickler picked up Brown's Winchester rifle and fired through the door two shots in rapid succession, both taking effect at once and his wife dropped dead.

Van Sickler turned and fired at Brown, who was trying to escape into the bed room, and was not ten feet away, the bullet going through his right thigh.

Then, without a word, Van Sickler turned the muzzle to his own side and sent a bullet completely through himself. He turned and said to Buel: "I shot my wife, myself and Brown." Buel seemed to realize what had happened and ran out and alarmed the neighbors. As he ran he heard another shot, and when the neighbors arrived they found that Van Sickler had put the muzzle of the Winchester to his mouth and blown the top of his head off. H. Hanson, coroner, and Dr. Holt of Detroit were wired, and as no train was due took a team and arrived about 6 this morning and found Brown still alive, but on account of the nature of the wound, loss of blood and the time that had elapsed before he could have proper care, there is no hope for his recovery.

Murdered in a Stable.

Bradford, Pa., Nov. 21.—Mrs. Lucille Crossmeier, a widow aged fifty years, was found hanging in her cow stable at Farmers' Valley last evening. For a time it was supposed to be a case of suicide. Investigation, however, brought to light a most brutal murder. The old lady had gone to the stable to milk her cow. The murderer, evidently knowing her habits, was lying in wait for her. As she entered the stable door she was seized from behind and [illegible] choked into insensibility. A large pool of blood was found on the floor, marks of fingers were on her throat and frightful bruises from blows upon her head and face were discernible. After committing the deed the murderer hung the old lady by the neck from a rafter. Mrs. Crossmire's husband died last year. Owing to domestic difficulties they had not lived together for a long time. Mrs. Crossmire had much trouble in getting possession of her husband's farm, which was occupied by her son. This son, Ralph Crossmire, has disappeared.

Held Up by Highwaymen.

Fort Dodge, Iowa, Special, Nov. 21.—James Hood, a wealthy farmer living west of town, was held up by two highwaymen last evening. Hood was on his way home from town, and just reached the outskirts of the city when he was ordered to halt by two masked men, who presented cocked revolvers at his head. The robbers secured a valuable gold watch and chain and considerable money. After they left Hood he started to drive back to town, but was halted and told to drive back or he would be shot full of holes. He finally got to town and told his story to the police. Later in the night Deputy Sheriff London arrested two suspicious characters and found the watch and money in their possession. They gave their names as Robert Miller and James Mooran, and are now in jail. The men are evidently professionals.

A Dastardly Swindle.

Springfield, Ohio, Nov. 21.—A sensation was sprung here yesterday and became public property to-day. O. V. Hensley of Cleveland has swindled 150 workingmen of the city out of about $3,000 in cash. He bought a tract of land south of the city and laid it out in lots and sold it on easy payments, part cash, to workingmen. It now transpires that the former owner holds a $9,000 mortgage on the plat, but $1,000 of which Hensley has paid, and the deeds given by Hensley are of course worthless. Hensley has disappeared.

Derailed and Scorched.

Mobile, Ala., Nov. 21.—Ten miles south of Jackson the south-bound train on the Mobile & Birmingham railway jumped the track this morning and went down an embankment into a ditch. Only the engine and tender kept the track. The smoker and a passenger car took fire. They were extinguished with difficulty by the passengers. Of the thirty passengers in the cars all escaped with slight injuries except Edward Adams, a traveling salesman for Stearns & Co. of Cincinnati. He received serious internal injuries.

Actors Marry.

Cincinnati, Nov. 21.—Charles Hayden Coffin, the leading man of the Lillian Russell company, now filling an engagement in this city, and Adelaide M. De Leuw, also a member of the company, were married to-day. This is the denouement of a romance which began in London, where the bride of to-day was the wife of the famous musician Randegger. A divorce has been procured, and to-day the English tenor and the handsome pupil and divorced wife of Randegger were married.

Couldn't Endure Confinement.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Nov. 21.—Poohevan, the Shoshone Indian who attempted suicide by cutting his throat with a piece of broken lamp chimney early Saturday morning on account of being convicted of manslaughter, he having killed an Indian of his tribe, died this morning from the effects of his self-inflicted injuries. He was a fine specimen of the Aborigines, the very thought of confinement was intolerable to him.

Will Leave the Stage.

Terre Haute, Ind., Nov. 21.—Margaret Mather, the actress who recently married Gus Pabst of Milwaukee, will leave the stage and live here with her husband. Mr. Pabst is in this city, and stated to-day that his wife would retire at the end of her present season from the stage.

Storm in New York.

Buffalo, Nov. 21.—The wind and snow storm that struck Buffalo yesterday afternoon played havoc with telegraph, telephone and electric light wires all over Western New York. The Western Union wires are in a frightful shape east of here. Between Rochester and Syracuse on the New York Central there are more than 100 breaks in the commercial and railroad wires. West of Buffalo business is moving without delay. At midnight the wind reached a velocity of fifty miles an hour.

A Laborer Loses His Life.

Montevideo, Minn., Special, Nov. 21.—Andrew Golden, a laborer twenty-eight years old, was run over by the cars to-day and killed.

BOLD ROBBERY PLANNED.

An Express Messenger Arrested.

Chicago, Nov. 21.—George L. Bagley, a United States express messenger on the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific railroad, yesterday morning at 2 o'clock took two packages containing $150,000 from his safe, left the train at Davenport and buried the treasure, but in less than eight hours he was under arrest and the money had been recovered. Bagley left the car and told the baggageman that he was going to drop off the train a moment to arrange for sending some potatoes to his family at Davenport.

His absence from his post was at once reported to the express company's officials in this city and the facts placed in the hands of the city detective bureau. Officers Plunket and Weaver were hurriedly detailed on the case. They learned that Bagley had a female friend at 8110 Michigan avenue in the person of a Mrs. Miller, a dressmaker, and without further ado the detectives posted themselves in the house to await the messenger's coming. When Bagley arrived he was placed under arrest and taken to police headquarters, where he encountered Mr. Wygant, the express company's general agent. After considerable talk he admitted that the money could be found at Geneseo, about a half-hour's run from Davenport. Accompanied by Bagley, Detective Weaver and the company's representatives boarded a train and when Geneseo was reached the money was quickly found. The party has returned to Chicago with the prisoner and money.

Bagley is a married man and lived with his family at Davenport. He has been on the present run about two years, and previously drove one of the company's wagons at Davenport. The dressmaker is not suspected of complicity in the affair and has not been placed under arrest.

Detective Weaver pronounced the robbery the most peculiar that ever came to his knowledge in many years of police service. He gave it as his opinion that Bagley had committed the act without any premeditation and that he had no plan for which to dispose of the large amount of money and acted from only some strange and indefinable reason.

"Bagley told me," said he, "that he had no idea whatever of taking any of the money until out of curiosity he had opened one of the packages. The money was in two packages of $50,000 each. Bagley said: 'After I had opened the package I would have given all my life to undo that one act. I reasoned that to open the package was as great a crime as to take it so I immediately began to devise some plan to conceal it.'"

Davenport, Iowa, Nov. 19.—Express Messenger George Bagley, who was arrested in Chicago on a charge of appropriating a package containing $100,000, was brought here to-day by two officials from Chicago. It is stated and not denied that Bagley took them to the place where he had secreted the package and that it was recovered. The next train bore Bagley and the officers back to Chicago. Bagley has a wife and two children living here. They knew nothing of the truth until to-day. Mrs. Bagley stated to-night that the last time she saw her husband was Tuesday night. For twelve years he has lived here most of the time, and has always borne a good name

THE MARKETS.

CHICAGO—WHEAT—No. 2 spring, 61½ No. 3 spring, 57½to62c. No. 2 red, 69½c.
CORN—No. 2, 40½c.
OATS—No. 2, 29½c.; No. 3 white, 31 to31½.
RYE—No. 2, 47c.
BARLEY—No. 2, 64c.
MINNEAPOLIS—WHEAT—No. 1 hard 79½c. No. 1 Northern; 68½c.; No. 2 Northern 63to65c.
CORN—No. 2 yellow, 41c.
OATS—No. 3 white, 31½c.
RYE—No. 2, 43½.
BARLEY—No. 3, 38to45c.
ST. PAUL—WHEAT—No. 1 hard, 71to72c No. 1 Northern, 68to70c.; No. 2 Northern 65to67c.
CORN—No. 3, 39to40c.; No. 3 yellow, 40 to 41c.
OATS—No. 2, 28to29c. No 2 white, 29½ to 30½c.; No 3, 26to27.
BARLEY AND RYE—No. 3 barley, 35 to 42c No. 2 rye, 48to50c. malt, 60to70c.
GROUND FEED AND MILLSTUFFS—No. 1, $15.50; to 16. No 2, $16.00to16.50; No. 3 $16.50to$17.00; low grade, $12.50 to 13; corn meal, bolted, $20 to 23, do unbolted, $15.25 to $15.75; bran, bulk, $9.50 to 10.50.
MILWAUKEE—WHEAT—No. 2 spring, 67c; No. 1 Northern, 74c.
CORN—No. 3, 41½c.
OATS—No. 2, white, 44½c. No. 3, do. 32½to33½c.

Miners Imprisoned.

Pottsville, Pa., Nov. 21.—A cave-in occurred to-day at the Hazel Dell colliery, Centralia, operated by T. A. Riley & Co., whereby seven or eight men are now imprisoned in the mine, besides two others who have been taken out very badly injured. The colliery is situated about two miles from Ashland, and is a very large concern. Former operators of the works claim that the timbering there was rotten. This, it is feared, had considerable to do with the cave-in.

All the entombed men reside at Centralia, and the deepest gloom prevailed over the little town. This gloom was turned to the wildest kind of joy late this afternoon by the announcement from the mine that the washing away of coal and dirt had progressed so rapidly that the rescuers had been enabled to communicate with the imprisoned men. The driver boy, Kelman, acted as spokesman and announced that all were uninjured and well and waiting for rescue. They were shut up in a cave-in, and to this fact is due their escape from instant death.

Caught in the Storm.

Cleveland, Nov. 21.—Little doubt now exists here as to the fate of the steamer Pontiac. She was a sister ship of the Gilcher, which recently went down with all on board in Lake Michigan. The Pontiac was due at Sault Ste. Marie yesterday. She carried a crew of eighteen men, and was commanded by James W. Lowe. The Pontiac was built by the Cleveland Shipbuilding company after the pattern upon which the Western Reserve and Gilcher were modeled. Fears are also entertained for the propeller Kershaw and her consort, the Ironton, with a combined crew of about twenty-one men, under the command of Capt. William Mack. The Kershaw cleared from Marquette Thursday.

Christian Endeavor Convention.

Grand Forks, N. D., Special, Nov. 21.—The state Cristian Endeavor convention concluded its business session this evening. The following officers were elected: President, Judge R. M. Corothers of Grand Forks; secretary, and treasurer, E. J. Lane of Fargo; vice presidents, E. E. Cook of Dickenson; Miss A. M. Dyer of Casselton; Miss Ella Saunders of Lisbon. Resolutions were adopted condemning the proposed movement for the resubmission of the prohibition question by the next legislature; also the protest against the opening of the world's fair on Sunday and the sale of liquors on the grounds.

Sudden Death of a Dentist.

Woonsocket, S. D., Special, Nov. 21.—Dr. William Dougherty, a leading dentist of this city, dropped dead while engaged in filling a lady's tooth. Deceased was a man of very quiet disposition, about fifty years of age and a member of the Grand Army.

Dwelling and Contents Destroyed.

Jamestown, N. D., Special, Nov. 21.—The fine house of J. W. Creighton, ten miles east of this city, burned yesterday, with the contents, during the absence of Mr. Creighton. Insurance, $700. The house was known as the Ward Bell house.

Corbett and Jackson Meet.

Philadelphia, Nov. 21.—For the first time since the celebrated meeting before the California Athletic club Champion James J. Corbett and Peter Jackson, colored pugilist, stood face to face to-day in a hotel office in Philadelphia. The meeting was friendly. Peter extended his hand, saying to Corbett: "Mr. Corbett, I congratulate you on your splendid victory." Corbett replied in a quiet way, thanking Peter. No fighting talk was indulged in.

The Shot Proves Fatal.

Shawano, Wis., Special Nov. 21.—Richard Kingsley, who was shot in a quarrel at Gillett Tuesday by Robert Newton, died today. The trouble was over a matter of less than $2.

HE FOUGHT LIKE A TIGER.

A CHICAGO MAN IS DOUBLY A MURDERER.

He Slays His Wife's Parents, Wounds Two Other Persons, Fights the Police and Is Almost Lynched.

His Eventful Day.

Chicago, Nov. 21.—Chicago records no more horrible crime nor one accompanied by more sensational details than that which brought death into a home this morning. By the acts of a young man, a double murder was committed, two people wounded and the murderer narrowly escaped violence at the hands of a thousand citizens.

Herman Siegler, a German living with his wife and three children at the residence of his wife's parents, Henry and Caroline Siles, No. 723 North Paulina street, shot his father-in-law and mother-in-law, instantly killing each. His next victim was his wife, but she was only slightly wounded. Before the police were able to disarm and arrest Seigler a number of shots were exchanged and he was wounded in the right side by a bullet from a policeman's revolver. Seigler occupied the lower floor of the house while his parents lived on the upper floor above. It was in the front parlor and hallway down stairs that the shooting occurred.

At 8 o'clock this morning Seigler put on his hat and overcoat and prepared to leave the house. He told his wife he was going hunting and he went to the residence of his brother, William Seigler, 893 North Hoyne avenue, to borrow a shotgun. He secured the gun together with fifteen cartridges. Seigler did not tarry long at his brother's home and returned at once to his own residence, where he arrived at 10 o'clock. He entered by the front door, went back through the hall and placed the gun in a small closet in the kitchen. He took it out almost immediately and returned to the parlor where his children were.

His wife was in the rear part of the house and the first intimation of any disturbance was when Seigler's little ten-year-old son began to scream "Papa, put down that gun!" He was heard by Mrs. Siles, who was with her husband up stairs. Mrs. Siles hurried down to the parlor, and as she entered the room Seigler attempted to elevate the gun as though he intended to shoot her. She did not hesitate a moment, but rushed up to her son-in-law and throwing her arms about his neck attempted to take the gun from him. "Keep away! God is with me!" shouted Seigler as he pushed the aged woman away violently. Then pointing the gun against her left breast he fired. She sank to the floor dead.

Mrs. Seigler, hearing the shot, ran into the house of Mrs. Frederica Heyden at No. 720 Paulina street, calling for assistance. As she passed through the hallway she took her children with her. Leaving the children in Mrs. Heyden's care, Mrs. Seigler hastened back to her house, and as she entered the front door another shot was fired by her husband. It is supposed that it was intended for Mrs. Siles, but some of the shot struck Mrs. Seigler. One entered her right ear and found lodgement in her left arm and one in her right breast. None of these wounds will result fatally.

These shots aroused Mr. Siles and he descended into the hallway. As he stepped from the lower step to the floor Seigler met him. Raising the gun, which he had reloaded, he fired. At the same time Siles raised his right arm to shield his face. It received the full charge, as the two men were within two feet of each other. The flesh was torn from [illegible]e, and a number of shot entered th[illegible] side. It is believed that Seigler then discharged the other barrel of his gun in his father-in-law's face, for portions of his neck and right cheek were torn away.

The shooting occurred while a large congregation was leaving the Evangelical Lutheran church at Bethlehem, close by, and soon between 1,200 and 1,500 people were surrounding the house and a call sent in for the police. They soon arrived. An officer opened the front door of the house and stepped over the dead body of Mrs. Siles. Siegler was then standing in the dining room, and as he saw the officer he raised the gun which he still held. He did not fire, however, for officer Simonson hurriedly turned and ran out to the sidewalk. Siegler followed him closely, and when he reached the door he threw it wide open. The people now collected in front of the house fell back and Officer Simonson drew his revolver and ordered Siegler to surrender. The latter's reply was a shot from the gun which he aimed at the officer, but which went high of the mark, injuring no one. Simonson returned the fire, and Seigler staggered back with a bullet in his right side. Other officers had arrived by this time, and an advance was made on the house. Officers Donahue and Folgy tried to force open the front door, which Seigler had locked when he staggered back into the house, and were greeted with a discharge from Seigler's gun. Officer Donahue's clothing was torn by the shot, and he received a slight flesh wound in the face. After this Seigler went to the rear of the house and remained for some time in the kitchen. Officer McCarthy started into a residence across the alley, and was standing on the door steps when he saw Seigler pass the dining room window in his own house, going toward the front door. The latter coming out, still holding his gun and appearing dazed, started for Paulina street. Officer McCarthy slipped up behind him, seized him by the throat, and before any resistance could be offered wrenched the gun from his hands.

Severe on the Coast.

Portland, Or., Nov. 21.—The severe storm that has prevailed along the northeast coast for the past few days still continues. The wind had a velocity of fifty miles an hour this morning. All vessels arriving report heavy weather. No accidents of any consequence have been reported. Northern Pacific and Union Pacific trains are delayed by the slides and wash-outs caused by heavy rains in the mountains. The Northern Pacific bridge across Grand river forty-four miles east of Tacoma has been washed out, and trains will not be able to pass for a day or two. On the Union Pacific heavy land slides at the Cascades, fifty miles west, will block the traffic for several days. There is only slight delay to mails and passengers, as transfers are made.

His Last Night Raid.

Chicago, Nov. 21.—At midnight to-night Officer Valentine discovered a burglar endeavoring to force his way into a residence on Ashland boulevard. He attempted to arrest him, but the thief refused to halt at his command. Valentine fired upon him, killing him instantly. There was nothing upon his body by which he could be identified.

Death of a Boodler.

Chicago, Nov. 21.—Richard McGlaughrey died to-day. He was seventy-two years of age and had served a short time in Joliet penitentiary for irregularities connected with Cook county's famous board of boodle commissioners.

Suicide of a Lawyer.

Chicago, Nov. 21.—John Irving Veder, a well known lawyer of this city, committed suicide to-day by shooting. No cause is known.

Aldermen Convicted.

Toledo, Ohio, Nov. 21.—Five of the seven members of the city council indicted for boodling are now under conviction. The case of B. O. Manchester, member from the Ninth ward, came to a close this evening, when the jury, after five hours' deliberation, returned a verdict of guilty, as charged. Councilman Donnor's case will next come up.

Tommy Warren Arrested for Murder.

Waco, Tex., Nov. 21.—Tommy Warren, the feather-weight prize fighter, is under arrest for the murder of Clem Stovall, a colored porter, at the Charles house on Oct. 26.

GREAT NORTHERN

TIME CARD.

NO. 3 Daily		NO. Daily
7 40 p m	Lv ......St. Paul......Ar	6 55 am
8 10 " 11	......Minneapolis......	6 25 am
05 a m 216	......Barnesville......	10 25 pm
10 45 am 279	Lv......Crookston......Ar	4 00 pm
*11 15 " 27	......Shirley......	3 30 " *
*x11 45 " 31	......Ives......	x3 00 " *
x12 20 pm	......Wylie......	x2 20 " *
*12 45 " 32	Ar......St. Hilaire......Lv	2 00 " *

*Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

S. S. Buzza Agt,

Dr. H. GRUNDY.

Physician

& Surgeon.

Graduate of the University of Toronto Canada and member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario.

Messages from the surrounding country attended to,

Office in Drug Store

THIEF RIVER FALLS,

NORTHERN PACIFIC

THE

GREAT TRAMSCONENTAL ROUTE.

Passes through Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, Manitoca, Montana, Idaho, Oregon and Washington.

THE DINING CAR LINE

Dining cars are run between Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Winnipeg, Helena, Butte, Tacoma, Seattle and Portland.

PULLMAN SLEEPING CAR ROUTE.

Pullman service between Chicago St. Paul Montana and the Pacific Northwest; and between St. Paul, Minneapolis and Minnesota North Dakota and Manitoba points.

THE POPULAR LINE.

Daily Express Trains carry elegant Pullman sleeping Cars, Dining cars, Day Coaches, Pullman Tourist Sleepers and Free Colonist Sleeping Cars.

YELLOWSTONE PARK ROUTE.

The Northern Pacific R. R. is the rail line to Yellowstone Park; the popular line to California and Alaska; and its trains pass through the grandest scenery of seven states

THROUGH TICKETS Are sold at all cupon offices of the Northern Pacific Railroad to points North, East, South and West in the United States and Canada

TIME SCEDULE,

	Leave Crookston Daily	Arrive Crookston Daily
For Staples, Minneapolis, St. Paul Duluth Ashland and points East and South	7:05 p. m.	8:20 a. m.
For Grand Forks Grafton Drayton, Winnipeg and points in North Dakota and Manitoba	8:27a. m.	7:10 p. m

For Rates, maps, Time Tables or special information, apply to Agent Northern Pacific R R. at Crookston Minn., or

Chas. S. Fee,
Gen. Pass. Agent
St. Paul' Minn.

ST. HILAIRE MEAT MARKET.

All kinds of fresh and salt meat always on hand.

I make a specialty of buying and selling cattle of all kinds.

If you want to buy or sell anything in that line it will pay you to give me a call.

JAMES DAINARD.

FRED Eikhof

DEALER IN CHOICE

WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS.

Beer always on tap.

Pool Room in Connection.

Broadway St. Hilaire.

FRANK IVES,

Attorney and Counselor

AT LAW,

CROOKSTON and ST. HILAIRE, Minn.

Will Practice in ALL The Courts,

OF T E STATE and

and before the U. S. Land Office at Crookston and at Washington.

Will give special attention to contests of claims.

BREVITIES.

Wheat is 60 cents.

How do you like the change of climate?

Fresh Oysters at W. A. Arthurs try them.

Sleighing is excellent but skating is a thing of the past.

Business has been good lately and our merchants are all busy.

Mr. Smedesang, the Wylie merchant, was in town a short time to-day.

George Brady came up from Crookston to-day and will visit friends a few days.

The weather the past few days has been unusually cold for this time of the year.

Fred Eikhof is taking a lay off at Crookston this week on account of poor health.

Andrew Hall is rejoicing over the arrival of a baby boy at his place last Thursday,

R, H. Aimer is tearing down his blacksmith shop and will move to Thief River Falls.

George Williams was down from Thief River Falls and spent Sunday with friends.

C. G. Rapp received a five thousand pound burglar proof safe last week. L. K. Kolstad bought his old one,

It commenced snowing last Saturday night and kept it up until nearly noon Sunday, about a foot of snow falling.

Miss H. Ihlsing returned last Friday from Otter Tail county where she had been visiting friends for several days.

We learn that Editor Meehan, of the Red Lake Falls News, will move his paper to Thief River Falls in the near future.

The flour mill is doing a big business these days and they are turning out a first class grade of flour from the new wheat.

The ladies of St. Hilaire will give an oyster supper in the M, E, Church on Thursday Nov. 24th. All are cordially invited to attend,

Don't forget that the ladies of the M. E. Church have prepared and will give an excellent supper at the church to-morrow evening.

Miss Emma Waldum who has been spending the past year in the southern part of the state came back last Friday and will spend several weeks here.

Martin Williams and M. E. Bjerk were out deer hunting last Monday but returned minus the game. They had hard luck, couldn't even buy a deer.

S. M. Dainard went over to Thompson N. D. last Monday in response to a telegram stating that Mr. Frost. E. T. Spafford's head book keeper had died very suddenly.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis P. Larson, of Sauk Center. arrived on to-day's train and will spend Thanksgiving with Mrs. Larson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Abrahamson, School closes this evening for this week on account of Thanksgiving and the teachers Mr. F. H. Gambell and Miss Lizzie Zarracher will spend their thanksgiving at Crookston.

Weather prophets are of the opinion that we are going to have a long cold winter with plenty of snow, Some give the goose bone and the others the muskrat houses as corroborative evidence of their predictions.

Christ Hall started east after the big snowstorm with a rifle and remarked before going that he would not return until he had killed a deer. His friends look for him to come back before Christmas.

Presiding Elder Knudson, of the Scandinavian M. E. Church, will deliver a sermon on Monday December 5th at the M. E, Church at 2 p, m, In the evening the ladies will, give a festival and auction for the benefit of the church All are cordially invited to attend, Dainard Bros. have purchased the meat market formerly owned by Geo. Vine and Chas, Smith together with their stock of meat and implements. J. A. Dainard will conduct the business and says he will be pleased to have all his St. Hilaire friends call on him while stopping in Crookston.

The Republican and Democratic papers seem to be unanimous in the opinion that the People's party is on the wane. Perhaps the wish is the father of the thought. We think, however, that they will find it on deck just the same at the next election.

The crew who have been laying and surfacing the track between here and Red Lake Falls left last Friday. Part of them will return as soon as the cut and bridge at Red Lake Falls is completed which will probably take about two weeks more. The work is progressing rapidly and by Dec. 10th it is thought that regular trains will be running.

Fergus Falls, Minn., Nov. 16.—[Special]—After eight days of waiting, doubting and suspense it is practically certain that H. E. Bowen will get the certificate, which will give him a seat in congress. He has gone through enough to deserve it. Not only during the long campaign did he endure enough to give him a title to it, but the suspense for the last week has been extreme. In that time Mr. Boen has enjoyed the pleasure of a seat in congress, and he has also suffered the pangs of defeat in a life's ambition. He has been grave and gay, mad and pleased. At times he has been interested, at other times disgusted, Whenever he felt sure that he was elected some report would arrive which, if correct would defeat him. When he was reconciled to his defeat something would turn up which would make him hopeful and interested.

All the counties have reported official returns but Marshall, and Mr. Boen has 227 plurality.

About 400 years ago to-day, it is impossible to fix the exact hour or day. but it was somewhere in the middle of November, 1492, Columbus' followers found on the island of Cuba men in a semi-conscious state smoking dry leaves Columbus made an entry in his note book but did not experiment himself, leaving that feat for the gallant Sir Walter Raleigh. So that now for 400 years tobacco has blessed or afflicted as you happen to think about it, mankind. The Cincinnati Times-Star proposes that the country celebrate Nicotina's quadro-centennial Sunday by every man smoking a better cigar than usual and letting the incense arise as a sweet aroma to the gods.—Journal.

An effort will be made in New York this winter to have the state formally adopt the Myers voting machine for use at all elections. When this is done the result will be declared as soon as the machine is opened, for it registers and counts the votes cast for each candidate and it cannot be monkeyed with for the purpose of changing results. It is or ought to be the coming ballot reform being all that is necessary to make the will of the people absolute at the polls.—Pioneer Press.

Sheriff Grundysen left last night for St. Paul to secure from Gov. Merriam requisition papers to bring back to Polk county from his hiding place in California, Niel Cummings, the defaulting wheat buyer of East Grand Forks. He is located at San Bernardino, a town in Southern California, and if Sheriff Grundysen is successful in his mission in St. Paul he will immediately proceed to the Golden Gate state.—Crookston Times.

To-morrow is Thanksgiving and although the year has not been as prosperous as it might have been, nor free from disaster, still when we eat our Thanksgiving dinner to-morrow we will have many things to be thankful for. Thankful first, that the majority of us are enjoying good health. Thankful again, that although the crops are not good there is enough in the country to keep all from actual want. Let us be thankful for the good things we have and hope for continued good health and prosperous times.

Will President-elect Cleveland call a special session of congress to repeal the McKinley tariff is the prevailing topic in political circles at present. The Democrats have called the present tariff a good many hard names and have claimed that the tariff is responsible for all the ills the people are suffering under. They should lose no time in putting their new tariff bill in active operation and the country can then see if their claims are correct. If correct their future success is assured. If not they will try some other party.

County Commissioner DeMers of his district writes that he is endeavoring to get a list of names of all the farmers in this commissioner district who lost their crop by hail the past season, with a view of getting the legislature this winter to make an appropriation for seed wheat. All who have lost their crop and who need such assistance are requested to send their names to C. P, Demers Brooks P. O. Polk Co. Minn.

Although the train has been making regular runs to Thief River Falls for several weeks it does not yet carry the U. S. mail, It seems that a contract was let last spring for four years for a daily mail and the railroad company refuses to carry the mail three times a week for the amount that is now paid for a daily mail It looks as if the railroad company cannot carry mail as cheaply as private parties, From Crookston here the company gets $750 per year for carrying the mail three times a week, and it is now carried by stage three times a week for only $450, It's a snap to have a pull.

CHATTLE LOANS

I am prepared to loan money on chattle security at reasonable rates. One years time. Call On

H. E. IVES.

TURF TOPICS.

Tammany won more money than any other American 3-year-old this year.

Ormonde, the famous English race horse, has been bought for $150,000, and will be taken to California for breeding purposes.

The Santa Anita weanlings are twenty-nine in number, and a recent visitor says that if size and conformation go for anything they are a grand lot.

Pierre Lorillard is accused of playing a foxy game with Locohatchee with an eye on the early handicaps of 1893. The colt's quarter crack is said to be a myth.

Montana is certainly most flat and stale. He cannot race a little bit any more, and the best thing they can do with him is to put him away until next season.

Pierre Lorillard will send Trainer John Huggins to England to buy some serviceable handicap and stake horses for him, being unable to find what he wants in this country.

English turfmen are excited over the prospects of a match between the Duke of Westminster's colt Orme and Baron Hirsch's filly La Fleche. If made the match will be for $30,000 a side.

An eastern authority says that "Snapper" Garrison will go to England next spring to ride for the English branch of Marcus Daly's stable. His contract calls for $12,000 and expenses.

It is said that the $30,000 G. W. Johnson has been fired. Dr. Knapp, however, had Dr. Sheppard examine the leg before the Brown sale, and his opinion was that if fired it would stand training. So the doctor bought with his eyes open.

WHISPERS ABOUT WOMEN.

Miss Carrie F. Cochrane, of Nashua, N. H., has been appointed a notary public.

One of the new belles of England is a Miss Fraser, who is described as a strawberry blond.

The Baroness James Rothschild is reported to possess the finest collection of fans in Europe.

Miss Ella Bradley publishes a small paper at New Orleans in the interests of colored women, hoping to raise their standard and give them a chance to express their own opinions.

Miss Frances Willard, the prohibition lecturer, strongly advocates Jean Ingelow for poet laureate of England, although she evinces no hope that such will be the queen's—or Mr. Gladstone's—choice.

Mlle. Rose L'Ouverture, a granddaughter and the only living descendant of the great Haytian soldier, lives in the village of Soirao, France. She is sixty-nine years old and dependent upon an annual pension of 1,553 francs paid her by the government.

Miss Helen M. Gould, daughter of the great financier, is worth in her own right no one knows how many millions. She spends more on her charities than on her dress, which, for the street, is simplicity itself. She seldom is seen at any brilliant gatherings. At the opera she wears pretty, but not striking gowns.

ODDS AND ENDS.

The well that prompted Samuel Woodworth to write "The Old Oaken Bucket" is still kept in good condition at Scituate, Mass.

The lord chancellor of England, on retiring from office, has a pension of £5,000 a year for life whether his term of office has been long or short.

Mayalipuram, India, is graced with seven of the most remarkable temples in the world, each of these unique temples of worship having been fashioned from solid granite bowlders.

The knitted woolen sweater worn by athletes and others who must guard against sudden cold when warm with exercise is the almost exact counterpart of the outer garment worn by Dutch fishermen on the coast of Holland.

The hill near Jerusalem where the crucifixion occurred is formed of limestone. The shores of the Dead sea are lined with pumice stone showered out of some volcano that destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah, which cities finally sank beneath the waters of the Dead sea.

INTERESTING ITEM.

It is to the interest of parties contemplating going east to consider the great advantages the Great Northern offers them through its fast passenger service to St. Paul and to all points west to the Pacific coast, their free colonist cars, and magnificent Dining and Sleeping cars. The shortest route, close connections, quickest time and fare as low as the lowest, Any information cheerfully given,

S. S. Buzza
Agent.

MONEY TO LOAN.

I am prepared to make a few choice loans on real estate at 10 per cent straight.

H.E. IVES.

FIFTY CENTS IN CASH

Will secure the Spectator from now to Jan. 1st 1893, a hot political campaign is now on and we will try to make the Spectator interesting we make this low offer so that every farmer in this part of the country can afford to subscribe.

WANTED. Salesmen. Local and Traveling, To represent our well known house. You need no capital to represents a firm that warrants nursery stock first-class and true to name. WORK ALL THE YEAR. $100 per month to he right man, Apply quick stating age.

L. L. MAY & CO.
Nurserymen, Florists and Seeds men,
St. Paul Minn.
(This house is responsible.)

ASTRAY.

Taken up on the premises of the undersigned in St. Hilaire 3 steers past two years old red and white spotted and 1 red steer past three years old. Owner can have same by paying expense of keeping and for this notice.

M. Hendrickson

STRAYED.

From the premises of the undersigned one red bull with a hole in the right ear. A reward will be paid for the return of the above described animal to

M. Hendrickson,

NOTICE.

The Clydesdale Horse Co. of St. Hilaire Minn., will meet at St. Hilaire on Nov. 30th 1892 for the purpose of settling all accounts against said company. Any stockholder failing to pay up all assessments including an assessment to be made on the stock shares of said Co, on said day to pay up all out-standing accounts against it, will forfeit his stock shares in said company. If necessary in order to pay up the debts of said company the stallion Pride of Huron will be sold on that day.

C, A. Johnson, Sec'y.

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
Crookston Minn September 15 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on December 8 1892 viz:

Charles Will Heden D S no. 11561 for the NE ¼ Sec 29 Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land viz:

Ole J. Johnson, A. G. Mostrom, John Mostrom, Knut Steen all of St. Hilaire, Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn. Oct. 29 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on December 8 1892 viz Gustaf Anderson H D 11669 for the SW ¼ Sec 32 Tp 153 R 44.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land viz:

A. Sture of Crookston, E. M. Svenson, A M, Ekstrom, P. A. Ekstrom all of St. Hilaire Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn Oct. 29 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on Dec. 20 1892 viz:

Peter Anderson H D 12740 for the W ½ NW ¼ and W ½ SW ¼ Sec 28 Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Ole J. Johnson, Ole J. Hogg Halvor T Omot, Knut Steen all of St. Hilaire Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn. November 1 1892

Notice is hereby given that he following named settler has filed notice of his inention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver of the U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn, on December 15 1892. viz:

A. P. Sandberg administrator of estate of Peter G. Allsson deceased H D 11173 for the NW ¼ Sec. 20 Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land viz:

J. Johnson, Haakon, Johnson, J. Lind, E. Petterson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co. Minn,

HUGH THOMPSON Register

CLOSING OUT SALE!

At E M Hoff's Store

My whole stock of

Dry Goods and Notions Gents Furnshing Goods $5,000 worth of ready made clothing Foot wear of all kinds and everything belonging to a full stocked general merchandise store will be closed out at cost in the next 90 days.

COME EVERY BODY

AND

SECURE GOOD BARGAINS.

E. M. HOFF

CROWN ROLLER MILL.

EQUIPPED WITH THE LATEST AND BEST IMPROVED MACHINERY.

Manufactures the well known,
PERFECTION FANCY PATENT and WHITE ROSEFLOUR.

Rye and Feed mill in connection.
Flour and Feed always kept on hand
Custom work a specialty.

FRICKER & WELCH Prop,

ST. HILAIRE MINNESOTA

CHAS G. RAPP.

A large and complete line of

General Merchandise.

CONSISTING OF

Dry Goods, Groceries, Clothing Boots & Shoes, Hats & Caps Notions

THE ST. HILAIRE SPECTATOR.
ISSUED EVERY WEDNESDAY EVENIN.
H. E. IVES, Propr.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE:
Advance, $1.50 Per Year
If not in Advance, $2.00 Per Year

Entered in The Post Office at St. Hilaire, as Second Class Mail Matter

WEDNESDAY November 23 1892

BREVITIES

CHATS ABOUT MEN.

Baron Hirsch is about to distribute another lump of $100,000 among English charities.

Whitelaw Reid is the heaviest taxpayer in the town of Harrison, Westchester county, N. Y.

Sir Julian Pauncefote is not only a musician of considerably ability, but has published a number of original compositions.

Chief Justice Peters, of Maine, recently completed the seventieth year of his age, and reports himself in excellent physical condition.

It is rumored that William A. Slater, of Norwich, Conn., the cotton manufacturer, is to have a steam yacht "which is to eclipse anything now afloat."

Secretary Foster is the thirty-first secretary of state, and six of his thirty predecessors became president—Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, John Quincy Adams, Van Buren and Buchanan.

Rev. William J. Potter, for thirty-three years pastor of the Unitarian church at New Bedford, Mass., has resigned, and his congregation has voted to pay him $2,000 a year for five years.

Major Virginius Freeman, one of the best known civil engineers in the south, died recently at Norfolk. He built the Norfolk and Virginia Beach road and at one time was chief engineer in the United States navy.

Dom Sebastian, the new superior general of the Order of the Trappists, is a Frenchman who formerly served as a captain in the Pontifical zouaves and fought with distinction in the army of his own country during the campaign of 1870.

STAGE GLINTS.

Over 280,000 people witnessed "Ali Baba" during its long run in Chicago.

Bernhardt's season under Mr. Abbey in Europe is said to have exceeded all expectations of success.

Robert Downing and company are rehearsing a new play entitled "Richard the Lion Hearted," to be produced for the first time in Toronto.

Jennie A. Eustace, the widow of the "Alabama" company, has a clever paper in The North American for November on "Objections to Theatrical Life."

Manager A. F. Hartz cabled to Paris offering Paderewski $100,000 to appear next season as Adrian Karje, the musician, in Edwin Milton Royle's "Friends." A feature of the play is a piano recital incidental to the story.

In Omaha recently Clara Morris produced a new emotional play called "Claire," an adaptation from the German by herself. The new piece is said to have made a success and is to be continued as the chief feature of her repertory this season.

E. S. Willard will open his New York engagement at the Star theater on Nov. 21, under A. M. Palmer's engagement, supported by Marie Burroughs, Louis Masson, Royce Carleton, Nannie Craddock, and other well known players, in "The Middleman."

THE FASHIONS.

Mixed silk and wool fabrics that are repped from selvage to selvage are in great favor.

Round and slightly pointed waists with corselets, girdles and bretelles are still in high vogue.

Venetian velours is a soft thick cloth with a velvet finish. It is used for jackets, capes and portions of winter gowns.

Some of the autumn bonnets are trimmed with ribbons of ottoman silk in rich stripes, or with uncut velvet with grounds of the most exquisitely varying shades.

Box plaited, coronet and gathered skirt backs are all popular, and the fashion of trimming each of the gored seams all the way from belt to hem on the front and sides is gaining ground.

Nothing could be handsomer than the empire and directoire long coats and cloaks made ready for winter wear. Some are of cloth, others of Russian velours, and the richest of plain and ribbed velvet in combination.

Overdresses have appeared among the latest importations from abroad. One arrangement shows a very close bell skirt, with six breadths (ungored and either open on the sides or down the immediate front) falling over the bell underskirt.—New York Post.

WORLD'S FAIR NOTES.

Mrs. Manak, one of the Eskimos at the Eskimo village at the Chicago World's fair, gave birth to a daughter, who was christened Columbia Susan.

Francesco Paolo Nuchetti, the celebrated Abruzzi painter, is painting at Rome a large picture of St. Dominic, which he intends for the Chicago exhibition.

"What America Owes to Women" is the title of a book which Mrs. Lydia Hoyt Farmer is preparing for the woman's department of the World's fair.

Lorado Taft has placed his two groups before the main entrance to the Horticultural building, of which "The Sleep of the Flowers," is said to be graceful and even poetic.

A Sioux squaw, living near San Diego, Cal., will exhibit in the Woman's building at the World's fair a dress of deerskins, richly embroidered with sixteen pounds of beads. She worked for two years in making the garment.

Mrs. John A. Logan proposes to ask the managers of the World's fair to make an appropriation for bringing over from Scotland a suitable tenant for the Burns cottage in the person of the poet's great-granddaughter, Miss Jean Armour Burns-Brown.

HUMOR

CRUEL ETHELRIDA.

Why It Was That John Fled Away in the Night.

He was plain John Smith.

She was the beautiful and cultivated Ethelrida Martingale.

But what mattered that to him; he loved her.

Love is the great leveler.

Not that it had leveled the sweet, pale Ethelrida exactly, for it had not; but it had knocked John out flat.

Happy Ethelrida, for she had the bulge on him.

It is ever thus.

In love's sandwiches one piece of bread will always have more butter on it than the other will.

Yet Ethelrida was not cruel, and she did not long to let him drop hard enough to cripple him for life.

On the contrary, she sought to let him down on silver strands to beds of thornless roses.

But John wouldn't have it.

Nor is our hero the only man built that way.

He loves but little, or not at all,
Who fears the dumpness of his fall.

That was John Smith all over, and still John was no slouch, as the word goes.

Ethelrida knew what was coming, but she was powerless to prevent it, unless she took an ax to John, and she hesitated to resort to harsh measures.

Woman's nature is ever gentle.

It was a calm and beautiful Sabbath evening when John called for the last time.

"I love you, Ethelrida," he whispered, low and lisping, at about 11 o'clock, "and I want you for my wife."

It was then apparent to Ethelrida that Mr. Smith meant business.

"It cannot be, I fear," she replied, standing him off. "Papa is unutterably opp[illegible] to our union, and he has said he will [illegible]k me in my room and keep me there if I persist in seeing you."

That was a tip John should have acted upon—that and the palable fact that Ethelrida did not rush to his throbbing bosom like an undammed torrent when he had so unmistakably blazed the way for her.

"Love laughs at locksmiths," he said courageously, ignoring the surface indications.

Again was the fair girl balked in her generous purpose, and there came into her face the hard, cold lines of resolution and into her eyes the cruel glint of justice, long deferred.

"Yes, and at John Smiths," she added, a naive simplicity scarcely concealing the edge of the sword.

And John fled away into the misty, murky darkness of unforgetable disappointment.—Detroit Free Press.

A Matter of Duty.

The casual observer would have detected nothing strange in the personality of the youngish party who sat alone in the front parlor. Yet a close scrutiny would have revealed symptoms of mental strain.

Mental strain was something Aloysius De Gughmp could ill afford.

Presently a beautiful little boy flitted into the room.

The youngish party started eagerly from his seat. There was a look of agonizing doubt in his eyes.

"What did she say?" he demanded.

"She said," lisped the child, "to tell Mr. De Gughmp that she'd be right down."

The youngish party could not repress an exclamation of joy.

His face shone with satisfaction.

"And is that all she said?" he asked, striving to be calm.

The child shook his head.

"What was it, Willie? Tell me her words. Every syllable is a treasure to me."

The boy approached and looked trustingly into his face.

"She said"——

Aloysius de Gughmp held his breath.

"She'd be polite although it did turn her stomach."

The youngish party at once resolved to make his call strictly formal.—Detroit Tribune.

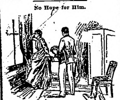
Millions in It.

Servant (pounding on door)—What, ho! within there! Awake, awake!

Dime Museum Owner—What means this turmoil? Why at the midnight hour do you arouse me from my slumbers?

Servant—Peace, master, until you have heard the joyful news. I have here a messenger boy who has never whistled "Ta-ra-ra Boom-de-ay."—Truth.

No Hope for Him.



He—Will you marry me if I stop smoking cigarettes?

She—No, Mr. Sappy. I can't bear the idea of marrying a man who does nothing.—Brooklyn Life.

He Laughed Once Only.

"I suppose you haven't forgotten that it is leap year," he said as he took a seat beside her, "and so I must be careful not to lead the conversation in a dangerous direction," and he laughed.

"I had quite forgotten it," she said with a yawn. "What's the use of remembering it when you never meet a man who is worth proposing to?"

This time he didn't laugh.—Tit-Bits.

Some Hope Left.

"Mother," said the devoted son, burying his face in her lap, "for four long months have I tried to get employment, and I am met everywhere with the same answer." And the miserable youth sobbed aloud.

"My dear son," said his loving mother, "there is still hope. You know Greek and Latin, and did I not hear you say yesterday that in this hour of trial Browning was your greatest comfort."

"I did, mother," replied the youth.

"Then," cried his mother, a gleam of hope lighting her fond eye, "do not despair. If the worst comes to the worst, you can apply for a position as a Boston horse car driver."—Truth.

A Reserved Seat.

"When I was once in danger from a lion," said an old African explorer, "I tried sitting down and staring at him, as I had no weapons."

"How did it work?" asked his companion.

"Perfectly; the lion didn't even offer to touch me."

"Strange! How do you account for it?"

"Well, sometimes I've thought it was because I sat down on a branch of a very tall tree."—Boston Globe.

Discretionary Valor.

Mrs. Bantham—James, I wish you would tell that big, ill mannered fellow on the other side of the car to quit staring at me in that impudent manner?

Mr. Bantham (after a careful scrutiny of the other man)—I don't think I shall bemean myself, Mary Jane, by seeming to be on speaking terms with such a looking man.—Chicago Tribune.

A Slight Misunderstanding.

Doctor—What! your dyspepsia no better yet? Did you follow my advice and drink hot water one hour before breakfast?

Patient—I tried, doctor, but I couldn't keep it up for more than ten minutes at a stretch!—Westfalischer Kurier.

DO YOU WANT TO ADOPT A BABY?

Maybe you think this is a new business, sending out babies on application; it has been done before, however, but never have those furnished been so near the original sample as this one. Everyone will exclaim, "Well! that's the sweetest baby I ever saw!" This little black-and-white engraving can give you but a faint idea of the exquisite original, which we propose to send to you, transportation paid. The little darling rests against a pillow, and is in the act of drawing off its pink sock, the mate of which has been pulled off and flung aside with a triumphant coo. The flesh tints are perfect, and the eyes follow you, no matter where you stand. The exquisite reproductions of this greatest painting of Ida Waugh (the most celebrated of modern painters of baby life) are to be given to those who subscribe to Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893. The reproductions cannot be told from the original, which cost $400, and are the same size (17x22 inches). The baby is life size, and absolutely lifelike. We have also in preparation, to present to our subscribers during 1893, other great pictures by such artists as Percy Moran, Maud Humphrey, Louis Deschamps, and others of world-wide renown. Take only two examples of what we did during the past year, "A Yard of Pansies," and "A White House Orchid" by the wife of President Harrison, and you will see what our promises mean.

"I'M A DAISY."

Those who subscribe for Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893 will possess a gallery of exquisite works of art of great value, besides a Magazine that cannot be equaled by any in the world for its beautiful illustrations and subject matter, that will keep everyone posted on all the topics of the day, and all the fads and different items of interest about the household, besides furnishing interesting reading matter, both grave and gay, for the whole family; and while Demorest's is not a fashion Magazine, its fashion pages are perfect, and we give you, free of cost, all the patterns you wish to use during the year, and in any size you choose. Send in your subscription at once, only $2, and you will really get over $25 in value. Address the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York. If you are unacquainted with the Magazine, send 10 cents for a specimen copy.

Ask Your Dealer For

WHIPS.

FEATHERBONE is made from Enameled Quills—nature's own toughest, and strongest elastic material. Best wearing whips made for 25c., 50c., 75c., $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50. All styles for Buggy, Cart, Track, Team and Riding. Be sure and ask for a FEATHERBONE.

FOR SALE BY

S. M. HOFF

Going to Buy
A Dictionary?
GET THE BEST,
Webster's International.
A Choice Gift
A Grand Family Educator
A Library in Itself
The Standard Authority

WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY

SOLD BY ALL BOOKSELLERS.

The International is a new book from cover to cover, fully abreast of the times, and is the successor of the authentic "Unabridged." Ten years were spent in revising, 100 editors employed and over $300,000 expended before the first copy was printed.

Do not buy reprints of obsolete and comparatively worthless editions.

Send for free pamphlet containing specimen pages and full particulars.

G. & C. MERRIAM CO., Publishers,
SPRINGFIELD, MASS., U. S. A.

U.S. LAND OFFICE.

Crookston, Minn., Nov. 12 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn on November 29 1892. viz:

Theodore Halvorson D S 11943 for the SE¼ Sec. 29 Tp 153 R. 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Knut Steen, Anton Lee, Ole J. Hegg, Ole Johnson, all of St. Hilaire Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register,

E. T. SPAFFORD S. M. DAINARD

E. T. SPAFFORD & CO.
DEALERS IN
LUMBER, LATH AND SHINGLES.

A complete stock of all kinds of Lumber Lath, Shingles, Mouldings, Building Paper Sash, Doors and Screens, Lime, Cement Stucco, Plastering Hair, Brick etc. always hand at the lowest market prices.

S. M. Dainard, Manager.

BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE, MINN.

E. T. SPAFFORD & CO.
WILL ALWAYS PAY THE
HIGHEST MARKET PRICES
FOR
All kinds of
CATTLE.
Also for Cord wood, Hay, Oats, Barley and flax.
Ground Feed for Sale
S. M. DAINARD.
Manager.

Reserved For
THE
ST. HILAIRE
TOWNSITE
COMPANY

W. A. ARTHUR.
DEALER IN
FRUITS, CONFECTIONARY
TOBACCO AND CIGARS.
STATIONARY OF ALL KINDS
Lunch Counter
Warm meals at all hours.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE MINNESOTA

JUSTUS L. JOHNSON
DEALER IN
pure medicines Fancy articles, perfumer and stationery, paints oils and dye stuffs.
Cigars, Candy, Fruit and Soft Drinks always on hand.
Barbershop in connection
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE

I CAN SAVE YOU
MONEY
If you wish to make
REAL ESTATE
LOANS.
For full particulars call [illegible] ddress
H. E. IVES.
SPECTATOR OFFICE ST. HILAIRE.

HOLMES BRO'S
Dealer in
HARDWARE, TINWARE,
We are carrying a heavy and complete line of Heating and Cooking stoves.
GOOD GOODS LOW PRICES.
CALL ON US FOR BARGAINS
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE MINN.

FARMERS STORE
NEW GOODS AT HARD PAN PRICES.
If you want to save money do your trading with
HALL BROS.
DEALER IN
Dry Goods, Groceries
Notions.
BROADWAY [illegible]

S. M. HOFF
DEALER IN
HARDWARE
A new and complete stock of all kinds of Hardware, Tinware, Stoves, Fencing wire, Nais, in fact everything usuay kept in a first-class Hardware Store,
AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES
Call and examine Goods
and Get Our Prices.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE.

DR. PRICE'S
Cream Baking Powder.
The only Pure Cream of Tartar Powder.—No Ammonia; No Alum.
Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

THE FIRST THANKSGIVING.

It Lasted a Week and Everybody Was Invited.

What do you think of a Thanksgiving feast spread out under the trees and lasting for a week? Yet this actually happened—the whole village gave the feast and every one was invited.

And even then they were not satisfied, so they sent and invited their nearest neighbors. They invited ninety of their neighbors, and as the village itself consisted of only about fifty people you can see how hospitable they were. If you could have seen this little village you would have thought it a poor affair. It had only one little street of log huts facing one another, beginning in the forest and ending in the forest, yet near the sound of the great sea and both sea and forest were dear to the villagers, for upon them they depended greatly for food. From the sea they procured bass, cod, lobsters, shell-fish and other sea food, from the forest they brought venison, wild turkeys, and other game; and for both they were grateful, for there had been a time in the history of the village when both sea and forest had seemed to fail, and during this period one half of the inhabitants had died and were laid in graves leveled with the earth so that their enemies might not find out how weak they were. So you can see why they loved the sea and forest. Perhaps though, if you had asked them, they would have said that they loved the sea best, for they knew that its waters stretched away from their little forest home for thousands of miles till they dashed against the coasts of England, the home that they had left forever but which held for them still many things as dear to them as life. And so the ocean never seemed as strange to them as did the forest with its thousand unfamiliar sights and sounds and where the wolves howled through the long night hours, and their dark-skinned enemies prowled both night and day.

But although the log huts with their windows of oiled paper might seem poor and mean to you and hardly to warrant the giving of such a feast, yet to the invited guests the village seemed quite a grand affair. For the villagers, having no white neighbors nearer than New Amsterdam on the South or Port Royal on the north, both of which we are hundreds of miles away, had asked to their feast the red Indians who lived in the forest as they were their nearest neighbors, and to the Indians who lived in wigwams or slept on the bare ground Plymouth village in the autumn of 1621 seemed a fine place, and it would have puzzled any of them to imagine what more could be required in the way of comfort or luxury. The special cause of the feast was the gathering in of the first harvest. Ten months before this the pilgrims had landed on Plymouth knowing that hardship, danger, and death lay before them, and during the first months they had suffered as we can not now even imagine. The bitter cold the fear of the Indians the sickness caused by exposure, lack of food, and the hardships of every kind made the long winter seem like an endless torture. But it passed away at last and spring came. The air grew balmy, the forest turned beautiful, the children gathered wild flowers, the earth yielded willingly to the labors of the husbandmen and promised a fair harvest, and perhaps best of all, there appeared one day in the village street an Indian who came armed neither with tomahawk, or arrow, but who held out his hands toward the villagers as if in benediction and uttered the word "Welcome."

This was Samoset, a messenger from the great Massasoit, a noble and generous chieftain, who from that time proved a sincere and enduring friend of the whites, and so the following summer was one of great comfort to the colonists, brightened with the prospect of a good harvest, and cheered with the friendship of Massasoit.

In the autumn the harvest, consisting of twenty acres of corn and six of barley and peas, was gathered in, and then the Thanksgiving feast was proclaimed as an expression of Thankfulness and joy. A few days later the governor sent four men out after game, and so successful were they that in one day they killed enough to serve the entire company for a week.

The guests, among whom were King Massasoit and Samoset, came to the forest painted in the gaudiest colors in honor of the occasion. White, yellow and blue seemed favorite colors, Samoset himself being painted a brilliant red. The services began with a prayer of Thanksgiving, to which the attending Indians listened with no less reverence than their white brothers, for to them it seemed that the Great Spirit was the father of all and loved all his children equally. A great feast followed, and when this was finished there were military exercises and games, in which both the Pilgrims and their guests took part. Then it was that Captain Miles Standish and his troops performed such wonders with powder and shot that the Indians were greatly awed and thought that there must be some magic about it, while the red men themselves shot their arrows with such skill, threw their tomahawks with such unerring aim, and entered their games with such fierce earnestness that the whites were very glad that they had come as friends instead of foes. As for the children, they had hard work to decide whether Captain Miles Standish or Massasoit was the greater, while both seemed greater even than the Governor, to whom everyone bowed in respect.

The merry-making lasted a week, during which time some of the Indian guests went into the forest and returned with five deer, which they presented to the governor and Miles Standish as a token that they wished to contribute something to the feast, and after this great feasting and rejoicing the Indians went back to the forest homes and the Pilgrims began to fit up their little log houses more snugly, for the winter was coming on again.

This was the first Thanksgiving ever held in America. A similar festival was held many times during the colonial days, and from being the chief day of the year to the people of New England it has become at last a great National holiday. But on no occasion has its meaning appeared so beautiful and significant as in that far-off time, when suffering yet from past dangers and knowing full well that others were yet to come the Pilgrims at Plymouth joined hands with their dark brothers of the forest and proclaimed the faith that led them at last to victory in their fierce battle for life in the new world

MEN
We will send you the MARVELOUS and UNFAILING French Preparation, CALTHOS FREE by MAIL, and a legally executed guarantee that CALTHOS will STOP Discharges and Emissions, CURE Varicocele, and RESTORE Lost Vigor.
Use it & pay if satisfied.
Von Mohl Co., Importers, Cincinnati, Ohio.

CURES CATARRH.
LONDON BALM
LONDON BALM CO. NEW YORK
CURES CATARRH HAY FEVER
PRICE 50c
SOLD BY YOUR DRUGGIST.

FAT FOLKS REDUCED
Mrs. Alice Maple, Oregon, Mo., writes "My weight was 320 pounds, now it is 195, a reduction of 125 lbs." For circulars address, with 6c. Dr. O. W. F. SNYDER, McVicker's Theatre, Chicago, Ill.

Asthma The African Kola Plant, discovered in Congo, West Africa, is Nature's Sure Cure for Asthma. Cure Guaranteed or No Pay. Export Office, 1164 Broadway, New York. For Large Trial Case, Free by Mail, address KOLA IMPORTING CO., 132 Vine St., Cincinnati, O.

WE WANT 1,200 ACRES. Largest in the West. Valuable Specialties.
$100,000.00
Responsible, High-est Com. & Salaries. SALESMEN
For our immense stock of NORTHERN GROWN FRUITS, Ornamental Trees, Shrubs, Etc. Experience not necessary. PAY WEEKLY. Apply at once for terms, etc., stating age. The JEWELL NURSERY CO., Lake City, Minn.
Name this Paper every time you write.

FREE FORMULA FACE MASSAGE to patrons ordering our $2 or $3 Beauty box, containing every requisite for beautifying the Face and Scalp. Removing all Blemishes. Two cent stamp for particulars. Samples 50 cts. to any part of U. S. CAROLINE VON WERNER, M. D., Syndicate Block, Minneapolis, Minn.

Garfield Tea Overcomes results of bad eating. Cures Constipation, Restores Complexion, Saves Doctors' Bills. Sample free. GARFIELD TEA CO., 319 W. 45th St., N.Y.
Cures Sick Headache

"German Syrup"
William McKeekan, Druggist at Bloomingdale, Mich. "I have had the Asthma badly ever since I came out of the army and though I have been in the drug business for fifteen years, and have tried nearly everything on the market, nothing has given me the slightest relief until a few months ago, when I used Boschee's German Syrup. I am now glad to acknowledge the great good it has done me. I am greatly relieved during the day and at night go to sleep without the least trouble."

TOWER'S FISH BRAND
The Best Waterproof Coat in the WORLD!
SLICKER
The FISH BRAND SLICKER is warranted waterproof, and will keep you dry in the hardest storm. The new POMMEL SLICKER is a perfect riding coat, and covers the entire saddle. Beware of imitations. Don't buy a coat if the "Fish Brand" is not on it. Illustrated Catalogue free. A. J. TOWER, Boston, Mass.

YOUNG MOTHERS
We offer you a remedy which if used as directed, insures safety to life of both mother and child.
"MOTHERS FRIEND"
Robs confinement of its PAIN, HORROR and RISK, as many testify.
"My wife used only two bottles of Mothers' Friend. She was easily and quickly relieved—is now doing splendidly."
J. S. MORTON, Harlow, N. C.
Sent by express, charges prepaid, on receipt of price, $1.50 per bottle. Sold by all druggists. Book To Mothers mailed free. BRADFIELD REGULATOR Co., Atlanta, Ga.

If you have Malaria, Piles, Sick Headache, Costive Bowels, Dumb Ague or if your food does not assimilate, will cure these troubles. Dose small. Price, 25c. Office, 39 Park Place, N.Y.
Tutt's Tiny Pills

"WELL BRED, SOON WED." GIRLS WHO USE
SAPOLIO
ARE QUICKLY MARRIED. TRY IT IN YOUR NEXT HOUSE-CLEANING.

A THANKSGIVING LESSON.

One rainy, dark Thanksgiving day,
Not many years ago,
I sat with folded hands and watched
The parlor fire burn low.

My thoughts were on the mould'ring past;
The nearly vanished year
Had mostly been composed of days
Unhappy, sad, and drear.

My heart was full of bitter pain;
I brushed some tears away;
"I've few things to be thankful for
This dark Thanksgiving day!"

But scarcely had I breathed the words,
When passing by my door
I saw a little crippled boy
With garments patched and poor,

A tattered cap adorned his head;
Some old, worn shoes his feet;
And yet, to my surprise, his voice,
Was ringing clear and sweet:

"What shall I render to my God,
For all His gifts to me?
I turned away; the tears of shame
Fell so I could not see.

"Dear, little child," I thought "you've taught
A lesson by your song;
Its influence within my heart,
Shall live and flourish long.

"If you, afflicted and forlorn,
Can yet so grateful feel,
Reflecting not upon life's woe,
Remembering all its weal;

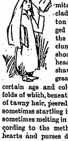
"What earnest thanks my heart should fill,
For all that I enjoy!
My faith in Him the darkest clouds,
Shall not henceforth destroy."

I knelt and asked forgiveness for
Each hasty, thankless word
That I had uttered, and I'm sure
The loving Father heard.

That song returns, when not content
I'm tempted e'er to be,
"What shall I render to my God,
For all his gifts to me?"

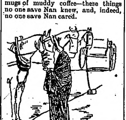
—By Clara M. Saunders.

TWO OLD PALS WERE THEY



HALF newsgirl, half beggar—that was Nan's profession. She was a ragged mite, picturesquely clad in a faded cotton gown that dragged luxuriantly at the heels of her clumping cowhide shoes. Over her head the inevitable shawl, a dingy, greasy article of uncertain age and color, from out the folds of which, beneath a tangled mass of tawny hair, peered her great eyes, sometimes startling in their keenness, sometimes melting in their pathos, according to the method of touching hearts and purses demanded by the moment, or rather by the individual who happened to glance their way. She was not an attractive figure, in spite of the expressive eyes and the splendid white teeth that flashed occasionally in response to the generosity of a "regular" customer in the matter of five-cent pieces. On her face was the dust and soil of long weeks' standing; on her hands and her gown the scars and rents of many a street battle; about her entire person the unlovely air of premature knowledge of the world and its evil that the street gives its children.

Early in the morning business-men hurrying to their offices heard her shrill little voice piping the morning news. Well into the night belated fathers on their way to their firesides were attracted by her exaggerated sobs and for the sake of their own children filled up her greedy hands with pennies, or a bluecoated, gruff-voiced policeman told her to "move on," or sometimes a gayly-dressed woman of the town, out of a sense of fellow misery, gave from her own pitiful store enough for supper and a lodging. Where she slept, in what dark alley she exchanged these hard won pennies for thick sandwiches and mugs of muddy coffee—these things no one save Nan knew, and, indeed, no one save Nan cared.



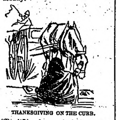
SAW THAT THE FEEDERS WERE ADJUSTED.

Best of all the scant joys of the street to Nan—better even than the gorgeous eccentricities of the dime show to which she had once been—were the horses, some of them belonging to the great business houses that bordered her, "beat," some of them country horses driven in for a day's "pleasuring" in the city streets that noon after noon took their dinners under her personal supervision. Of course their respective owners supplied the bag of oats into which they thrust their eager noses—but it was Nan who saw that the feeders were properly adjusted, who held them up when their contents were becoming exhausted, who gathered into a neat pile whatever was spilled over the edges and fed it to her charges with her own grimy little hands.

She tried hard to obey the dictates of her savage sense of justice and to perform her self-imposed task without favoritism, but among the big, well-fed, draught horses and lazy country ponies was a lean-ribbed, spavined beast cowed by long ill-usage and overwork, which, perhaps because she recognized that he, like herself, was an "underdog," appealed first to Nan's sympathy, then to her care, finally to her poor starved affections. One by one she deserted the others and devoted the noon hour which she had divided among a dozen solely to "Rackles," as she dubbed the old cab horse. At first suspicious of such unwonted kindness, Rackles had at last grown dependent upon it, and the ragged child standing guard over the rusty horse became a familiar sight to those who passed through Monroe street at midday.

But at last there came a period when Rackles felt that something was amiss. To be sure, Nan came to him as usual, responded affectionately to his joyful whinny of greeting, and patted his wrinkled nose kindly. The scattered oats that fell upon the sidewalk, however, were no longer fed to him as a sort of dessert after his more substantial meal. They were gathered up as scrupulously as ever, but alas! consigned to a paper bag, the mouth of which Nan held tightly closed in spite of wistful glances and silent hints.

"Don't yer see, ole feller" the little girl explained to him in her street patois, "I'm a savin' dis yere for yer Thanksgivin' dinner. If yer eat it all up now yer won't have nothin' extry then. So yer needn't look at me that way cos yer won't git a bit till nex' T'ursday."



THANKSGIVING ON THE CURB.

"Don't yer know wot Thanksgivin' is?" she went on, snuggling up to the horse's warm neck. "It's a day w'en everybody has good dinners, turkey, and pie, an' white grapes—that is, mos' everybody—people wot live in big houses, an' kids wot have mothers an' fathers, an'," (this with bitterness, "newsboys as has dinners guv. to 'em by missioneraries.

"It's a mean thing to be nothink but a girl like me, or a poor ole skinny hoss like you, ain't it, Rackles? But don't yer mind, ole feller, youse an' me'll have Thanksgivin' dinner jest the same, won't us?" And Rackles rubbed his nose confidingly against her arm, not fully understanding, but yet in some way resigned to his present deprivation.

Thanksgiving dawned cold and gray. All the previous day Nan's eager feet had flown up and down the street on business bent. Since early morning she had been abroad with her papers, but, for some reason money was "tight." Perhaps people were too much interested in their own holiday affairs to bestow much attention on those of other folks; perhaps her rivals were more energetic than even she. At all events, 12 o'clock found her with a very few pennies with which to make a feast. The philosophy born of long experience of cold and hunger is not easily disturbed, however, and, in spite of her limited resources, Nan was undismayed.

"Guess Rackles'll have ter go widout no sugar," she said, counting over her wealth, "but here's enough fer a sanwhich an' a piece er pie. Rackles can have half er my apple wot I swiped yesterday, an' all dose oats, an' mebbe that'll do. 'Taint turkey nor yet cranberry sauce, but we can make b'lieve about it an' have lots er fun."

It was later than usual when the familiar cab rattled around the corner and Rackles drew up to the usual stand. Nan, who had begun to feel, like many another hostess whose guests are tardy, that a Thanksgiving dinner eaten entirely alone when she had anticipated company would be an extremely unpleasant function, welcomed him rapturously, unmindful of the oath that his driver hurled at her, and as soon as the latter disappeared behind the swinging doors of "Jake's saloon" busied herself about her preparations, with two anxious housewifely little puckers in her smooth young forehead.

"YEP," SAID NAN."

On the curbstone, beside her friend, she spread two of her unsold morning papers, feeling that so important an occasion demanded something out of the common. "Them's table-cloths," she told Rackles, who viewed these unusual proceedings with mild questioning eyes.

"Youse can have a whole one fur youse dinner an' I'll have one fer mine. That's more'n they gives yer in restrents, cos I've watched 'em troo de winders."

In the middle of one paper she poured the long-hoarded oats, checking Rackles' too eager advances toward them until she, too, should be ready to eat. On the other she placed her own "sanwhich" and pies. The apple she kept concealed beneath her shawl, partly that Rackles might not be tempted into any breach of table etiquette, partly as a "s'prise" to crown the banquet.

So crouched on the pavement, her legs drawn up beneath her thin calico skirt for warmth, her breath steaming in the frosty air, the horse contentedly munching beside her within petting distance, Nan began her poor little dinner, which, like that memorable feast of the Massachusetts Bay colonists many years ago, when Thanksgiving day had its birth, was destined to end in a veritable feast.

Not everybody in all the city was blind; not everybody was unresponsive to the pathos of such a child's brave cheeriness.

The career of the "sanwhich" had been brought to a satisfactory end serious inroads had been made upon the pie, when Somebody, a tall, broad-shouldered Somebody in a big ulster, came slowly down the street and stopped before the little girl.

"Look out, can't yer?" said Nan, never looking up. "Youse'll spill dem oats."

Somebody's eyes, looking down on the child and the horse and the sidewalk feast, felt queer.

"But I want to ask you something," he said gently. Then with appealing directness, "Won't you go to dinner with me?"

Nan glanced at him quickly, then bit viciously at her pie.

"Yer jokin'," she said.

"Indeed, I'm not," he replied earnestly. "You see, I'm away from home. I haven't any one to spend thanksgiving with me, and," making the strongest plea he knew, "I'm lonesome."

Nan fixed her keen eyes on him searchingly. "D'yer mean it, honest injun?"

"'Honest injun,' I mean it. Try me and see."

"Well," she said, slowly, "mebbe I will, but yer'll have ter wait fer Rackles ter finish. I promised him ter eat Thanksgiving dinner with him, an' I'm goin' ter do it." "You won't mind if I go, will yer, ole feller?" she asked, turning to the horse caressingly. "Youse can have de apple, yer know."

"Yep," said Nan, rehearsing her experience to a properly envious crowd of fellows next day: "yer bet it was bully. Defines' restrent yer ever saw, chany wid flowers into it, table cloths smoother'n Rackles' nose, an' a whole waiter ter order roun.' An' dere was turkey, an' inyins, an' currink jell (none er yer ole, common crambelly sauce) an' pie, an' puddink, an' icecream, an' lot more things wot I don't remember the names on.

"I on'y wish," she added, pensively, "I on'y wish I hadn't eat so much afore I was inwited."

EXPLOSIONS OF OIL LAMPS

Little Danger Results if People Will Only Keep Cool

Even the explosive quality of the modern oil lamp is now a subject of doubt. An English experimenter says that he has tried in every way known to him to make a kerosene lamp explode and has not yet succeeded in doing so. His theory is that various so-called explosions have merely been the lighting of spilled oil caused by the upsetting or breaking of lamps. He moreover goes on to assert that the best quality of oil is slow to ignite, and if smothered at once with a piece of carpet or some woolen garment the flame is easily put out. The chief thing necessary in such a case, says the New York Tribune, is presence of mind. If the lamp upsets it must be picked up at once and set right, so it shall not have time to ignite the spilled oil. A metal lamp which cannot be broken is much less liable to danger than a glass or porcelain lamp unless such a lamp has a metal font. If people remain cool-headed, neither open a door to create a draught, as they usually do, nor rush out of the room to leave the lamp to work its destruction, there is very little danger from a metal lamp. But it requires presence of mind and coolness of judgment to pick it up instantly and smother the flames on the carpet or rug. It is just the same courage that is needed in many events in everyday household life. Half the tragedies in the world are caused by panicky people who lose their presence of mind at the very time that they need it most. If oil ignites on the kitchen floor a pan or a box of sand or common earth will smother it as quickly as anything else.

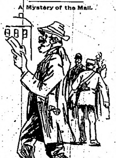
Why Stammerers Are Able to Sing.

Stammering depends on a want of harmony between the action of the muscles (chiefly abdominal) which expel air through the larnyx and that of the muscles which guard the orifice by which it escapes with that of those which modulate the sound to the form of speech. Over either of the groups of muscles by itself a stammerer may have as much power as other people, but he cannot harmoniously arrange their conjoint action. Nervousness is a frequent cause of stammering. It is possible that the defect in some instances may result from malformation of the parts about the back of the mouth. The fact that stammering people are able to sing their words better than to speak them has been usually explained on the supposition that in singing the glottis is kept open so that there is less liability to spasmodic action.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Hawks Are Afraid of Humming Birds.

Notwithstanding their diminutive size, pugnacity is one of the most conspicuous traits of humming birds. Even kingbirds and the boldest hawks are afraid of them, being compelled to retreat before the impetuous assaults of the tiny warrior, whose boldness is only equaled by the lightning-like rapidity of his movements, thus baffling any attempt at resistance on the part of the more powerful adversary. The lance-like thrusts of the needle-like beak are usually directed at the eyes of the enemy. When two or more individuals of either sex happen near the same spot spirited and often violent conflicts are almost certain to ensue.—Boston Transcript.

A Mystery of the Mail.



Shabby Ungenteel "gent" (reading a letter just received)—My dear old boy come and join us Thanksgiving Day at an informal dinner. Russ Sage, Rufe Hatch, Bill Vanderbilt, Willy Wally and a few others of our set will be there. You don't need to wear full dress—that same old suit will do. Yours fraternally, JAY GOULD.

Do not leave the turnips out too long.

In Ireland there are 40,000 mud cabins consisting of but a single room.

A Confession.

"I remember, as well as if it only happened yesterday, that in my younger days, I once walked twenty miles at a stretch for the purpose of thrashing a hated rival."

"And did you return on foot?"

"No, they brought me back in an ambulance!"—La Epoca.

Any one in possession of 25 cents can go to the nearest dealer in medicines and procure a bottle of Salvation Oil and be cured at once of rheumatism, neuralgia, or any pain or ache.

The Daily Herald, of Little Falls, has suspended publication.

Do not allow yourself to be imposed on by the many novel schemes, advertising new and un-tried so-called cough remedies; but stick to the old reliable, Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, the unfailing cure for all affections of the throat and chest.

There is a ministerial crisis in France, the cause being the bill empowering the government to suppress violent anarchistic newspapers.

Allen's Iron Tonic Bitters give tone and vigor to the whole system. All genuine bear the signature of J. P. Allen, Druggist, St. Paul, Minn.

A committee of the council of the Imperial Federation league reports a plan for a federation of all the self-governing states of the British empire.

DESERVING CONFIDENCE.—There is no article which so richly deserves the entire confidence of the community as Brown's Bronchial Troches. Those suffering from Asthmatic and Bronchial Diseases, Coughs, and Colds, should try them. Price 25 cents.

John Smears, of Henderson, was struck by a passenger train and instantly killed.

Deafness Cannot be Cured
by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.
We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
Sold by Druggists, 75c.

Democrats indulged in a ratification meeting at Sleepy Eye the other night, with a torchlight parade, fireworks and speeches.

To Cleanse the System
Effectually yet gently, when costive or bilious or when the blood is impure or sluggish, to permanently cure habitual constipation, to awaken the kidneys and liver to a healthy activity, without irritating or weakening them to dispel headaches, colds or fevers, use Syrup of Figs.

A suit to recover delinquent real estate taxes has been commenced in the Ninth Judical District court of Redwood County against the Winona & St. Peter road.

Mother's Friend
is the greatest blessing ever offered childbearing women. I have been a midwife many years, and in each case where Mother's Friend has been used, it has accomplished wonders and relieved much suffering. It is the best remedy for rising of the breast known, and worth the price for that alone.
MRS. M. A. BREWSTER, Montgomery, Ala.
Sold by all druggists.

The crisis in the French cabinet continues.

To Young Mothers
who are for the first time to undergo woman's severest trial, we offer you, not the stupor caused by chloroform, with risk of death, for yourself or your dearly-loved and longed-for offspring, but "Mother's Friend," a remedy which will, if used as directed, invariably alleviate the pains, horrors and risks of labor, and often entirely do away with them.

The Deacon case again comes up for hearing in a Paris court.

Wake Them Up!
That's what should be done with the kidneys when they grow sleepy. Their inaction precedes their disease. That capital diuretic, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, gives exactly the right impetus when they become sluggish. Use it and keep out of danger, for you are "in it" if your kidneys don't act. This medicine is also adapted to malarial and rheumatic ailments, want of vigor and irregularity of bowels, liver and stomach.

Rumor has Lord Roseberry betrothed Princess Victoria of Wales.

COPYRIGHT 1891
It's flying in the face of Nature to take the ordinary pill. Just consider how it acts. There's too much bulk and bustle, and not enough real good. And think how it leaves you when it's all over!

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets act naturally. They help Nature to do her own work. They cleanse and renovate, mildly but thoroughly, the whole system. Regulate it, too. The help that they give, lasts.

They're purely vegetable, perfectly harmless, the smallest, easiest, and best to take. Sick Headache, Bilious Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the Liver, Stomach and Bowels are promptly relieved and permanently cured. One tiny, sugar-coated Pellet for a gentle laxative—three for a cathartic.

They're the cheapest pill you can buy, for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned.

You pay only for the good you get.

This is true only of Dr. Pierce's medicines.

Ely's Cream Balm WILL CURE CATARRH
Price 50 cents.
Apply Balm into each nostril. ELY BROS., 56 Warren St., N.Y.

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till cured. DR. J. STEPHENS, Lebanon, Ohio.

IMPORTED Percheron & Shire Stallions, first class $500, 1, 2 & 3 years' time. Imported mares cheap. Hiram C. Wheeler, Odebolt, Sac Co., Iowa.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.
CATARRH
Sold by druggists or sent by mail. 50c. E. T. Hazeltine, Warren, Pa.

Mr. David M. Jordan
of Edmeston, N. Y.
Colorless, Emaciated, Helpless
A Complete Cure by HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.
This is from Mr. D. M. Jordan, a retired farmer, and one of the most respected citizens of Otsego Co., N. Y.
"Fourteen years ago I had an attack of the gravel, and have since been troubled with my Liver and Kidneys
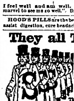
gradually growing worse. Three years ago I got down so low that I could scarcely walk. I looked more like a corpse than a living being. I had no appetite and for five weeks I ate nothing but gruel. I was badly emaciated and had no more color than a marble statue. Hood's Sarsaparilla was recommended and I thought I would try it. Before I had finished the first bottle I noticed that I felt better, suffered less, the inflammation of the bladder had subsided, the color began to return to my face, and I began to feel hungry. After I had taken three bottles I could eat anything without hurting me. Why, I got so hungry that I had to eat 5 times a day. I have now fully recovered, thanks to
Hood's Sarsaparilla
I feel well and am well. All who know me marvel to see me so well." D. M. JORDAN.
HOOD'S PILLS are the best after-dinner Pills, assist digestion, cure headache and biliousness.



They all Testify
To the Efficacy of the World-Renowned Swift's Specific.
The old-time simple remedy from the Georgia swamps and fields has gone forth to the antipodes, astonishing the skeptical and confounding the theories of those who depend solely on the physician's skill. There is no blood taint which it does not immediately eradicate. Poisons outwardly absorbed or the result of vile diseases from within all yield to this potent but simple remedy. It is an unequaled tonic, builds up the old and feeble, cures all diseases arising from impure blood or weakened vitality. Send for a treatise. Examine the proof.
Books on "Blood and Skin Diseases" mailed free.
Druggists Sell It.
SWIFT SPECIFIC CO.,
Drawer 3, Atlanta, Ga.

THE HUNGER CURE.
In Siberia the hunger cure used to be a very popular punishment, but now when they have a political prisoner who refuses to disclose secrets, they simply keep him on a diet of salted herring, with nothing to drink. This generally brings confession when nothing else will. The tortures of the poor victim suffering from water under these circumstances can better be imagined than described. Something akin to this is the agony undergone by the friends of a consumptive who sees the dear form wasting away inch by inch upheld by hope, each day drawing nearer the fatal circle of the grave, but each day thinking that there is an improvement over the previous condition. The time to fight consumption is when the malady first makes its appearance in form of a cold then it can easily be warded off by taking Reid's German Cough and Kidney Cure, a remedy that cures all maladies that arise from a cold by stimulating the system, by inciting the kidneys to action and by receiving the congestion of the lungs. Get this great remedy of any dealer, and do not be persuaded into allowing him to give you something which he says is just as good, for there is nothing that equals this great remedy. It contains neither opiate nor naracotic but is mild, gentle, pleasant and will certainly cure you. Get it of any dealer. The small bottles 25 cents, the large ones 50 cents.
SYLVAN REMEDY CO., Peoria, Ill.

Telegraphy and Electric Engineering
Taught by practical Telegraphers and Electricians. No department of a business College, but a thorough special course. Circulars Free.
McALLISTER'S SCHOOL OF TELEGRAPHY.
819 Nicollet Av. Minneapolis Minn.

EARHUFF ORGANS
The Only Absolutely Mouse and Dust Proof Organ On the Market.
Artistic designs, good workmanship, best Hand rubbed finish. Every Organ Guaranteed. If not handled by your dealer write to factory for prices. Address,
J. G. EARHUFF, ORGAN CO.
NORTH ST. PAUL. MINN.

FREE MEDICAL TREATMENT,
In order to thoroughly and quickly introduce our London System of treatment and the Bio-Chemical Remedies, we will give FREE medical services until cured, to all sick persons who will send us this advertisement by mail. No charge for the OLD DOCTORS skillful professional services. No expense whatever to patients except for medicines actually taken. We expect you to recommend us to your friends after you are cured. Diseases of a chronic scrofulous or private nature affecting the Eye, Ear, Head, Throat, Lungs, Liver, Stomach, Skin and Generative Organs, effects of La Grippe, Catarrh, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Spermatorrhoea, Seminal Weakness, Piles, Fistulas, Secret Diseases, etc., quickly, safely and permanently cured. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed. Cut this "ad" out and send it for free treatment to
Dr. A. L. COLE, Room 21, 405 Nicollet Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.
Medical Director of the London Medical and Surgical Clinic.

DOUBLE Breech-Loader $7.99. RIFLES $1.50 WATCHES GUNS BICYCLES $15
All kinds cheaper than elsewhere. Before you buy, send stamp for catalogue to The Powell & Clement Co., 166 Main St., Cincinnati, O.

THE UNIVERSITY Commerce AND FINANCE.
619-21 NICOLLET AVE., MINNEAPOLIS.
Students are flocking in. It is becoming generally known that this institution qualifies its students to merit and receive permanent and remunerative employment. Earnest, painstaking, efficient teachers in English, Business and Shorthand branches. Send for artistic prospectus. HOWARD L. RUCKER, Presi't.

KESTOL BROS.
EXPORTERS AND
DEALERS IN RAW FURS
331 Maine St., Waukesha, Wis.
Send for Price List.

Minn Hist Society
MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

St. Hilaire Spectator.

VOLUME XI. ST. HILAIRE, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 30, 1892. NUMBER 19.

THE NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

DIGEST OF THE NEWS FROM ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

All Important Occurrences of the Past Week, Boiled Down and Arranged for Rapid Reading.

Washington.

The United States representatives in the international monetary conference prepare proposals for discussion by that body.

Assistant Secretary Bussey, of the interior department, makes a report.

President Harrison, in his annual message, will earnestly indorse the McKinley law and the principle of protection.

The acting secretary of the treasury has amended the quarantine regulations so as to allow entry to all vessels with clean bills of health.

Secretary Noble has approved a list of 210,337 acres of Northern Pacific land in North Dakota. This large block is added to the taxable property of the state and more will follow.

The supreme court has rendered a decision invalidating the patent granted to Henry root of New York for the method of constructing cable railways now in common use. The ground for the decision was the fact that Root allowed his invention to be publicly used for two years before applying for his patents.

Invitations for proposals for surveying the boundary line between South Dakota and Nebraska will be published in Yankton and Huron papers, in South Dakota; and Omaha and Lincoln papers in Nebraska. Advertisements have been prepared and forwarded. Proposals are to be submitted to the general land office. Secretary Noble directs that the contract be let to the lowest responsible bidder. Congress appropriated $20,000 for the work.

Accidental Happenings.

A Chicago special says: Thirty sheds containing 220,000 barrels of salt belonging to the Michigan Salt Company were almost totally destroyed by fire in Cummings. The loss is estimated at $250,000.

The establishments of the Milwaukee Bedding company and S. Karpen & Sons, upholsterers, were destroyed by fire. The total loss is $15,000. Neither of the firms carried any insurance. The building, a four-story frame structure, was owned by Philip Carpetis, and was valued at $20,000, and is covered by insurance.

A six-story iron and stone building, Nos. 148 to 154 Twenty-third street, occupied as a furniture store by Otis Corbett, burned. The loss is estimated at $250,000. The fire originated in the sales rooms on the first floor. How it started is not known. Loss partly covered by insurance.

A disastrous fire started in Wright & Craighill's fertilizer establishment at Lynchburg, Va. The fire soon got beyond control, and the adjoining building occupied by W. A. Heffron as a sash, door, blind and stained glass manufactory was laid in ashes. The large tobacco factory of S. P. Hasley and R. C. Stokes & Co., were next destroyed. The total loss is estimated at about $140,000, with about $150,000 insurance.

Personal Mention.

Miss Luella Cool, a leading dentist of San Francisco, has been placed in charge of dentistry at the Stanford university.

Milton Saylor, formerly a congressman from Ohio, died at his home in New York from heart failure.

John G. Moore, business manager of the Richmond, Ind., Independent, has fled the country. He is wanted for embezzlement.

Mme. Pauline Lucca, known in private life as Baroness Walhofen, the well known opera singer, is lying dangerously ill at her residence in Vienna.

Charley Reed, the actor died of heart disease at the United States hotel in Boston He opened in "Hoss and Hoss" at the Hollis Street theater, but he was only able to appear two nights.

Judge Roger A. Pryor of New York summarily dismissed a connubial infidelity case by laying down the maxim that the lover who would kiss a lass and tell about it could not be believed under oath. This is a step toward the complete recognition of woman's rights.

In the British house of commons there are seven Jewish members, all of whom sat in the last house, and all of whom have been re-elected. They are all related to the Rothschilds. Baron Henry de Worms, Sir Julian Goldschmidt, Mr. Stern and Mr. Cohen are cousins. Mr. Montague is a brother-in-law of Mr. Cohen, and Mr. Leon's wife is a cousin of the other.

Among the Wicked.

A Spanish fishing boat was sunk off San Sebastin, Spain, and five persons were drowned.

John Irving Veder, a well-known lawyer of Chicago, committed suicide by shooting himself. No cause for the action is known.

The rinderpest prevails on twenty-three estates in Mecklenburg and on five in Holstein.

Gov. Flower has pardoned George H. Pell, the note broker, serving seven years for taking part in the attempt to wreck the Sixth National Bank of New York.

The Emperor of Germany was recently photographed in the uniform of Cuirassier of Frederick the Great. In the picture he is surrounded by six adjutants. This is said to be the 130th picture of William since his accession to the throne.

Among the votes cast at Plymouth, Marshall county, was a paster ballot for James G. Blaine. It was cast by a voter who voted for Blaine in 1876, and has voted for him ever since. This Republican declares he shall vote for the Maine man as long as he lives.

The engagement is announced of Count Ernest George Geresdorff, an officer in the First Uhlan guards, and Miss Nellie Peters, of Louisville, Ky. Miss Peters will spend the winter at Berlin with her sister, Mrs. J. A. Armstrong.

Harry Wingate was shot and killed by his cousin, Oscar W. Hills on Fleming Fork near Enterprise, Ky., The difficulty came up over a girl whom Wingate had succeeded in taking away from Hills. Hills escaped, and is being closely pursued by officers.

A riot occured at Memphis, growing out of a forcible attempt to lay the tracks by the Citizens' Street Car Company, when refused a franchise by the city. Policemen and track layers engaged in a battle. Revolvers were drawn and clubs and stones were freely used. Several persons were injured.

The court martial which tried Assistant Engineer Danforth recently, on a charge of disobedience of the lawful orders of his superior officer, found him guilty and sentenced him to one year's suspension from the naval service.

Rewards aggregating $2,000 have been offered for the arrest of the persons who have desecrated scores of graves of soldiers at Martinsville, Ind., and neighboring towns. Tombstones have been torn up and others painted red, and graves have have been trampled upon.

From Other Shores.

Mrs. Deacon wins her divorce proceedings in France.

The international monetary conference opens in Brussels.

De Lesseps will resign as president of the Panama Canal company and be succeeded by Leon Say.

In the reichstag Chancellor von Caprivi reads a telegram which Bismarck declares he forged, causing the Franco-Prussian war.

The prosecution of the directors of the Panama Canal company begins in Paris.

Great commotion is caused in the French chamber of deputies by charges of bribery in connection with the Panama Canal company. Three challenges result.

The Italian parliament was opened the other day by King Humbert in prison. The Queen and the ladies of the court were present in the gallery, and were heartily cheered. King Humbert was given an enthusiastic reception.

A dispatch received at Paris from Porto Novo states that the French troops have entered Abomey, the capital of Dahomey, without meeting with any opposition. King Benanzin has vanished, and the French are in possession of the capital.

Sir John J. Caldwell Abbott, premier of the Dominion of Canada, has resigned from that office. Sir John Abbott will spend the winter in Egypt, and it is reported has telegraphed his family to make arrangements to join him there.

Baron Jacques de Reinach, a financier of considerable note, is dead. The cause of his death has been carefully kept secret. He was implicated in the formation of the Panama canal scheme and to a certain extent as a conspicuous stockholder. It is rumored that he committed suicide for fear of investigation of the canal company's business by the government.

Sporting Trifles.

Yale defeats Princeton at foot ball, 12 to 0

Thomas Dodds and Thomas Carney employes of the Union Switch Signal company, at Braddock, Pa., fought thirty-three rounds recently with bare knuckles. The contest was decided a draw. Both men have been arrested.

Railroad Circles.

The Atchison threatens to withdraw from the Western Passenger association.

The Great Northern prepares for an immense celebration in St. Paul to mark the completion of its line to the coast.

A great scarcity of cars for the shipping of grain from South Dakota is reported by the various lines.

It has been practically agreed that a one-fare round trip rate will be made by the various roads to the world's fair.

The Milwaukee announces that the forms of application for clergymen's half-fare permits for next year are ready. It is desirable that those desiring to make use of them should intimate their intention of so doing as early as possible.

The Political World.

Kansas Republicans put on foot a project to divide Kansas into two states.

A New York paper makes the statement that Hill will resign the senatorship.

Oregon Populists claim that one of their electors was elected.

Official returns from all the counties in Illinois give Cleveland 425,249 votes; Harrison, 397,424; Bidwell, 24,690; Weaver 20,985. Cleveland's plurality over Harrison, 21,-824.

Congressman John J. O'Neil has announced that he would contest the election in the Eleventh Missouri district of Charles Joy, Republican, who was elected by an apparent plurality of sixty-seven votes, alleging gross frauds.

The official count of Kansas, as by the secretary of state, shows that the proposition to hold a constitutional convention was defeated with the recent election by a majority of 1,284. The result is a great disappointment to those anti-Prohibitionists who hoped to secure the repeal of the prohibition law.

Labor.

Mr. Powderly is re-elected general master workman of the Knights of Labor.

Homestead strikers are taken back by their former employes.

Miscellaneous Iteam.

Montana has a very heavy snowfall.

The pope writes a letter on the state of the Catholic church in America.

Unique ceremonies attend the hoisting of the Turkish flag at the world's fair grounds.

Prof. Smith, of the Lane Theological seminary, it is decided by the Cincinnati presbytery, must stand trial for heresy.

The Catholic archbishops, it is believed, approved Archbishop Ireland's school plan at their recent conference.

It is learned that it is the Holmes comet, and not Biela's which will soon be visible, and that it is receding from the earth instead of approaching it.

An organization called "The Industrial Legion of the United States" is formed to carry out the measures embodied in the Populist platform.

Judge McConnell, at Fargo, N. D., sets aside a divorce granted ex-Paymaster Yorke, of the navy, who now finds himself the possessor of two wives.

Rufus B. Richards, professor of Greek at Dartmouth, has been unanimously elected director of the school of archaeology at Athens, Greece.

A. L. Mason, who was stricken with paralysis in Chicago a month ago, died at his home in Kansas City. He was the wealthiest citizen of Kansas City, his estate being valued at about $2,000,000.

A petrified man was found in a cave in the foot hills 15 miles west of Eddy, N. M. It was brought in and is now on exhibition. It is 5 feet 10½ inches high, well proportioned and has been a fine specimen of manhood.

A Seattle, Wash., special says: The board of local marine inspectors have given their decision holding Capt. John A. O'Brien guilty of negligence in stranding the whaleback steamer Charles W. Wetmore, on the night of Sept. 8, off Coos bay, and have revoked his license.

J. W. Sheridan has recovered $11,178 damages from the Gulf, Colorado & Santa Fe railroad in the district court of Concho county., Tex., for the killing of his wife by a train which ran into her buggy at Ballinger last spring. J. A. Younger, whose wife was killed with Mrs. Sheridan, also has a damage suit pending.

When the recent conference of Roman Catholic archbishops adjourned, it was to meet again at Chicago Sept. 12, 1893, while the world's fair was in progress. The conference also provided for a congress of Catholic laymen, to be held in Chicago Sept. 5, 1893. Eminent speakers from Europe, as well as this country, will address the congress.

NORTHWEST NEWS BUDGET

THE WEEKLY ROUND-UP OF IMPORTANT NEWS.

A Concise Account of the Happenings of the Past Week in Minnesota, North Dakota, Iowa and Wisconsin.

Minnesota.

Rev. S. M. Campbell, a well-known Minneapolis divine is dead.

George Crown, living a few miles above Red Wing, has mysteriously disappeared.

Mrs. Fredericka Schmidt, an old lady, residing at Sleepy Eye, was run over by a passenger train and killed.

It is thought the lumber output of the Minneapolis mills will reach very little short of 500,000,000 feet for the season.

Fire destroyed the Mayhew & Hinses paint and wall paper store at St. Cloud. The total loss is $5,000; insurance, $3,000.

Sawyer & Arnold, of Minneapolis, have purchased all of Sawyer & Austin's lumber yards along the Preston & Reno branch.

Michael Murphy of Kingston, county commissioner died at Litchfield of apoplexy.

E. E. Vansolen, a brakeman on the Eastern Minnesota, was killed at Mora while coupling cars.

While driving home from Lake Crystal George P. Butler, of South Bend, was killed by being thrown from his buggy.

Charles Bazille, accused of killing William J. Dunneback in St. Paul, is discharged from custody.

A man near Frazee City, Minn., kills his wife, fatally shoots a Fargo printer, and commits suicide.

Lake Pepin is completely bridged over with ice, and teams will be crossing in a few days if the weather continues cold.

Joseph Hondura dropped dead of heart disease at his home in Le Sueur Center. He was thirty-two years old and had been married four months.

John Sterns, a pioneer resident of Goodhue county, having lived there since the fifties, died suddenly, aged eighty-five years.

The Red Wing Brewing Company has been organized and incorporated for a term of thirty years with a capital stock of $50,-000.

Jack Burke, an employe of a logging camp on the French River, was caught beneath a falling tree and fatally injured. He was taken to Duluth.

The Journeymen Barber's Union of Minneapolis, has begun active warfare against the barbers who continue to open their shops on Sunday in defiance of the law.

August Swedburg, of Minneapolis, was run over and killed by a Soo line passenger train near the Great Northern shops. Swedburg was about 40 years old and married.

The jury returned a verdict at Duluth in the case of John Erickson, for the murder of Matt Mattson, of manslaughter in the first degree.

The Central hotel and Union meat market at Moorhead burned. The entire stock of the market and most of the furniture of the hotel were saved.

C. O. Hollstrom's horse ran away at Red Wing, throwing him and his two daughters out of the carriage. Holdstrom will probably die.

In the case of the State vs. Gebhardt Nezler, at Wabasha charged with attempt to kill, the jury returned a verdict of not guilty.

Ole Juveland, living near Aspelund, was found dead near his home. His temple was crushed, and as he was known to have bitter enemies it is thought he was murdered.

It is reported from Fergus Falls, that Henry Feig, the Republican candidate for congress, has found sufficient errors to warrant a recount of the congressional vote in his district. He will demand a recount.

The arrest of N. B. Saunders, formerly of Minneapolis, son of N. Saunders, was made at Mankato, on the charge of opening mail belonging to the firm of French & Co. Saunders is in jail.

Charles Rynda was instantly killed at Montgomery by the bursting of a woodsaw, a piece of which was driven through his brain. He was twenty-eight years of age and single.

The railway drawbridge at Hastings has been closed for the season. The number of boats which passed up and down the river was 602; barges, 585; rafts, 86. The water in the river is lower than ever known before, 7 foot below the gauge.

J. P. Ahern and W. H. Gisdale, of Red Wing, were found guilty of selling liquor without a license. They pleaded guilty to nine other charges of a similar nature which will be left to the decision of the supreme court.

The bar in the mill pond at Minneapolis, which has a tendency to shut off the water supply to the West Side pumping station, and which has been an object of much anxiety on the part of the city officials, is to be removed.

The Minnesota Fish Commission has decided that it will not have an exhibit at the World's Fair. The smallness of the appropriation—$1,000—and the small amount of space reserved for the exhibition are assigned as the reason.

Flour stocks are being rapidly cut down at Duluth as the close of the season approaches. They aggregated 170,111 barrels, against 247,869 barrels a week ago, 102,983 barrels a year ago, and 58,567 barrels this date in 1890.

Joseph Jesse, a young lad of a highly respectable family, stole $20 recently from the money drawer in H. C. Farmer's livery stable at Stillwater. This morning he was sentenced to 60 days' imprisonment in the county jail.

Peter Peterson was knocked down and robbed on Lake avenue south Duluth. Two men did the work with the assistance of a "billy." William Riley and Peter McLeran were arrested shortly afterwards as suspects. The thugs secured a check for $20 from Peterson.

The output of Duluth and Superior mills in one week recently aggregated 41,920 barrels, against 38,826 barrels the week before and 17,689 barrels for the corresponding week a year ago.

An unknown man, who prowls around Red Wing nights frightening women and children, has created no end of terror. So far all efforts to apprehend him have been futile, but an organized attempt will now be made.

Fire destroyed Godfrey Fleckenstein's brewery and contents at Faribault. The engine and boiler were not injured. Loss on building $1,000 on machinery $1,000, on stock $2,000, partly insured. The fire is supposed to be the work of an incendiary. Mr. Fleckenstein will immediately rebuild.

A Verndale special says; a serious if not fatal accident occurred in Leaf River township in a rather peculiar manner. Clement Thompson, coming into his barn hurriedly, was badly injured by a pitchfork in the hands of the hired man, who was clearing out the barn. The fork entered at the shoulder, reaching into the lungs.

Mason Prothero, a brakeman on the Northwestern railway was instantly killed at Winona. He was examining a car brake between two foreign cars provided with bumpers. While in this position the slack of the train was released and his head caught between the bumpers and crushed to an unrecognizable mass. He was thirty years of age and resided at Baraboo, where his remains were taken.

Wisconsin.

Joseph Parent, an early settler of Marinette, died at the age of 87 years.

Oshkosh is to have a society blue book. It is to be gotten out by January 1.

Henry Dubay, of Tomahawk, was shot in the leg by some reckless deer hunter.

Jacob Welch and Frank Ricker, two young La Crosse men, were arrested at that place on a charge of larceny.

Frank, the 15-year-old son of Rev. C. M. Keach, of Black River Falls, died suddenly at his home in that city.

George Stangl, of La Crosse, was held up by a highwayman and relieved of some cash and a gold watch.

The State Board of Control has gone to Waupun to examine the state prison at that place.

A glandered horse belonging to Mr. Gehring, of Freedom, Outagamie County, was killed.

The West Point Company, of Madison, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $3,900.

William Baldewanda was fined $50 and costs at Oshkosh for assaulting Ald Gums, of that city.

Miss Mathilda Grasse was married to William Arndt at the home of her parents in the town of Waubeka, Ozaukee County.

Mrs. Elizabeth O'Flaherty, an old settler of Rock County, died at her home in Janesville, aged 84.

Fannie Sustache, of the town of Caledonia, Racine County, has sued Lena Rosival for $3,000 on charge of slander.

The farm house of M. T. Itzender, of Caledonia, Racine County, was entered by burglars, who got away with considerable clothing and some jewelry.

Robert Tapling, keeper of a small book store at Racine, disappeared from his home in that city, and his stock has been attached by creditors.

Henry Collette, of Depere, has consented to pay over to the United States $5,000 as indemnity for timber taken from public lands.

John Holland, an employe of the Wisconsin Refrigerator factory at Eau Claire, fell off a scaffolding and broke his arm in two places.

J. B. Jones, a farmer living near Stevenstown, La Crosse County, had his left hand and two ribs broken in a runaway accident.

Miss Rose Linde, a Fond du Lac girl, had a narrow escape from drowning while skating on the river at that place. She broke through the ice and was rescued with difficulty by some men who were near at hand.

It is likely that the plant of the Victor Manufacturing Company, of Springfield, O., will be removed to Janesville. Representatives of the Ohio firm have secured an option on 100 acres of land at Janesville.

Henry Mansfield, employed at the Minnesota flour sheds at West Superior, fell from the dock upon the ice, a distance of 14 feet, and received injuries from which he died shortly afterwards.

Frederick Fick, a farmer residing at Newburg, Washington County, was seriously injured in a runaway accident. His right hand was so badly crushed that it was necessary to amputate the index finger.

A strange incident in connection with the marriage of Miss Sophia Vieth to Joseph Nero, at West Bend a few days ago, was that the couple were married in the same building and in the same room in which the bride's mother was married just thirty-eight years ago.

Winslow Staples, living near Grantsburg, fell out of his wagon and lay on the road unconscious for several hours before being discovered. He suffered a partial stroke of paralysis of the left side, and it is doubtful if he can recover.

Dane County will probably soon have a new jail. At a meeting of the County Board a resolution was introduced for the appointment of a committee to receive plans and proposals for a new jail to cost not more than $45,000.

The contract has been let for rebuilding the plant of the Mace Marble Gloss Lime Works, at Menomonee Falls, which were recently destroyed by fire. A large force of men have commenced cleaning up the debris.

Sever Serly, former treasurer of Chippewa County, who was sentenced eighteen months ago to four years in state prison for embezzlement, has been granted a pardon by Gov. Peck, and has returned to his home in Chippewa Falls.

North Dakota.

The residence of M. Collins at Grand Forks burned, with all its contents. Loss, $300; insurance, $1,000.

The Goodman stock of clothing and furnishing goods was sold at Jamestown under executions aggregating $18,000. Morris Beck an employe of the embarrassed firm, purchased the stock for $13,000 and will resume business at once.

The committee appointed to collect subscriptions to the Chautauqua Association sick collected $2,000, and anticipate no difficulty in collecting the balance. They are much elated over their success.

Charley McGraw aged 16, stole $25 from Mrs. Bunker's restaurant at Devil's Lake where he was a waiter, and had bought a ticket for Grand Forks, but the lateness of the train detained him till 10 p. m., when he was arrested and $21 recovered.

George Marden, a switchman in the employ of the Northern Pacific Railroad company at Jamestown, who fell under a car and had his arm crushed near the shoulder died in the city hospital. He was a young man and had been in the employ of the company but a short time. His parents live in California.

Harry Woodruff, the boy who is supposed to have shot himself near Jamestown and gave his name as Thurner Gies, is in a critical condition with a bullet in his chest. He came from St. Johnsbury, Vt.

The North Dakota Christian Endeavor convention held two sessions at Grand Forks. The officers for the ensuing year are: President, R. M. Carothers, of Grand Forks; vice president, E. E. Cook, of Dickinson, Miss A. M. Dier, of Casselton and Miss L. Saunders, of Lisbon.

Peter P. Stevens, 30 years of age, a resident of Hankinson, while out hunting on the 17inst., was shot and instantly killed by the accidental discharge of his gun. He was alone at the time. The entire charge of shot struck him in the left breast, tearing the heart all to pieces.

Prof. L. Estes, of the chair of astronomy of North Dakota university, reports the vanguard of a comet in sight. Edward Bobbins, a student in the university, saw about sixty meteorites, all radiating from Andromeda. They were observed between 9 and 9:30 o'clock, the observation covering about half that period.

A Buffalo dispatch says that safe blowers broke into Andy Lowry's place and blew open his safe, securing $500, and they also visited Olson's drug store, where they got $28, and at next door to Lowry's they secured $25 more. The burglars are supposed to have left on the Eastern. One hundred dollars reward is offered. A safe was also blown to pieces at Pye when the door was unlocked all the time and there was nothing in it.

Judge McConnell of Fargo rendered a decision in the suit brought to decide who was entitled to the $1,000 reward for the arrest of Remington, who murdered Flett at Arthur two years ago. He decides that Sheriff McLaren is not entitled to any of it, but that it shall be divided between the Byrnes Bros., of La Crosse, and William Rose, at whose house Remington's fiancee was stopping when he was arrested.

Iowa.

Sam Pratt, an old man, fell into a well at Waverly and killed himself.

Colored miners are going from Oskaloosa to Indian Territory by scores. Thirty-five left recently. The exodus extends into all the country towns in the Southern Iowa mining districts.

A. Tragard, sitting on a straw stack, shot and killed Arthur Lindquist with a small rifle accidentally at Ottumwa. The boys are about 15 years old.

A son of R. Haynar tried to cross the track in front of a train, at Coon Rapids but failed. He sustained probably fatal injuries. The horses were killed.

Albert Wright, from Eldon, was held up and robbed of $75 on the public streets at Ottumwa by toughs, who beat him till he was insensible. His skull is cracked.

Leslie Miller, a merchant, of Rock Rapids, swallowed gasoline by accident, and was found on the steps senseless. Restoratives revived him, but he is in a precarious condition. He attempted to fill a tube with the fluid by blowing the air out, when it rushed into his lungs and throat.

The grand jury at Des Moines returned a verdict against Peter McGuire, a police officer, for shooting and fatally wounding a negro named Silas Hicks, five months ago. J. Collins a young man, was sentenced to three and a half years in the penitentiary for raising a check for $6.35 to $1,635.

The United States express messenger, George I. Bagley, who appropriated $100,-000 was brought to Davenport. An indictment was returned by the grand jury, charging grand larceny by embezzlement. Bagly asked time to plead, and was committed. It is thought he will plead guilty in a short time, and throw himself on the clemency of the court.

A Sioux City special says:—Nearly four years ago Axel Anderson, civil engineer, was reported killed in a wreck in Washington Territory. Relatives never heard of him and his name was printed in the list of the dead. The other day his brother received a letter from him at Spokane, saying he is alive and well. Persistent efforts made to learn if he was the man killed never resulted in securing any information. His letter gives no explanation of his doings since the report of his death.

Medicine Taken by Dial Time.

Mrs John Rose Margruder, a daughter of the late Henry D Cooke, the banker, has made her home for the last ten years in Mexico, where her husband has mining interests. During the greater portion of the time she is the only woman in camp, and on this account, as well as in order to be of aid in case of illness, she has acquired considerable knowledge of medicine. A clever device adopted to show the ignorant native women when certain powders or pills should be administered was to make a little sketch of the country in that immediate vicinity and mark off on the mountainside the different stages of the sun from early morning to evening at which the medicine was to be administered.—Washington.

A Good deal of the World's Fair's chance of becoming a paramount success will depend upon the reasonable moderation of Chicago's people in providing plenty of accommodation at rates that shall be remunerative without being exorbitant. Not a little responsibility, too, will devolve upon the railroad companies in their conduct of transportation. In both cases the adoption of the most proper plans will prove the most profitable for Chicagoans and railroads as well as for the public.

The policemen of New York have been supplied with clubs that can be carried concealed from sight. The new "billet" is shorter than the old one, but thicker, and correspondingly heavy. This is a commendable change. Some policemen have a particularly offensive appearance with a club swinging from the wrist-string that ill-befits thier positions as guardians of the peace.

The recent application of electricity to tanning in France has resulted in reducing the time of tanning a large ox hide from 16 to 18 months in pit tanning, and from 5 to 6 months in liquor tanning, to 96 hours in both cases and also does away with continuous hand labor and the disagreeable odor so characteristic of tanneries.

England imports annually about 50,000 tons of palm oil; but it is considered that this is a very small amount compared with what might be the case were the enormous supplies fully or even moderately realized.

ANOTHER CONTINUANCE.

MORE TIME IS GRANTED BY REQUEST

Of the Prosecution in the Mead Murder Case—The Three Men Indicted at Waupaca, Wis., to Be Tried in the Springtime.

Wants a Change of Venue.

Waupaca, Wis., Nov. 29.—The court convened to-day for the purpose of trying the Mead murder case. The crime was committed ten years ago. Judge Webb called the case and District Attorney Gutrnsey stated that it was the desire on the part of the state to continue the case over the term. J. V. Quarles of Milwaukee read affidavits setting forth the fact that as the case now stands he did not deem the evidence in shape to warrant conviction, but they had new evidence available that with proper time would undoubtedly make the case on the part of the state. The books of the murdered banker could not be found, although they had despatched a messenger to Michigan, supposing them to be with Mr. Lake, a relative and late special administrator of the estate. It was afterward learned that the books were in this city and they were led to believe in the possession of the defendant's attorney. An order was asked for to make the defense produce the books.

Attorney Sanborn said it was a shame to keep the defendant in suspense, that the defense was ready and the state had had lots of time and still they courted delay. Judge Webber granted a continuance until the March term. He refused to grant Bronson, Stout and Prior separate trials. Mr. Sanborn made a motion for a change of venue on the part of Bronson on account of local prejudice. The judge will render a decision in the morning.

Bold Highwaymen.

Chicago, Nov. 29.—Details of police are scouring the county and suburbs southwest of the city for two masked highwaymen, who are making the residents of Riverside, Berwin, Hawthorne, Lyons and Clyde feel very uncomfortable. The police believe that the mounted bandit who kept Lakeview in a state of terror for several days has been joined by a confederate and transferred the seat of his operations. William Kelly and Charles Thompson were the first to come in contact with the masked men. They were driving toward the city from Riverside on Ogden avenue and when near a lonely spot the two men jumped from a clump of bushes and at the point of revolvers relieved Kelly and Thompson of their money, and taking possession of their team and buggy valued at $500 drove away.

C. A. Bader, who lives at Berwin and is employed with Carson, Pirrie, Scott & Co., was the next to meet the two men, but Mr. Bader had but 40 cents in his possession and he willingly handed this to one of the robbers.

John Keefe, a Cicero policeman, also had the pleasure of meeting the men. He was attired in his official uniform and was on duty when the bold men confronted him with two revolvers and demanded that he turn out all his valuables. Fifteen cents and a revolver was all the Cicero official could donate.

Fred Sellers and Fred Crow, both residents of Riverside, were also victims of the robbers. They were driving south on Ogden avenue, when a masked man jumped from behind a fence and catching the bridle of the horse commanded the two men to get out, which they did at the point of a revolver. The robber then took possession of the vehicle and drove off.

Mac Is Dead Broke.

Chicago Nov. 29.—Champion Jack McAuliffe, the conqueror of Billy Myer, the "Streator Cyclone," has changed his mind about finish fights. He arrived in the city from the East with his vaudeville company yesterday and opened a week's engagement at the People's theater last night. He was fat and was in the best possible humor. Asked as to the story that he would engage in any more fight contests, he said:

"That held good once, immediately after the New Orleans fight. Then I had $18,000 and was independent, and now I haven't the price of a drink. I'm out for the money, and if I cannot make it in this or any other business, why I will be compelled to fight for it, and the Lord knows that I don't care to fight. I have signed conditional articles to fight Dick Burge of England before the Crescent City club of New Orleans. I signed the articles about two months ago and sent the papers to President Noel. Burge, however, hasn't signed yet. I don't care to fight, but necessity drove me to it. I am twenty pounds overweight, have not had a bit of training in weeks and must hunt up a gymnasium to-morrow. Myer is getting into good shape for that six-round go, and I haven't done a thing. I'll have to spar fast to hold my own with him. If the purse is enough I'll fight Burge at any time."

Much Convicting Testimony.

Hudson, Wis., Special, Nov. 29.—P. F. Finn, the Minnesota man who came over here a month ago and was arrested by wife No. 1 on the charge of bigamy, had a hearing before Judge Bunker and was bound over to the circuit court. When Mrs. Finn No. 2 learned of the charge against her husband she went to Minneapolis to ascertain the truthfulness of the claim, and there satisfied herself that everything alleged by the first Mrs. Finn was correct. She thereupon joined forces with her companion in misery to make it as hot as possible for the spoiler of their happiness. Both women appeared against Finn in court. No. 2 has gone back to her former name—Margaret Moriarty. She claims Finn did not have money enough to pay the marriage fee when she took him for better or worse, and that all the money invested in the store here is hers, acquired from the sale of property in Glencoe, Minn.

His Criminal Career.

Wooster, Ohio, Nov. 29.—Born of Christian parents, his father a Methodist minister, and reared as tenderly as a petted plant, was a young man who left this country in 1858. He moved to Missouri, where he studied and practiced medicine. The last heard of him by his parents was early in the civil war, when he married the daughter of Senator Clymer of Missouri. He has long been mourned as dead, but this week came word that he is still living and filled the cell of a convict in Texas. Such in brief, is the history of Rev. William Wilson. He was at one time a member of the Younger brothers' gang, and later with Frank and Jesse James. He is held for murder.

Homestead Leaders Surrender.

Pittsburg, Nov. 29.—Hugh Ross and ex-Burgess McLuckie, the Homestead strike leaders, who have been missing ever since the charges of murder and treason were preferred against them, returned to the city to-day and surrendered to the sheriff. They will make application for bail and pending a decision will be compelled to remain in jail. Ross has been in England, and McLuckie in Youngstown, Ohio.

Will Now be Paid.

Washington, Special, Nov. 29.—Since Maj. Ruffee has been appointed and qualified as agent at White Earth it is expected that the appropriation for the damage for the building of the reservoirs on the upper Mississippi will be paid. The money has been held up pending the settlement with Agent Schuler. It is presumed that the payment of this money will materially assist the Chippewa commission to settle the Indian difficulties in that section.

A Peculiar and Fatal Accident.

Sleepy Eye, Minn., Special, Nov. 29.—As H. Romberg, a prominent farmer, living two miles east of here, was driving out of town to-day the tongue of his wagon became unyoked, and raising the box, precipitated Mr. Romberg to the ground. He was carried into a residence near by, where he died in a few hours. He leaves a widow and four children.

Ice-Boating on Lake Pepin.

Lake City, Minn., Nov. 29.—The ice-boating season on Lake Pepin is now fully open, the ice being strong enough for safety and in fair condition. The number of boats here has considerably increased since last season.

IN THE LARGE CITIES.

Minneapolis.

Minneapolis, Special Telegram, Nov. 29.—The First annual congress of that new and ambitious organization, the Woman's council, was begun yesterday and proved an event of unusual interest to the sex and the means for a good deal of enlightenment on various phases of work having special interest and significance to women. The meetings are being held at the Hennepin Avenue M. E. church, Mrs. T. B. Walker, the president, presiding.

The session was opened with prayer by the venerable Mrs. Van Cleve, after which the various papers prepared for the occasion were read in their order. All had been prepared with much care. Mrs. E. S. Williams told of "Woman's Work in Missions," reviewing the wonderful development in this line during the past twenty-five years.

Mons Hansen, one of the capitalists of Norcross, Grant county, Minn., is bewailing a loss of over $400 which some sharp man robbed him of in the city yesterday. Hansen is engaged in the lumber and twine business at Norcross and bought a large bill of goods of the National Cordage company, of 2 and 4 Sherman street, Chicago, several months ago, giving as security notes to the extent of $650. The notes fell due some days ago and were sent to the Metropolitan ban in Minneapolis for collection. They were returned, the bank refusing to collect them. Two men went to Norcross to collect the money, but as Hansen did not have the cash he arranged to meet them at a hotel in this city Monday. The parties met and Hanson drew over $400 from the Metropolitan bank with which to meet his obligations. This occurred at 10 a. m., and the gentlemen, who adroitly escaped giving their names to Hanson, gave credit on the back of the notes for the amount received, and then invited him to dine with them at the hotel. The invitation was accepted by Hanson, and after waiting in vain for the appearance of his guests reported the transactions at the branch office of the cordage house at 7 Third street north. They wired the house in Chicago and it was learned by wire that the collectors were imposters. It is alleged that the collectors were ex-employes of the cordage company.

A smallpox case was discovered yesterday. The sick man is Fred Pitts, a waiter at the Nicollet house lunch counter. The news was communicated to the health department by Dr. L. B. Allen, who was called to attend the patient at his rooms over the Criterion restaurant at 304 Nicollet avenue. Dr. Kelly proceeded to take the customary precautions, and had the patient removed to the quarantine hospital at St. Louis Park. The bedding and clothes of the sick man were burned. The disease is in its first stages, and it is not believed to have developed far enough to be infectious. Dr. Kelley stated that the case was of a mild type and he did not believe that any of those who came in contact with the patient would suffer.

St. Paul.

St. Paul, Special Telegram, Nov. 29.—Gov. Merriam yesterday commuted the sentence of Albert Rolph, sent up from Cottonwood county in 1891 for the crime of arson in the second degree and sentenced to seven years in the reformatory, to two years. The pardon was based on the recommendation of the warden of the reformatory, of the judge who tried the case and also in consideration of Rolph's youth, he being only seventeen years of age.

George E. Duggan of New York, who came to St. Paul to represent the North American Review some months since, has been collecting money from St. Paul citizens since the magazine dispensed with his services. The peculiar transactions of Mr. Duggan came to light yesterday when Secretary Beek, of the chamber of commerce, issued a notice warning the public against paying Duggan for subscriptions to the magazine or paying him any money, inasmuch as he was no longer in the employ of the Review. The notice also stated that the endorsement of Duggan by the chamber of commerce has been withdrawn. This document caused some surprise, for Mr. Duggan came here well recommended and had made many friends.

Duluth.

Duluth, Special, Nov. 29.—To-day as the steamer Hiram R. Dixon, of Booth's North Shore line, was lying at Sargent's dock the main steam feed pipe burst with a terrific report, instantly killing two people and injuring others. The dead are: Willy Brooks, an eighteen-year-old boy: William McNulty, the fireman, both of this city. The damage to the boat is but slight.

Embezzlement Charged.

Chicago, Nov. 29.—An alleged embezzlement of $25,000 from Rand, McNally & Co., the publishers, was brought to light to-day by an attempt on the part of the accused, C. R. Williams, to dispose of his real estate at auction. The sale was prevented by an attachment. Williams was until recently at the head of one of the Rand, McNally & Co.'s departments. It is charged that he converted commissions to the amount named to his own use. Upon being discovered he pleaded for mercy, and on account of his large family no criminal proceedings were instituted. He promised to make restitution, it is said, but instead went to New York and has since ignored all overtures for a settlement.

Result of a Dream.

St. Louis, Nov. 29.—The police have arrested another person suspected of being the murderer of Josie Simmons on Oct. 11 last. George Demand is the name of the person arrested. He is a barber, but was found working as a butcher's helper for R. Murmann at 3858 Garfield avenue when arrested. The evidence against him so far is purely circumstantial. Blood stains, or something resembling blood stains, were found on some clothing which he recently disposed of. Demand was arrested at the instance of August Wassman, the lover of the murdered girl, who told the police he had dreamed Demand was the murderer.

New Markets.

Washington, Nov. 29.—The transitory commercial arrangement between the United States and the republic of Salvador, which went into effect Dec. 1, 1891, has been superseded by a definite arrangement, the signatures to which were exchanged on the 23d inst. It is believed at the department of state that the definite arrangement will tend to greatly promote trade between the two countries, and will open a profitable market to numerous products and manufactures of the United States which have hitherto been hampered by various restrictions.

To Relieve Gen. Poe.

Washington, Nov 29.—The mooted question as to whether Maj. William Ludlow, corps of engineers, would be reinstated as engineer of the Ninth and Eleventh lighthouse districts, embracing Lakes Huron, Michigan and Superior and St. Mary's river, has finally been settled by the secretary of war in detailing Maj. Milton B. Adams, corps of engineers, to duty. Maj. Adams relieves Col. O. M. Poe, corps of engineers, who has been in temporary charge of the engineering works in those districts since June 17, the date of Maj. Ludlow's relief in consequence of his controversy with the lighthouse board.

Five People Burned to Death.

Middletown, Con., Nov. 29.—Three men and two women were burned to death here Saturday night in a tobacco barn. The victims were a party of umbrella menders. It is supposed they were drunk and set fire to a small amount of hay, the only contents of the barn. The building was totally destroyed. It was uninsured.

Destruction of an Elevator.

Lake City, Minn., Special, Nov. 29.—A report reached here to-day that the H. J. O'Neil elevator, full of barley, at Hammonds Ford, was destroyed by fire on Saturday night, and incendiaries was suspected.

Under Treatment for Rabies.

New York, Nov. 29.—Dr. Paul Gibere's Pasteur institute held more hydrophobia patients to-day than it has seen at one time for a year or more. There were in all ten patients seated in the parlor waiting to be inoculated. They all came from Danville, Va. They left their homes Saturday night and reached here yesterday afternoon. Twenty-three others are making preparations to come here to be inoculated. They were all bitten by the same dog, a little sky terrier, six month old.

Suicide of a Prominent Attorney.

Green Bay, Wis., Nov 29.—W. Lander, a prominent attorney of this city, committed suicide by hanging to-day. No cause is assigned.

GREAT NORTHERN

TIME CARD.

NO. 3 Daily.		NO. Daily
9 40 p m	Lv..........St. Paul..........Ar	6 55 am
8 10 " 11	........Minneapolis..........	6 25 am
06 a m 2 15	........Barnesville..........	10 25 pm
10 45 a m 79 Lv	......Crookston......Ar	4 00 pm
*11 15 " 25	..........Shirley..........	3 30 " *
*x11 45 " 31	..........Ives..........	x3 00 " *
x12 20 pm /	..........Wylie..........	x2 20 " *
*12 45 " 32 Ar	.....St. Hilaire.....Lv	2 00 " *

*Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

S. S. Buzza Agt,

Dr. H. GRUNDY.

Physician

& Surgeon.

Graduate of the University of Toronto Canada and member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario.

Messages from the surrounding country attended to,

Office in Drug Store

THIEF RIVER FALLS,

NORTHERN PACIFIC

THE

GREAT TRAMSCONENTAL ROUTE.

Passes through Wisconsin, Einnesota, North Dakota, Manitoca, Montana, Idaho, Oregon and Washington.

THE DINING CAR LINE.

Dining cars are run between Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Winnipeg, Helena, Butte, Tacoma, Seattle and Portland.

PULLMAN SLEEPING CAR ROUTE.

Pullman service between Chicago St. Paul Montana and the Pacific Northwest; and between St. Paul, Minneapolis and Minnesota North Dakota and Manitoba points.

THE POPULAR LINE.

Early Express Trains carry elegant Pullman sleeping Cars, Dining cars, Day Coaches. Pullman Tourist Sleepers and Free Colonist Sleeping Cars.

YELLOWSTONE PARK ROUTE.

The Northern Pacific R. R. is the rail line to Yellowstone Park; the popular line to California and Alaska; and its trains pass through the grandest scenery of seven states

THROUGH TICKETS Are sold at all coupon offices of the Northern Pacific Railroad to points North, East, South and West in the United States and Canada

TIME SCEDULE,

	Leave Crookston Daily	Arrive Crookston Daily
For Staples, Minneapolis, St. Paul Duluth Ashland and points East and South	7:05 p. m.	8:20 a m.
For Grand Forks Grafton Drayton, Winnipeg and points in North Dakota and Manitoba	8:27a. m.	7:10 p m

For Rates, Maps, Time Tables or special information, apply to Agent Northern Pacific R R. at Crookston Minn., or

CHAS. S. FEE,
Gen. Pass. Agent
St. Paul Minn.

ST. HILAIRE MEAT MARKET.

All kinds of fresh and salt meat always on hand.

I make a specialty of buying and selling cattle of all kinds.

If you want to buy or sell anything in that line it will pay you to give me a call.

JAMES DAINARD.

FRED Eikhof

DEALER IN CHOICE

WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS.

Beer always on tap.

Pool Room in Connection.

Broadway St. Hilaire.

FRANK IVES,

Attorney and Counselor

AT LAW,

CROOKSTON and ST. HILAIRE, Minn.

Will Practice in ALL The Courts, OF T E STATE and and before the U. S. Land Office at Crookston and at Washington.

Will give special attention to contests of claims.

BREVITIES.

Wheat is 60 cents.

Business has been brisk the past week.

Fresh Oysters at W. A. Arthurs try them.

The price of wheat is still on the decline.

The weather has moderated considerably and is now quite warm.

Hans Larson, of Crookston, was in town yesterday on business.

The St. Hilaire Clydesdale Horse Co. held a meeting in town to-day.

Messrs Sundet and Raymond of the Crookston Marble Works, were in town today on business.

E. A. Doone, of St. Cloud, is in town this week making collections for the McCormick company,

Otto Amundson and Ole Gjersvold left to-day for Calumet Mich., where they expect to work in the mines.

George Frick was in town, the first of the week taking orders for boots and shoes.

Martin Williams and H. E. Ives made a short business trip to Grand Forks yesterday.

If you want anything in the line of confectionary fruit or oysters, call on W. A. Arthur.

John Halvorson was around with the cigars last Saturday announcing the arrival of a baby boy.

Several inches more of snow fell last Friday and sleighing is excellent in the country, It looks as if we were going to have a big fall of snow this winter.

OYSTER SUPPER.

The ladies of the Norwegian Lutheran Church will give an oyster supper and auction at the church on Thursday evening Dec. 1st. All are cordially invited to attend.

Our valient deer hunter, Christ Hall has returned but in spite of his good promises not to return until he brought home a deer he came back very quietly the other day without even a jack rabbit.

"Prince" Frank Gravel, of Crookston was in town selling groceries to-day Since the Prince of Whales got into the late trouble, Frank has quit carrying his counters with him and now plays with coffee beans.

J. C, Mathews and George Brady started out last week intending to make sad inroads on the deer on the other side of the river but they are back and no deer are missing. The impression is gaining ground that our deer hunters are not right.

Spafford & Dainard have been making extensive improvements on their farm just west of town. They have erected several large stables and are boring for an artesian well. They expect to winter about three hundred head of stock.

District court will convene at Crookston next Monday December 5th. It is said that an outside judge will take charge as Judge Mills has now all the work he can finish before January 1st. There is a large calendar, there being a large number of criminal cases. The term will probably last at least three weeks.

Crookston Times. Michael Corcoran of Red Lake Beltrami county, filed on a piece of land in that county and received the receipt for his claim on March 21st, 1892, and received his patent July 25th 1892. He transacted his business at St. Cloud Land Office, and the time intervening between the first receipt and obtaining his patent is the quickest on record—just four months and four days,

Grand Forks is gradually forging ahead of East Grand Forks in the number of superior attractions which she offers to the home seeker. She now boasts of an art institute, an art school, two dancing academies, conducted on principles laid down by the convention of dancing masters recently held in New York. She has a school for physical culture, three French dressmaking establishments, a christian scientist, a conservatory of music, Delsarte's system of physical culture, an opera company, a brass band, a glee club, and a United States senator. The only advancement made thus far in East Grand Forks this season towards cultivating the beautiful in nature and in art is the athletic club, where a slugging match takes place every Saturday night,

Near East Grand Forks, a son was born to Mr. and Mrs. James Peterson, who will be named Grover Cleveland Knut Nelson Peterson. The infant is of unusual strong constitution and still lives. The boy will undoubtedly make a politician,

Notice To Farmers.

We will pay you cash for hides, hay, barley, oats, cord wood, good steers or anything marketable that you have to sell.

E. T. Spafford & Co.

Will some of those old party papers who are boasting of our prosperity tell us how it is that all farm products are down to cost of production? And why if by protection we are increasing our population and the acreage of wheat is on the decrease, wheat continues to go down? Has not our monetary system something to do with it? Do not the farmer's debts remain the same, while his power to pay decrease?—Reform Advocate,

The work train in charge of conductor Murry and engineer Milikson arrived here this morning with a crew of men and have started at work to finish the RedLake Falls branch. We learn that all of the grading is finished and that the Clearwater bridge is nearly done. Only about a mile of main track is yet to be laid, and it is expected that regular trains will be running by Dec 10th. It is not yet learned how the trains will run.

The city of, St. Paul will give J. J. Hill president of the Great Northern a magnificent banquet some time next month to celebrate the completion of the Great Northern to the Pacific Coast. Mr. Hill is a great man and the building of the Great Northern a mammoth enterprise and when Mr. Hill has completed his road and enjoyd his banquet, we hope he will give us decent service on his lines in this part of the country. At present it looks as if he was making money in Minnesota and spending it in the west.

CHEAP EXCURSIONS TO CANADA

Low round trip tickets will be on sale by the Great Northern from Crookston Grand Forks and stations north to boundary and west to Minot, to points in Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick Nova Scotia, on Nov. 27th, Dec, 6th, Dec 13th to 22nd inclusive, and Dec 27th 1892. Tickets good for 90 days with transit limits of 15 days each way, going and returning, This will allow holders to stop in the Twin Cities, in Chicago to see the wonderful buildings of the World's Fair, and other points enroute.

Extension of time beyond 90 days made at small additional cost. For particulars and tickets see S. S. Buzza. agent at St. Hilaire.

There is one thing the representatives to the legislature from this district should insist upon this winter and that is a reapportionment of Senatorial districts. This district is entitled to two senators and four representatives instead of one senator and three representatives as at present. We want what belongs to us, and there is no doubt we can get it if our members insist upon it The only difficulty will be in redistricting. How it shall best be done is a debatable question, but we would like to see Norman county a district by itself with one Senator and one representative.—Norman County Index,

The Duluth Tribune says: The lumbermen are now sending their crews to the woods, and employment for that class of labor promises to be as great as ever in that part of the country, Wages are good; better if anything, than has been the rule for seasons past, Lumber companies are paying all the way from $20 to $35 a month for help. The wages offered are generally governed by the proximity of the camps to Duluth. One company sent up a crew of over 100 men last week to operate near Tower. The cheapest of these men will get $26 a month and the best $35. This of course includes board at the camps.

Crookston Times. In an interview with C. M. Benson, judge of probate court, he states that Polk county has nearly thirty patients in the insane asylum at Fergus Falls, the greater number being men. There has been three women sent down in the past three months, one a Scandinavian girl from the town of Lessor; her trouble being caused by a love affair. The other two are French and their trouble was caused by long continued ill health.

During the past week the judge has consigned three more unfortunates to the asylum. William Quinn from town of Gervais who was found in the woods leaning over a fire which he had built and laboring under the impression that he had the catarrh. He was in a very filthy condition and had to have a complete outfit of clothing before being sent away. Mathias Peterson from the town of Queen was brought down by his wife and taken down to the asylum Tuesday. His case was of a very mild form. Yesterday Andy Doyle was brought down from Red Lake Falls by the chief of police of that place and after an examination was consigned to Fergus Falls, A. J. Ellingbo taking him down.

CHATTLE LOANS

I am prepared to loan money on chattle security at reasonable rates. One years time. Call On

H. E. IVES.

I will pay the highest market price for veal calves, fresh eggs and butter.

S. M. Dainard.

New York. Nov. 23.—More than $100,000,000 was represented by the forty gentlemen who sat with Grover Cleveland at Henry Villard's swell dinner in Sherry's exclusive establishment on upper Fifth avenue on Thursday evening. It was Mr. Villard' desire to surround Mr. Cleveland with his closest friends. A millionaire sat on either side of the President elect, and another sat opposite him. One of the waiters was greatly astonished when he was informed by the chief that the gentlemen who was the principal guest was the candidate of the party of the workingman at the recent election.

In his little speech which Mr. Cleveland made to the money bags after the coffee and fine imported cigars had succeeded the choice wines he thanked them for all they had done for him, and gave them to understand that he would not soon forget it.

The belief is that Mr. Cleveland will give the millionaires everything they want. He has the names of half a dozen millionaires who would go into the Cabinet. William C, Whitney can name his own place. He is many times a millionaire, Benjamin Cobb, who is one of the Crœsuses of Illinois, is on the list as a possibility; William R. Grace, who paid for the May Convention out of a purse that holds at least $20,000,000, will have his say in Federal matters; E. Ellery Anderson, who is worth a million is entitled to a generous consideration. The other—bankers and capitalists— are satisfied their interests will be looked after.—East Grand Forks News.

Notice Of Collection.

All parties having notes and accounts due E. T. Spafford & Co. must call and settle satisfactorily before the 10th day of Dec, or we will positively collect by law.

E. T. Spafford & Co.

The Wire Output.

The wire industry is actively carried on in Great Britain, Germany and Belgium, also in the United States of America, and has attained enormous dimensions. A leading continental firm has alone an output of some 50,000 tons of wire and wire products per annum.—Chambers' Journal.

Relics of J. Wilkes Booth.

Of the 10,000 or more relics of all kinds preserved in the Army Medical museum at Washington the most interesting perhaps are two portions of a human body—all that remains above ground of J. Wilkes Booth, the assassin of President Lincoln. These ghastly but most interesting specimens are numbered and catalogued for ready reference. The first (mounted on a little stand and labeled 4,086) is a section, or rather, sections of three vertebræ, the third, fourth and fifth, through an aperture in which a thin wire is placed showing the course of the ball. Near this is the second specimen, suspended in a wide mouthed vial of alcohol and labeled 4,087. It is about three inches long and reminds one of a section of well cooked beef marrow,

Referring to the catalogue, under the head of No. 4,086, we find, the following: "Mounted specimen is the third, fourth and fifth cervical vertebræ, A conoidal carbine ball entered the right side, comminuting the base of the right laminæ of the fourth vertebra, fracturing it longitudinally and separating it from the spinous process, at the same time fracturing the fifth through its pedicle, and also involving the transverse process. The missile passed directly through the canal with a slight inclination downward, and to the rear, emerging through the left base of the fourth and fifth laminæ, which are comminuted and from which fragments were imbedded in the muscles of the neck."

The alcoholic specimen, labeled 4,087, has the entry in the catalogue: "A portion of the spinal cord from the cervical region, universely perforated from right to left by a carbine ball which fractured the laminæ of the fourth and fifth vertebræ." The cord is much torn and discolored by blood. As mentioned above, these two specimens are the only portions of J. Wilkes Booth's body that were not consigned to the grave.—St. Louis Republic.

INTERESTING ITEM.

It is to the interest of parties contemplating going east to consider the great advantages the Great Northern offers them through its fast passenger service to St. Paul and to all points west to the Pacific coast, their free colonist cars, and magnificent Dining and Sleeping cars. The shortest route, close connections, quickest time and fare as low as the lowest, Any information cheerfully given,

S. S. Buzza
Agent.

MONEY TO LOAN.

I am prepared to make a few choice loans on real estate at 10 per cent straight,

H. E. IVES.

FIFTY CENTS IN CASH

Will secure the Spectator from now to Jan. 1st 1893, a hot political campaign is now on and we will try to make the Spectator interesting we make this low offer so that every farmer in this part of the country can afford to subscribe.

WANTED. Salesmen. Local and Traveling, To represent our well known house. You need no capital to represent a firm that warrants nursery stock first-class and true to name. WORK ALL THE YEAR. $100 per month to the right man. Apply quick stating age. L. L. MAY & CO.

Nurserymen, Florists and Seeds men,
St, Paul Minn.

(This house is responsible,)

ASTRAY.

Taken up on the premises of the undersigned in St. Hilaire 3 steers past two years old red and white spotted and 1 red steer past three years old. Owner can have same by paying expense of keeping and for this notice.

M. Hendrickson

STRAYED.

From the premises of the undersigned one red bull with a hole in the right ear. A reward will be paid for the return of the above described animal to

M. Hendrickson,

NOTICE.

The Clydesdale Horse Co. of St. Hilaire Minn., will meet at St. Hilaire on Nov. 30th 1892 for the purpose of settling all accounts against said company. Any stockholder failing to pay up all assessments including an assessment to be made on the stock shares of said Co, on said day to pay up all out-standing accounts against it, will forfeit his stock shares in said company. If necessary in order to pay up the debts of said company the stallion Pride of Huron will be sold on that day.

C, A. Johnson, Sec'y.

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
Crookston Minn September 15 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on December 8 1892 viz: Charles Will Heden D S no. 11561 for the NE ¼ Sec 2 Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land viz:

Ole J. Johnson, A. G. Mostrom, John Mostrom, Knut Steen, all of St. Hilaire, Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn. Oct. 29 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on December 8 1892 viz Gustaf Anderson H D 11680 for the SW ¼ Sec 32 Tp 153 R 44.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence on and cultivation of said land viz:

A. Sture of Crookston, E. M. Svenson, A. M. Ekstrom, P. A. Ekstrom all of St. Hilaire Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn Oct. 29 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on Dec. 20 1892 viz:

Peter Anderson H D 12740 for the W ½ NW ¼ and W ½ SW ¼ Sec 28 Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Ole J. Johnson, Ole J. Hegg Halvor T. Omot, Knut Steen all of St. Hilaire Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn. November 1 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and has said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver of the U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on December 15 1892. viz:

A. P. Sandberg administrator of estate of Peter G. Allsson deceased H D 11173 for the NW ¼ Sec. 20 Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land viz:

J. Johnson, Haakon, Johnson, J. Lind, E. Petterson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPJON Register

CLOSING OUT SALE!

At E M Hoff's Store

My whole stock of

Dry Goods and Notions Gents Furnshing Goods $5,000 worth of ready made clothing Foot wear of all kinds and everything belonging to a full stocked general merchandise store will be closed out at cost in the next 90 days.

COME EVERY BODY AND SECURE GOOD BARGAINS.

E. M. HOFF

CROWN ROLLER MILL.

EQUIPPED WITH THE LATEST AND BEST IMPROVED MACHINERY.

Manufactures the well known PERFECTION FANCY PATENT and WHITE ROSEFLOUR.

Rye and Feed mill in connection.

Flour and Feed always kept on hand

Custom work a specialty.

FRICKER & WELCH Prop,

HILAIRE MINNESOTA

CHAS G. RAPP.

A large and complete line of

General Merchandise.

CONSISTING OF

Dry Goods, Groceries, Clothing Boots & Shoes, Hats & Caps Notions

THE ST. HILAIRE SPECTATOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY EVENIN..
H. E. IVES, Propr.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE:
Advance. $1.50 Per Year
If not in Advance. $2.00 Per Year

Entered in The Post Office at St Hilaire, as Second Class Mail Matter

WEDNESDAY November 30 1892

SELECTIONS

BRISTOL'S WESTERN MAIL.

What Came of Printing an Interesting Item About Spinsters.

Communications have lately been pouring in in extraordinary numbers upon the two youths who act respectively as postmaster and postmaster's clerk at the postoffice in Bristol. These missives were from many lone bachelors in the far west, desiring the postal officials to procure for them the names and addresses, and, if possible, without regard to cost, the photographs of some of the many maidens of whom these same bachelors understand the population of the town is chiefly composed.

A story concerning the astounding numbers of maidens of an uncertain age who resided on a certain street and within the confines of one short square in Bristol had appeared in The Record, and the cause of the influx was at once explained. This article had been circulated far and near, and had been copied from one paper to another until the fame of that Bristol square was widespread. Many a lone bachelor, sitting partnerless by some western hearth, devoured the lines eagerly until their meaning so grew upon him that he could stand it no longer, but poured forth his desires for a wife to comfort that loneliness to the Bristol postmaster.

The Bristol postoffice is a modest institution, and was at first so embarrassed by these appeals that it knew not what to do, but finally, reflecting upon the wretchedness of those lone western bachelors, its large heart so overflowed with sympathy that it bethought itself of taking the matter in hand. Upon consideration it was decided to post the letters in some place not conspicuous, but where the searching eye of the Bristol spinster would perchance light upon them.

For some time after the posting of these letters the Bristol maidens had much need of stamps, etc., and dropped in at the postoffice for every mail. In the course of a few weeks there was such an increase in the western mail coming to Bristol that an additional bag had to be provided for its accommodation. At mail time a continuous line of bashful spinsters from the street in question was observed entering with expectant faces and issuing with either blushes or with sighs.

The residents of Bristol know not how to account for the presence of such innumerable hosts of unmated maidens, unless it be that the buildings on the street—in so many cases resembling, with their porticoes and friezes, the Temple of Diana—have inspired in the female Bristol breast a desire to follow the chaste goddess' example, but soon evidently this condition of affairs may be ameliorated.—Philadelphia Record.

Drowning Sensations.

I have had some personal experience in the drowning or being drowned business. St. Paul was thrice wrecked: I was thrice drowned. I want to record for the benefit of those who feel like making the experiment that death did not come to me as "the gentle friend," but rather as "the grisly terror." From such an experience heaven forefend me evermore.

The events of my life most surely did come up before me, like a swiftly moving panorama, with awful vividness and startling reality. I did not call them up; they came; they thronged; they oppressed; they overwhelmed me. I will carry the remembrance thereof to my grave.

I was never hanged, though perhaps I should have been, but I was three times "drowned"—once beneath the ice when skating, once in the ocean, so completely that the first attempt at resuscitation was abandoned, when it occurred to some persevering friend to try again, with the happy result that I am still a living, breathing, sentient being.

The terrors of death have to my mind always been one of the great deterrents of sin, and he that robs death of its frown is plucking out one of the sharpest stings of sin. Besides, will not the Suicide club delight to learn for certain the "pleasant and painless" road to death! I have long believed that virtue only can make the bed of death "soft as downy pinions are."—Cor. New York Sun.

"The Largest Organ in the World."

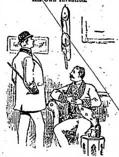
"The largest organ in the world" has an unfortunate habit of spreading itself over a great surface. It is in Boston, in Harlem, in a dozen other European cities, in Garden City, in Brooklyn, in Chicago. Possibly we may have it some time in New York. The great Harlem organ has sixty stops and 4,088 pipes. Fifteen of these stops and 1,098 of the pipes are in the echo organ. It takes so much strength to play this organ that the organist is said to be completely exhausted after a performance.

The organ in the Brooklyn Tabernacle has 110 stops and 4,448 pipes. The organ in the Chicago Auditorium has 109 speaking stops and enough mechanical accessories and pedal movements to bring the number to 176, and 7,124 pipes, besides sixty-nine bells. The echo organ alone has 842 pipes.—New York Times.

Buttons and Combs Made of Blood.

There is a large factory at a small town near Chicago employing about 100 to 150 workers, which is wholly given over to the manufacture of useful articles from waste animal blood. At certain seasons of the year this unique factory uses from 10,000 to 15,000 gallons of fresh blood per day. It is first converted into thin sheets by evaporation and certain chemical processes, and afterward worked up into a variety of useful articles, such as combs, buttons, earrings, belt clasps, bracelets, etc. Tons of these articles are sent to all parts of the world every year from this "bloody" Sucker State manufactory.—St. Louis Republic.

His Own Invention.



Featherstone—What the mischief have you got that block and tackle fastened to the ceiling for?

Ringway—That's a contrivance of my own. I bought some woolen undershirts the other day that were guaranteed not to shrink, and I use that to pull them off.—Clothier and Furnisher.

Saw Him One Better on Economy.

A good story was recently told of the discount clerk in one of the Baltimore banks. He is a man somewhat along in years, is a Quaker, and is possessed of all the characteristics of that peculiar religious sect. One day a patron of the bank came in and submitted a pile of notes for discount. The clerk looked them over in his deliberate way and remarked, "Isaac, if thee will have to have the money on these notes, indorse them."

The patron complied, writing his name in a bold, free hand across the back of the promises to pay. When nearly through the list the good old Quaker gently expostulated: "Isaac, thee should be more careful of thy ink; thee makes a dreadful waste in thy signature."

In indorsing the next note Isaac, who was not without the spirit of a wag, wrote his name so small that the old Quaker was obliged to adjust his glasses to see that it was correct. Finally, handing it back to the customer, he said, "Isaac, thee is a very careless man; thee should always dot thy i's and cross thy t's; the i in thy name, Isaac, is not dotted."

To this good natured rebuke the patron replied, "Not so, old friend; if you will observe, the i in question has a fly speck just above it, and I thought that much ink could be saved."—Washington Hatchet.

A Great Place for Salt.

Five or six years ago the people of Colorado City, away out on the rugged bluffs of the Colorado river, felt that they had reached a degree of advancement which justified municipal airs. They thought they ought to have a city council. When they got that they discovered that their water supply wasn't what it ought to be. There came in a class of high toned settlers who weren't satisfied with whisky and water, but wanted all water, and good water, too. The city council in due deliberation moved in the matter. A considerable fund was raised and a deep hole was bored. The drill went down 1,200 feet. It didn't find good drinking water, but it struck petroleum, eighty feet of rock salt and other things.

The boring stopped for awhile. Colorado City offered its hole for sale, but found no takers. After awhile somebody thought of making use of the salt. The hole was bored deeper. It struck fresh water, which arose to within 200 or 800 feet of the surface and dissolved the rock salt. A pump was put down. A windmill was hoisted above the pump. The wind raised the salt water, which was run into a reservoir. This west Texas sun, which shines about 340 days in the year, did the rest. Colorado City had salt. Other wells have been bored. Windmills have been hoisted in rows until Don Quixote might think he saw, by the moonlight, a whole array defying him. The process commends itself to an economical, not to say a lazy, man. The water dissolves the rock salt. The wind raises the water. The sun evaporates the water and leaves the salt on the ground.

Could anything be easier? Manual labor is necessary to take up the salt and barrel it, that's all. A 30-foot windmill raises from 5,000 to 8,000 gallons of salt water in an hour. Of the salt thus manufactured by nature's forces Colorado City ships out several hundred carloads a month. A chemical analysis shows this salt to be 98 per cent. pure. In a country where there were less sunshine and wind saltmaking could not be carried on so successfully.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

RAILROAD JOTTINGS.

The Philadelphia and Reading announces that Swartwood station on the Buffalo division of the Lehigh Valley road has been discontinued.

Secretary of State Rice has issued a certificate authorizing the Jersey Central railroad to do business in New York state under sections 15 and 16 of the general corporation law.

The Pennsylvania Railroad company is now building at its shops at Altoona cars for the transportation of the 124 and 65-ton guns which will be sent to the Chicago exposition by the Krupps, of Germany.

The Pullman Palace Car company has made contracts with the Little Rock and Memphis for a period of twenty-five years from May 2, 1892; Western New York and Pennsylvania, for a period of twenty-five years from the same date; Chesapeake and Ohio, extended for a period of fifteen years from Jan. 1, 1892.

POINTED FACTS.

America produced 10,000,000 barrels of salt last year.

In Japan every child is taught to work with both hands.

Cigar stubs bring about a shilling a pound in London.

The Swedish mile is 11,666 yards long, and the Vienna post mile is 8,266 yards.

There is room for just five more dead in the "poet's corner" of Westminster abbey.

The oldest church in America is that of San Miguel, in Santa Fe, N. M. It was built in 1545.

In 1841 each individual consumed thirteen ounces of tobacco; in 1891 he consumed twenty-six ounces.

DO YOU WANT TO ADOPT A BABY?

"Maybe you think this is a new business, sending out babies on application; it has been done before, however, but never have those furnished been so near the original sample as this one. Everyone will exclaim, "Well! that's the sweetest baby I ever saw!" This little black-and-white engraving can give you but a faint idea of the exquisite original, which we propose to send to you, transportation paid. The little darling rests against a pillow, and is in the act of drawing off its pink sock, the mate of which has been pulled off and flung aside with a triumphant coo. The flesh tints are perfect, and the eyes follow you, no matter where you stand. The exquisite reproductions of this greatest painting of Ida Waugh (the most celebrated of modern painters of baby life) are to be given to those who subscribe to Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893. The reproductions cannot be told from the original, which cost $100, and are the same size (17x22 inches). The baby is life size, and absolutely lifelike. We have also in preparation, to present to our subscribers during 1893, other great pictures by such artists as Percy Moran, Maud Humphrey, Louis Deschamps, and others of world-wide renown. Take only two examples of what we did during the past year, "A Yard of Pansies," and "A White House Orchid" by the wife of President Harrison, and you will see what our promises mean.

"I'M A DAISY,"

Those who subscribe for Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893 will possess a gallery of exquisite works of art of great value, besides a Magazine that cannot be equaled by any in the world for its beautiful illustrations and subject matter, that will keep everyone posted on all the topics of the day, and all the fads and different items of interest about the household, besides furnishing interesting reading matter, both grave and gay, for the whole family; and while Demorest's is not a fashion Magazine, its fashion pages are perfect, and we give you, free of cost, all the patterns you wish to use during the year, and in any size you choose. Send in your subscription at once, only $2, and you will really get over $25 in value. Address the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York. If you are unacquainted with the Magazine, send 10 cents for a specimen copy.

Ask Your Dealer For
THE
WHIPS.
FEATHERBONE is made from Enameled Quills—nature's own toughest, and strongest elastic material. Best wearing whips made for 25c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50. All styles for Buggy, Cart, Track, Team and Riding. Be sure and ask for a FEATHERBONE.
FOR SALE BY
S. M. HOFF
way

Going to Buy
A Dictionary?
GET THE BEST,
Webster's International.
A Choice Gift
A Grand Family Educator
A Library in Itself
The Standard Authority
WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY
SOLD BY ALL BOOKSELLERS.
The International is a new book from cover to cover, fully abreast of the times, and is the successor of the authentic "Unabridged." Ten years were spent in revising, 100 editors employed and over $300,000 expended before the first copy was printed.
Do not buy reprints of obsolete and comparatively worthless editions.
Send for free pamphlet containing specimen pages and full particulars.
G. & C. MERRIAM CO., Publishers,
SPRINGFIELD, MASS., U. S. A.

U.S. Land Office

Crookston Minn. Nov. 25 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and said proof will be made before U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on Jany. 5 1893 viz:

Berent I. Konlog HD 12.05 for the SW ¼ Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of said land viz:

James Evenson, Anton Peterson, Julius Nelson, Nels Evenson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON, Register.

U.S. LAND OFFICE.

Crookston, Minn. Nov. 17 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn on December 29 1892. viz:

Peter E. Engh HD 1322 for the NW ¼ Sec. 25 Tp 152 R. 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Halvor Aumodt, Ole J. Hegg Peter Anderson, Ole J. Johnson. all of St. Hilaire Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register,

U. S. Land Office

Crookston Minn., Nov. 25 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver, U. S Land Office at Crookston Minn on Jany. 5 1893 viz:

Julius Nelson HD 11890 for the S W ¼ sec. 8 tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove her continuous residence upon, and cultivation of said land viz:

James Evenson B. I. Konlog, Nels Evenson Anton Peterson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

E. T. SPAFFORD S. M. DAINARD
E. T. SPAFFORD & CO.
DEALERS IN
LUMBER, LATH AND SHINGLES.
A complete stock of all kinds of Lumber Lath, Shingles, Mouldings, Building Paper Sash, Doors and Screens, Lime, Cement Stucco, Plastering Hair, Brick etc. always hand at the lowest market prices.
S. M. Dainard, Manager.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE, MINN

E. T. SPAFFORD & CO.
WILL ALWAYS PAY THE
HIGHEST MARKET PRICES
FOR
All kinds of
CATTLE.
Also for Cor wood, Hay, Oats, Barley and flax.
Ground Feed for Sale
S. M. DAINARD.
Manager.

Reserved For
THE
ST. HILAIRE
TOWNSITE
COMPANY

W. A. ARTHUR.
DEALER IN
FRUITS, CONFECTIONARY
TOBACCO AND CIGARS.
STATIONARY OF ALL KINDS
Lunch Counter
Warm meals at all hours.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE MINNESOTA

JUSTUS L. JOHNSON
DEALER IN
pure medicines Fancy articles, perfumer and stationery, paints oils and dye stuffs.
Cigars, Candy, Fruit and Soft Drinks always on hand.
Barbershop in connection
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE

I CAN SAVE YOU
MONEY
If you wish to make
REAL ESTATE
LOANS.
For full particulars call on or address
H. E. IVES.
SPECTATOR OFFICE ST. HILAIRE.

HOLMES BRO'S
Dealers in
HARDWARE, TINWARE,
We are carrying a heavy and complete line of Heating and Cooking stoves.
GOOD GOODS LOW PRICES.
CALL ON US FOR BARGAINS
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE MINN.

FARMERS STORE
NEW GOODS AT HARD PAN PRICES.
If you want to save money do your trading with
HALL BROS.
DEALER IN
Dry Goods, Groceries
Notions.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE

S. M. HOFF
DEALER IN
HARDWARE
A new and complete stock of all kinds of Hardware, Tinware, Stoves, Fencing wire, Nails, in fact everything usually kept in a first-class Hardware Store,
AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES
Call and examine Goods and Get Our Prices.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE

DR PRICE'S
Cream Baking Powder.
The only Pure Cream of Tartar Powder.—No Ammonia; No Alum.
Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

NYE'S NOTARIAL BOND.

The Humorist Tells the Truth About the Matter.

It was at this time also that I was chosen by the governor to act as notary public. The appointment was wholly unsought on my part. When I went to bed at night I had no more idea that I would be a notary public in the morning than the reader has. It was a case where the office sought the man and not the man the office. I held this position for six years, and no one can say that in that time I did a wrong official act as notary public. My seal cost me $6, and in the six years that I held the office I swore eighteen men at twenty-five cents each, two of whom afterward paid me. I was obliged to give a bond however, as notary public. I do not know why, exactly, for the fees were my own, if I got any. I used to deal with a boot and shoe man whom I will call Quidd, and we were on friendly terms. I bought my boots of him, and scorched the heels thereof on his stove on winter evenings, when times were dull and the wintry blast outside reduced the profits in the cattle business.

I casually asked Mr. Quidd to sign my bond as notary public, and told him what a sinecure it would be for him; but to my astonishment his chin quivered, his eyes grew dim with unshed tears, as he told me, with his hand trembling in mine, that he wished he could, but that he had promised his dying mother, just as the light of the glory world lighted up her eyes, that he would never sign a bond or note with any one.

I said: "Do not mind this, Mr. Quidd; it is a trifling matter. Others will sign. I will get some comparative stranger to sign with me. Do not feel badly over it." On the way home I got Edward Ivinson, General Worth, Otto Gramm, Henry Wagner, Abraham Idleman, Charles Kuster, Dr. Harris, William H. Root and James Milton Sherrod, the squaw-man of the Buffalo Wallow, to sign my bond. All of these were men of probity and property, and the bond was said to be the best notarial bond that was ever floated in Wyoming.

On the following day a case in my court as justice of the peace required a bond on the part of a saloon-keeper, and he went out a moment to get a surety. He was hardly out of the office before he returned with the name of Mr. Quidd. After that I bought my boots elsewhere, I could not trust a man who would so soon forget his promise to his dying mother. Years have flown by, and gray hairs have come on the head of Mr. Quidd, though I haven't a gray hair yet, and may not have for years, but I have always purchased my boots elsewhere—From his confession in the Century.

"August Flower"

I have been troubled with dyspepsia, but after a fair trial of August Flower, am freed from the vexatious trouble—J. B. Young, Daughters College, Harrodsburg, Ky. I had headache one year steady. One bottle of August Flower cured me. It was positively worth one hundred dollars to me—J. W. Smith, P.M. and Gen. Merchant, Townsend, Ont. I have used it myself for constipation and dyspepsia and it cured me, It is the best seller I ever handled—C. Rugh, Druggist, Mechanicsburg, Pa. ①

THE UNIVERSITY
Commerce
AND FINANCE.
619-21 NICOLLET AVE., MINNEAPOLIS,
Students are flocking in. It is becoming generally known that this Institution qualifies its students to merit and receive permanent and remunerative employment. Earnest, painstaking, efficient teachers in English, Business and Shorthand branches. Send for artistic prospectus. HOWARD L. RUCKER, PRES'T.

FREE MEDICAL TREATMENT.
In order to thoroughly and quickly introduce our London System of treatment and the Bio-Chemical Remedies, we will give FREE medical services until cured, to all sick persons who will send us this advertisement by mail. No charge for the OLD DOCTORS skillful professional services. No expense whatever to patients except for medicines actually taken. We expect you to recommend us to your friends after you are cured. Diseases of a chronic scrofulous or private nature affecting the Eye, Ear, Head, Throat, Lungs, Liver, Stomach, Skin and Generative Organs, effects of La Grippe; Catarrh, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Spermatorrhoea, Seminal Weakness, Piles, Fistulas, Secret Diseases, etc., quickly, safely and permanently cured. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed. Cut this "ad" out and send it for free treatment to
Dr. A. L. COLE, Room 21, 408 Nicollet Ave. Minneapolis, Minn.
Medical Director of the London Medical and Surgical Clinic.

TOWER'S TRADE MARK. FISH BRAND
This Trade Mark is on the best
WATERPROOF COAT
in the World!
Illustrated Catalogue Free.
A. J. TOWER, BOSTON, MASS.

Asthma The African Kola Plant, discovered in Congo, West Africa, is Nature's Sure Cure for Asthma. Cure Guaranteed or No Pay. Export Office, 1164 Broadway, New York. For Large Trial Case, Free by Mail, address KOLA IMPORTING CO., 132 Vine St., Cincinnati, O.

THE INDIAN JOCKEY.

He Rides Like an Archer and Whoops in Triumph.

The Indian races during all the seasons, day and night, and is not second even to the Arab. As a horseman he is superior to Archer, Murphy, or any other English or American jockey who ever won a Derby. Ordinarily he sits in his saddle in contradistinction to straddling his horse. His stirrups hang well forward by short leathers, and the stirrups broad, admitting the foot up to the heel. He sits his horse with knees on a level with the groin and with buttocks well back or against the cantel of the saddle. He rides his horse as if seated in a chair.

On the race course he appears naked, and his horse is stripped except a cincha, which straps the rider about his knees to the horse. The knees are well drawn up, being on a line with the thighs. Seated well back, he sits his horse closely and never bobs up as the white jockey does in his short stirrups. He sticks to the back of his horse and plies the quirt from start to finish. When he comes under the wire or crosses "the line" a victor he whoops loud enough to silence a Nancy Hanks ovation.—From the Chicago Mail.

When hay can be used on the farm to good advantage prices must be remarkably good if it can be sold off the farm advantageously.

No Wonder They Groan.
Groaning is permissible to the rheumatic. But the groans will soon cease when they take Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which relieves the agonizing malady with gratifying promptitude. Indigestion, constipation, malarial ailments, sick headache, biliousness, nervousness and a lack of physical stamina, are among the ailments overcome by this comprehensive remedy.

Don't try to winter a lot of fowls that aren't worth wintering.

Use Brown's Bronchial Troches for Coughs, Colds and all other Throat Troubles.—"Pre-eminently the best."—Rev. Henry Ward Beecher.

Work everything into the soil that will give it life or add to the supply of plant food.

"Your Work in Life."

A series of 13 articles by successful men in as many pursuits is one of the many strong groups of articles which are announced in The Youth's Companion for 1893. "The Bravest Deed I ever Saw" is the topic of another series by United States Generals. The prospectus for the coming year of the Companion is more varied and generous than ever. Those who subscribe at once will receive the paper free to Jan. 1, 1893, and for a full year from that date. Only $1.75 a year. Address THE YOUTH'S COMPANION, Boston, Mass.

It is folly to undertake more than can be done at the right time and in a proper manner.

Deafness Cannot be Cured
by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.
We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
Sold by Druggists, 75c.

ALWAYS THUS.
Pilot Knob, Mo.
Suffered 20 Years.
Mr. Henry P. Travers, formerly of this place, suffered with chronic rheumatism for 20 years, and was treated at times by several doctors.
ST. JACOBS OIL
cured him. No return of pain in 3 years.
G. A. Farrar.
No Return 3 Years.

Did you ever see a sickly baby with dimples? or a healthy one without them?

A thin baby is always delicate. Nobody worries about a plump one.

If you can get your baby plump, he is almost sure to be well. If you can get him well, he is almost sure to be plump.

The way to do both—there is but one way—is by CAREFUL LIVING. Sometimes this depends on Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil.

We will send you a book on it; free.

SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists, 132 South 5th Avenue, New York. 38

$125.00 A Month and Expenses! To Agents to Sell CIGARS TO DEALERS. SAMPLES FREE!
JOHN O. RISING & CO., St. Paul, Minn.

THE CURE FOR CATARRH
COLD IN HEAD
HAY FEVER
DEAFNESS
HEADACHE
ELY'S CREAM BALM
50¢
—ELY'S CREAM BALM—Cleanses the Nasal Passages, Allays Pain and Inflammation, Heals the Sores, Restores Taste and Smell, and Cures
CATARRH
Gives Relief at once for Cold in Head.
Apply into the Nostrils.——It is Quickly Absorbed.
50c. Druggists or by mail. ELY BROS., 56 Warren St., N. Y.

"WELL BRED, SOON WED." GIRLS WHO USE
SAPOLIO
ARE QUICKLY MARRIED. TRY IT IN YOUR NEXT HOUSE-CLEANING.

WHAT I LIVE FOR.

I live for those who love me,
Whose hearts are kind and true;
For the heaven that shines above me,
And awaits my spirit too;
For all human ties that bind me,
For the task by God assigned me,
For the bright hopes yet to find me;
And the good that I can do.

I live to learn their story
Who suffered for my sake,
To emulate their glory,
And follow in their wake;
Bards, patriots, martyrs, sages,
The heroic of all ages,
Whose deeds crowd History's pages
And Time's great volume make.

I live to hold communion
With all that is divine;
To feel there is a union
'Twixt Nature's heart and mine.
To profit by affliction,
Reap truth from fields of fiction,
Grow wiser from conviction,
And fulfill God's grand design.

I live to hail that season
By gifted ones foretold,
When men shall live by reason,
And not alone by gold—
When man to man united,
And every wrong thing righted,
The whole thing shall be lighted,
As Eden was of old.

I live for those who love me,
For those who know me true;
For the Heaven that smiles above me,
And awaits my spirit too;
For the cause that lacks assistance,
For the wrongs that needs resistance,
For the future in the distance,
And the good that I can do.

—Charles Mackay.

ON THE TOANO GRADE.

DARK and dumb and cold as death itself lay the dry mesa. It was late at night. The coyotes had ceased to howl. The owls no longer gave forth their dismal hoots. No breath stirred the leaves of the dry greasewood and sage. The cold stars shone out as they only shine through the rare, clear, air of the desert. The slim horn of a cold moon, dropping down over the far-away buttes, glinted the wheel-worn edges of two steel rails that ran away into the blankness on either side of the spot. Near the railroad track stood a ghostly telegraph pole, and its wires also ran away into the blankness. If there were any sounds at all in the air, they came from these wires. But they must have been mere whisperings, for the man who lay awake under them heard them not.

The man was frightfully, strainedly awake. But by his side, and under the same blanket, lay another man who was sound asleep.

It is best for a supersentive man to sleep, and sleep soundly, if he must needs lie out on the desert under the stars. It is an awful thing for such a one to be cursed by sleeplessness at such a time and in such a place.

The horrible stillness, the dumbness of nature weighed upon the wakeful man, who lay there upon his back looking up at the myriad eyes that peeped through the dark roof of the world. He felt the oppressiveness of it all as keenly as he felt the numbing of the chill night air.

He turned on his unyielding bed of sand, and heard the crackle of a sage twig under his body. A pistol shot would have sounded no louder to his overwrought ear. Why did the sound not awaken the sleeper at his side? If only he would awake, or even turn.

But, poor, tired man, he had tramped many a long mile over the burning plain, through alkali dust, and by sage and cactus wastes. Let him sleep.

The sleepless one raised his hand to his face, on which the skin was tightly drawn. How hot the unwinking eye of heaven had blazed upon him through the day. It seemed to have seared his cheek and forehead.

"God! If I had but one glass of rum—one glass!" he groaned, half aloud.

And then he went over his life, and made himself to see clearly why he had become so dependent upon a fiery fluid for his peace of mind. It was the thirst—the cursed thirst—that had built itself up within him out of the very elements with which he had thought to appease it. And the consequences of that thirst! His mind ran back to his home. How she must hate him—that patient wife, who had borne with him so long! Did she? Was it hate that blazed from her eyes when they had had that fatal quarrel, and he had left her, never to return? He could not bring himself to think that it was. He was so frightfully alone—so much in need of being in some one's kindly thoughts that—

The man at his side did turn at last. But he settled down at once to peaceful slumber. He had not awakened. If he only would awake his cheery Irish banter would make the night less hideous for a time perhaps, but let him sleep. He should not trepass on his good nature by arousing him. Although only the acquaintance of a day he had in his genial Celtic way, been more than kind. He had given a most worthy and undeserving man food from his slim store, and now he was sharing with him his poor, thin blanket. An unworthy man—yes, most unworthy. Had he not left his wife to shift for herself? Had he not wholly deserted her? Yes, but she no longer loved him. He had been such a drag upon her—such a burden. She was better off without him—far better. The inmoving tide of this heavy thought bore down upon him more than all the oppressiveness of the night silence on the desert, more than that fearful thirst. It was better that she should live without him—far better. He was unworthy. How cut off he seemed from the whole world! The little warmth he felt from the man's body, lying by his own made its impress on his mind. In spite of all his desire for independence when he had started off on that wild journey, with only a few coins in his pocket, his hot assertion that he could go his own way without reference to others seemed now to have been a part of his old weakness of character. Even the strongest must lean upon some one. None could go their way wholly alone. How interdependent was the whole race of man.

And she had leaned on him. Perhaps she did still, in a way. For might she not be looking for him to come back? It was not likely that she even dreamed he was a thousand miles away. What were a thousand miles, after all? He had not been long in passing them over. It would not take long to retrace them.

With these thoughts tingling in his brain, he could no longer lie there. He must be up and in motion.

So he arose and lamely made his way to the railroad track, leaving his friend of a day to sleep it out alone. He stepped between the rails and halted there, facing the telegraph-pole. To the right was the way of the free man, without wife or home. To the left, the way led back to her.

"I have almost killed her by my recklessness," he thought; "why should I go back to complete the job?"

He glanced over his right shoulder.

"But that may mean the same thing. She is alone and helpless. Still to go back means—God!" he sobbed; "why can't I be a man!"

His eyes sought the stars.

"Yes, I can be."

He took off his hat and raised high his hand. Then he spoke, while yet looking up, and the still night air heard his words:

"I swear that hereafter I will hold my desire for drink in check, and that I will strive to make myself worthy of the good woman who bears my name. So help me God. Amen.

Then down the back track he strode fiercely, clenching his hands as he swung them at his sides.

Two hours later he stepped upon the platform of the station at Toan. There he stopped to rest. It was still dark, and no one was about to look at him suspiciously as upon a tramp, and to tell him to be off.

From a small building across the way lights were shining. Through the open doorway he saw men sitting about a stove. He heard their loud jokes and hearty laughs. How warm and comfortable they seemed And he was bitterly cold. He went nearer to the place. As he approached it a man came and stood in the doorway. Strange to say this man greeted him with a cordial "Hello, pardner!"

He made some sort of reply, in a shaky voice, for his teeth were chattering.

"Trampin' to 'Frisco?"

"Yes."

"Wal, it's good walkin', ain't it!"

"Oh, yes." Why should his teeth chatter so?

"Say, now, pardner, I kin tell you suthin' that beats walkin' all to pieces."

"What is it?"

"Why, 'bout half a mile up the railroad there's a heavy grade on a curve. When the emigrant train goes up there she don't go fast—not much faster'n a horse and wagon. You kin jump on without any trouble or without any of the train hands noticin' you, as they would at a station, and you kin go into a keer and sleep all the rest of the night. When you wake up in the morning you'll be at Mesilla, seventy-five miles from here. That's two big days' journey for a man travelin' afoot."

It was worth trying.

"When will the train be along?"

"In 'bout an hour."

"Thank you."

"Say," and the voice grew kindly, "ain't you pretty blame cold? Come inside awhile and warm up."

He followed the man into the house. There was a bar there, and some men were before it, drinking. His new friend led him up to the bar.

This would not do. There was his resolve to consider. Well, he was on his way back home—that much was settled. And as for drinking, there would be just this one glass to warm him up. He was really very cold and numb, and needed it. As it was to be just one and the last, it was well that it should be a large, warming draught. So he poured the glass nearly full. He felt the fire of it as it went down. Yes, it did warm one—that was certain. He had eaten so little that the hot liquid swiftly set up its reign in his tired brain, and when his new comrade urged another and still another upon him he could not refuse.

"Now, I reckon you better git up the track if you're goin' to git that free Pullman pass o' yourn from Toano to Mesilla, with no change o' keers:" remarked his entertainer, glancing at the clock.

He started up. "Good-by," he said; "God bleth you."

His tongue was thick, though his gait was fairly steady. He could walk very fast now, and soon he was up the grade and at the curve. How strong his nerves were. No longer did the night weigh upon him. What a different man he was from the creature who had limped along the ties a few hours ago. How much firmer of purpose.

The light from an oncoming locomotive shot up the track. The iron giant coughed, wheezed and panted. It was truly hard to pull up the Toano grade. He stood by the side of the track as the dazzling headlight glared upon him for one moment. How firm he was, but how he would have trembled had he gone there unbraced for the ordeal. He did not tremble now. It was a long train. The cars, with their dull lights, passed slowly at first, but they gathered speed as they went along. He would not wait for the last, for that was the caboose, and in it was the conductor. What speed the train had gathered! Still it was not going very fast, he thought. Now was the time. It would be two days' foot journey nearer to her. He would soon be at home.

He grasped a handrail, lifted one foot up, missed the step, and was thrown with relentless force under the wheels.

There was a wild cry, a crunching sound, and the train had passed, leaving the light dust it had stirred up to settle down again upon the sagebrush leaves.

• • • • • • •

"Say, Bill, I heard some one yell."

It was a trainman who spoke, and it was the head brakeman who heard him.

"So did I—it was under the car. Another tramp gone to kingdom come."

"We ought to stop—hadn't we?—and see about it?"

"Stop on the Toano grade? How wild you talk. You must have been drinking."—Frank Bailey Millard in San Francisco Argonaut.

The Sights of the Town.

"There's a whole string of men going along the street without a sign of clothing on."

"Where, where?"

"See 'em, right over there. But what are you getting excited about? You don't think the people of this town are all sandwich men, carrying clothing signs, do you?"

COPYRIGHT 1891
There's a wide difference between the help that's talked of and the help that's guaranteed.

Which do you want, when you're buying medicine?

If you're satisfied with words, you get them with every blood-purifier but one. That one is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. With that, you get a guarantee. If it doesn't help you, you have your money back. On this plan, a medicine that promises help is pretty sure to give it.

But it's because the medicine is different, that it's sold differently. It's not like the sarsaparillas, which are said to be good for the blood in March, April, and May. At all seasons and in all cases, it cures permanently, as nothing else can, all the diseases arising from a torpid liver or from impure blood.

It's the best blood-purifier, and it's the cheapest, no matter how many doses are offered for a dollar.

With this, you pay only for the good you get.

Can you ask more?

Pre-Geographical.

We find the following in the New York Observer, one of our esteemed religious exchanges. There is a little flavor of chestnut in the story, but its revival is timely: A negro preacher, touched with the "higher Criticism" once elaborated a new theory of the Exodus—to wit, that the Red Sea was frozen over, and so afforded the Israelites a safe passage, but when Pharaoh with heavy iron chariots attempted to cross he broke through and was drowned. A brother arose and asked an explanation of that "p'int." Said he: "I's been studin' g'ography, and de g'ography say dat am de place whar de tropics am, and de tropics am too hot for freezin'; de p'int to be 'splained is 'bout breakin' through de ice." The preacher straightened himself up and said: "Brudder, glad you axed dat question, for it gives me 'casion to 'splain it. You see, dat war a great while ago, befo, dey had any g'ographies, and befo' dere war any tropics."

Back Numbers Missing.

Bulkins was very pious, very fond of the ladies, and very bald on the back of his head. The other evening he was calling on a girl, and was giving her considerable church talk.

"Ah, Miss Mary," he said, "we are watched over very carefully. Even the hairs of our heads are numbered."

"Yes, Mr. Bulkins," she replied, "but some of the back numbers of yours appear to be missing."

No Names Mentioned Here.

"Yes," said the popular writer, in a burst of confidence, "I do turn out some very ordinary work, but it goes at good prices on account of my name."

"I can understand that very well." said a fashionable hatter who was one of the party.

SYRUP of FIGS

ONE ENJOYS
Both the method and results when Syrup of Figs is taken; it is pleasant and refreshing to the taste, and acts gently yet promptly on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, cleanses the system effectually, dispels colds, headaches and fevers and cures habitual constipation. Syrup of Figs is the only remedy of its kind ever produced, pleasing to the taste and acceptable to the stomach, prompt in its action and truly beneficial in its effects, prepared only from the most healthy and agreeable substances, its many excellent qualities commend it to all and have made it the most popular remedy known.

Syrup of Figs is for sale in 50c and $1 bottles by all leading druggists. Any reliable druggist who may not have it on hand will procure it promptly for any one who wishes to try it. Do not accept any substitute.

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
LOUISVILLE, KY. NEW YORK, N.Y.

A torpid liver is the source of dyspepsia, sick headache, constipation, piles, bilious fever, chills and jaundice.
Tutt's Tiny Pills
have a specific effect on the liver, restoring it to healthy action. 25cts.

PISO'S CURE FOR
Consumptives and people who have weak lungs or Asthma, should use Piso's Cure for Consumption. It has cured thousands. It has not injured one. It is not bad to take. It is the best cough syrup. Sold everywhere. 25c.
CONSUMPTION.

N. W. N. U. No. 49—1892

POLLY'S DOINGS.

Ghostly Opposition to an Astronomically Inclined Couple.

There was recently an exciting ghost hunt in the West End, but the residents of that eminently respectable neighborhood are not proclaiming that fact from the house-tops nor pouring the details into the greedy ear of the Globe-Democrat reporter. Everybody had retired but old man Wollypod's eldest daughter and her best young man. They were sitting up to look at Mars, then in opposition, and to draw up parallels between that planet and Miss Wollypod's paternal ancestor.

"O, if we but had wings and could fly to that far-away world," lisped the young lady, as she tried to pick out Mars' miniature moons by the aid of an opera glass.

"You make me weary," croaked a harsh voice that seemed to come from the top of a neighboring shade tree.

"What's that?" gasped the young lady as she swallowed her gum and clung with a convulsive shudder to the coat collar of her companion.

"'Twas but the wind or the car rattling over the stony street," replied the young man, who has read poetry.

"Wind nothing!" retorted the proud beauty; but the young man assured her that she need fear nothing while he was present.

"You are so brave and noble, Algy," she gurgled, as she laid her fair young head upon his summer puff-shirt front.

"Break away! Break away!" The voice again, and nearer, clearer, deadlier than before.

Algy, the brave and noble, involuntarily retired a couple of hundred feet before he ran over the lawn-mower and came to a full stop. The young lady sat down upon the grass and screamed. Algy mustered up courage and returned part way. His reputation was at stake, and he resolved to make a bold play for it. He crept a step nearer, and in trembling accents begged the young lady not to be afraid, as he was there or thereabouts. Then he struck a tragic pose and spouted:

"Be thou angel from heaven or goblin damned, thou comest in such questionable shape—"

"S'matter with my shape?" crooned the voice in sepulchral tones, and the young man fled towards the house. But he quickly paused in his mad career. Walking up and down the front porch was a majestic figure clad in purest white. He fled down the garden walk and hid among the trees. The white figure went on a still hunt for him, and the young lady went and alarmed the neighborhood. A disembodied spirit was chasing Algy! The neighbors came over and in silent awe watched the white figure dodging in and out among the trees. A voice overhead uttered strong oaths in an "I-am-thy-father's-ghost" tone of voice.

At last the white-robed figure made a sudden rush, caught Algy, the brave and noble, by the collar and dragged him forth from his leafy sanctuary. The little band of adventurers became panic stricken and fled the place. The old man Wollypod gathered his nightgown about him and made some remarks to his miserable captive that would not look well in a great family newspaper. And as the front gate slammed after Algy the stray parrot came waddling down from his perch in the sycamore tree and broadly intimated that Polly possessed a robust appetite for crackers.

DELIGHT IN KILLING.

Some of the Cruelties of What Men Call Sport.

In all tales of sport the death-throes of the bird or animal are lingered upon. What is the joy of "playing" a trout or salmon, but enjoyment of an animal's death struggle, prolonged as far as possible? This love of bloodshed—delight in killing—is manifested in the howls of disappointment when a fox escapes at last, after a long chase, by taking refuge in some drain or earth. He has led the hounds and hunters a gallant run, has furnished all the excitement and fun to be had from the rush of a mob of men, horses and dogs.

Why not let him stay where he is, if for no better reason than to give the field a run some other day? asks Our Animal Friends. But, no, he is dug out or dragged out and sacrificed. Sport without death would not be sport.

This is the animus of pigeon shooting. The pigeons are carefully kept and well fed, in order that they may be vigorous. Then they are placed in "traps," a contrivance to toss them in the air. The shooter, with a double-barrelled gun, stands at a convenient distance all ready, and the instant the bird appears he is shot at. If killed on the spot it is well; if not, he is found as soon as possible, and his neck rung.

This is the pigeon shooting in its best estate The bird has little chance to get away. It is ejected from the trap into easy range of the gun before it has even an opportunity to escape. Now there are machines that toss balls of glass or winged contrivances of clay. These are thrown in to the air swiftly and irregularly, and are as hard to hit as a live pigeon—harder in fact. Sportsmen acknowledge this, but reject them when they can afford to get live pigeons. They say it is no "fun" to knock the glass to pieces. They want to see the feathers fly, and watch the stricken bird roll over and over and flutter to the ground.

At the Police Court.

Said Judge Duffy to a small boy in the prisoners' pen: "You are only ten years old, and yet you confess yourself to be the perpetrator of this robbery!"

"Yes, sir, I did it."

"My boy, you are beginning young."

"So I am, sir; but it was only for to-day. Father is sick, and when he is away I do his work for him."—Texas Siftings.

Cremation Gaining Ground.

"Pa, some of these people who are buried here haven't gone to heaven."

Pa—Hush, Tommy; how do you know they haven't?

"Because I read it on the tombstones."

"Read what on the tombstones?"

"On ever so many of them I read, 'Peace to his ashes.' There ain't no ashes except where it is very hot, is there?"—Texas Siftings.

Some men are very ready to offer a remedy for everything. The other day we remarked to one of these animated apothecary shops: "An idea struck us yesterday——"

And before we could finish, he advised us: "Rub the affected parts with arnica!"

Mr. Wm. H. Moore, 307 S. Charles St., Baltimore, Md., a Commission Merchant, recommends Salvation Oil for rheumatism and chilblains. He writes: "My wife and son have used Salvation Oil for rheumatism and chilblains with marked efficacy."

Greasing the plow will make it clean itself in clay ground in wet weather.

Cured cough left after lung fever, with two bottles. Mrs. Lizzie Burns, Barclay, Sangamon Co., Ills., writes as follows: "I think Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is truly an excellent remedy for coughs left from lung fever, as two bottles entirely cured my daughter."

Children of Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Soller
Altoona, Pa.
Both Had Eczema
In Its Worst Form
"We think Hood's Sarsaparilla is the most valuable medicine on the market for blood and skin diseases. Our two children suffered terribly with the worst form of Eczema for two years. At last we tried Hood's Sarsaparilla and in a month both children were perfectly cured. We recommend
Hood's Sarsaparilla
as a standard family medicine, and would not be without it." MR. AND MRS. M. M. SOLLER, 1412 2nd Avenue, Altoona, Pa.

HOOD'S PILLS cure liver ills, constipation, biliousness, jaundice, sick headache, indigestion.

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till cured. DR. J. STEPHENS, Lebanon, Ohio.

PENSION JOHN W. MORRIS, Washington, D.C. Successfully Prosecutes Claims. Late Principal Examiner U.S. Pension Bureau. 3 yrs in last war, 15 adjudicating claims, atty since.

KESTOL BROS.
EXPORTERS AND
DEALERS IN RAW FURS
331 Maine St., Waukesha, Wis.
Send for Price List.

Telegraphy and Electric Engineering
Taught by practical Telegraphers and Electricians. No department of a business College, but a thorough special course. Circulars Free.
McALLISTER'S
SCHOOL OF TELEGRAPHY.
619 Nicollet Av. Minneapolis Minn.

CURES CATARRH
LONDON BALM
LONDON BALM CO. NEW YORK
CURES CATARRH HAY FEVER
PRICE 50
SOLD BY YOUR DRUGGIST.

WE WANT SALESMEN
1,200 ACRES. Largest in the West. Valuable Specialties.
$100,000.00
Responsible, Highest Com. & Salaries.
For our immense stock of NORTHERN GROWN FRUITS, Ornamental Trees, Shrubs, Etc. Experience not necessary. PAY WEEKLY. Apply at once for terms, etc., stating age. The JEWELL NURSERY CO., Lake City, Minn.
Name this Paper every time you write.

A Choice Gift
A Grand Family Educator
A Library in Itself
The Standard Authority
WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY
NEW FROM COVER TO COVER.
Fully Abreast of the Times.
Successor of the authentic "Unabridged." Ten years spent in revising, 100 editors employed, over $300,000 expended.
SOLD BY ALL BOOKSELLERS.
GET THE BEST.
Do not buy reprints of obsolete editions. Send for free pamphlet containing specimen pages and FULL PARTICULARS.
G. & C. MERRIAM CO., Publishers, Springfield, Mass., U. S. A.

FREE FORMULA Face Massage to patrons ordering our $2 or $3 Beauty Box, containing every requisite for beautifying the Face and Scalp. Removing all blemishes. 2c stamp for particulars. Samples 50c to any part of U. S. CAROLINE VON WERNER, M. D., Syndicate Block, Minneapolis.

FAT FOLKS REDUCED
Mrs. Alice Maple, Oregon, Mo., writes "My weight was 320 pounds, now it is 195, a reduction of 125 lbs." For circulars address, with 6c. Dr. O. W. F. SNYDER, McVicker's Theatre, Chicago, Ill.

JOHN HOEY.

John Hoey is dead. For a long time he was president of the Adams Express Co., but he was too gay. When he resigned, the shock was too great for him. Bright's Disease of the kidneys carried him off. Kidney trouble starts from a cold. You cannot have a cold without your kidneys being affected more or less. You should therefore, look out. Get a bottle of Reid's German Cough and Kidney Cure when you take cold. It is well to keep one on hand. One dose taken at night will cure you. In the morning you are well. Don't fool with a cold. It is dangerous. Ask your druggist for Reid's German Cough and Kidney Cure. Small bottles are twenty-five cents, large size fifty cents. You cannot afford to be without it.

SYLVAN REMEDY CO., Peoria, Ill.

ALLEN'S IRON TONIC BITTERS
The most Elegant Blood Purifier, Liver Invigorator, Tonic and Appetizer known. The first Bitters containing Iron ever advertised in America. J. P. ALLEN, Druggist & Chemist, St. Paul, Minn.

WRITE Beeman's Business College, Red Wing, Minn., for free Circular.

Minn Hist Society

St. Hilaire THE Spectator.

VOLUME XI. ST. HILAIRE, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1892. NUMBER 20.

THE WEEKLY NEWS DIGEST.

EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK IN A CONDENSED FORM.

The Latest and Most Important News of the World, Culled From the Telegraph Reports of the Press Associations.

The Capital.

The annual report of the United States treasurer is made public.

Uncle Sam's dispute with Venezuela is settled.

Maj. M. B. Adams has been detailed to succeed Maj. Ludlow as engineer of the Ninth and Eleventh Lighthouse districts.

A permanent trade arrangement between the United States and Salvador has succeeded the temporary arrangements of December 31, 1891.

Within the next few days about thirty of the fifty-nine special agents of the General Land Office will be dropped from the rolls because of insufficient appropriations.

Henry A. Eilers, recently a gunner's mate aboard the United States steamer Philadelphia, has been promoted to the position of acting gunner in the navy, "for extraordinary heroism displayed by him recently aboard that ship." Eilers also receives a gold medal for heroism. At the time of the recent gun explosion on the Philadelphia, Eilers extinguished the burning fragments of cloth from the cartridge that entered the powder magazine through the ammunition tube.

Record of Casualties.

Martin Repley, of Rock Island, Ill., poured oil into a stove and was burned to death.

The waterlogged bark Capella is in mid-ocean, directly in the path of steamships. The derelict is a dangerous obstruction.

James Lovett shot and killed Harry Downs at Barry, Ill. He "didn't know the gun was loaded."

John Owen, who lived near Greentown, Ind., was killed by falling from a wagon and being dragged nearly two miles.

Prairie fires near Aberdeen, S. D., started by sparks from railroad locomotives, spread over a large territory, burning out several farmers.

Ridgely Wagner and Ambrose Maloe, at Madison, 12 miles south of Norfolk, were drowned while attempting to take a short cut over the ice to a school house. Both bodies were soon recovered.

The residence of Samuel Yates, near Milan, Tunis, was destroyed by fire. Yates perished in the flames. He was a miser and was reputed to have large sums of money concealed in the house. The origin of the fire is unknown.

A Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul train was wrecked by a broken wheel near Wabasha. The coaches rolled down a twenty-foot embankment. Belle Robertson and John Poncellet, of Wabasha were injured.

During a severe gale at night at Santa Cruz, Cal., people on shore observed rockets being sent up some distance out to sea. It is supposed they were from some vessel in distress, and it is feared the vessel went down.

Jacob Sinchheimer, a New York tailor, either jumped or fell in front of an engine of the Third Avenue Elevated Road at Ninety-ninth Street, and was instantly killed. It was necessary to raise the engine by jacks to get the body out.

People in Print.

Gen. F. J. Lippitt of Washington is the only survivor of the few who witnessed the interment of Lafayette. He was then a youth residing in Paris.

Senator Colquitt and his wife, both of whom have been suffering from paralysis, are now convalescent. Senator Colquit will be in his seat in the senate in January.

Judge McMullen of Lancaster, Pa., has instructed the grand jury to indict all persons known to have made wagers on the result of the late election.

George T. Kibling, the liquor dealer of Norwich, Vt., who was sentenced to sixty-seven years' imprisonment for selling liquor to Dartmouth students, is out on good behavior, but has to make a monthly report of his whereabouts.

Mr. Foster, secretary of state, will go to Paris at the expiration of his term of office in March, to take charge of the government's case before the Bering sea arbitrators.

"There is no foundation whatever," says London Truth, "for the report, which has been so persistently circulated, that the prince of Wales contemplates visiting the Chicago exposition; nor is it true that there has been any idea of the duke of York crossing the Atlantic next spring."

John E. Fitzgerald of Boston, who recently visited Parnell's grave, says that every day since the remains of the great Irish leader were deposited there fresh flowers have not merely been strewn but literally piled upon his grave by the common people.

Mr. Moody is expected to conduct a series of revival meetings in Chicago next summer, the meetings will continue during the whole of the exposition period, but whether they will be held in the auditorium or in a new building has not been determined.

Sinful Doings.

The United States court at Boston sustains the indictment against Asa Potter, the banker accused of illegal banking.

Mrs. John Stach has been arrested in Jackson County, Kas., charged with the murder of her brother, Paul Sweitlick. A pistol was attached to his saddle in such a manner that when he mounted his horse the pistol was discharged, killing him.

While drinking in celebration of having raised money to defend his son Robert, charged with murder, Polk Harvey, of St. Joseph, Mo., quarreled with Albert Jinks, and was stabbed to death by the latter.

A warrant has been sworn out by A. E. Carleton, president of the Colorado Commission Company, of Denver, for the arrest of J. K. Moore, his confidential clerk, on the charge of embezzling between $6,000 and $8,000. Moore has fled.

A Seattle special says:—The bold Northern Pacific, train robbers have not yet been captured. Sheriff Woolsey of King county offered $500 reward for their capture, which makes $1,000 already offered for their arrest.

James B. Dow, at one time was a wealthy and highly respected citizen of Boston, Mass., but when death checked his career was a social outcast and almost a pauper, committed suicide at St. Louis by taking poison.

Charles E. Pratt, a well-known journalist of Gainesville, Fla., was shot dead by Thornton S. Stringfellow, who detected him in a compromising position with Mrs. Stringfellow. Stringfellow was released from custody on his own recognizance.

Maggie Dowty, 18 years old, living at Cokesdale, Mont., shot and killed Patrick Tierney. Three years ago the man wronged her, later assaulting her. The girl finally married, when Tierney circulated scandalous stories regarding her. The girl procured a revolver and shot him dead.

The Foreign Budget.

An order in council has been passed exempting pleasure yachts passing through the Welland canal from tolls.

It is officially announced that the British parliament will meet for business Jan. 31.

Richard Schenecker, the son of one of the wealthiest men in Vienna, has committed suicide. The case is being investigated.

The governor general of Cuba, has issued a decree ordering the removal of all quarantine restrictions from vessels that left New York after Nov. 19.

The Berlin health officer reports that there have been in Germany this year 19,647 cases of cholera of which 8,575 have been fatal.

Two directors of the Bank of Lisbon and the chief of the finance department have gone to Paris and London, it is alleged, to secure a loan with which to meet payment on the coupons of the external debt.

Augustus T. Kerr, the extradited American forger, is a passenger on the Cunard liner Aurelia, from Liverpool for New York. Kerr is charged with embezzling $12,000 from the Jarvis Conkin Trust Company, of Kansas City.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the execution of the Manchester martyrs—Allen, Larken and O'Brien—was quietly observed in Dublin. A large number of citizens marched in procession from the city to the graves of the martyrs in the cemetery.

The weather in Vienna is bitterly cold, the mercury falling to 18 degrees below the freezing point. The people in the poorer quarters suffered intensely from the cold. The free soup kitchens are besieged by crowds of hungry women and children.

John Dillon, at a meeting of anti-Parnellites in County Roscommon, challenged the Parnellites to show that they had received one dollar from either America or the British colonies in support of their cause. He maintained that the full sympathy of Irishmen abroad was with the anti-Parnellites.

The Berlin correspondent of the London Times says that the North German Gazette comments on the demoralization and political ignorance displayed in the election to the Reichstag of Rector Ahlwardt, the candidate of the anti-Semitic faction in the Arnerwalde-Friedeberg district.

M. Drumont, editor of La Libre Parole, which accused M. Proust of accepting a bribe from the Panama Canal Company, declines to testify before the Panama Canal investigating committee unless the government grants him pardon so that he will not be required to go back to prison to finish the sentence he is now serving for libel.

During a bull fight at Artcagan, Mex., several bulls broke down the barricade in front of the audience and charged the crowd. The seats in the amphitheater gave way, the audience going down with the ruins. Fifty people were injured. The bulls gored one man to death and injured ten others.

Gossip of the Sports.

It is thought that a German-American steamer has been lost off the Cost of Scotland.

The fire which was supposed to have been extinguished in the Honeybrook mine at Hazelton Pa., has broken out afresh. The interior of the mine has been wrecked.

A buggy containing Miss Andrews and Miss Fry was struck by a train running sixty miles an hour, at Lima, O. Miss Andrews was killed and Miss Fry fatally hurt.

Lottie Smith, the wife of a tinner at Columbus O., while playing at the residence of Mrs. John Holly, playfully pointed the handle of a revolver at Mrs. Holly, the muzzle being pointed toward Mrs. Smith The pistol was discharged, the ball entered her body above the heart.

At South Bend, Ind., George Myers was killed by an explosion of an oil tank on a Standard Oil company's wagon. Gas generated and blew out the end which struck him with terrific force, then tore through a buggy 300 feet away.

Budd Doble, in Boston, wires that J. Malcolm Forbes, owner of Nancy Hanks, has agreed to let him keep the great mare and beat 2:04 with her next season. She was to have been bred to Arion. Nancy Hanks is at Terre Haute, Ind., with the rest of Doble's string for the winter.

About the Railroads.

Representatives of Western roads make efforts to organize a tannage pool.

The Western Passenger association adopts decisive measures to stop rate cutting.

Political Echoes.

Cleveland's plurality in Kentucky is 10,004. Four years ago the Democratic plurality was 27,867.

Roger Q. Mills has enough votes pledged to secure his re-election to the United States by a large majority.

Labor.

Another street car strike is threatened in New Orleans.

The United Railway Employers' association is organized in Chicago.

Machinists at the Watervliet Arsenal, Troy, N. Y., are on a strike. Two men were called upon to attend two lathes which they refused to do.

General News.

The New York militia will probably attend the World's fair in a body.

The typhoid fever epidemic continues at St. Louis. The new cases number 250 daily.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Marius were suffocated by coal gas during their sleep, at Freeport Ill.

There is a probability of a legal contest over the will of a millionaire, the late D. Edgar Crouse, of Syracuse, N. Y. The reported contestant is a New York city woman, known in Syracuse as "Bertha," who claims to have been his wife and the mother of his child.

It is believed that the missing child of Mr. and Mrs. Pepler, of Hartford, Conn., who it was thought had been abducted by the latter, has been found. She was brought to a Hartford hotel by a woman calling herself Mrs. Ray Johnson, locked in a room, and deserted.

A bill has been introduced in the South Carolina legislature to interpret the statutes according to the view taken by the Tillman administration last spring in the bank taxes case, which was one of the chief issues of the recent state canvass between Gov. Tillman and his opponents.

The members of the American Public Health Association and International Medical Congress, which convenes at the City of Mexico in its twentieth annual session, were received on their arrival by many officials and citizens and were escorted to their quarters, accompanied by bands of music.

NORTHWEST NEWS BUDGET

THE WEEKLY ROUND-UP OF IMPORTANT NEWS.

A Concise Account of the Happenings of the Past Week in Minnesota, North Dakota, Iowa and Wisconsin.

Minnesota.

An explosion occurs on a boat at Duluth, killing two persons.

Navigation on the Mississippi River has practically closed for the season.

The 9-year-old child of J. M. Ranger, of Fergus Falls, was accidently shot and killed by her 4-year-old brother.

Frank Brown, the last victim of the Van Sickle tragedy, at Frazee, died from the effects of his injuries.

A channel has been cut in the ice and the ferry is running at Red Wing, but if this mild weather continues the ice will soon break up. It is now weakening.

Henry Driscoll was badly cut in a drunken row by Simon Myhre a notorious character at Northfield. Myhre is now in jail awaiting trial.

A farmer named Daniel Lodin, living seven miles east of Warren, hung himself from a rafter in his granary.

Neil Johnson, in charge of the government dam at Sandy Lake and well known throughout the northern part of the state, died of pneumonia.

A threshing hand from Dakota by the name of Golden was run over by the cars at Montevideo and killed. The home of the deceased is unknown.

Charles Rynds, of Montgomery, was instantly killed by the bursting of a wood saw, a piece of which was driven through his brain. He was 28 years of age and single.

The building of Luther Academy at Albert Lea is entirely too small to accommodate students who desire to attend. It is probable a ladies' hall will be put up before the next year.

While skating on the Vermillion near Eggleston, George Trainor, a telegraph operator for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road at that place, broke through the ice and was drowned.

The large cooper shop owned by Cargill & Fall, at Houston, burned. The machinery was totally destroyed, together with about 500 ready made barrels. Loss, $3,000; insurance $1,200. They will rebuild.

Charles Fiedel, an oiler in the St. Paul Gas and Electric Works, met a horrible death by being caught in the machinery. His body was almost crushed to pieces. Deceased was 22 years old and leaves a wife and two children.

The trial of Q. C. Smith, the engineer on the Soo, who was in the wreck at Thorson on Oct. 27th of last year, came to an end the other day at Glenwood. The jury was out only a short time and brought in a verdict of acquittal.

John Marvin, a Great Northern brakeman who by the breaking of a brake chain was thrown from a box car breaking his leg some weeks ago, at St. Cloud has since died. Typhoid fever as a result of the accident was the cause of his death. The railroad company will be sued for damages.

Information has just reached Lake City of the burning of the H. J. O'Neil elevator at Zumbro Falls. The elevator was filled with barley. The fire was no doubt the work of an incendiary. Loss and insurance are unknown.

The three boys who attempted to wreck a Great Northern passenger train last July, near Lockhart, by piling ties upon the track in three different places, were tried at the last term of the district court held in Ada, and found guilty. The boys will be sent to the state reformatory.

Martin Wick, an employe in the York steel plant, was stuck by a short line train near Ironton and instantly killed. He was with a party of fellow workmen on their way to the shops when the train overtook them hurled Wick violently to the ground. The others cleared the track in time to escape.

An unusually well equipped flour mill has just been completed and put in operation at Lakefield. The proprietors, A. A. Fosness and M. J. Milne, are planning an extensive business. The mill has been built at a cost of $12,000 and has a capacity of a 100 barrels per day.

A highway robbery occurred a short distance from Mankato. Louis Herzberg, of Decoria, was driving home, and a stranger asked him for a ride. The stranger struck Mr. Herzeberg on the side of the head, severing the top of his right ear and bruising his head. He fell to the roadside unconscious, and the robber escaped with the team.

While Gottlieb Grandis was driving across the railroad crossing at Redwing his wagon was struck by a westbound passenger train, smashing the wagon into smithereens. The driver was thrown a distance of 25 feet. While in the air he had presence of mind to catch the top of a brake on a freight car on another track and was saved as by a miracle.

R. P. Grant, together with Oliver King and two other men from Park Rapids broke through the ice on Crow Wing lake, some fifteen miles east of Park Rapids, losing a span of horses and buggy. The men barely escaped with their own lives: and up to present writing the buggy has not been found.

John Peterson, of Kasson, stabbed Jean Childs and a man named McDonough, of Mantorville, Dodge County, in Joseph Aberwald's saloon at Rochester, Childs was stabbed in the right eye and McDonough received a gash in the cheek while assisting the former, Childs is in a precarious condition. The fight is said to be the outcome of an old grudge cherished by Peterson against Childs.

Jacob Zimmerman and Frank Seitz, homesteaders near Tower, are each bereft of a wife under peculiar circumstances, Jacob advertised for a wife and a comely German matron put in her appearance and they were married. A few days later another woman arrived from Iowa in response to the "ad" and Jacob turned her over to his friend. Four weeks ago Seitz and Miss Minnie Keith were married in Tower. Then came the denouement. Zimmerman unguardedly told his young bride he had a wife in the old country, and she indignantly left him: About the same time the sheriff of Story County, Ia., appeared in search of the woman who married Seitz, and she went with him. It appears that she had deserted a husband and three children in Iowa.

Wisconsin.

Mrs. Charles Cheney, formerly a resident of Madison, lost her home and all her belongings by fire at Pine Bluff, Ark.

Palmyra is threatened with a wood famine for the first time in the history of the place,

Mrs. George Kohlman, a resident of Racine, was terribly burned about the face and hands while lighting a fire.

Henry Monroe, a farmer residing at New Diggins, Ozaukee County, broke his leg by falling off a scaffolding.

A young son of Ambrose Ermine, of Racine, fell off the sidewalk and broke his leg.

George White, an old and well-known lumberman of Ashland, dropped dead on the street of heart trouble.

James Moore, of Eau Claire, was convicted of burglary and sentenced to four years in state prison.

Cornelius O'Neil, an old resident of Janesville, died from the effects of an injury received a year ago. Deceased was 70 years old.

William Walters, of Fond du Lac, is nursing a sprained leg and a badly bruised head, the result of a runaway accident.

Martha, a young daughter of G. F. Fritz, of Oshkosh, fell into a tub of boiling water and died two days later.

John Fitzgerald, a former resident of La Crosse, was killed by the cars at Valentine, Neb.

J. H. Middleton was acquitted of the charge of getting money under false pretenses at Ashland.

A. H. Allen, a Racine liveryman, was severely injured in a runaway accident. His right foot was so badly crushed that amputation may be necessary.

C. P. Salisbury, a former Oshkosh newspaper man, is now private secretary to Dr. Salmon, of the Bureau of Animal Industry at Washington.

Thomas Hemmens, of Janesville, suffered severe internal injuries by a large dry goods box falling upon him while unloading a freight car.

Otto Fisher, of Sheboygan, was sentenced to sixty days in the county jail for taking another man's horse without the owner's permission.

William Boucher, a bricklayer of West Superior, fell from the top of a new building, a distance of 40 feet, at that place, but experienced no serious results.

Kenosha is to have better fire facilities. Two new pumps have been purchased which throw a volume of water twenty inches in diameter fully 100 feet in the air.

James Buchanan and Fred Johnson, two La Crosse young men, were arrested on a charge of burglary. They will have a hearing at the December term of court.

Henry Bentz, a lad 16 years old living at Racine, mourns the loss of part of his left hand by the premature discharge of a shot gun which he was handling.

Gov. Peck has formally announced Washburn as the county seat of Bayfield County. The removal of the records from Bayfield to Washburn will begin at once.

Aretus Rumville, a Marinette contractor, fell off a load of hay and broke his neck, killing him instantly. He leaves a young wife.

Dennis, the 12-year-old son of Davan, of Beloit, has been missing from his home for the past six weeks. The mother is almost crazed with grief.

The State Board of Control has issued warrants for the support of the various state institutions for the month of November as follows: State Hospital, $10,093.00; Northern Hospital, $10,976 71; School for the Deaf, $3,313.45; School for the Blind, $2,413.20; Industrial School, $5,476.40; state prison, $5,308.54; State Public School, $3,114.03.

Illinois Central Railway Company officials deny the report that the company has secured options on property at Madison which would give them an outlet along the west shore of Lake Mendota and thence north to the Superior mining regions.

While Sam Smith, of Antigo, was coming down a hill with a load of hub timber, part of the load slipped forward and broke the hind leg of one of his horses, and the animal was shot. The same evening he bought another horse for 90 cents.

The coroner's jury on the death of James O'Malley, who was killed by a Chicago & North-Western train near Madison, returned a verdict placing the responsibility of the accident on the railway company.

David Doble, of Superior, is mentioned as a candidate for Indian agent of the La Pointe agency for Northern Wisconsin and Minnesota. The office is located at Ashland.

Burglars entered the American Express Company's office at Palmyra and secured $103 in cash. A money package containing $1,500 had been removed from the safe by the station agent the same evening.

North Dakota.

Martin Elkshahl, a farmer living near East Grand Forks, died from a fractured skull sustained in a runaway accident.

The residence of M. Collins of Grand Forks, was destroyed by fire. Loss $3,000; insurance, $1,700.

George Marden, a switchman in the employ of the Northern Pacific, fell under a car and had his arm crushed at Jamestown, and died of his hurts.

By a jail delivery at Wahpeton, seven prisoners escaped. One boy of 17 was recaptured. He says that they were four months digging through the wall with a table fork.

Harry Woodruff, the boy who is supposed to have shot himself near Jamestown, and who gave his name as Thurner Gies, is in a critical condition with a bullet in his chest. He came from St. Johnsbury, Vt.

The coroner's jury in the case of Dr. A. Howe, Jr., of Minneapolis, who shot himself in the Hotel Dacotah, at Grand Forks, found as a verdict that death resulted from the discharge of a revolver in his own hands, it not being known whether it was suicidal or accidental.

Thomas Halvorsen, representative-elect from the Sixth representative district, was arrested at Grand Forks for giving away liquor on election day. The evidence established the fact that Halvorsen treated a number at the polls. Judge Leroy has taken the case under advisement to decide whether treating is a violation of the law.

William Kerber, a farmer living 14 miles southeast of Cooperstown, and a hired man, an Austrian, whose name is unknown, fought with axes. The hired man's head was pounded to a pulp and he died immediately. Kerber is badly cut. His face is split open and he will probably die. Kerber claims it was a case of attempted robbery, but it was probably a dispute over wages.

A Fargo advice says: Morris Olson was found dead in Island Park and everything indicates suicide. He was about twenty years of age and for five years had worked for the Argus. He was a studious boy, earning good wages and saving his money. No motive for his act is known. He apparently sat down by a tree and fired a bullet into his brain never stirring thereafter. He has a sister living in Helena. The coroner will hold an inquest.

Iowa.

The jury in the Bain case, at Waterloo, wherein a woman sues her husband for assault before marriage, disagreed.

Fire at Gowrie destroyed the postoffice and adjoining millinery, dry goods, hardware and shoe stores. Loss $20,000.

Abe Snyder, a laborer, was crushed to death by a falling elevator at Council Bluffs. The body was ground to pieces and the arms pulled out of the sockets.

Will Lyons, a traveling man from Chicago, was shot by a gambler named Shea, at Ottumwa, over a game of cards in which the former was cheated out of $50.

Charles Hulshizer, of the City Mills, at Hamburg, was attacked by a man named Laven and seriously mutilated with a knife. Laven was arrested. One ear of Hulshizer was cut off.

Miss Georgia Cole, a young girl, of Storm Lake, while cooking, was terrified to discover her clothing on fire. She was burned so badly she died in a few hours.

George Twedell, employed in a packing house at Ottumwa, was caught between a heavy beam and the side of the building and crushed so severely that he cannot recover.

A De Moines special says: Lon Daniels, a miner, lighted a fuse blast in his room in a mine and went back to see why it failed to go off. An explosion followed his entrance to the room and he was killed instantly.

J. M. Wood, colored, is in jail at Ottumwa, waiting the result of injuries inflicted on his wife. The fellow bound her down and beat her with a harness tug. Her body was all bloody and bruised.

John Murphy was arrested at Davenport on the charge of stealing 30 head of horses in Keokuk and Lee counties. The sheriff of Keokuk chased him here, and took two weeks to capture him.

August Johnson, a son of Peter Johnson, a farmer living seven miles from Boone, was stealing a ride on a Chicago & Northwestern freight train, hanging on a ladder outside of the box car when his head struck a projecting bridge timber. He was knocked off and killed.

The plant of the Des Moines Wash Powder company was burned recently, involving a loss of $90,000 in machinery and building, and was fully covered by insurance. Friction between a large belt and a block of wood strongly saturated with oil was the cause.

The trial of Thomas Gaffey, indicted for the willful murder of Edward Boggey, opened at Ft. Dodge before Judge Weaver recently. The crime was committed last March. Gaffey shot Boggy on the street while the latter was walking with Mary Murphy, a girl with whom Gaffey was violently in love. Five of the ablest lawyers in Iowa have been retained by Gaffey, and will base their defense on the grounds of insanity.

DAVY CROCKET WON.

He Concealed His Identity and Knocked Out the Crack Shots.

"I once saw Davy Crockett clean up a crowd of crack shots," said Judge Asa Musgrove, one of the early "pathfinders," who is en route to his home in northern Indiana.

"It was in 1834, shortly before the outbreak of the war between Texas and Mexico. I was in Santa Fe, N.M. A party of a dozen or more were shooting at a target with rifles, when a stranger rode up, threw his leg across the pommel of his saddle and watched the sport.

"He had a long rifle strapped across the back of his saddle—one of those old fashioned affairs heavily ornamented with silver. He was inclined to criticise the shooting and was invited to set the pace. He replied that he never 'throwed' away any ammunition, but that if they would put up their crack shot he would shoot with him for ten Mexican dollars. The crowd agreed and the stranger unslung his 'ginger-bread gun,' as his opponent dubbed it. 'Perhaps y'd like t' raise the bet?' said the stranger as he ambled up to the crowd. It was doubled, then trebled. He then offered to bet his gun against that of his opponent. The wager was accepted and the stranger brought his rifle to his shoulder.

"The muzzle wobbled badly and some one cried out that he was going to shoot a circle around the target. The stranger lowered his gun and offered to wager his horse against forty Mexican dollars on the result. His proposition was promptly accepted and he once more brought the 'gingerbread' gun to his shoulder. But it did not 'wobble' this time. He put a bullet in the exact center of the target, then shot two more through the same hole, winning easily. As he rode off with the spoils some one cried out, asking his name, 'Davy Crockett,' came the reply, and the party adjourned to the nearest saloon without another word."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Suez Not as Great as Soo.

The Suez canal has a world-wide renown, and serves the commerce of Europe and Asia. It has a vast traffic, since it shortens so greatly the distance between the two continents named, yet a small canal in the northwestern section of the United States, which is but little known outside of this country, is the avenue of a much greater traffic. The Sault St. Mary's canal, connecting the state of Michigan with the Canadian province of Ontario, has this year done an immense business. By the close of navigation the amount of freight carried through it will be over 11,000,000 tons, which is fully 2,000,000 tons more than the Suez canal floats in twelve months. In October freight went through at the equivalent of 300 barrels of flour every minute. It is the channel through which the vast commerce of our northwest passes, and of which the world generally has but little conception.—Boston Journal.

THE OPENING OF CONGRESS

ALL ARE GLAD TO MEET ONCE MORE.

A Joint Committee of Both Houses Is Appointed to Formally Notify the President That They Await His Pleasure—Message To-Day.

And Then Comes Music.

Washington, Dec. 6.—At noon yesterday Vice President Morton rapped two or three times lightly with the gavel and the last session of the Fifty-second congress had been duly inaugurated by the senate. The scenes in the senate chamber were much the same as those usually presented upon such occasions, only to-day there was an unusual floral display. The galleries were well filled. Senators arrived in numbers early and soon every one seemed to be congratulating every other person. The Democrats were congratulated on their recent victory and the Republicans were told that their chance might come again in a few years. All seemed glad to meet again, and those who have been invalids seemed to come in for a large sized share of good wishes. On nearly every desk was a floral offering of beautiful roses of all colors. The credentials of Mr. Proctor of Vermont, for Mr. Edmund's unexpired term and for a new term from March 4, next, were presented by Mr. Morrill and the oath of office was administered to Mr. Proctor. The usual resolution directing the secretary to notify the house of the senate being in session and of the appointment of a committee to wait upon the president and inform him that congress is ready to receive any communication he may desire to make, was agreed to, and the senate took a recess till 1 o'clock.

On reassembling there was a delay of over half an hour, pending the report of the committee appointed to wait on the president. That report was made by Mr. Hale, who said that the president would send his message to-morrow at the opening of congress. The senate then adjourned till 12 noon

The House.

Washington, Dec. 6.—The house is the popular side of the capitol, and whenever there is a field day it is in that direction that the crowds went their way. Yesterday showed that the opening of a new session had lost none of its charms for the people of Washington. The halls leading to the house were jammed with people long before the hour for assembling, and the chamber itself was alive with people. Among them were constituents even thus early seeking the influence and assistance of their members in legislation. The floor of the house looked as if it might have been transformed into a vast conservatory. Never before, perhaps, has there been so wonderful a display of flowers as to-day. There were posies for congratulation and for condolence, for the donors had not been unmindful of either the victorious or the defeated. Not less than sixty of the desks were covered with the offerings of the admirers of the statesmen who occupied them.

As the hands of the clock pointed to the hour of 12 Speaker Crisp ascended to the speaker's chair, and, as his gavel dropped, a solemn hush followed the noise and confusion. The blind chaplain, the Rev. Dr. Milburn, delivered a prayer. The clerk, by direction of the speaker, proceeded to call the roll of members by states. Two hundred and twenty-four members responded to their names. It was ordered that the clerk inform the senate that a quorum had appeared and that the house was ready to proceed to business. A committee, composed of Messrs. Springer, Forney and O'Neill (Pa.), was appointed to join a committee of the senate to announce to the president that both houses of congress were in session and ready to receive any communication he saw fit to present. The credentials were presented of the following representatives to fill vacancies:

Sixth Carolina, John L. McLaurin; Third Carolina, S. E. Kilgore; Sixteenth Ohio, Lewis P. Ohliger, and First Maryland, J. B. Brown. They all took the oath of office. W. A. Sipe, elected to fill the vacancy in the Twenty-fourth Pennsylvania district, was allowed to qualify without the presentation of his credentials, which had not arrived. The daily hour of meeting of the house was fixed at 12 noon. Mr. Hooker (Miss.) introduced a bill to change the time of the meeting of congress to the first Monday in March, after election. A recess was then taken for half an hour. The speaker took the chair after the recess, but it was a quarter of an hour before the committee appointed to wait upon the president made its report. It was that the president would communicate with congress to-morrow. Mr. English (N. J.) announced the death of his colleague, Hon. E. J. McDonald of New Jersey, and as a mark of respect to the memory of the deceased the house adjourned.

At It Earley.

Washington, Dec. 6.—The initial step looking to the enactment of legislation for the opening of the world's fair on Sunday was taken to-day, when Representative Durborrow of Illinois, chairman of the committee on the Columbian exposition, introduced in the house a joint resolution making it the duty of the World's Columbian commission to make such rules or modifications of the rules of the corporation known as the World's Columbian commission as will prohibit the use on Sundays of machinery, unnecessary manual labor and all merchandising, and at the same time give opportunity for the study of the highest standard of artistic and mechanical science; that the art gallery, horticultural building and all other buildings in which exhibits of mechanical art are installed, shall be open to the public every day, and that each employe shall be given one day of each week for rest and study or recreation.

A bill providing for the issue of $75,000,000 bonds, redeemable in coin at the option of the United States after ten years, was introduced in the house to-day by Representative Ammerman of Pennsylvania. The proceeds of the sale are to be applied to the payment of the deficiency in the United States treasury.

Hunger in Russia.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 6.—The governor of the province of Voronezh has asked the imperial government for 5,000,000 roubles with which to purchase food for the peasants in that province who are suffering from famine. The governor of the province of Toula asks for 2,000,000 roubles to be expended for the same purpose. Owing to a series of bad crops in the government of Samara, large numbers of the German colonists have been ruined.

A Claim for Salvage.

London, Dec. 6.—Divers were at work to-day stopping the hole in the Spree, which was towed into Queenstown Saturday with her haft broken and with thirty feet of water in her after compartment. The discharge of the Spree's cargo and the passengers' luggage is proceeding rapidly. The owners of the Lake Huron, which rescued her, claim $125,000 salvage, and bond for the amount has been given.

Meeting of Fair Commissioners.

Sioux Falls, S. D. Special, Dec. 6.—The world's fair commission is in session here preparing for the collection of exhibits at the exposition. Reports will be heard to-morrow.

Minnesota Editors.

Windom, Minn., Special, Dec. 6.—The fourth semi-annual meeting of the Southwestern Minnesota Editorial association will be held at St. James Dec. 12.

A Careful Embezzler.

Denver, Dec. 6.—The safe in which George H. Kohn kept his papers and supposed valuables has been opened, and nothing of any value whatever was found. Papers that were in themselves valueless, but which could be used against Kohn should be be found, were taken away. He has squandered the whole of the Gilman estate, amounting to some $60,000, and he either destroyed or carried away with him all evidence that ever such a fund existed. Kohn had been distributing worthless checks for months previous to his departure, and those who received them are sorry now that they did not have him arrested, as the opportunities were many. His embezzlements will reach at least $100,000.

ANXIOUS TO ADJOURN.

Englishmen Want to Go Home.

Brussels, Dec. 6. — When the international monetary conference resumes its sittings to-morrow, the first matter requiring settlement will be whether the report of the committee appointed to consider whether Mr. Rothschild's plans shall be further debated or the proposals of the American delegates proceeded with. Mr. Rothschild, Sir C. Fremantle and Sir William Houldsworth, all of whom are British delegates, desire some expression of opinion regarding Mr. Rothschild's plan from the full conference. Mr. Carrie, another British delegate, aims to bring the conference to a speedy close, and in common with some of the other delegates who are resigned to see the conference result in failure, would accelerate the consideration of the American resolutions as hastening the winding up of the meeting. Sir Fremantle, with a view to the resumption of debate on the Rothschild plan, has amended his declaration declining to pledge the English government to withdraw its half sovereign pieces in favor of silver, by adding the words, "except concurrently with the adoption of the Rothschild project or some other proposal having the same compensatory value." Sir C. Fremantle, who is deputy master of the British mint, has never been known to take independent action or personal initiative, and it is therefore taken for granted that he is the mouthpiece of the British government in announcing assent to the abolition of the half-sovereign.

If, despite the adverse report of the committee, the full conference adopts the Rothschild plan, a number of the delegates will want the conference to close or adjourn Dec. 16 at the latest. If an adjournment is taken, it is doubtful if there will be a full attendance when the sittings are resumed in January.

Sifting A Scandal.

Paris, Dec. 6.—According to the Eclair, M. Degue, a member of the chamber of deputies, admits that he received one of the Thierree checks for 25,000 francs, this being his share, due from Baron Reinach, in a guarantee syndicate in which M. Dugue who incurred certain risks, was entitled to compensation if the operation of the syndicate was successful. The investigating committee to-day examined Herbrard, of the Temps, respecting the source from which he obtained extracts of the report of M. Rossean, whom the chamber of deputies sent to examine the Panama works before it sanctioned the lottery loan. M. Herbrard to-day declined to make known the source of his information regarding his share in the Panama contracts, he said he had often before done business in connection with various public works. Banker Kohn, partner of the late Baron Reinach, promised the committee that he would examine the firm's books again and would endeavor to throw further light on the Thierree checks.

M. Alberto Grevy gave evidence before the committee to-day. He admitted that he had cashed a check for 14,000 francs. The money had been paid to him as a member of the underwriting syndicate before referred to. He was also Baron Reinach's lawyer, and was remunerated for his services in checks. M. Grevy concluded by denying that he had tried to secure the support of any senators for the Panama canal schemes.

Landlords Absent.

London, Dec. 6.—The refusal of the landlords to have anything to do with the evicted tenants commission has enabled that body to make unexpectedly rapid progress. All the witnesses will be examined before Christmas, and the report of the commission will be presented directly upon the meeting of parliament. Lord Rosebery, the foreign minister, has been to Dublin conferring with Mr. Morley, chief secretary for Ireland. Although the drafting of the home rule bill has been left to a cabinet committee that does not include Lord Rosebery in its membership, the foreign minister has interfered on the clauses relating to the two houses that it is proposed shall form the Irish parliament, the financial arrangements, and the representation of Ireland in the imperial parliament.

Criminal Transactions.

Berlin, Dec. 6.—The trial of Rector Ahlwardt on the charge of libel in connection with the purchase of arms by the German war office was continued to-day. Ahlwardt caused a sensation by declaring that the Count and Countess Mohenthal, Deputy Baron Wackerbarth and Herr Kahasth, a merchant, while in a fashionable restaurant heard Herr Loewe, Herr Kuhne and a soldier of exalted rank discussing, in an adjoining room, the affairs of the ministry of war in language of an incriminating character. They were talking of Herr Loewe and the rifle contract, and their utterances were such as to leave no doubt of the criminal nature of the transactions between Loewe and the ministry of war. The court, upon hearing this statement, decided to cite the four witnesses named. Lieut. Col. von Gossinitz, of the department of arms in the ministry of war, declares that there is no objection whatever in the war office to the publication of the six documents submitted to the court by Rector Ahlwardt, but that the permission to that effect is awaiting the consent of Gen. von Kaltenborn-Stachau, minister of war.

England in Africa.

London, Dec. 6.—The preparations that are being made for the expedition of Gerald Portal, who has been appointed British commissioner to Uganda, disclose the thoroughness of the plans of the government for the occupation of that African territory. Besides taking, under the name of an escort, a strong contingent of ghoorkhas, drawn from the army in India, Mr. Portal has been authorized to engage for the queen's service Nubian soldiers in the service of the British East African company. English officers, commissioned and non-commissioned, will lead Commissioner Portal's small army. His guard, consisting of 400 well armed natives, chiefly Somalis, will start for Mombassa Dec. 16.

M. Ribot Successful.

Paris, Dec. 6.—M. Ribot, a present minister of foreign affairs, has informed President Carnot that he has succeeded in forming a cabinet, which is a reproduction of the Loubet cabinet, except that M. Bourgeois, formerly minister of public instruction and the arts, will succeed M. Ricard as minister of justice and public worship. M. Dupuy, deputy from Haute-Loire will be minister of public instruction and M. Sarrien, deputy from Saone-et-Loire, will replace M. Roche as minister of commerce.

Horse Stealing the Charge.

Terre Haute, Ind., Dec. 6.—Gov. Chase refused to recognize the Kansas requisition for the possession of Ellsworth Wyatt, the member of the Dalton gang who was arrested near this place, and Wyatt will go to Oklahoma to answer to the charge of horse stealing. The Kansas charge against Wyatt is murder.

Kossuth Not Dying.

Vienna, Dec. 6.—The report that Louis Kossuth, the Hungarian patriot, was dying, is untrue.

Brewers Make a Demand.

Milwaukee, Dec. 6.—The members of the brewers' union of this city, which embraces in its membership the men employed in every brewery in the city, have decided to demand an increase of wages. The increase asked is $5 a month on the wages of all members of the union and brewery workmen.

Four Railroad Men Killed.

Denver, Dec. 6.—A freight train on the Burlington road broke in two at Corona several miles from this city this evening and a collision took place between the two parts causing a bad wreck and killing four bridge carpenters. Their names could not be learned.

GREAT NORTHERN

TIME CARD.

NO. 3 Daily | NO. Daily

7 40 p m Lv......St. Paul......Ar 6 55 am
8 10 " 11 ......Minneapolis...... 6 25 am
05 a m 2 18 ......Barnesville...... 10 25 pm
*10 45 am 9 Lv......Crookston......Ar 4 00 pm
*11 15 " 30 ......Shirley...... 3 30 " *
*x11 45 " 31 ......Ives...... x3 00 " *
x12 20 pm ......Wylie...... x2 20 " *
*12 45 " 32 Ar......St. Hilaire......Lv 2 00 " *

*Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

S. S. Buzza Agt.

Dr. H. GRUNDY.
Physician
& Surgeon.

Graduate of the University of Toronto Canada and member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario.

Messages from the surrounding country attended to,

Office in Drug Store
THIEF RIVER FALLS,

NORTHERN PACIFIC
THE
GREAT TRAMSCONENTAL ROUTE.

Passes through Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, Manitoba, Montana, Idaho, Oregon and Washington.

THE DINING CAR LINE

Dining cars are run between Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Winnipeg, Helena, Butte, Tacoma, Seattle and Portland.

PULLMAN SLEEPING CAR ROUTE.

Pullman service between Chicago St. Paul Montana and the Pacific Northwest; and between St. Paul, Minneapolis and Minnesota North Dakota and Manitoba points.

THE POPULAR LINE.

Early Express Trains carry elegant Pullman sleeping Cars, Dining cars, Day Coaches, Pullman Tourist Sleepers and Free Colonist Sleeping Cars.

YELLOWSTONE PARK ROUTE.

The Northern Pacific R. R. is the rail line to Yellowstone Park; the popuirr line to California and Alaska; and its trains pass through the grandest scenery of seven states

THROUGH TICKETS Are sold at all cupon offices of the Northern Pacific Railroad to points North, East, South and West in the United States and Canada

TIME SCEDULE,

	Leave Crookston Daily	Arrive Crookston Daily
For Staples, Minneapolis, St. Paul Duluth Ashland and points East and South	7:05 p. m.	8:20 a m,
For Grand Forks Grafton Drayton, Winnipeg and points in North Dakota and Manitoba	8:27a. m.	7:10 p. m.

For Rates, maps, Time Tables or special information, apply to Agent Northern Pacific R R, at Crookston Minn., or

CHAS. S. FEE,
Gen. Pass. Agent
St. Paul Minn.

ST. HILAIRE MEAT MARKET.

All kinds of fresh and salt meat always on hand.

I make a specialty of buying and selling cattle of all kinds.

If you want to buy or sell anything in that line it will pay you to give me a call.

JAMES DAINARD.

FRED. Eikhof

DEALER IN CHOICE
WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS.

Beer always on tap.
Pool Room in Connection.

Broadway St. Hilaire.

FRANK IVES,

Attorney and Counselor AT LAW,

CROOKSTON and ST. HILAIRE, Minn.
Will Practice In ALL The Courts, OF T E STATE and before the U. S. Land Office at Crookston and at Washington.
Will give special attention to contests of claims.

BREVITIES.

Wheat is 60 cents.

Fresh Oysters at W. A. Arthurs try them.

Sever Elstad leaves on business for New York to-day.

The weather has been exceptionally fine the past week.

For No. 1 pure buck wheat flour call on Fricker & Welch.

C. G. Rapp was at Thief River Falls on business last Monday.

Deputy Sheriff Paulsrud was in town on business last Monday.

A. G. Gallasch, of Crookston, was in town on business last Monday,

A complete line of undertakers goods always on hand at Holmes Bros.

Martin Williams was down to Crookston the first of the week attending court

J. N, Bradfield, of the Osborne Binder Co., was doing business in town to-day

Now is the time to secure your flour cheap. Call for bargains on Fricker & Welch.

Geo. F. Fuller, of the Plano Manufacturing Co., was in town to-day on business.

If you want anything in the line of confectionary fruit or oysters, call on W. A. Arthur.

Charles W. Lowe, the Crookston, real estate hustler, was in town to-day on business.

Lars Elstad who has been in Norway for several months is expected home in a few days,

Ceneral Manager Mohler and Supt Jinks passed over the line last week on a tour of inspection,

I will pay the highest market price for veal calves, fresh eggs and butter.

S. M. Dainard.

Rev. Battey, of Crookston, the editor of "The Message" was in town to-day for several hours.

Geo, J. McManus, the man who talks life insurance night and day was doing business here to-day,

Carl Johnson is having a large sized dog house built. Carl is picking up quite a kennel of fancy dogs.

The official count of the vote of Polk county shows that the total vote cast for presidential electors was 6,165.

Several cars of telegraph poles arrived last week work will commence at once to build a line from here to Thief River Falls and Red Lake Falls.

Congress convened last Monday. The most important bill will be the Washburn—Hatch option bill and a strong effort will be made to pass it as soon as possible.

Those who are interested in getting up an entertainment and christmas tree on christmas eve are requested to meet at the school house next Friday evening at 7:30,

R. O. H. Beamish has been in town the past week taking orders for stereoscopic views. Mr. Beamish is a pleasent gentleman and has been doing a good business here.

District Court convened at Crookston last Monday with Judge Powell, of Granite Falls, on the bench. A large amount of business is on the calendar and it will take at least three weeks to finish.

The auction and social given by the ladies of the Norwegian Lutheran Church last Thursday evening was attended by a large number of people and all had a good time. About seventy five dollars was cleared,

At the last election New York city polled 278,000 votes, while Chicago polled 256,000 votes. New York will have to hustle or her western antagonist will soon out strip her. As compared with the vote of 1888 New York increased its vote only 5 per cent while Chicago increased its vote 50 per cent.

FIFTY CENTS IN CASH

Will secure the Spectator from now to Jan. 1st 1893, a hot political campaign is now on and we will try to make the Spectator interesting we make this low offer so that every farmer in this part of the country can afford to subscribe.

Official returns from all the counties in Minnesota have been received by the secretary of state, The total vote for governor was 254,890, Nelson receiving 109,220; Lawler 94,600; Donnelly 38823 Dean 12,247; Nelson's plurality 14,620.

The cowboys of Nebraska are making preparations for a novel race to the World's Fair. On the 15th of next May some three hundred of them will start on their bronchos from chadron, that state, and ride the whole distance on the horse they start with. The winner will receive $100,000 and a gold medal.

The state canvassing board of Minnesota is required by law to meet on the third Tuesday of December after a general election, which will be the 20th day of December this year. The act of congress requires the presidential electors to meet and give their votes on the second Monday in January next following the election which will be the 6th day of January next.

T. O. Moe was in from Thief Lake week buying goods for his store. Mr. Moe says that the Thief Lake country is settling rapidly but that there is room for many more settlers. He says that it is an excellent country well adapted for farming of all kinds and that there is plenty of first class government land vacant. This part of the country will undoubtedly have a railroad inside of two years and parties who are looking for government land will do well to look this section over the near future.

A new Time table went into effect on this branch last Monday. The train now leaves Crookston at 9 a. m. reaching here at 11 a. m., and leaves for Red Lake Falls at 11:30 arriving here again at 2:30 p. m., going to Thief River Falls and leaving for Crookston at 4:50. The train as usual comes only three times a week. This will undoubtedly continue until it becomes impossible for one engine to pull the train, The Great Northern will give good accommodations when they are forced to. not before and we will get a daily train when it suits their conveniance.

St. Peter Tribune:—The Indians say this is going to be a cold winter. They care nothing to what barometers or thermometers indicate. They base their predictions on the extra care of the beavers to lay in a big supply of birch and willow, three times more than last season. Then they say: "Look at the thick fur on the bears and the hair on the horses. The squirrel has picked up all the nuts he could find. These are some of the points the Indians bases his predictions upon for a severe winter. The whites can govern themselves accordingly, but we hope the Indian will prove a false prophet.

The St. Hilaire Literary and debating society has been organized and held their first meeting last Friday evening. S. S. Buzza was chosen president F. H. Gambell vice president, E. H, Stranahan secretary, Leonard Holmes treasurer, and W. A, Arthur seargent at arms. The society will meet every Friday evening at 7:30 at the school house and the program will consist of singing, recitations and debating. Next Friday evening the subject for debate will be "Resolved that the Indian has been more abused at the hands of the whites than the negro." All are cordially invited to attend and participate. The society starts out well and should succeed. We will observe however that if the ladies are eligible to membership they failed to get fair treatment when the offices were divided. If the ladies are expected to help boys, they should have some share in the management.

Surveyor George Ralph returned to the city Saturday from the Red Lake reservation having completed all of his government contracts. He informs the Times that the survey of the reservation lands is now practically completed. All the agricultural lands and also all of the timber lands of any value have been surveyed and the only unsurveyed portion of the reserve is a big tamarack marsh lying north of the lake. "The land contained in this marsh" said Mr. Ralph, "is utterly valueless, yet it must be surveyed before the reservation can be declared open, in order to comply with the Nelson act which provides for said opening. This marsh contains about 80 towns and it is probable will be surveyed this winter; The work will have to be done in the winter if done at all, as it is impossible to get on it except when it is frozen up." Mr. Ralph says that this marsh is the source of several important streams, the principle ones being the Roseau river which is a very fine stream, the Moose river which flows into Thief Lake and the Rapid River which is one of the most important tributaries of the Rainy river, North of this marsh and between it and Lake of the Woods is a ridge of pine. which has never been explored except by the Indians. It is from 12 to 15 miles long by from one to three miles wide. This forest abounds in all kinds of wild game and the caribou or North American reindeer is said to inhabit this forest in great numbers. The Indians never attempt to cross the big marsh to this forest except in the winter time and even in the winter season the distance is so great and the road so difficult that few of them venture upon the journey.

Speaking of his government contracts Mr, Ralph said that he had surveyed in all about 85 towns besides doing other special work. The contract just completed covered seven towns a good deal of the work being near Thief Lake which is the source of the Thief River. "This" said Mr. Ralph, "is a fine body of water five and a half miles long by three wide It is surrounded on the west and south by fine agricultural land much of which is already settled up part of it being off the reservation. The lake is alive with fish among them a species known as silver bass an extremely gamey fish and very palatable. The settlers catch these fish in large quantities at all seasons of the year with nets and they form no small portion of their subsistance, Game is also very pleutiful and this season, bear, deer and moose are more numerous than they have ever been known before. At some distance from here near the headwaters of the Roseau river we saw many of the ingenously constructed lodges and domes of the beaver and one day we run across an Indian who had captured 'heap good skins' He had wandered out into these wilds alone and had been there for three or four weeks when we discovered him. When asked if he knew where he was he shook his head and gave us to understand that he did not care particularly so long as his amunition held out and the beavers were foolish enough to get into his traps. This is probably the only section of the state where beaver, once so numerous, can now be found.

Mr. Ralph is probably better acquainted with the "lay of the land" on the reservation than any other man on earth Besides surveying a goodly portion of it and retaining the field notes he has also explored many of the lakes and rivers both on and off the reservation so that he has become perfectly familiar with every portion and featur of this vast tract of almost unknow territory. He is now at work upon a comprehensive map which will give a complete geographical and topographical history of the whole country This he will have published and it will be a valuable and, we have no doubt, a profitable work.—Crookston Times

CHEAP EXCURSIONS TO CANADA

Low round trip tickets will be on sale by the Great Northern from Crookston Grand Forks and stations north to boundary and west to Minot, to points in Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick Nova Scotia, on Nov. 27th, Dec, 6th, Dec 13th to 22nd inclusive, and Dec 27th 1892. Tickets good for 90 days with transit limits of 15 days each way, going and returning, This will allow holders to stop in the Twin Cities, in Chicago to see the wonderful buildings of the World's Fair, and other points enroute.

Extension of time beyond 90 days made at small additional cost. For particulars and tickets see S. S. Buzza agent at St. Hilaire.

The Grand Forks Herald in its last issue says that Prof. Nelson Daughters a well known scientist who has been devoting the last year to explorations in the Red Lake and Lake of the Woods regions in the wildest and least known sections of the state of Minnesota, has just arrived in that city with the startling information that he penetrated by boat from the Red Lake to within ten miles of the Lake of the Woods. He is giving lectures upon the timber, iron ore, coal and other resources of the northern part of Minnesota and by means of maps and charts demonstrates the feasibility of constructing a canal which will turn the waters of the Lake of the Woods into Red Lake and thus make it a navigable stream from that lake to Grand Forks. Mr. Daughters will attempt to demonstrate that a canal ten miles in length between the two will accomplish the purpose and cause the Red Lake river and the Red River of the North to have five times the stage at an ordinary stage than they have at present. He claims that the Red Lake is four feet lower than the Lake of the Woods and that the land between them is a low tamarac swamp through which it will be comparitively easy to construct a canal. If these claims are true the Red Lake is very much larger and occupies a position considerable to the northwest of that shown on the latest maps of the state of Minnesota. If the waters of the Rainy river and Lake of the Woods can be diverted through the Red Lake it will have a powerful effect on the prosperity of the Red River Valley. Mr. Daughter's scheme embodies the use of the Red Lake as an immense reservior in which will be stored logs cut along the Vermillion and the Little Fork and Big Fork rivers and other streams running into the Rainy river in the northern part of the state to be floated down the Rainy river through the Lake of the Woods and the connecting canal into the Red Lake where they will be sorted and driven thence down the Red Lake river to be cut into lumber. The amount of standing pine immediately around the Red Lake which will soon be thrown upon the market is estimated by the U. S. government to be eight to eleven billion feet, but if this canal proves practical as it is claimed by Prof. Daughters, it will add twenty billion feet and make the upper Red River Valley a larger pine lumber milling section than the city of Saginaw was in its palmiest days Prof, Daughters argues that the diversion of the waters of the Rainy river into the Red Lake will have the effect of making navigation for the wheat of the Red River Valley one-third of the distance to the head of Lake Superior.

INTERESTING ITEM.

It is to the interest of parties contemplating going east to consider the great advantages the Great Northern offers them through its fast passenger service to St. Paul and to all points west to the Pacific coast, their free colonist cars, and magnificent Dining and Sleeping cars. The shortest route, close connections, quickest time and fare as low as the lowest, Any information cheerfully given,

S. S. Buzza
Agent.

CHATTLE LOANS

I am prepared to loan money on chattle security at reasonable rates. One years time. Call On

H. E. IVES.

WANTED. Salesmen. Local and Traveling, To represent our well known house. You need no capital to represents a firm that warrants nursery stock first-class and true to name. WORK ALL THE YEAR. $100 per month to the right man. Apply quick stating age. L. L. MAY & CO.
Nurserymen, Florists and Seeds men,
St. Paul Minn.
(This house is responsible.)

Notice Of Collection.

All parties having notes and accounts due E. T. Spafford & Co. must call and settle satisfactorily before the 10th day of Dec, or we will positively collect by law.

E. T. Spafford & Co.

All who are indebted to S. M. Hoff are requested to call and settle up at once or the debt will be collected by law.

Notice To Farmers.

We will pay you cash for hides, hay barley, oats, cord wood, good steers or anything marketable that you have to sell.

E. T. Spafford & Co.

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
Crookston Minn September 15 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on December 6 1892 viz: Charles Will Heden D S no. 11561 for the NE ¼ sec 2 Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of said land viz:

Ole J. Johnson, A. G. Mostrom, John Mostrom, Knut Steen all of St. Hilaire, Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn. Oct. 29 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on December 8 1892 viz Gustaf Anderson H D 11689 for the SW ¼ Sec 22 Tp 153 R 44.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land viz:

A. Sture of Crookston, E. M. Svenson, A M. Ekstrom, P. A. Ekstrom all of St. Hilaire Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn Oct. 20 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on Dec. 20 1892 viz:
Peter Anderson H D 12746 for the W ½ NW ¼ and W ½ SW ¼ Sec 2 Tp 157 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Ole J. Johnson, Ole J. Hegg Halvor T Omot, Knut Steen all of St, Hilaire Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn. November 1 1892

Notice is hereby given that he following named settler has filed notice Of his inention to make final proof in support of his claim and has said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver of the U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn, on December 15 1892. viz:
A, P. Sandberg administrator of estate of Peter G. Allison deceased H D 11173 for the NW ¼ Sec. 20 Tp 152 R 42.
He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land viz:

J. Johnson, Haakon, Johnson, J. Lind, E. Petterson all of St, Hilaire Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPJON Register.

CLOSING OUT SALE!

At E M. Hoff's Store

My whole stock of

Dry Goods and Notions
Gents Furnshing Goods
$5,000 worth of ready made clothing
Foot wear of all kinds and everything belonging to a full stocked general merchandise store will be closed out at cost in the next 90 days.

COME EVERY BODY
AND
SECURE GOOD BARGAINS.

E. M. HOFF

CROWN ROLLER MILL.

EQUIPPED WITH THE LATEST AND BEST IMPROVED MACHINERY.

Manufactures the well known
PERFECTION FANCY PATENT
and WHITE ROSE FLOUR.
Rye and Feed mill in connection.
Flour and Feed always kept on hand
Custom work a specialty.
FRICKER & WELCH Prop,
ST. HILAIRE MINNESOTA

CHAS G. RAPP.

A large and complete line of

General Merchandise.

CONSISTING OF

Dry Goods, Groceries, Clothing
Boots & Shoes, Hats & Caps
Notions

THE ST. HILAIRE SPECTATOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY EVENIN.
H. E. IVES, Propr.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE:
Advance, $1.50 Per Year
If not in Advance $2.00 Per Year

Entered in The Post Office at St. Hilaire, as Second Class Mail Matter

WEDNESDAY December 7 1892

BREVITIES

CHATS ABOUT MEN.

David Folsom, a rich Montana ranchman, is an uncle of Mrs. Cleveland.

Colonel Joseph M. Bennett has given $30,000 to the endowment fund of the Methodist Orphan asylum of Philadelphia.

Louis Xavier, the Parisian sculptor, has been telling a St. Louis reporter that the feet of American women are too small.

The late Bronson Alcott used to keep a plate of apples standing on his tables all the time for the refreshment of his visitors.

Knute Nelson, the new governor of Minnesota, was born in Norway, and was six years old when he came to this country.

Jonathan Reedy, born in Berks county, Pa., in 1798, and now living near Millmont, Union county, that state, cast his first presidential vote for James Monroe in 1820.

Mr. Gladstone, though somewhat reluctant to adopt the innovation, has at last consented to have a telephone put in between his residence and the house of commons.

Fred Douglass is fond of the fiddle. He learned to play in his youth, when a slave. When young people gather in his house in Washington he sometimes accompanies the pianist, much to the delight of his audience.

President Carnot has bestowed upon Henry Harris, an American now resident in Paris, the cross of the Legion of Honor in recognition of Mr. Harris' numerous works on the life, discoveries and times of Columbus.

Frederick Sion, the brave sailor who planted the first French flag upon the soil of Algeria, on the 14th of June, 1830, died recently at the age of eighty-five years. The French government rewarded and cared for the old man, and he was loaded with decorations.

The late Xavier Mormier, the French academician, lived for fifty years in a dark, rat infested Paris house, with but little furniture in it, but with every wall and partition lined with books. He was kind to the rats, and used to have food placed where they could easily reach it.

AROUND THE THRONES.

Donna Christina, the queen regent of Spain, is thirty-four years old, which is younger than she looks. She is a blond.

The new yacht just built for the king of Siam is said to be fitted on a grand scale of barbaric luxury. It will carry a large crew of orientals officered by Danes.

The queen of Denmark has received from her daughter, the czarina, a gown of gold moire specially woven by a new process. The cost is said to have been close upon £300.

Pope Leo is a poet of the Virgilian school. He writes in Latin verse with great facility, and a volume of his poems in that language is expected to be made public shortly.

Henry II of England is represented as wearing green boots, his spurs fastened with red leather straps, black leather gloves, with outside jewels on each finger, and a star of gems on the back of each glove.

The Princess Stephanie, widow of the Crown Prince Rudolph of Austria, recently created a tremendous sensation in Vienna by horsewhipping Count Chotek, a leader of the Viennese aristocracy and a major in the Austrian army.

TURF TOPICS.

Colonel North, the nitrate king, will send a string of English race horses to America next season.

Recently a Guttenburg plunger thought Miss Dello had a cinch, and bet $20,000 to $1,800 on her. She lost.

George Starr will leave Munroe Salisbury when his contract ends Jan. 1. He will then take up quarters in New York.

Jerome park, New York, has been sold for $900,000 to a syndicate of real estate speculators. There are 112 acres of land in the tract.

C. J. Hamlin has given J. Malcolm Forbes the refusal of the 2-year-old filly Princess Royal for $30,000. She has shown a mile in 2:15¼.

At Stockton, Cal., recently Stamboul reduced the stallion record to 2:08. The first quarter was made in 33½, the second in 30¾ and the third in 33 seconds.

J. Malcolm Forbes, owner of Nancy Hanks, offers $5,000 to the horse that will trot in two minutes. Three thousand will go to the driver of Nancy should she do it. Mr. Forbes' only request is that he be allowed to see the two minute mark reached.

ODDS AND ENDS.

In Samar beehives hang in the form of oblong gourds from the branches of trees.

Sugar fifteen times sweeter than that produced from the cane is being made from cotton seed grown at Witu.

The native press of India now musters 573 newspapers and periodicals, published in sixteen different dialects.

In the snowy weather in Sweden and Norway trusses of straw and hay are tied to the lampposts for the birds.

A wealthy American has established a sanitarium in a valley of the Jordan, near the Dead sea. This valley is the most marked depression on the face of the earth, being 1,300 feet below sea level.

The rivers of Russia grow shallower year after year, and the Vorskia, once an abundant tributary of the Dnieper, and compared to the Hudson or Delaware, 250 miles in length, has completely and permanently dried up.

Fast Help.

Mrs. Irons (matron of the well known Irons boarding house)—Sergeant, I wish you would send a squad of police down to my house as quick as you can.

Police Official—Calm your excitement, Mrs. Irons. What is the trouble?

"We've got a burglar locked up in the cellar!"

"How did he get in?"

"Through an outside window. We heard him moving about in the cellar, and one of the boarders got up and slipped outside and fastened the shutters tight, and the only door he can get out at is locked. Oh, we've got him!"

"Is there anything of value in your cellar?"

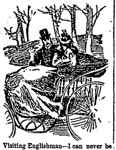
"Anything of value? There's a dozen of my best mince pies and some cold meat, and"——

"How long has he been down there?"

"Since about 4 o'clock. Nearly three hours."

Moving toward the telephone: "Madam, this is not a case for the police. I will summon the coroner."—Chicago Tribune.

Above Board.



Visiting Englishman—I can never be happy unless you promise to be mine.

Native American—Well, I don't mind being engaged to you; but I must tell you plainly that I am engaged to three other men I like better.—Life.

Resigned.

Many characteristics of the Scotch nation are amusingly displayed in a series of stories published in Edinburgh some years ago under the title of "Scotch Folk." "Have you brought any witnesses?" asked the Rev. Mr. Wood, of Bathgate, of a middle aged couple who had come to be married.

"No, we ne'er thocht o' that. Is it necessary?"

"Oh, certainly," said the minister; "you should have a groomsman and bridesmaid as witnesses."

"Wha can we get, Jen, do ye think?"

The bride, thus addressed, suggested a female cousin whom the bridegroom had never seen, and after consultation a man also was thought of.

"Stop ye awa' alang, Jen, an ask them, an I'll walk aboot till ye come back."

Jen set out as desired, and after some time returned with the two friends, the cousin being a blooming lass considerably younger than the bride.

When the parties had been properly arranged and the minister was about to proceed with the ceremony, the bridegroom suddenly said:

"Wad ye bide a wee, sir?"

"What is it now?" asked the minister.

"Weel, I was just gaun to say that if it wad be the same to yo', I wad raither hae that ane," pointing to the bridesmaid.

"That's a most extraordinary statement to make at this stage!" exclaimed the minister. "I'm afraid it is too late to talk of such a thing now."

"Is it?" said the bridegroom in a tone of resignation to the inevitable. "Weel, then, ye maun just gang on."

It is not recorded that there was any feeling of elation on the part of the bridesmaid or of jealousy on the part of the bride, and the ceremony proceeded.

The Price of Admission.

The clothing man thought he'd be funny and original in his advertisements, so he put a number of pairs of trousers in his windows and labeled them variously, "Admission three, four, five, seven dollars, according to quality."

After a time a seedy looking citizen came by, and after looking at the display stepped inside.

"Whose idea is that?" he asked solemnly as he jerked his thumb over his shoulder toward the window.

"Mine; entirely my own," responded the pleased dealer.

"Very good; very good," said the solemn man chuckling. "Can't get in without paying the price; that's the idea, eh? Very good; very good indeed."

The dealer rubbed his sides and laughed a low laugh of delight.

"I thought it excellent," he said, "and I'm glad you appreciate it."

"Yes, I do; yes, I do," assented the solemn man. "By the way, do you charge anything for reserved seats?"

Then he went out, and somehow after that the dealer lost confidence in his idea.—Detroit Free Press.

The Next Thing.

He, a bright young newspaper man, and she, lovely as an Indian summer day, were out driving.

"Do you know," she said, "I should like to be a newspaper man."

"You can be the next thing to it."

"What is that?"

"His wife."

And just then a shadow fell. The sun was holding a cloud in front of his face while he snickered.—Washington Post.

WE WANT YOU

to act as our agent. We furnish an expensive outfit and all you need free. It costs nothing to try the business. We will treat you well, and help you to earn ten times ordinary wages. Both sexes of all ages can live at home and work in spare time, or all the time. Any one any where can earn a great deal of money. Many have made Two Hundred Dollars a Month. No class of people in the world are making so much money without capital as those at work for us. Business pleasant, strictly honorable, and pays better than any other offered to agents. You have a clear field, with no competition. We equip you with everything, and supply printed directions for beginners which, if obeyed faithfully, will bring more money than will any other business. Improve your prospects! Why not? You can do so easily and surely at work for us. Reasonable industry only necessary for absolute success. Pamphlet circular giving every particular is sent free to all. Delay not in sending for it.
GEORGE STINSON & CO.,
Box No. 488, Portland, Me.

DO YOU WANT TO ADOPT A BABY?

Maybe you think this is a new business, sending out babies on application; it has been done before, however, but never have those furnished been so near the original sample as this one. Everyone will exclaim, "Well! that's the sweetest baby I ever saw!" This little black-and-white engraving can give you but a faint idea of the exquisite original, which we propose to send to you, transportation paid. The little darling rests against a pillow, and is in the act of drawing off its pink sock, the mate of which has been pulled off and flung aside with a triumphant coo. The flesh tints are perfect, and the eyes follow you, no matter where you stand. The exquisite reproductions of this greatest painting of Ida Waugh (the most celebrated of modern painters of baby life) are to be given to those who subscribe to Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893. The reproductions cannot be told from the original, which cost $400, and are the same size (17x22 inches). The baby is life size, and absolutely lifelike. We have also in preparation, to present to our subscribers during 1893, other great pictures by such artists as Percy Moran, Maud Humphrey, Louis Deschamps, and others of world-wide renown. Take only two examples of what we did during the past year, "A Yard of Pansies," and "A White House Orchid" by the wife of President Harrison, and you will see what our promises mean.

" I'M A DAISY."

Those who subscribe for Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893 will possess a gallery of exquisite works of art of great value, besides a Magazine that cannot be equaled by any in the world for its beautiful illustrations and subject matter, that will keep everyone posted on all the topics of the day, and all the fads and different items of interest about the household, besides furnishing interesting reading matter, both grave and gay, for the whole family; and while Demorest's is not a fashion Magazine, its fashion pages are perfect, and we give you, free of cost, all the patterns you wish to use during the year, and in any size you choose. Send in your subscription at once, only $2, and you will really get over $25 in value. Address the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York. If you are unacquainted with the Magazine, send 10 cents for a specimen copy.

Ask Your Dealer For

FEATHERBONE WHIPS.

FEATHERBONE is made from Enameled Quills—nature's own toughest, and strongest elastic material. Best wearing whips made for 25c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50. All styles, for Buggy, Cart, Track, Team and Riding. Be sure and ask for a FEATHERBONE.
FOR SALE BY
S. M. HOFF
WAY

Going to Buy A Dictionary?
GET THE BEST,
Webster's International.
A Choice Gift
A Grand Family Educator
A Library in Itself
The Standard Authority

WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY

SOLD BY ALL BOOKSELLERS.

The International is a new book from cover to cover, fully abreast of the times, and is the successor of the authentic "Unabridged." Ten years were spent in revising, 100 editors employed and over $300,000 expended before the first copy was printed.

Do not buy reprints of obsolete and comparatively worthless editions.

Send for free pamphlet containing specimen pages and full particulars.

G. & C. MERRIAM CO., Publishers,
SPRINGFIELD, MASS., U. S. A.

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn. Nov. 25 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and said proof will be made before U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on Jany. 5 1893 viz:

Berent I. Kunlog HD 12395 for the SW ¼ Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of said land viz:

James Evenson, Anton Peterson, Julius Nelson, Neis Evenson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON, Register.

U. S. LAND OFFICE.
Crookston, Minn., Nov. 17 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn on December 29 1892. viz:

Peter E. Engh HD 13282 for the NW ¼ Sec. 23 Tp 152 R. 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Halvor Aamodt, Ole J. Hegg Peter Anderson, Ole J. Johnson, all of St. Hilaire Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register,

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn., Nov. 25 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn on Jany. 5 1893 viz:

Julius Nelson HD [illegible] 1890 for the S W ¼ Sec. 5 Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of said land viz:

James Evenson B. I. Kunlog, Nels Evenson Anton Peterson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

E. T. SPAFFORD S. M. DAINARD
E. T. SPAFFORD & CO.
DEALERS IN
LUMBER, LATH AND SHINGLES.
A complete stock of all kinds of Lumber Lath, Shingles, Mouldings, Building Paper Sash, Doors and Screens, Lime, Cement Stucco, Plastering Hair, Brick etc. always hand at the lowest market prices.
S. M. Dainard, Manager.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE, MINN

E. T. SPAFFORD & CO.
WILL ALWAYS PAY THE
HIGHEST MARKET PRICES
FOR
All kinds of
CATTLE.
Also for Cor wood, Hay, Oats, Barley and flax.
Ground Feed for Sale
S. M. DAINARD.
Manager.

Reserved For
THE
ST. HILAIRE
TOWNSITE
COMPANY

W. A. ARTHUR.
DEALER IN
FRUITS, CONFECTIONARY
TOBACCO AND CIGARS.
STATIONARY OF ALL KINDS
Lunch Counter
Warm meals at all hours.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE MINNESOTA

JUSTUS L. JOHNSON
DEALER IN
pure medicines Fancy articles, perfumer and stationery, paints oils and dye stuffs.
Cigars, Candy, Fruit and Soft Drinks always on hand.
Barbershop in connection
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE

I CAN SAVE YOU
MONEY
If you wish to make
REAL ESTATE
LOANS.
For full particulars call or address
H. E. IVES.
SPECTATOR OFFICE ST. HILAIRE.

HOLMES BRO'S
Dealer in
HARDWARE, TINWARE,

We are carrying a heavy and complete line of Heating and Cooking stoves.
GOOD GOODS LOW PRICES.
CALL ON US FOR BARGAINS
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE MINN.

FARMERS STORE
NEW GOODS AT HARD PAN PRICES.
If you want to save money do your trading with
HALL BROS.
DEALER IN
Dry Goods, Groceries Notions.
BROADWAY [illegible]

S. M. HOFF
DEALER IN
HARDWARE
A new and complete stock of all kinds of Hardware, Tinware, Stoves, Fencing wire, Nails, in fact everything usuay kept in a first-class Hardware Store,
AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES
Call and examine Goods and Get Our Prices.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE

DR PRICE'S
Cream Baking Powder.
The only Pure Cream of Tartar Powder.—No Ammonia; No Alum.
Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

FOUND A STRANGE ANIMAL.

Hunters in the Wallapai Mountains Capture an Unknown Quadruped.

While returning to Mohave, Arizona, recently, from a hunting trip in the Wallapai mountains, Arizona territory, Dr. Hammond and Dave Parks ran across one of the strangest animals ever seen in this section of the country, if not in the world. Mr. Parks after shooting it five times with a 45-caliber Winchester, finally succeeded in killing it. The body, as described by the Miner, is ten inches in circumference and eighteen inches in length. The tail, if such it may be termed, is four inches. Its front feet are similar to those of a dog, only the toes being missing, while its hind legs, somewhat longer than its front, terminate in cloven hoofs. Its head is of a bright red color, somewhat of the hue of the "red-eye" which the hunters had taken along as a preventive for snake bite. The hair on the animal's body is of a light baby blue, which gives it a neat, tidy appearance. The upper jaw of the quadruped is adorned with two immense tusks, curving downward, giving it a ferocious expression. The tongue is forked and is used for catching ants. The snout terminates in a long trunk similar to the arm of an octopus of prehensile tendency. It was discovered by Mr. Parks, clinging to the surface of a pine tree about fifty feet from the ground. It was placed in the icehouse pending the arrival of Professor Raelle, of Needles, who will stuff and mount it, after which it will be placed on exhibition in the Miner cabinet. Strange as it may seem, the stomach contained a live toad, two horn-toads, several thousand ants and a garter-snake. Taxidermists and naturalists are at a loss regarding the name of this wonderful creature, no mention having been made of any such species in natural history.

American Crowds Are Good Natured.

Someone has said that the best natured body in the world is an American crowd. Those who have any doubts about the truth of this statement should make one of the crowd that gather in Newspaper row any election night. Packed solidly from School and Milk streets to Court and State streets, it is as independent a body of humanity as one can anywhere find. The Darwinian principle of "the survival of the fittest" prevails as literally as one could wish. Every one is for himself, and he pushes, jostles and talks to maintain his standing place or to get a better one. Yes despite all this, every one is in the best humor, laughs as heartily at his own discomfiture as at that of the fellow at his elbow, and forgives the fellow who treads on his toes. Those who have ever had anything to do with a French or German crowd will recognize the difference between those transatlantic gatherings and the American one.—Boston Journal.

They Came in Handy.

Complaining Husband—My dear, I should think you would be more careful when buying things for me. Now, these expensive slippers you brought from Paris are altogether too small. I can never wear them.

Cheerful Wife—Well, they'll do to spank Tommy with, dear.

"German Syrup"

William McKeekan, Druggist at Bloomingdale, Mich. "I have had the Asthma badly ever since I came out of the army and though I have been in the drug business for fifteen years, and have tried nearly everything on the market, nothing has given me the slightest relief until a few months ago, when I used Boschee's German Syrup. I am now glad to acknowledge the great good it has done me. I am greatly relieved during the day and at night go to sleep without the least trouble." ⑥

THE UNIVERSITY Commerce AND FINANCE.
619-21 Nicollet Ave., Minneapolis.
Students are flocking in. It is becoming generally known that this Institution qualifies its students to merit and receive permanent and remunerative employment. Earnest, painstaking, efficient teachers in English, Business and Shorthand branches. Send for artistic prospectus. HOWARD L. RUCKER, Pres't.
GOOD BOARD and ROOM $2.50 per week.

Telegraphy and Electric Engineering
Taught by practical Telegraphers and Electricians. No department of a business College, but a thorough special course. Circulars Free.
McALLISTER'S
SCHOOL OF TELEGRAPHY.
619 Nicollet Av. Minneapolis Minn.

CURES CATARRH
LONDON BALM
LONDON BALM CO. NEW YORK
CURES CATARRH HAY FEVER
PRICE 50c.
SOLD BY YOUR DRUGGIST.

What Three Thieves can Carry.

What three thieves can carry on their person is shown by an instance at Croybon says Tit-Bits. The list of articles was as follows: Three silver candlesticks, two silver cups, a gold-mounted cane, a scent bottle, silver pencil-case, two umbrellas, five coats, four vests, two pairs of trousers, one pair of boots, a silver tray, four tobacco pouches, three briar pipes, seventy-five cigars, a jemmy, three boxes of matches, a dark lantern, a centre-bit, two knives, a chisel, an oil-can, a pocket-knife, two pieces of candle, and a revolver cartridge. It is not surprising to read that when arrested these three men were of rather bulky appearance.

A Whale Killed by a Submarine Cable.

Submarine cables are occasionally liable to injury from aquatic monsters. Not long ago the Brazilian cable was found to be working badly at a distance of about seventy miles from land. The wire was hauled to the surface, when it was found that the body of a huge whale was entangled in it. The animal had got caught in the cable, and its frantic efforts to escape had only twisted the heavy wire more tightly round its body. When brought up the wire was found to be twisted into a complicated series of knots round the leviathan, which was quite dead.

A Guide to Matrimony.

The right kind of candy; the right kind of nerve;
A carriage kept handy; good dinners to serve;
A theatre party; the jewelers gold;
A mien blithe and hearty—a trifle too bold;
The right kind of chaffing; the right kind of sense;
The joke that sets laughing; the ardor intense;
With these little trifles any man can
Win love—if he's really the right kind of man.

Coughs and colds. Those who are suffering from Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, etc., should try Brown's Bronchial Troches. Sold only in boxes.

Clean up the garden patch even if you do not plow it this fall.

Deafness Cannot be Cured
by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.
We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.
F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
Sold by Druggists, 75c.

The cabbage crop is short. If you have any do not waste them.

The disagreeable operation of forcing liquids into the head, and the use of exciting snuffs are being superceded by Ely's Cream Balm, a cure for Catarrh and colds in the head.

I have been a great sufferer from catarrh for ten years; could hardly breathe. Some nights I could not sleep. I purchased Ely's Cream Balm and am using it freely; it is working a cure surely. I have advised several friends to use it and with happy results in every case. It is the medicine above all others for catarrh, and it is worth its weight in gold. I thank God I have found a remedy I can use with safety and that does all that is claimed for it—B. W. Sperry Hartford, Conn.

Apply Balm into each nostril. It is Quickly Absorbed. Gives Relief at once. Price 50 cents at Druggists or by mail. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren St. New York.

Soapsuds and tobacco juice applied to a tree makes a dose that is fatal to bark lice, says an exchange.

A Mammoth Competition.
$6,500 in prizes for the best seven stories was what The Youth's Companion offered $5,000 for the best Serials, and $1,500 for the best Folk-lore tales. No less than 2,961 stories competed for these prizes. The successful stories are just announced to appear in The Companion during 1893.
By Sending $1.75 at once you will obtain the paper FREE to January and for a full year, to January '94. Address THE YOUTH'S COMPANION, Boston, Mass.

To allow the hens to roost in the horse stable is disagreeable to the horse and demoralizing to the hens.

A Child Enjoys
The pleasant flavor, gentle action and soothing effect of Syrup of Figs when in need of a laxative, and if the father or mother be costive or bilious, the most gratifying results follow its use; so that it is the best family remedy known and every family should have a bottle.

-How is-
-Your Blood?-
I had a malignant breaking out on my leg below the knee, and was cured sound and well with two and a half bottles of S.S.S. Other blood medicines had failed to do me any good. WILL C. BEATY, Yorkville, S. C.
TRADE S.S.S. MARK
I was troubled from childhood with an aggravated case of Tetter, and three bottles of S.S.S. cured me permanently. WALLACE MANN, Mannville, I. T.
Our book on Blood and Skin Diseases mailed free. SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., Atlanta, Ga.

MOTHERS Dr. Snyder's Kidney Balsam cures Enuresis (BED WETTING.) For circulars and testimonials address, with stamps Dr. O. W. F. SNYDER, McVicker's Theatre, Chicago, Ill. For sale by all Druggists. Price $1.00.

"WELL BRED, SOON WED." GIRLS WHO USE
SAPOLIO
ARE QUICKLY MARRIED. TRY IT IN YOUR NEXT HOUSE-CLEANING.

RECOLLECTION.

Even as a garden full of branch and bloom
Seen in a looking-glass, and so more fair,
With boughs suspended in magic air
More spacious and more radiant than the truth.

So I remember thee, my happy youth;
And smile to look upon the days that were
As they had never told of doubt or care;
As I had never wept for grief or ruth.

So were our spirits destined to endure,
So were the life beyond a promise sure
And not the mocking mirage of our dearth,
Even through eternity might heaven appear
The still, the vast, the radiant souvenir
Of one transfigured moment known on earth.

—Mary Darmesteter in the Athenæum.

AFTER LOVE, DUTY.

Pansy Garland was the most heartless little flirt in the world. I have it on good authority—a dozen authorites, for the matter of that each one of which had sought for the missing organ of Miss Garland's anatomy, but all in vain. Either they were right, and no such member had entered into her composition or, not relishing their method of vivisection, Miss Garland had carefully placed the said member beyond the reach of the instrument that threatened it.

Whichever the case, it was certain that the young lady herself performed this same operation of vivisection many times, and she might have been the embodiment of that fabled and horrible monster who feasted on the hearts of his victims so mightily did she thrive on these dainty tit-bits.

But one or two circumstances put an end to Miss Garland's innocent pastime. The first was the sudden death of her mother, followed soon after by that of her father, leaving the girl all alone in the world—for there were no lateral branches of either family—and absolutely unprovided for. Her father died insolvent, having got his affairs in such a tangle, not to say, snarl, that there had been only one way to cut the Gordian knot, which he did by breathing out his life in his daughter's arms, commending his soul to the clemency of heaven, his debts to his creditors, and Pansy Garland to the guardianship, of his executor and heaviest loser by his death, Donald Howard Marshall.

Mr. Marshall knew far more about the necessities of the brute dependents of his bounty than the requirements of a woman's heart, yet his own nature was so pure, so deep, tender, as almost to touch upon the womanly; so strong and noble, that the very helplessness of the small, hazel-eyed child appealed to it irresistibly, as weakness must always appeal to its opposite.

He had had his romance. Outside the city limits yonder, under a green mound, his heart lay in the coffin of the woman he had once thought to make his wife. For 10 years it had lain there "in solemn salvatory," sealed forever, as he believed, with the inviolable seal of death; but Winfield Garland's daughter must be provided for, protected cared for, and it was for Donald Marshall to do it; there was no one else. If she had been rich and surrounded by friends, there would have been no trouble; a thousand solutions to a perplexing problem would have presented themselves where now there was but one. That one he accepted.

He went to her, offered her his hand, his name, and she, from the moment she looked up into his grave, quiet eyes, knew that she had found her master; and the various authorities, unlike the common run, were correct; her heart had long ago been given, all unconsciously, into the keeping of Donald Marshall. She never questioned his love, although she knew of the green mound where Mary Bains slept her long, sweet sleep.

Petted and spoiled, with the wealth of many a noble heart poured out at her feet, she could not have understood, perhaps that the treasures of this one were withheld from her, and he did not tell her. The grief that brooded over his life had grown to seem like something real—tangible; he could not tear away the silence of 10 sorrowful years and reveal it to this woman. Yet he knew that he could be royal, true to her, that nothing but Mary Bain's green grave could ever come between them. His wealth, home, social position, his protection and name, all were hers, but his love. He was making a dangerous experiment, but she did not realize it.

And they were married. One bleak, cold day they turned from the altar and passed out of the church, man and wife. The stray handful of snow that had been falling at intervals since dawn suddenly ceased; the gray clouds rent themselves from the zenith to horizon, a glory of crystal sunshine poured down upon the head of an unloved wife, and it snowed no more that day; the rift never closed, but widened and broadened until it took in the whole blue shining dome of heaven; the sun went down in a pure, mellow sky. She called him to see it, and he, bending from his great height, gently kissed her brow.

"Thus shall your life be as bright and cloudless to its setting, heaven willing."

She smiled, well content, without fear for the future she had given him to keep, while the twilight fell and shut them in.

Yes, they were married, he with a woman's heart in his possession, she—ah! pity is a sad exchange for the rich, living love a woman craves! For a time the strength of her affection mesmerized into artificial vitality the dead body of his, and she was happy. But it could not be always; the truth came crushing down upon her at last.

It does not matter how she found it out, it does not matter how the heart comes into its bitterness, how the soul claims its heritage of woe. The greatest question is how to learn to accept it, endure it, and—live.

Live! that had to be. She would have died of mortification, grief and pain, but pain, grief and mortification rarely kill. She must live and bear her trouble. That was hardest of all.

What was to be done? He was an every-day, prosaic sort of man, with little romance about him. He saw but one remedy.

"We must expect it and live it down together," he said, sadly.

"But you will go away, and let me learn to bear it alone?"

"My dear, that is impossible. I cannot give up my business, drop everything, and set out in vain wanderings after happiness which could never be obtained in such fashion," said this curious young man, opening his eyes.

His creed held that the obligations of life imposed a higher duty than to follow the erratic guidance of an imperfect, emotional nature.

"Then let me go; this is killing me!"

"You wish to get a—divorce?"

He had a fierce internal struggle before he could bring himself to utter that word. He had failed signally, then in the effort to make her happy, since she could submit to disgrace—yes, he was old-fashioned enough to call it a disgrace—of a divorce suit, and the uncertain position she must occupy in society afterward, in preference to an honorable place at the head of his house.

"A divorce? Yes, anything—anything."

"Poor child! Poor, miserable child!" he said, compassionately. "Forgive me—I cannot grant your request. You do not understand what it involves. No, dear, we can never rectify one mistake by plunging into another. No, dear. No court in the land can break, in the sight of heaven the ties which bind us until death to each other. Space itself cannot absolve us from the marriage vows which we took upon ourselves in the sight of heaven. There is but one, as I have said; we must live it down together, not apart. A woman's rightful place is by her husband's side, under his protection; nowhere else can she live out her full life. Anything so unnatural as a separation cannot be attended with blessing."

"But I may at least find peace," said the girl, wearily.

"Peace comes from the honest discharge of duty. Pansy, if we deliberately shirk the one, how can we hope to obtain the other? Neither peace nor even contentment can be founded on wilfully broken laws. It is only here—here, where our lots have been cast, our lives united, that we can ever hope to attain either."

His words tenderly spoken, but their hard philosophy fired her. It was all duty, duty with him; what cared he that all her happiness was changed by the tide of bitterness that flowed through her little world?"

But she must save the shattered remnants of her life; away from him somewhere, she might put them together and piece out an existence that might not be wholly despised. She would go away; it would be better for them both. But he had always been kind to her—yes, very kind; she could not think of the tender, compassionate way in which he had sought to help her after she had made her cruel discovery, without tears. Perhaps, after all, they could learn to bear it, to live it down, better together, as he had said. He was strong, and so very, very patient and tender; close to his side, her weakness hidden in his strength, she might grow contented. But, no, his heart was dead, and she loved him; there was no contentment in the thought; she must go.

She waited fervently until night, then stole into the empty library and laid her little goodbye note on his desk. There was the book he had been reading yonder, not far off her own desk, her sewing-chair, and her work-basket. She did not touch anything; she had forfeited the right; she would go now, the room was too much for her. He had preached duty, not love, and her heart cried out for love; and yet he was kind—she would always remember his kindness.

So she stole away out of the house. On the terrace she paused one moment to take her courage more firmly in hand, and then, to her dismay, it suddenly evaporated, wholly and without warning. She could not go—she dared not! She was—afraid. It was a humiliating confession to make, but it was true. The sight of the big, silent world, although it shimmered like an opal in the moonlight, struck terror to her soul. What might not lurk yonder in those gray, sinister-looking shadows? No, no, no! She could not go alone, not alone!

She crept into the house, a miserable little coward, for whom there could be no apology; it was cool and sweet there, and safe. Long feathers of silver light were strewn over the carpet; the fragrance of honeysuckles, her favorite flower, came sweeping in at the window on the fresh night air.

There was the faint, far-off odor of a cigar somewhere, too.

He was coming, her husband! She could hear him whistling softly as he came up the path. He was not wholly miserable, then. She hurriedly found the note and destroyed it and was ready to face Donald when he entered, though trembling in every limb.

"Pansy, is it you dear, and in the dark?"

He always called her dear; he was very tender with his little wife; his one desire was to repair the wrong he had unwittingly done her.

"Where are the matches? I will light the gas," said he.

"No, not yet, Donald, please, I—I do not wish any light, it hurts my eyes, I think."

"Are you ill? Does your head ache?"

"I am well; but I have something to tell you. I would rather say it in the dark. Donald—" with a perceptible effort—"I tried to leave your house just now—desert you, they call it, don't they?"

"But you did not go," he said, slowly—very slowly. "Why, dear?"

"I—I was afraid. The world was so big—so solitary!"

"Poor little coward—poor little unhappy Pansy! I want you to promise me never to try to desert me again."

He had not spoken immediately. When he did his voice had been steady; but there was something under its very quiet that made her shiver.

No covert threat, only that great gentleness without which he never addressed her; and yet it seemed throbbing with pity and regret that was almost passionate in its still intensity.

"I will promise, if you wish it, Donald; but if a time should ever come when I cannot endure my life, you will let me go away somewhere?"

"I will let you come and tell me all about it, dear, and we will devise a better remedy," he answered, drawing her into his arms. As her head dropped against his shoulder, he felt an odd thrill of pleasure. It could not be that his heart had awakened, for that was lying dead in Mary Bains's grave. "We must bear our trouble bravely, Pansy; the world is full of grief you know."

Then he kissed her and sent her away; but he sat up late that night, thinking.

After that Pansy spoke of her sorrow no more, but fell into the way of entertaining much company, as she had done when a girl. Donald looked on quietly, glad that she was happy, he told himself; yet he missed the quiet hours they had spent together, and winced at the sound of her gay laughter when other men paid her homage.

He had never observed how pretty she was until she blushed and dimpled at the compliments showered upon her. And how well she talked—with what wit and vivacity! Mary Bains had been sweet and gentle, but Pansy was more—a charming and amiable woman of the world.

Donald Marshall for years had been true to an ideal. Now he awoke to the real, and discovered that he loved his wife as he had never loved that other woman. And she, he bitterly told himself, had learned to do without him.

For Pansy was unfeignedly happy in these brighter and gayer days, and seemed well content to take up her girlhood's pastime just where she had dropped it. To Donald she was sweet and gracious, and nothing more; her eyes were no longer raised to his in mute beseeching for the love he withheld; indeed, they sparkled with happiness and health, and looked at all the world except him.

It was one soft, June day, Pansy had been walking, and came through the dewy meadows. The twilight had fallen, and Donald went out to meet her.

"I thought you might be afraid," he said, as a sort of apology for the intrusion.

"Oh, no!" she returned, smiling. "People whose lives are full have no room for cowardice, I think."

"Then your life is full?"

"Yes."

"And you have no room for my love? You have discovered it to be quite useless—it has come too late?"

She looked at him, and the sweet face brightened as she put her hand in his.

"No, Donald, it has not come too late. Dear, did you think me blind? I knew you loved me before you knew it yourself. That is why my love is full—why I am so happy. Not value your love? Did you think I could live without it?"

And Donald was satisfied.

LIP ORNAMENT.

Pieces of Bone Inserted in the Under Labial to Increase its Size.

Among the Babines, who dwell to the north of the Columbian River, says the Brooklyn Eagle, a large under lip is regarded as a type of beauty. A small incision is made in the lip during infancy and a fragment of bone inserted. This is replaced from time to time by larger and larger fragments each operation being attended with severe pain, and at length pieces of wood measuring not less than three inches in length and one and a half inches in width are inserted, causing the lip to protrude to a frightful extent.

A similar custom exists among the Paraguy Indians, and the labnets worn by the Botocudos are inserted in a slit made in the lower lip. A Botocudo has been noticed to take a knife and cut a piece of meat on it and tumble the meat into his mouth. Among the Hydahs (Queen Charlotte Island) it is considered a mark of the lowest breeding to be without this labial ornament of the lower lip.

When a young woman and an old one quarrel the elderly dame will reproach the younger one with her youth, inexperience, and general ignorance, pointing, were further proof necessary, to the inferior size of her lip. This lip of beauty is not, however, peculiar to these aborigines, but is common among some of the African tribes. The Berrys, for instance, who inhabit Sanbriat, a tributary of the Nile, insert in the lower lip a piece of crystal an inch in length.

What He Promised

She. "You will love me always?"

He. "Passionately, my darling."

She. "And you will never cease to love me?"

He. "Never, my darling."

She. "And you will save all your money?"

He. "Every cent."

She. "And you will never speak harshly to me?"

He. "Never."

She. "And you will give up all your bad habits?"

He. "Every one of them."

She, "And you will get along with mamma?"

He. "Yes."

She. "And papa?"

He. "Yes."

She. "And you will always do just what mamma wants you to do?"

He. "Yes."

She. "And just what papa wants you to do?"

He. "Yes."

She. "And just what I want you to do?"

He. "Of course."

She. "Well, I will be yours; but I fear I am making an awful mistake."—Puck.

He Wanted to Remain a Bankrupt.

Even the simplest law transactions seem to be beyond the comprehension of some people. An old farmer went into a grocer's a short time ago, ordered a sovereign's worth of goods, and, when they were ready for delivery, laid down a 5s. piece in payment therefor. The storekeeper called out, "Here, this isn't right!" as the customer started to leave.

"Oh, yes, that's all right!" replied the man, "I've got permission from the judge to pay 5s. in the pound."

A heated discussion revealed that the man had lately settled an insolvency upon this basis, and expected to continue that method indefinitely. When he was shown his mistake he was very indignant, and evidently considered himself a much-abused man.—Tit-Bits.

Awful Yale Slang.

Miss Beacon Hill—What in the world do these Yale boys mean when they say a thing is "easy smooth?"

Miss Worldsfair—Oh, that's some of their awful slang. They mean the thing is hunki dori.

Delicate.

There is a class of super-refined young ladies, if common report is to be trusted, who think it a mark of superior cultivation to have small and dainty appetites. A Pennsylvania exchange has heard of one.

"Do you think you could eat a bit of the turkey?" said a gentleman to his cousin, a young woman from the city.

"Why, yes; but just a small piece, please," she answered.

He started to trim off a delicate morsel and asked, "Is there any part you especially like?"

"Oh no, I'm not particular," and she looked demurely at her knife and fork. "Just give me a wing and a leg and a few slices off the breast, with a portion of the gizzard and a spoonful of dressing. I can reach the vegetables myself."

How Swiss Children Go to Sleep.

The Swiss people are very artistic in their tastes, and even the poorest Swiss is neat and tasteful in his home life. Many of the ways of the Swiss are as pretty as their fanciful ideas of building houses. A Swiss mother believes that her child will have bad dreams unless it is crooned to sleep. And so, bending low over the drowsy little one's couch, she sings soothing songs of green pastures and still waters until the little child has breathed itself peacefully into the land of Nod.—New York Ledger.

A Sagacious Customer.

Customer—send that coal up in a two-horse wagon.

Dealer—I was going to send it in a cart.

"I want it sent in a wagon."

"But, my dear sir, I'd like to have my own way."

"Of course you want to have your own weigh, but I'm tired of paying for good coal on that basis, and you'll do it my weigh or none."

Unpleasant Memories.

He (after the introduction)—I don't suppose you remember me, but I think we used to be in the same Sunday-school class together.

She—I don't think so. When I was a little girl in Sunday-school, I was always in a girl's class.

He—But this was when you were a teacher.

Don't throw away time and seed wheat by sowing it in the clods.

Salvation Oil has the enviable distinction of being a synonym for cure of rheumatism, neuralgia, gout, and kindred affections, such as sciatics, ticdouloureux, etc. It is growing more popular daily. The people will have it. 25 cts.

Some horticulturists claim, that seedlings usually will stand most cold.

If persons would bring to bear the same amount of common sense, in buying a remedy for bronchitis, cough cold and croup, that they do in the purchase of their family supplies, they would never fail to procure Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

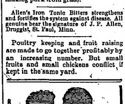
Labor is of little value to the improvident and wasteful; industry is shorn of its fruits unless there is a proper husbanding of it in a life of sober and frugal habits.

Three Blessings In One:
A triplet of benefits is comprised in the single word—vigor. This implies good appetite, sound sleep, the power to digest. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters endows an enfeebled system with vigor. It insures digestion, helps nightly repose, and increases zest for the food it enables the system to assimilate. It is potent in malaria, constipation, liver and kidney complaints and rheumatism.

A thousand-acre hog ranch in Arizona, all in alfala and stocked with hogs at the rate of six heads per acre, is said to be affording a fine illustration of what can be done in making pork from grass.

Allen's Iron Tonic Bitters strengthens and fortifies the system against disease. All genuine bear the signature of J. P. Allen, Druggist, St. Paul, Minn.

Poultry keeping and fruit raising are made to go together profitably by an increasing number. But small fruits and small chickens conflict if kept in the same yard.



The shadows that fill your life, if you're a feeble, suffering woman, can be taken out of it. The chronic weaknesses, functional derangements, and painful disorders peculiar to your sex, can be taken away. The one unfailing remedy for them is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

It corrects, cures, and builds you up. It improves digestion, enriches the blood, dispels aches and pains, melancholy and nervousness, brings refreshing sleep and restores health and strength. For periodical pains, internal inflammation and ulceration, weak back, leucorrhea, and all kindred ailments, it's a positive specific—one that is guaranteed. If it fails to give satisfaction, in any case, the money paid for it is returned.

The great, griping, old-fashioned pills make trouble. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets prevent it. Their's is the natural way. Sick Headache, Biliousness, Constipation, Indigestion, and all derangements of the Liver, Stomach and Bowels are prevented, relieved and cured. Smallest, cheapest, easiest to take.

DOUBLE Breech-loader $7.99. RIFLES $2.00 WATCHES GUNS BICYCLES $15 All kinds cheaper than elsewhere. Before you buy, send stamp for catalogue to The Powell & Clement Co. 166 Main St., Cincinnati, O.

Garfield Tea Overcomes results of bad eating. Cures Sick Headache, Restores Complexion, Saves Doctors' Bills. Sample free. Garfield Tea Co., 319 W. 45th St., N.Y.
Cures Constipation

Told the Truth Anyhow.

The Professor of Geography—Miss Bergamot, what would you regard as an important difference between the characteristic features of London and those of Paris?

Miss Bergamot—London sets the fashions for men and Paris sets the fashions for women.

A Laudable Ambition.

Witherby—Your wife tells me she is learning to speak Irish.

Bilter—Yes; she wants to be able to talk to her new French maid.

Mrs. Elizabeth Messer
Baltimore, Md.
"Hood's Sarsaparilla is a wonderful medicine. For 10 years I had Neuralgia, Dyspepsia, and fainting spells. Sometimes I would be almost stiff with cold perspiration. I weighed less than 100 lbs. and was a picture of misery. But I began to improve at once on taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and am now perfectly cured. I eat well, sleep well, and am in perfect health. Instead of being dead now, I am alive and weigh 142 lbs." MRS. ELIZABETH MESSER, 19 East Barney Street, Baltimore, Md.
HOOD'S PILLS are purely vegetable.

DO YOU EXPECT TO BECOME A MOTHER?
"MOTHERS' FRIEND"
MAKES CHILD BIRTH EASY,
Assists Nature, Lessens Danger, and Shortens Labor.
"My wife suffered more in ten minutes with her other children than she did all together with her last, after having used four bottles of MOTHER'S FRIEND," says a customer.
HENDERSON DALE, Druggist, Carmi, Ill.
Sent by express on receipt of price, $1.50 per bottle. Book "To Mothers" mailed free.
BRADFIELD REGULATOR CO., ATLANTA, GA.
FOR SALE BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

TOWER'S FISH BRAND The Best Waterproof Coat in the WORLD!
SLICKER
The FISH BRAND SLICKER is warranted waterproof, and will keep you dry in the hardest storm. The new POMMEL SLICKER is a perfect riding coat, and covers the entire saddle. Beware of imitations. Don't buy a coat if the "Fish Brand" is not on it. Illustrated Catalogue free. A. J. TOWER, Boston, Mass.

YOU NEED NOT FEAR that people will know your hair is dyed if you use that perfect imitation of nature,
Tutt's Hair Dye
It imparts a glossy color and fresh life to the hair. Price, $1. Office, 39 Park Place, N. Y.

Asthma The African Kola Plant, discovered in Congo, West Africa, is Nature's Sure Cure for Asthma. Cure Guaranteed or No Pay. Export Office, 1164 Broadway, New York. For Large Trial Case, Free by Mail, address KOLA IMPORTING CO., 132 Vine St., Cincinnati, O.

YOUR HEALTH.
The citadel of life must be gaurded at two points. In the first place there is danger of taking cold, we take cold through the skin and this affects the kidneys and the lungs. So intimately are these organs connected, that a cold affects both. In order to relieve the system, both should be treated, or rather, the whole system should be regulated. This is done by Reid's German Cough & Kidney Cure. It acts as a stimulant and restores the organs to action. The other weak spot is the digestion. When the food does not digest, it accumulates and causes fever, sickness and death. The Laxative Gum Drops will remove all waste material from the system and do it without pain or griping. Ask your druggist for these remedies and see that he gives them to you.
SYLVAN REMEDY CO., Peoria, Ill.

MEN We will send you the MARVELOUS and UNFAILING French Preparation CALTHOS FREE by MAIL, and a legally executed guarantee that CALTHOS will STOP Discharges and Emissions, CURE Varicocele, and RESTORE Lost Vigor. Use it & pay if satisfied. Von Mohl Co., Importers, Cincinnati, Ohio.

KESTOL BROS. EXPORTERS AND DEALERS IN RAW FURS 331 Maine St., Waukesha, Wis. Send for Price List.

FREE FORMULA Face Massage to patrons ordering our $2 or $3 Beauty Box, containing every requisite for beautifying the Face and Scalp. Removing all Blemishes. 2c stamp for particulars. Samples 30c to any part of U. S. CAROLINE von WERNER, M. D., Syndicate Block, Minneapolis.

IMPORTED Percheron & Shire Stallions, first class $800, 1, 2 & 3 years' time. Imported mares cheap. Hiram C. Wheeler, Odebolt, Sac Co., Iowa.

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till cured. DR. J. STEPHENS, Lebanon, Ohio.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.
CATARRH
Sold by druggists or sent by mail. 50c. E. T. Hazeltine, Warren, Pa.

Minn Hist. Society

St. Hilaire Spectator.

VOLUME XI. ST. HILAIRE, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 14, 1892. NUMBER 21.

THE WEEKLY NEWS DIGEST.

EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK IN A CONDENSED FORM.

The Latest and Most Important News of the World, Culled From the Telegraph Reports of the Press Associations.

The Capital.

The test of the Brown segmental wire gun by the Navy Department was a success.

Postmaster General Wanamaker has issued an order, to go into effect Jan 1. 1893, reducing the fee for each piece of registered mail matter from 10 cents to 8 cents.

Secretary Noble has decided for Wm. A. Turner against Wm. McConnell, of the Crookston land district. John Murphy, postmaster at Horicon county has resigned, and recommended Mary A. Hines.

The treasury department has decided that a Chinese merchant who left this country two years ago and subsequently engaged in business in China thereby forfeited his domiciliary rights in the United States and cannot return here without the certificate of his government required by the Chinese exclusion act.

The secretary of the treasury has approved the recommendation of the collector of customs at Chicago that wrappers and packages containing exhibits for the World's Fair may be burned or otherwise destroyed at the discretion of the collector. The action is taken in view of the prevalence of cholera in some of the cities from which the exhibits may be expected. It is held that while there is no danger from new merchandise, the germs of contagion may be conveyed in the wrappers.

Record of Casualties.

A cyclone swept through Nacogdoches County, Tex. Many buildings were destroyed and one life lost.

A quarter of the town of Alexandria, Ind., was destroyed by fire, occasioning a loss of $120,000.

Charles M. Hurley was found dead on the Wabash tracks at Andrews, Ind. He lives at Watertown, N. Y.

Two sons of Rudolph Hulse, aged 6 and 8 years respectively, were drowned at Kankakee, Ill., by the breaking of an ice floe.

B. B. Marshall, of Galesburg, Ill., a traveling salesman, was found dead in bed at an Aurora hotel. The gas burner was found open.

Jefferson Keating and Michael Lebomewitch was fatally burned at Moreau, Pa. They were taking powder a keg when a spark from an overhanging lamp fell into it.

Mrs. J. H. Cook used coal oil in lighting a fire at Warrensburg, Macon County Ill. She was horribly burned by the can and died in great agony.

People in Print.

Paderewski will spend Christmas in this country.

M. Diebler, the veteran executioner of Paris, has beheaded 220 persons.

Tennyson is the 1,173d person whose body has been deposited in Westminister Abby.

Minister Hicks will return from Peru in March and take up his residence again in Oshkosh, Wis.

Mme. Modjeska plays Chopin, speaks half a dozen different languages and reads the best literature in each.

The esoteric London society known as "The Souls," is to publish a paper with Miss Margaret Tennant as editor.

The pope refused to allow the Jesuits to transfer their headquarters from Fiesole to Rome.

Gen. William Lilly, congressman-at-large-elect from Pennsylvania, is reported seriously ill at his residence in Mauch Chunk.

Prof. John B. McMaster, the historian, has been engaged to succeed Prof. William M. Sloane in the department of history of Princeton college.

Justin McCarthy, the Irish leader, is again suffering from sciatica. His colleagues have arranged to relieve him of many of the burdens of the chairmanship.

The engagement is announced of Maj. Winsloe, the court marshal of the princess of Schaumenberg-Lippe, to Miss Stone, an American girl. Miss Stone's father is well known in New York as the owner of fast horses.

Countess de Lesseps, who is now quite prominent in Parisian newspapers on account of her devoted defense of her husband's integrity, never made any secret of the fact that before her marriage she, rather than the count, played the role of suitor.

Joseph Walton, the millionaire coal operator, died suddenly of apoplexy at his home in Allegheny, Pa. The deceased was well known by all river men between Pittsburg and New Orleans, and was probably the largest mine owner in the Allegheny region.

Sinful Doings.

Col. Thomas Henderson Boyd, editor and proprietor of the Morning Olympian, at Olympia, Washington, was shot and killed at Seattle, by his wife in her rooms.

Frank W. Bradshaw, of Victoria, Mexico, was attacked by brigands at his home and robbed of several hundred dollars. Mr. Bradshaw was seriously wounded.

The trial has begun at Cheyenne, Wyo., of Thomas Francis Lyon, the ex-Roman Catholic priest who shot and fatally wounded Patrick Moore in that city during a riot last September.

The United States supreme court has affirmed the judgment by which C. A. Benson was convicted of a murder committed on the Fort Leavenworth military reservation in Kansas.

Edward E. Elms, an editor, was shot and killed by George P. Money, son of Congressman-elect H. D. Money, at Carrollton, Miss. The difficulty grew out of an article in Elam's paper.

Captain John Smith, of the schooner Lou, threw a boy named George Neale, aged 16, overboard because he was unruly. Smith is 64 years old and the son of a presbyterian minister.

George Jones, a life convict in the Ohio Penitentiary at Columbus, attacked E. O. Gump, throwing an iron kettle at him. The guard shot Jones, fatally wounding him.

Mrs. Lottie Anderson Barnard, who committed suicide in San Diego, Cal., is really Miss Lizzie Wyllie, of Detroit. Five weeks previous she left her Detroit home, ostensibly to go down town on an errand, and never returned. There is said to be a man involved in the case.

James Anglin, aged 17, was shot and killed by S. H. Lyons, the latter being wild with drink, during the progress of a lecture by Mrs. Helen Stoddard, president of the State Woman's Christian Temperance Union, at Runge, Tex.

The Foreign Budget.

Prince Bismarck told a reporter whom he met at the Lehrter station, that he surely would appear in the reichstag before Christmas.

A Canadian government paper gives the following as the personal of the new ministry, which will be finally submitted for his excellency's approval: Sir John Thompson, premier and minister of justice; MacKenzie Bowell, minister of trade and commerce; G. E. Foster, minister of finance.

The London Chronicle's Paris correspondent says: "The adversaries of the president assert that President Carnot stretched his personal prejudices to an almost unconstitutional point and that M. Brisson and M. Perier were unduly impeded in their efforts to form a ministry. A presidential crisis is by no means an unlikely contingency if the present confusion continues."

A Madrid special says: Premier Canovas has asked the chamber for a vote of confidence on the government's action in the municipal scandals. The chamber rejected the request 120 to 121. The Silvela party were in the majority. The Liberals abstained from voting. Senor Canovas immediately proceeded to the palace and tendered to the queen regent the resignation of the cabinet.

The German bundesrath sanctioned the changes in the taxes on brandy and bourse transactions provided in the army bills. It was reported that the bundesrath had decided to make important modifications in the provisions of the bills imposing new taxes, but its action in sanctioning the above changes as proposed by the government shows the reports to have been unfounded in these respects at least.

About the Railroads.

All the railroads are getting out circulars authorizing the sale of holiday excursion tickets within a radius of 200 miles at a fare and a third.

The Great Northern passenger department has issued its first rate sheet, covering traffic from Spokane to all leading points in the United States.

W. J. Ross, general superintendent of the Canadian Pacific railway, has resigned his position with the company, and will leave the service the first of the year.

The Great Northern has introduced a through dining car service on all passenger trains running between St. Paul and Spokane. Four new diners have been added to the equipment for this purpose, and are said to be the finest on the road. The arrangement is such that there are tables for four on one side of the car and for two only on the other side.

Political Echoes.

The state canvassing board of North Carolina has settled the contest in the Fifth Congressional District by awarding the certificate of election to Thomas Settle, the Republican.

Labor.

The Granite cutters' strike at Concord, N. H., has been declared off.

About seventy-five cases of destitution resulting from the great strike at Homestead have been reported to the relief committee and a severe spell of wintry weather will see this number largely increased.

The duly qualified representatives of the hitherto conflicting orders of Commercial Telegraphers of the United States met in New York and as a result of this meeting it was agreed that the interests of both associations should be merged and that the order of Commercial Telegraphers of North America should be recognized as the only organization of commercial telegraphers on this continent.

General News.

Eddie Coleman, 6 years old, died of hydrophobia at Jersey City.

The first whaleback passenger excursion steamer is launched at West Superior.

The state of South Carolina is threatened with insolvency.

An Omaha man who escapes from Siberia relates a terrible experience.

Linen manufacturers in various parts of the country are to combine and use the Minneapolis exposition as a factory.

The will of Jay Gould divides the estate among his six children. Nothing is given to charity or colleges.

A bill has been filed at Kansas City, by the city, asking a receiver for the National Water Works Company.

The operators of the Hocking Valley have decided to organize a company to buy and sell the entire output of the valley.

George Johnson, of Detroit, was found dead in his room at the Commercial House Ishpeming.

The heirs of the Gould estate are liable, under the New York law of 1892, to pay an inheritance tax of $1,000,000.

Oliver B. Heidt, president of the Heidt Lumber Company at Birmingham, Ala., was found dead in his office.

Four steerage passengers on the steamer Giara, from Napels, died of diphtheria at sea.

Congressman Hoar was married at Concord, Mass., to Miss Mary Butterick. The wedding was private.

Mosely & Bohmer, wholesalers in rubber goods at Richmond, Va., have failed. The liabilities are $47,000.

Hugh Ross, who is charged with having blown the whistle which summoned the rioters at Homestead, has been admitted to bail in $1,000.

Several hundred tons of valuable gold ore have been taken out of the Sni Hills near Kansas City, Mo., and it all showed the same high grade as in former tests.

The plant of the Milvale, Pa., Iron and Steel Company was started up recently after being idle seven months. The Amalgamated scale was signed, and the mill will be run with union men.

Mrs. Siegbert Kosterlitz, of New York City, has laid claim to the estate of David Edgar Crouse, the Syracuse millionaire. She says she is the wife of the deceased and that her 5 year-old daughter has a claim on the estate.

Albert Smith was bricking a new cistern at Des Moines, Ia., and while a bucket of brick was being lowered to him the rope slipped and the whole mass struck him on the head. The well is 33 feet deep, and Smith was instantly killed.

Six hundred Ann Arbor University students had a miniature riot, in which clothes were torn and faces badly battered. The trouble was over the attempt of the Students' Lecture Association to charge $1 extra for reserved seats, contrary to the conditions on which they were sold.

Charles Colby, son of prominent parents, died at Kansas City of cancer of the brain, a rare disease. As the disease progressed parts of the body, one after another, lost their usefulness. The strephine showed just what portions of the brain controlled the arms, legs, speech, sight, hearing and so on. Young Colby is the third in his family to die exactly of the same malady.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

HIS ANNUAL REVIEW OF THE NATION'S AFFAIRS.

The President Recommends That Tariff Revision Be Left to the Next Congress—A General Review of Affairs and Progress of the Nation.

Washington, Dec. 6.—President Harrison's message reads as follows:

To the Senate and House of Representatives: In submitting my annual message to congress I have great satisfaction in being able to say that the general conditions affecting the commercial and industrial interests of the United States are in the highest degree favorable. A comparison of the existing conditions with those of the most favored period in the history of the country will, I believe, show that so high a degree of prosperity and so general a diffusion of the comforts of life were never before enjoyed by our people.

The total wealth of the country in 1860 was $16,159,616,068. In 1890 it amounted to $62,610,000,000, an increase of 287 per cent. The total mileage of railways in the United States in 1860 was 30,626; in 1890 it was 167,741, an increase of 448 per cent; and it is estimated that there will be about 4,000 miles of track added by the close of the year 1892. The official returns of the eleventh census and those of the tenth census for seventy-five leading cities furnished the basis for the following comparisons:

In 1880 the capital invested in manufacturing was $1,232,839,670. In 1890 the capital invested in manufacturing was $2,900,735,884.

In 1880 the number of employes was 1,301,388. In 1890 the number of employes was 2,251,134.

In 1880 the wages earned were $501,965,778. In 1890 the wages earned were $1,221,170,454.

In 1880 the value of the product was $2,711,579,899. In 1890 the value of the product was $4,860,286,837.

I am informed by the superintendent of the census that the omission of certain industries in 1880 which were included in 1890 accounts in part for the remarkable increase thus shown, but after making full allowances for differences of method and deducting the returns for all industries included in the census of 1880, there remain in the reports from these seventy-five cities an increase in the capital employed of $1,522,745,604; in the value of the product of $2,024,236,166; in wages earned of $677,943,929, and in the number of wage earners employed of 856,029. The wage earnings not only show an increased aggregate, but an increase per capita from $386 in 1880 to $547 in 1890, or 41.71 per cent.

THE NEW INDUSTRIAL PLANTS

established since Oct. 6, 1890, and up to Oct. 22, 1892, as partially reported in the American Economist, number 345, and the extension of existing plants 108; the new capital invested amounts to $40,449,050, and the number of additional employes to 37,285. The Textile World for July, 1892, states that during the first six months of the present calendar year 135 new factories were built, of which forty are cotton mills, 48 knitting mills, 26 woolen mills, 15 silk mills, 4 plush mills and 2 linen mills. Of the 40 cotton mills 21 have been built in the Southern states. A. B. Shepherson, of the New York Cotton exchange, estimates the number of working spindles in the United States on Sept. 1, 1892, at 15,200,000, an increase of 660,000 over the year 1891. The consumption of cotton by American mills in 1891 was 2,396,000 bales and in 1892 2,584,000 bales, an increase of 188,000 bales. From the year 1869 to 1892 inclusive there has been an increase in the consumption of cotton in Europe of 92 per cent, while during the same period the increased consumption in the United States has been about 150 per cent.

The report of Ira Ayer, special agent of the treasury department shows that at the date of Sept. 30, 1892, there were thirty-two companies manufacturing tin and terne plate in the United States and fourteen companies building new works for such manufacture. The estimated investment in buildings and plants at the close of the fiscal year, June 30, 1893, if existing conditions were to be continued, was $5,000,000, and the estimated rate of production 200,000,000 pounds per annum. The actual production of the quarter ending Sept. 30, 1892, was 10,952,725 pounds. The report of Labor Commissioner Peck of New York shows that during the year 1891, in about 6,000 manufacturing establishments in that state, embraced within the special inquiry made by him, and representing 67 different industries, there was a net increase over the year 1890 of $31,315,130.68 in the value of the product and of $6,377,925.09 in the value of wages paid. The report of the commissioner of labor of Massachusetts shows that 3,745 industries in that state paid $129,416,248 in wages during the year 1891 against $126,030,303 in 1890, an increase of $3,335,945, and that there was an increase of $9,932,490 in the amount of capital and of 7,346 in the number of persons employed in the same period.

During the last six months of the year 1891 and the first six months of 1892 the total production of pig iron was 9,710,819 tons as against 9,202,703 tons in the year 1890, which was the largest annual production ever attained. For the same twelve months of 1891 and 1892 the production of Bessemer ingots was 3,878,581 tons, an increase of 189,710 gross tons over the previous unprecedented yearly production of 3,688,871 gross tons in 1890. The production of Bessemer steel rails for the first six months of 1892 was 772,436 gross tons, as against 702,080 gross tons during the last six months of the year 1891. The total value of

OUR FOREIGN TRADE

(exports and manufactures) during the last fiscal year was $1,857,680,610, an increase of $128,283,604 over the previous fiscal year. The average annual value of our imports and exports of merchandise for the ten fiscal years prior to 1891 was $1,457,322,019. It will be observed that our foreign trade for 1892 exceeded this annual average value by $400,358,591, an increase of 27.47 per cent. The significance and value of this increase are shown by the fact that the excess in trade of 1892 over 1891, was wholly in the value of exports, for there was a decrease in the value of imports of $17,513,754. The value of our exports during the fiscal year of 1892 reached the highest figure in the history of the government, amounting to $1,030,278,148, exceeding by $145,797,338 the exports of 1891 and exceeding the value of the imports by $202,875,686. A comparison of the value of our exports for 1892 with the annual average for the ten years prior to 1891 shows an excess of $265,142,071, or of 34.65 per cent. The value of our imports of merchandise for 1892, which was $829,402,462, also exceeded the annual average value of the ten years prior to 1891 by $135,215,940. During the fiscal year 1892, the value of imports free of duty amounted to $457,999,658, the largest aggregate in the history of our commerce. The value of the imports of merchandise entered free of duty in 1892 was 55.35 per cent of the total value of imports, as compared with 43.35 per cent in 1891 and 33.66 per cent in 1890.

In our coastwise trade a most encouraging development is in progress, there having been in the last four years an increase of 16 per cent. In internal commerce the statistics show that no such period of prosperity has ever before existed. The freight carried in the coastwise trade of the great lakes in 1890 aggregated 28,295,959 tons.

On the Mississippi, Missouri and Ohio rivers and tributaries in the same year the traffic aggregated 29,405,046 tons, and the total vessel tonnage passing through the Detroit river during that year was 21,684,000 tons. The vessel tonnage entered and cleared in the foreign trade of London during 1890 amounted to 13,480,767 tons, and of Liverpool 10,941,800 tons, a total for these two great shipping ports of 24,422,568 tons, only slightly in excess of the vessel tonnage passing through the Detroit river. And it should be said that the season of the Detroit river was but 228 days, while, of course, in London and Liverpool, the season was for the entire year. The vessel tonnage passing through the St. Mary's canal for the fiscal year 1892 amounted to 9,828,874 tons, and the freight tonnage of the Detroit river is estimated for that year at 25,000,000 tons, against 23,209,619 tons in 1891. The aggregate traffic on our railroads for the year 1891 amounted to 704,398,609 tons of freight, compared with 691,344,437 tons in 1890, an increase of 13,054,172 tons. Another indication of

THE GENERAL PROSPERITY

of the country is found in the fact that the number of depositors in savings banks increased from 693,870 in 1860 to 4,258,893 in 1890, an increase of 513 per cent, and the amount of deposits from $149,277,504 in 1860 to $1,524,844,506 in 1890, an increase of 921 per cent. In 1891 the amount of deposits in savings banks was $1,623,079,749. It is estimated that 90 per cent of these deposits represent the savings of wage earners. The bank clearances for nine months ending Sept. 30, 1891, amounted to $41,049,390,808. For the same months in 1892 they amounted to $45,189,601,947, an excess for the nine months of $4,140,211,139. There has never been a time in our history when work was so abundant or when wages were as high, whether measured by the currency on which they are paid or by their power to supply the necessaries and comforts of life. It is true that the market prices of cotton and wheat have been low. It is one of the unfavorable incidents of agriculture that the farmer cannot produce upon orders. He must sow and reap in ignorance of the aggregate production of the year, and is subject to the depreciation which follows overproduction. But while the fact I have stated is true as to the crops mentioned, the general average of prices has been such as to give to agriculture a fair participation in the general prosperity. The value of our total farm products has increased from $1,363,646,866 in 1860 to $4,500,000,000 in 1891, as estimated by statisticians, an increase of 230 per cent. The number of hogs Jan. 1, 1891, was 50,625,106, and their value $210,193,925; on Jan. 1, 1892, the number was 52,398,019 and the value $241,031,415. On Jan. 1, 1891, the number of cattle was 36,875,648 and the value $544,127,908; on Jan. 1, 1892, the number was 37,651,239 and the value $570,749,155.

If any are discontented with their state here, if any believe that the wages or prices, the returns for honest toil are inadequate, they should not fail to remember that there is no other country in the world where the conditions that seem to them hard would not be accepted as highly prosperous. The English agriculturist would be glad to exchange the returns of his labor for those of the farmer, and the Manchester workmen their wages for those of their fellows at Fall River.

I believe that the protective system which now for something like thirty years has prevailed in our legislation has been a mighty instrument for the development of our national wealth and a most powerful agency in protecting the homes of our workingmen from the invasion of want. I have felt a most solicitous interest to preserve to our working people rates of wages that would not only give daily bread, but supply a comfortable margin for those home attractions and family comforts and enjoyments without which life is neither hopeful nor sweet. They are American citizens—a part of the great people for whom our constitution and government were framed and instituted—and it cannot be a perversion of that constitution to so legislate as to preserve in their homes the comfort, independence, loyalty and sense of interest in the government which are essential to good citizenship in peace and which will bring this stalwart throng, as in 1861, to the defense of the flag when it is assailed.

REGARDING THE TARIFF.

It is not my purpose to renew here the argument in favor of a protective tariff. The result of the recent election must be accepted as having introduced a new policy. We must assume that the present tariff, constructed upon the lines of protection, is to be repealed, and that there is to be substituted for it a tariff law constructed solely with reference to revenue; that no duty is to be higher because the increase will keep open an American mill or keep up the wages of an American workman, but that in every case such a rate of duty is to be imposed as will bring to the treasury of the United States the largest returns of revenue. The contest not being between schedules, but between principles, it would be offensive to suggest that the prevailing party will not carry into legislation the principles advocated by it and the pledges given to the people. The tariff bills passed by the house of representatives at the last session were, as I supposed, even in the opinion of their promoters, inadequate and justified only by the fact that the senate and house of representatives were not in accord and that a general revision should not, therefore, be undertaken.

I recommend that the whole subject of tariff revision be left to the incoming congress. It is a matter of regret that this work must be delayed for at least three months, for the threat of great tariff changes introduces so much uncertainty that an amount not easily estimated of business inaction and of diminished production will necessarily result. It is possible also that this uncertainty may result in decreased revenues from customs duties, for our merchants will make cautious orders for foreign goods in view of the prospect of tariff reductions and the uncertainty as to when it will take effect. Those who have advocated a protective tariff can well afford to have their disastrous forecasts of a change of policy disappointed. If a system of customs duties can be framed that will set the idle wheels and looms of Europe in motion and crowd our warehouses with foreign-made goods and at the same time keep our own mills busy; that will give us an increased participation in the "markets of the world" of greater value than the home market we surrender; that will give increased work to foreign workmen upon products to be consumed by our people without diminishing the amount of work to be done here; that will enable the American manufacturer to pay his workmen more in wages than is paid in the foreign mill and yet to compete in our market and in foreign markets with the foreign producer; that will further reduce the cost of articles of wear and food without reducing the wages of those who produce them; that can be celebrated after its effects have been realized, as its expectation has been, in European as well as in American cities, the authors and promoters of it will be entitled to the highest praise. We have had in our history several experiences of contrasted effects of a revenue and of a protective tariff; but this generation has not felt them, and the experience of one generation is not highly instructive to the next. The friends of the protective system, with undiminished confidence in the principles they have advocated, will await the results of the new experiment.

FROM 50 TO 100 PER CENT

The strained and too often disturbed relations existing between the employe and the employers in our great manufacturing establishments have not been favorable to a calm consideration by the wage earners of their effect upon wages.

The facts that his wages were the highest paid in like callings in the world and that a maintenance of this rate of wages, in the absence of protective duties upon the product of his labor was impossible, were obscured by the passion evoked by these contests. He may now be able to review the question in the light of his personal experience under the operation of a tariff for revenue only. If that experience shall demonstrate that present rates of wages are thereby maintained or increased, either absolutely or in their purchasing power and that the aggregate volume of work to be done in this country is increased, or even maintained, so that there are more or as many days work in a year at as good or better wages for the American workingman as has been the case under the protective system, every one will rejoice. A general process of wage reductions cannot be contemplated by any patriotic citizen without the gravest apprehension. It may be, indeed I believe is, possible for the American manufacturer to compete successfully with his foreign rival in many branches of production without the defense of protective duties, if the pay rolls are equalized; but the conflict that stands between the producer and that result and the distress of our working people when it is attained are not pleasant to contemplate. The society of the unemployed, now holding its frequent and threatening parades in the streets of foreign cities should not be allowed to acquire an American domicile.

WORK OF THE ADMINISTRATION.

The reports of the heads of the several executive departments which are herewith submitted have very naturally included a resume of the whole work of the administration, with the transactions of the last fiscal year. The attention not only of congress but of the country is again invited to the methods of administration which have been pursued and to the results which have been attained. Public revenues amounting to $1,414,079,292.28 have been collected and disbursed without loss from misappropriation, without a single defalcation of such importance as to attract the public attention, and at a diminished per cent of cost for collection. The public business has been transacted not only with fidelity but progressively, and with a view to give to the people in the fullest possible way the good service established and maintained for their protection and comfort.

Our relations with other nations are now undisturbed by any serious controversy. The complicated and threatening differences with Germany and England relating to Samoan affairs, with England in relation to the seal fisheries in the Bering sea, and with Chile growing out of the Baltimore affair have been adjusted.

There has been adjusted under section 3 of the tariff law commercial agreements relating to reciprocal trade with the following countries: Brazil, Dominican republic, Spain for Cuba and Puerto Rico, Guatemala, San Salvador, the German empire, Great Britain for certain West Indian colonies and British Guiana, Nicaragua, Honduras and Austro-Hungary. Of these, those with Guatemala, Honduras and Austro-Hungary have been concluded since my last annual message. Under these trade arrangements a free, favored admission has been secured in every case for an important list of American products. Especial care has been taken to secure markets for farm products in order to relieve that great industry lying under depression for the lack of an adequate foreign market.

FOR OUR SURPLUS PRODUCTION,

also for our manufactured productions, which will, if this policy is maintained, greatly augment our export trade. The full benefits of these arrangements cannot be realized instantly. New lines of trade are to be opened. The commercial traveler must survey the field. The manufacturer must adapt his goods to the new markets and facilities for exchange must be established. This work has been well begun; our merchants and manufacturers have entered the new fields with courage and enterprise. In the case of food products, and specially with Cuba, the trade did not need to wait and the immediate results have been gratifying. If the policy of these trade arrangements can be continued in force and aided by the establishment of American steamship lines, I do not doubt that we shall, within a short period, secure fully one-third of the total trade of the countries of Central and South America, which now amounts to about $600,000,000 annually. In 1885 we had only 8 per cent of this trade.

The following statistics show the increase in every trade with the countries with which we have reciprocal trade agreements from the date when such agreements went into effect up to Sept. 30, 1892, the increase being in some almost wholly and in others in an important degree the result of this agreement:

The domestic exports to Germany and Austria-Hungary have increased in value from $47,073,756 to $57,073,064, an increase of $10,319,308, or 21.03 per cent. With American countries the value of our exports has increased from $44,160,285 to $54,018,508, an increase of $10,653,313, or 23.07 per cent. The total increase in the value of exports to all countries with which we have reciprocal agreements has been $20,772,621. This increase is chiefly wheat, flour, meat and dairy products and manufactures of iron and steel and lumber. There has been a large increase in the value of imports from all these countries since the commercial agreements went into effect, amounting to $74,294,293. It has been entirely in imports from the American countries, consisting mostly of sugar, coffee, india rubber and crude drugs. The alarmed attention of our European competitors for the South American market has been attracted to the new American policy and to our acquisition and their loss of South American trade.

BERING SEA.

A treaty providing for the arbitration of the dispute between Great Britain and the United States as to the killing of seals in the Bering sea was concluded on the 29th of February last. This treaty was accompanied by an agreement prohibiting pelagic sealing pending the arbitration, and a vigorous effort was made during this season to drive out all poaching sealers from the Bering sea. Six naval vessels, three revenue cutters and one vessel from the fish commission, all under the command of Commander Evans, of the navy, were sent into the sea, which was systematically patrolled. Some seizures were made, and it is believed that the catch in the Bering sea by poachers amounted to less than 700 seals. It is true, however, that in the North Pacific, while the seal herds were on their way to the passes between the Aleutian islands, a very large number, probably 45,000, were taken. The existing statutes of the United States do not restrain our citizens from taking seals in the Pacific ocean, and perhaps should not unless the prohibition can be extended to the citizens of other nations. I recommend that power be given to the president, by proclamation, to prohibit the taking of seals in the North Pacific by American vessels, so that, regardless of the result of findings of the tribunal of arbitration or otherwise, the restraints can be applied to the vessels of all countries. The case of the United States for the tribunal of arbitration has been prepared with great care and industry by Hon. John W. Foster, and the counsel who represent this government express confidence that a result substantially establishing our claims and preserving this great industry to the benefit of all nations will be attained.

CANADIAN QUESTIONS.

During the past year a suggestion was received from the British minister that the Canadian government would like to confer as to the possibility of enlarging upon terms of mutual advantage to advance the commercial exchanges of Canada and of the United States, and a conference was held, with Mr. Blaine acting for this government and the British minister at this capital and three members of the dominion cabinet acting as commissioners on the part of Great Britain. The conference developed the fact that the Canadian government was only prepared to offer of the United States, in exchange for the concessions asked, the admission of natural products. The statement was frankly made that favored rates could not be given to the United States as against the mother country. This admission, which was foreseen, necessarily terminated the conference upon this question. The benefits of an exchange of natural products would be almost wholly with the people of Canada. Some other topics of interest were considered in the conference, and resulted in the making of a convention for examining the Alaskan boundary and the waters of Passamaquoddy bay adjacent to Eastport, Me., and in the initiation of an arrangement for the protection of fish life in the coterminous and neighboring waters of our northern border.

The controversy as to the tolls upon the Welland canal, which was presented to congress at the last session by presidential message, having failed of adjustment, I felt constrained to exercise the authority conferred by the act of July 16, 1892, and to proclaim a suspension of the free use of St. Mary's falls to cargoes in transport in Canada. The secretary of the treasury established such tolls as were thought to be equivalent to the exactions unjustly levied upon our commerce in the Canadian canals. If, as we must suppose, the political relations of Canada and the disposition of the Canadian government are to remain unchanged, a somewhat radical revision of our trade relations should, I think, be made. Our relations must continue to be intimate and they should be friendly. I regret to say, however, that in many of the controversies, notably those as to the fisheries on the Atlantic, the sealing interests on the Pacific and canal tolls, our negotiations with Great Britain have continuously been thwarted or retarded by unreasonable and unfriendly objections and protests from Canada. In the matter of the canal tolls our treaty rights

WERE FLAGRANTLY DISREGARDED.

It is hardly too much to say that the Canadian Pacific and other railway lines which parallel our Northern boundary are sustained by commerce having either its origin or terminus or both in the United States. Canadian railroads compete with those of the United States for our traffic and without the restraints of our interstate commerce act. Their cars pass almost without detention into and out of our territory. The Canadian Pacific railway brought into the United States from China and Japan via British Columbia, during the year ended June 30, 1892, 23,239,685 pounds of freight, and it carried from the United States to be shipped to China and Japan via British Columbia, 24,068,346 pounds of freight. There were also shipped from the United States over this route for Eastern ports of the United States from Pacific ports during the same year, 13,912,013 pounds of freight, and there were received over this road at the United States Eastern ports from ports on the Pacific coast 13,293,315 pounds of freight. Mr. Joseph Nimmo, Jr., former chief of the bureau of statistics, when before the senate select committee on relations with Canada April 26, 1890, said that "the value of goods thus transported between different points in the United States across Canadian territory probably amounts to more than $100,000,000 a year.

There is no disposition on the part of the people or government of the United States to interfere in the smallest degree with the political relations of Canada. That question is wholly with her own people. It is time for us, however, to consider whether, if the present state of things and trend of things is to continue, our exchanges upon lines of land transportation should not be put upon a different basis, and our entire independence of Canadian canals and of the St. Lawrence, as an outlet to the sea secured by the construction of an American canal around the Falls of the Niagara and the opening of ship communication between the Great Lakes and one of our own seaports. We should not hesitate to avail ourselves of our great natural trade advantages. We should withdraw the support which is given to the railroads and steamship lines of Canada by a traffic that properly belongs to us, and no longer furnish the earnings which lighten the otherwise crushing weight of the enormous public subsidies that have been given to them. The subject of the power of the treasury to deal with this matter without further legislation has been under consideration, but circumstances have postponed a conclusion. It is probable that a consideration of the propriety of a modification or abrogation of the article of the treaty of Washington relating to the transit of goods in bond is advisable as a complete solution of the question.

THE CHILEAN TROUBLE.

Congress at the last session was kept advised of the progress of the serious and for a time threatening differences between the United States and Chile. It gives me now great gratification to report that the Chilean government in a most friendly and honorable spirit has tendered and paid as an indemnity to the families of the sailors of the Baltimore who were killed and to those who were injured in the outbreak in the city of Valparaiso the sum of $75,000. This has been accepted, not only as an indemnity for a wrong done, but as a most gratifying evidence that the government of Chile rightly appreciates the disposition of this government to act in a spirit of absolute fairness and friendliness in our intercourse with that brave people. A further and conclusive evidence of the mutual respect and confidence now existing is furnished by the fact that a convention submitting to arbitration the mutual claims of the citizens of the respective governments has been agreed upon. Some of these claims have been pending for many years and have been the occasion of much unsatisfactory diplomatic correspondence.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE.

The report of the attorney general is by law submitted directly to congress, but I cannot refrain from saying that he has conducted the increasing work of the department of justice with great professional skill. He has in several directions secured from the courts decisions giving increased protection to the officers of the United States and bringing some classes of crimes that escaped local cognizance and punishment unto the tribunals of the United States where they could be tried in impartiality. The numerous applications for executive clemency presented in behalf of persons convicted in the United States courts and given penitentiary sentences have called my attention to a fact referred to by the attorney general in his report, namely, that a time allowance for good behavior for such prisoners is prescribed by the federal statutes only where the state in which the penitentiary is located had made no such provision. Prisoners are given the benefit of the provisions of the state law regulating the penitentiary to which they may be sent. These are various, some too liberal and some perhaps too illiberal. The result is a sentence for five years means one thing if the prisoner is sent to one state for confinement and quite a different thing if he is sent to another. I recommend that a uniform credit for good behavior be prescribed by congress.

The aggregate of claims pending against the government in the court of claims is enormous. Claims to the amount of nearly $400,000,000 for the taking of or injury to the property of persons claiming to be loyal during the war are now before that court for examination. When the others are added, the Indian depredation claims and the French spoliation claims, the aggregate is reached that is indeed startling. In the defense of these claims this government is at a disadvantage. The claimants have preserved their evidence, whereas the government has to send agents to rummage the field for what they can find. This difficulty is peculiarly great where the fact to be established is the disloyalty of the claimant during the war. If this great threat against our revenues is to have no other check, certainly congress should supply the department of justice with appropriations sufficiently liberal to secure the best legal talent in the defense of the claims and to pursue its vague search for evidence effectively.

OUR NEW NAVY.

The report of the secretary of the navy exhibits great progress in the construction of our new navy. When the present secretary entered upon his duties only three modern steel vessels were in commission. The vessels since put in commission and to be put in commission during the winter will make a total of nineteen during his administration of the department. During the current year ten war vessels and three navy tugs have been launched, and during the four years twenty-five vessels will have been launched. Two other large ships and a torpedo boat are under contract and the work on them well advanced, and the four monitors are awaiting only the arrival of their armor, which has been unexpectedly delayed or they would have been before this in commission.

Contracts have been let during this administration, under the appropriations for the increase of the navy, including new vessels and their appurtenances, to the amount of $35,000,000, and there has been expended during the same period for labor at navy yards upon similar work $8,000,000, without the smallest scandal or charge of fraud or partiality. The enthusiasm and interest of our naval officers, both of the staff and line, have been greatly kindled. They have responded magnificently to the confidence of congress, and have demonstrated to the world an unexcelled capacity to construct in ordnance and in everything involved in the building, equipping and sailing of great water ships. At the beginning of Secretary Tracy's administration several difficult problems remained to be grappled with and solved before the efficiency in action of our ships could be secured. It is believed that as the result of new processes in the construction of armor plate our later ships will be clothed with defensive plates of higher resisting power than are found on

ANY WAR VESSEL AFLOAT.

We were without torpedoes. Tests have been made to ascertain the relative efficiency of different constructions, and a torpedo has been adopted and the work of construction is now being carried on successfully. We were without armor piercing shells, and without a shop constructed and equipped for the construction of them. We are now making what is believed to be a projectile superior to any before in use. A smokeless powder has been developed and a slow burning powder for guns of large caliber. A high explosive, capable of use in shells fired from service guns, has been found and the manufacture of gun cotton has been developed so that the question of supply is no longer in doubt. The development of a naval militia, which has been organized in eight states and brought into cordial and co-operative relation with the navy, is another important achievement. There are now enlisted in these organizations 1,800 men, and they are likely to be greatly extended. I recommend such legislation and appropriations as will encourage and develop this movement. The recommendations of the secretary will, I do not doubt, receive the friendly consideration of congress, for he has enjoyed, as he has deserved, the confidence of all those interested in the development of our navy, without any division on partisan lines. I earnestly express the hope that a work which has made such noble progress may not now be stayed. The wholesome influence for peace and increased sense of security which our citizens domiciled in other lands feel when these magnificent ships under the American flag appear is already most gratefully apparent. The ships from our navy which will appear in the naval parade next April in the harbor of New York will be a convincing demonstration to the world that the United States is again a naval power.

THE INTERIOR DEPARTMENT.

The work of the interior department, always very burdensome, has been larger than ever before during the administration of Secretary Noble. The disability pension law, taking of the eleventh census, the opening of vast areas of Indian lands to settlement, the organization of Oklahoma and the negotiations for the cession of Indian lands, furnish some of the particulars of the increased work; and the results achieved testify to the ability, fidelity and industry of the head of the department and his efficient assistants. Several important agreements for the cession of Indian lands negotiated by the commission appointed under the act of March 2, 1889, are awaiting the action of congress. Perhaps the most important of these is that for the cession of the Cherokee strip. This region has been the source of great vexation to the executive department, and friction and great unrest to settlers who desire to occupy it and the Indians who assert title. The agreement which has been made by the commission is perhaps the most satisfactory that could have been reached. It will be noticed that it is conditioned upon its ratification by congress before March 4, 1893. The secretary of the interior, who has given the subject very careful thought, recommends the ratification of the agreement, and I am inclined to follow his recommendation. Certain it is that some action by which this controversy shall be brought to an end and these lands opened to settlement is urgent.

The form of government provided by congress on May 17, 1884, for Alaska was, in its frame and purpose, temporary. The increase of population and the development of some important mining and commercial interests make it imperative that the law be revised and better provision made for the arrest and punishment of criminals.

The report of the secretary shows a very gratifying state of affairs as to the condition of the general land office. The work of issuing agricultural patents, which seemed to be hopelessly in arrears when the present secretary undertook the duties of his office, has been so expedited that the bureau is now upon current business. The relief thus afforded to honest and worthy settlers upon the public lands, by giving to them an assured title to their entries, has been of incalculable benefit in developing the new states and the territories.

The court of private land claims, established by congress for the promotion of this policy of speedily settling contested land titles, is making satisfactory progress in its work, and when the work is completed a great impetus will be given to the development of those regions where unsettled claims under Mexican grants have so long exercised their repressive influence. When all results are added, the enormous cessions of Indian lands which have been opened to settlement, aggregating during this administration nearly 20,000,000 acres and the agreements negotiated and now pending in congress for ratification, by which about ten million additional acres will be opened to settlement, it will be seen how much has been accomplished.

The report of the commissioner of pensions, to which extended notice is given by the secretary of the interior in his report, will attract great attention. Judged by the aggregate amount of work done, the last year has been the greatest in the history of the office. I believe that the organization of the officers is efficient and that the work has been done with fidelity. The passage of what is known as the disability bill, has, as was foreseen, very largely increased the annual disbursements to the disabled veterans of the civil war. The estimate for this fiscal year was $144,956,000 and that amount was appropriated. A deficiency amounting to $10,508,621 must be provided for at this session. The estimate for pensions for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, is $165,000,000. The commissioner of pensions believes that if the present methods are maintained and further additions to the pension laws are not made, the maximum expenditures for pensions will be reached June 30, 1894, and will be at the highest point $188,000,000 per annum.

QUARANTINE REGULATIONS.

The subject of quarantine regulations, inspection and control was brought suddenly to my attention by the arrival at our ports in August last of vessels infected with cholera. Quarantine regulations should be uniform at all ports. Under the constitution they are plainly within the exclusive federal jurisdiction when and so far as congress will legislate. In my opinion the whole subject should be taken into national control, and adequate power given to the executive to protect people against plague invasions. On the 1st of September last I approved regulations establishing a twenty-day quarantine for all vessels bringing immigrants from foreign ports. This order will be continued in force. Some loss and suffering have resulted to passengers, but a due care for the homes of our people justifies in such cases the utmost precaution. There is danger that with the coming spring cholera will again appear, and a liberal appropriation should be made at this session to enable our quarantine and port officials to exclude the deadly plague. But the most careful and stringent quarantine regulations may not be sufficient absolutely to exclude the disease. The progress of medical and sanitary science has been such, however, that if approved precautions are taken at once to put all of our cities and towns in the best sanitary condition, and a provision is made for isolating any sporadic cases and for a thorough disinfection, an epidemic can, I am sure, be avoided. This work appertains to the local authorities, and the responsibility and the penalty will be appalling if it is neglected or unduly delayed.

We are peculiarly subject in our great ports to the spread of infectious diseases by reason of the fact that unrestricted immigration brings to us out of European cities in the overcrowded steerages of great steamships a large number of persons whose surroundings make them the easy victims of the plague. This consideration, as well as those affecting the political, moral and industrial interests of our country, lead me to renew the suggestion that admission to our country and to the high privileges of its citizenship should be more restricted and more careful. We have, I think, a right and owe a duty to our own people, and especially to our working people, not only to keep out the vicious, the ignorant, the civil disturbers, the pauper and the contract laborer, but to check the too great flow of immigration now coming by further limitations.

NICARAGUA CANAL.

I repeat with great earnestness the recommendation which I have made in several previous messages that prompt and adequate support be given the American company engaged in the construction of the Nicaragua ship canal. It is impossible to overstate the value from every standpoint of this great enterprise, and I hope that there may be time, even in this congress, to give to it an impetus that will insure the early completion of the canal and secure to the United States its proper relations to it when completed.

Congress has been already advised that the invitations of this government for the assembling of an international monetary conference to consider the question of an enlarged issue of silver was accepted by the nations to which they were issued. The conference assembled at Brussels on the 22d of November, and has entered upon the consideration of this great question. I have not doubted, and have taken occasion to express that belief, as well in the invitations issued for this conference as in my public messages, that the free coinage of silver upon an agreed international ratio would greatly promote the interests of our people and equally those of other nations. It is too early to predict what results may be accomplished by the conference. If any temporary check or delay intervenes, I believe that very soon commercial conditions will compel the now reluctant governments to unite with us in this movement to secure the enlargement of the volume of money needed for the transaction of the business of the world.

PURITY OF THE BALLOT.

I have, in each three annual messages which it has been my duty to submit to congress, called attention to the evils and dangers connected with our election methods and practices as they are related to the choice of officers of the national government. In my last annual message, I endeavored to invoke serious attention to the evils of unfair apportionments for congress. I cannot close this message without again calling attention to these grave and threatening evils. I had hoped that it was possible to secure a non-partisan inquiry, by means of a commission, into evils the existence of which is known to all, and that out of this might grow legislation from which all thought of partisan advantages should be eliminated and only the higher thought appear, of maintaining the freedom and purity of the ballot and the equality of the elector without the guaranty of which the government could never have been formed, and without the continuance of which it cannot continue to exist in peace and prosperity. It is time that mutual charges of unfairness and fraud between the great parties should cease and that the sincerity of those who profess a desire for pure and honest elections should be brought to the test of their willingness to free our legislation and our election methods from everything that tends to impair the public confidence in their announced result. The necessity for an inquiry and for legislation by congress upon this subject is emphasized by the fact that the tendency of legislation in some states in recent years has in some important particulars been away from and not toward free and fair elections and equal apportionments. Is it not time that we should come together upon the high plane of patriotism while we devise methods that shall secure the right of any man qualified by law and give to every such ballot an equal value in choosing our public officers and in directing the policy of the government? Lawlessness is not less such, but more, where it usurps the functions of the peace officer and of the courts. The frequent lynchings of colored people accused of crime is without the excuse which has sometimes been urged by mobs for a failure to pursue the appointed methods for the punishment of crime that the accused has had an undue influence over courts and juries. Such acts are a reproach to the community where they occur, and so far as they can be made subject of federal jurisdiction the strongest repressive legislation is demanded. A public sentiment that will sustain the officers of the law in resisting mobs and protecting accused persons in their custody should be promoted by every possible means. The officer who gives his life in the brave discharge of this duty is worthy of special honor. No lesson needs to be so urgently impressed upon our people as this, that no worthy end or cause can be promoted by lawlessness.

TO CAST A FREE BALLOT

This exhibit of the work of the executive department is submitted to congress and to the public in the hope that there will be found in it a due sense of responsibility and an earnest purpose to maintain the national honor and to promote the happiness and prosperity of all our people. And this brief exhibit of the growth and prosperity of the country will give us a level from which to note the increase or decadence that new legislative policies may bring to us. There is no reason why the national influence, power and prosperity should not observe the same rates of increase that have characterized the past thirty years. We carry the great impulse and increase of these years into the future. There is no reason why in many lines of the production we should not surpass all other nations, as we have already done in some. There are no near frontiers to our possible development. Retrogression would be a crime.

BENJAMIN HARRISON.
Executive Mansion, Dec. 6, 1892.

GREAT NORTHERN

TIME CARD.

NO. 3 Daily		NO. Daily
7 40 p m	Lv.........St. Paul..........Ar	6 55 am
8 10 " "	..........Minneapolis..........	6 25 am
05 a m 2	..........Barnesville..........	10 25 pm
10 45 [illegible]	Lv.....Crookston.....Ar	4 00 pm
*11 25 " "	.........Shirley.........	3 30 " "
*x11 45 " "	.........Ives.........	x3 00 " "
x12 20 pm	.........Wylie.........	x2 30 " "
*12 45 " "	Ar.....St. Hilaire.....Lv	2 00 " "

*Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

S. S. Buzza Agt.

Dr. H. GRUNDY.

Physician

& Surgeon.

Graduate of the University of Toronto Canada and member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario.

Messages from the surrounding country attended to,

Office in Drug Store

THIEF RIVER FALLS,

NORTHERN PACIFIC

THE

GREAT TRAMSCONENTAL ROUTE.

Passes through Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, Manitoba, Montana, Idaho, Oregon and Washington.

THE DINING CAR LINE

Dining cars are run between Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Winnipeg, Helena, Butte, Tacoma, Seattle and Portland.

PULLMAN SLEEPING CAR ROUTE.

Pullman service between Chicago St. Paul Montana and the Pacific Northwest; and between St. Paul, Minneapolis and Minnesota North Dakota and Manitoba points.

THE POPULAR LINE.

Early Express Trains carry elegant Pullman sleeping Cars, Dining cars, Day Coaches, Pullman Tourist Sleepers and Free Colonist Sleeping Cars.

YELLOWSTONE PARK ROUTE.

The Northern Pacific R. R. is the rail line to Yellowstone Park; the popular line to California and Alaska; and its trains pass through the grandest scenery of seven states

THROUGH TICKETS Are sold at all coupon offices of the Northern Pacific Railroad to points North, East, South and West in the United States and Canada

TIME SCEDULE,

	Leave Crookston Daily	Arrive Crookston Daily
For Staples, Minneapolis, St. Paul Duluth Ashland and points East and South	7:05 p. m.	8:20 a m.
For Grand Forks Grafton Drayton, Winnipeg and points in North Dakota and Manitoba	8:27 a. m.	7:10 p. m

For Rates, Maps, Time Tables or special Information, apply to Agent Northern Pacific R. R. at Crookston Minn., or

CHAS. S. FEE,
Gen. Pass. Agent
St. Paul Minn.

ST. HILAIRE MEAT MARKET.

All kinds of fresh and salt meat always on hand.

I make a specialty of buying and selling cattle of all kinds.

If you want to buy or sell anything in that line it will pay you to give me a call.

JAMES DAINARD.

FRED Eikhof

DEALER IN CHOICE

WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS.

Beer always on tap.

Pool Room in Connection.

Broadway St. Hilaire.

FRANK IVES,

Attorney and Counselor

AT LAW,

CROOKSTON and ST. HILAIRE, Minn.

Will Practice in ALL The Courts, OF T ESTATE and and before the U. S. Land Office at Crookston and at Washington.

Will give special attention to contests of claims.

BREVITIES.

Wheat is 60 cents.

Fresh Oysters at W. A. Arthurs try them.

M. E Bjerk is at Crookston this week on business, of course.

For No. 1 pure buck wheat flour call on Fricker & Welch.

It looks today as if we are going to have another fall of snow.

Justice Hanson is having all the work he can handle at present.

We have been having a choice line of winter weather on hand lately.

A complete line of undertakers goods always on hand at Holmes Bros.

Capt. M. R. Brown, of Crookston, was doing business here last Monday.

George Fricker made a business trip to Crookston the first of the week,

Ira C. Richardson the Thief River Falls attorney was in town last Friday

J. W. Swanstrom of Thief River Falls was in town on business last Monday.

The village schools will close next Friday night for a two weeks vacation.

W. E. Kelsey, of Crookston collection agency, is working in this vicinity this week.

Now is the time to secure your flour cheap. Call for bargains on Fricker & Welch.

Dr. Grundy of Thief River Falls was in town on a professional visit last Friday.

If you want anything in the line of confectionary fruit or oysters call on W. A. Arthur.

E. J. Holmes left for Crookston last Monday where he will transact some business.

Mrs. Martin Williams who has been quite sick the past week is now convalescing rapidly.

Vice-president Ellington of the Scandia Bank of Crookston was in town on business last Monday.

District Court is still in session at Crookston with good prospects to continue until the holidays.

Editor O. A. Tweitmoe of the Crookston Tribune is in town today in the interest of that paper.

I will pay the highest market price for veal calves, fresh eggs and butter.

S. M. Dainard.

Frank Hessly and Mike Murphy, of Hillsboro N. D. were in town last Friday on their way to Thief River Falls.

A number of the young folks of the village enjoyed a pleasant dance last Saturday evening in the Brown building.

E. T. Spagord came over from Thompson N. D. last Monday and spent several hours looking over his business interests here.

R. D. Bliss the general agent of the White Sewing Machine Co. was in town today interviewing S. M. Dainard the agent here.

John Kupol well known here was in town yesterday. He is traveling with a theatrical company and was looking for a hall here.

Conductor Norrie who leaves once in a while to run a daily train on the Fosston line, is back on this run again. Mr Norrie is one of the most popular conductors on the Great Northern line.

There is considerable talk among railroad men about a daily train here in the near future, but we are of the opinion that it will amount to nothing.

Caspar Falk the bonanza farmer from the Thief River country was in town the first of the week. Mr. Falk claims to have killed fourteen deer this season.

Simon Waring, of Excel has rented the American House, landlord Halvorson retiring. Mr. Warring has a good place to do business and should do well. We understand that Mr. Halvorson will move onto his farm east of here.

Mrs. Minton Holmes left last Monday for Bergen Norway, where she will make her future home. She leaves a large number of friends here who will regret her departure.

A number of the young folks of the village enjoyd a pleasant party at the residence of Alfred Dainard last evening. All who were there report having had a good time.

A crew of about a dozen men arrived last Friday and at once commenced work digging holes and putting in the telegraph poles to Red Lake Falls. As soon as the line is completed they will begin work on the Thief River Falls line.

Congress has been called in extraordinary session four times—by John Adams, Vanburen, William Henry Harrison and Lincoln. Twice the call was made on account of threatened war and twice on account of the financial condition of the country.—Ex.

We advise every member of the legislature soon to assemble in St. Paul, to have a club ready to pound the life out of any bill giving the state land to any corporation. This is especially applicable to the old Duluth & Winnipeg bill that is liable to be revived. The state land should be kept to benefit the citizens.—Albert Lea Enterprise.

A Missouri justice of the peace fined two saloon keepers $20 each for selling liquor to a minor and then fined the minor $60 for buying the stuff. The transaction lacked just $10 of being even handed justice but it will do—for Missouri, Often as in this case the drinker is particeps criminis with the saloon keeper in violating the liquor law and as richly deserving of punishment.—Mankato Ledger.

At the christmas tree meeting las tree meeting last Friday evening at the school house it was resolved to have a tree and entertainment on Christmas eve. Mrs. C. G. Rapp, Mrs. S Harris Mrs Dan'l Patterson, Miss Carrie Stranahan, W. A. Arthur, E. H. Stranahan, J. L. Johnson and J. M. Hanson were chosen as a committee on arrangements and decoration, and Cora Harris Minnie Olson and Katie Bergland were chosen as a committee on finance for subscriptions, Every one should contribute liberally and make it a success

Washington, Dec. 10.— The two most important individuals to-day in the United States, probably, are Senators Peffer of Kansas and Kyle of South Dakota. From all that can be gathered, they will hold the balance of power between the two great parties in the senate of the United States after the 4th of March next; and may be called upon to take the vast responsibility of deciding whether tariff revision shall take place at all, and if so what shall be the character of such revision—whether the laws shall be so changed as to still keep the protective principle active, or whether the Democratic doctrine of tariff for revenue only shall for the future prevail.

An effort to secure an expression of opinion from each of these gentlemen has ignominiously failed. One (Peffer) sits upon the Republican and one (Kyle) upon the Democratic side of the chamber. One votes generally with the Republicans on partisan issues and one with the Democrats. Both, however, have manifested strong free trade tendencies, and it is not improbable that they will each cast their fortunes with the Democracy on the tariff issue.—St. Paul News.

Knute Nelson ran 13,531 votes behind the national Republican ticket; Lawler ran 5895 behind the national Democratic ticket and Dean 1850 behind the national Prohibition ticket, but Donnelly ran 9387 votes ahead of the national People's ticket. Either Messrs. Nelson, Lawler and Dean are weaker than their party, Mr. Donnelly is stronger than his party, or else there are many voters in Minnesota who don't believe in People's party vagaries, who at the same time take no stock in the present management of the other three parties, And no doubt many have voted for both Mr. Nelson and Mr. Lawler who would have been glad to vote for a third party governor if a reliable man had been put up upon a practical platform. Those of our politicians who fancy that the People's party is dead had better remember that there is but one way to kill the People's party and that is to serve the people as the people want to be served and not after the dictates of self-constituted bosses.—Midway News (Rep.).

THE DEBATING CLUB.

The weekly meeting of the debating club was held at the school house on last Friday evening and a good sized crowd was in attendance, An interesting program consisting of declamations and singing was rendered, The debate on the subject, Resolved that the Indian has suffered more at the hands of the Whites than the Negroes, was well discussed by a number of members, the judges giving the dicision in favor of the negative. For next Friday evening they have selected as the subject the following question: Resolved that marriage is a failure. An interesting program is being prepared and you will miss a treat if you do not attend.

It has been rumored that the Great Northern has secured controll of the Duluth & Winnipeg Railroad and that the Great Northern opposition being withdrawn, the land grant bill would pass the legislature this winter. Lately however the Great Northern deny that they own the road, If the land grant comes up again this winter and does not meet with opposition from the Great Northern, it will be certain that the road has been secured. It matters but little however who owns the road, the state has no business to give a million acres of land to any railroad corporation.

Notice To Farmers.

We will pay you cash for hides, hay barley, oats, cord wood, good steers or anything marketable that you have to sell.

E. T. Spafford & Co.

Norman County Herald: It has been rumored that Henry Feig intends to contest the election of Bowen to congress. One of the points raised by him is that in some counties the vote was cast for H. E. Bowen and in others Halvor E. Bowen and he wants one or the other thrown out. As long as no other candidate of the same name appeared on the ticket this seems too flimsy for consideration. It is stated however that if Feig succeeds in capturing the position of chief clerk at the next session of the legislature he will give up the contesting business.

CHEAP EXCURSIONS TO CANADA

Low round trip tickets will be on sale by the Great Northern from Crookston Grand Forks and stations north to boundary and west to Minot, to points in Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick Nova Scotia, on Nov. 27th, Dec, 6th Dec 13th to 22nd inclusive, and Dec 27th 1892. Tickets good for 90 days with transit limits of 15 days each way, going and returning, This will allow holders to stop in the Twin Cities, in Chicago to see the wonderful buildings of the World's Fair, and other points enroute.

Extension of time beyond 90 days made at small additional cost. For particulars and tickets see S. S. Buzza agent at St. Hilaire.

Karl Skjpstad has brought a damage suit against the Great Northern Railroad Co, for putting him off the St. Hilaire train last November. According to his version he purchased at that time a ticket entitling him to a first class passage from St, Hilaire to Crookston and upon boarding the train he found that a combination bagage and smoker was the only substitute for a coach on the train. This car being crowded; a large majority of the passengers were obliged to stand. When the conductor appeared to collect the tickets Mr. Skjpstad informed him that he had a first-class ticket and unless he was furnished with a seat he would not give it up. When the conductor found that the man was not to be dissuaded from his purpose the train was stopped and he was put off, He has now employed H. Steenerson as his attorney and will enter suit against the company for not fulfilling the requirements of the law.—Crookston Times.

Some men know how to ne real mean A story is going around about a man whose wife went visiting and would not listen to his appeals to come home before her visit was out. But he fooled her at last. He took a copy of his home paper and carefully clipped out just one item then sent the paper to her. She wrote and asked him what the item was about that he had clipped out, and he refused to tell her. The scheme worked admirably and in less than a week she was at home to find out what had happened that her husband did not want her to know about.—Ex.

The discussion at Washington of the proposition to change the date for the meeting of congress, it is to be hoped, will have good results. A good result will be to do away with the present silly custom of having a congress elected in November one year and not meet in regular session until the December of the following year, The only term by which to characterize this arrangement is imbecility. A house chosen in November ought to assemble as soon thereafter as possible. They were chosen on a certain issue and ought to meet to take action on such issue, The congress elected in November ought to meet within 30 days. If not, why not?—Minneapolis Journal.

Council Proceedings

Regular meeting of council, all members present except Dainard and Fricker

Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

On motion S M. Hoff was appointed president pro-tem.

The following bills were allowed.

C. G. Rapp board of election	$9.00
Petter Hall " "	3.00
B. E. Burkee " "	9.00
C. W. Peters " "	9.00
C. Hall marshall salery	9.00
S. M, Hoff merchandise	4.75

Moved to adjourn until the next regular meeting.

J. L. Johnson
Village Recorder.

INTERESTING ITEM.

GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY LINE

It is to the interest of parties contemplating going east to consider the great advantages the Great Northern offers them through its fast passenger service to St. Paul and to all points west to the Pacific coast, their free colonist cars, and magnificent Dining and Sleeping cars. The shortest route, close connections, quickest time and fare as low as the lowest, Any information cheerfully given,

S. S. Buzza
Agent.

CHATTLE LOANS

I am prepared to loan money on chattle security at reasonable rates. One years time. Call On

H. E. IVES.

WANTED. Salesmen. Local and Traveling, To represent our well known house. You need no capital to represent a firm that warrants nursery stock first-class and true to name. WORK ALL THE YEAR. $100 per month to the right man. Apply quick stating age. L. L. MAY & CO.
Nurserymen, Florists and Seeds men,
St. Paul Minn.
(This house is responsible.)

MARLIN SAFETY REPEATING RIFLES

Made in all styles and sizes. Lightest, strongest, easiest working, safest, simplest, most accurate, most compact, and most modern. For sale by all dealers in arms. Catalogues mailed free by

The Marlin Fire Arms Co.,
NEW HAVEN, CONN., U. S. A.

All who are indebted to S. M. Hoff are requested to call and settle up at once or the debt will be collected by law.

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
Crookston Minn December 5 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on January 24 1893 viz:

Daniel Johnson H D 12053 for the Lot 5 Sec. 6 and Lot 1 Sec 7 Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land viz:

J. A. Sjortrom Anton Sundahl J. A. Peterson. K. Sundahl all of St. Hilaire, Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn. Dec. 7 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on January 26 1893 viz: Charles Gomoll H D 11784 for the SE ¼ Sec 25 Tp 152 R 45.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land viz:

Gotlieb Gerlach, August Morel, Charles Peterson Henry Leppert all of Wylie Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn Oct. 29 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on Dec. 20 1892 viz:

Peter Anderson H D 12740 for the W ½ NW ¼ and W ½ SW ¼ Sec 2 Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Ole J. Johnson, Ole J. Hegg, Halvor T Omot, Knut Steen all of St. Hilaire Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn. November 1 1892

Notice is hereby given that he following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and has said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver of the U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn, on December 15 1892. viz:

A. P. Sandberg administrator of estate of Peter G. Allsson deceased H D 11173 for the NW ¼ Sec. 20 Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land viz:

J. Johnson, Haakon Johnson, J. Lind, E. Petterson all of St, Hilaire Polk Co. Minn,

HUGH THOMPJON Register.

CLOSING OUT SALE!

At E M Hoff's Store

My whole stock of

Dry Goods and Notions Gents Furnshing, Goods $5,000 worth of ready made clothing Foot wear of all kinds and everything belonging to a full stocked general merchandise store will be closed out at cost in the next 90 days.

COME EVERY BODY

AND

SECURE GOOD BARGAINS.

E. M. HOFF

CROWN ROLLER MILL.

EQUIPPED WITH THE LATEST AND BES

IMPROVED MACHINERY.

Manufactures the well known
PERFECTION FANCY PATEN
and WHITE ROSEFLOUR.
Rye and Feed mill in connection.
Flour and Feed always kept on hand
Custom work a specialty.
FRICKER & WELCH Pro

ILAIRE MINNES

CHAS G. RAPP.

A large and complete line of

General Merchandise

CONSISTING OF

Dry Goods, Groceries, Clothi

Boots & Shoes, Hats & Caps

Notions

THE ST. HILAIRE SPECTATOR.
ISSUED EVERY WEDNESDAY EVENIN.
H. E. IVES, Propr.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE:
In Advance, $1,50 Per Yer
Not in Advance, $2.00 Per Year

Entered in The Post Office at St. Hilaire, as Second Class Mail Matter.

WEDNESDAY December 14 1892

ROMANCE IN LITERATURE.

He Tried the Profession, but 'Twas Not as a Writer That He Succeeded.

There is a well known gentleman in this city who, when a young man at college, fell in love with a professor's daughter. Of course there is nothing remarkable about that. Both were young, and she was beautiful. The professor was poor, but he was wise. There is nothing remarkable about that. Wisdom is often associated with poverty, especially that sort of wisdom that comes from books. The young man was also poor, but he was not wise—he wanted to marry the girl right off. And there was nothing remarkable about that. But the poor, wise professor told the poor, unwise young man:

"Go forth; go and do something. I don't care what you do, but go and do it. Then we'll see about the girl. If she really thinks she can't get along without you she won't mind waiting a year or two. If she won't wait you won't want her."

The poor, unwise young man filed the usual demurrer, but it was promptly overruled. Then he went forth.

The first thing he did was to go and buy a package of cigarettes and sit down and think. He did so much thinking of this kind that he nearly starved to death. Then he tried something else and picked up two dollars a week and twenty dollars' worth of self respect. But he didn't see any opening for matrimony and tried something else. This too failed. Then he tried something else.

The professor said he was a shiftless fellow—a rolling stone.

The daughter said he was a noble young fellow and would get there.

The young man had that girl in his eye all the time. Yet he seemed to monkey with the great world. He tried literature—newspaper literature.

The professor said that settled it.

So did the girl.

It did settle it, for the young man, now unwise and young no longer, grew to fame and wealth as the head of a great syndicate, makes $15,000 a year, married the professor's daughter and hires the professor at fifteen dollars a week to kill copy.—New York Herald.

Why He Smiled a Sickly Smile.

One of the grain operators on the Chicago board of trade was married a short time ago, and of course the first time he appeared on the board after his honeymoon he was subjected to many congratulations and much good natured bantering. One of his friends, after congratulating him, suddenly reached over and took a long brown hair from his shoulder.

"Looks bad in a married man, Ticker," he exclaimed, holding it up to the light.

"Oh, that's all right," said Ticker smiling; "it's my wife's."

"No, no, that won't do," responded the friend; "your wife's hair is darker than that."

This made Ticker a trifle angry, and he exclaimed excitedly: "I tell you it is my wife's. I guess I know my wife's hair when I see it."

"Well, you certainly ought to," said the friend, gazing intently at it. "But are you sure it's your wife's?"

"Sure? Of course I am. Why do you ask?"

"Oh, I thought perhaps there might be a mistake. You see, I found it on Brown's shoulder just before I saw you."

Ticker's smile was a sickly one.—New York Mercury.

An Unprofessional Mistake.

Doctor (entering hurriedly)—Tell me, Salmon—tell me and quell this suspense—how is your wife today?

Salmon—Why, my dear doctor, what is the matter? You are all of a tremble.

Doctor—Oh, Salmon, my good friend, why shouldn't I be? It is twelve hours since I made my last visit here, and I have just discovered that I have given her the wrong medicine. Oh, how——

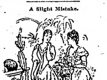
Salmon—Ha, ha! I thought there must have been some mistake! She got up this morning as well and hearty as ever.—Boston Courier.

A Friend in Need.

"I appear to have met with a sudden reverse," mused the central figure in the turkey raffle as the winner seized him by the legs and started for home.

"Oh, cheer up," said the latter, "I'll give you a good inside position."—Detroit Tribune.

A Slight Mistake.



Gladys—What a glorious chrysanthemum that is over behind that cactus in the conservatory!

Marie—Hus-sh! That's Count Longlox Blondierre, the new Hungarian pianist. His back's toward us.—Chicago News-Record.

Modern Improvements.

Mr. De Flatt—It's cold as Greenland here this morning. I wonder why the heat hasn't been turned up?

Mrs. De Flatt—I presume the janitor's family are not too warm yet.—New York Weekly.

RAILROAD JOTTINGS.

Francis I. Gowen has been appointed chief assistant general solicitor of the Philadelphia and Reading railroad.

The auditing department of the Scioto valley division of the Norfolk and Western has been removed from Columbus, O., to Roanoke, Va.

A station known as Rolders has been established on the Schuylkill and Susquehanna branch of the Philadelphia and Reading railroad.

The London and Northwestern locomotive "Charles Dickens" for years has taken a train daily from Manchester to London and back, a distance of 372 miles, or 186 miles in each direction.

The decision of the Nickle Plate to cater to through passenger traffic is believed to be but the first move in increasing the train service of the road so as to make it one of the great through lines.

A contract has been made by which the Adams Express company will operate on the Queen and Crescent route as the successor of the United States Express company, which in competition was outbid by the Adams.

Superintendent George King, of the Pennsylvania's subordinate division from Lochiel to Marysville was highly complimented by the inspection party after its late trip over the road. It is the best subdivision between Harrisburg and Altoona.

A large and substantial bridge is being built across the Missouri river at Sioux City by the reorganized Pacific Short Line Bridge company. Its cost will be $1,000,000, and it will be open for use of all railroads for toll charges in nine months.

STAGE GLINTS.

Lotta has recovered her health sufficiently to be about.

Henry C. De Mille is engaged on a play of southern life.

Lelia Vane has been engaged by Manager Charles Frohman.

"The Lost Paradise" will be acted in London at the Adelphi theater on Dec. 12.

Hattie Harvey has been engaged by Roland Reed as the principal ingenue of his company.

"The Smugglers," Arnold Wolford's new scenic melodrama, will open its tour at Chicago, Jan. 1.

The report that Gilmore's band was about to disband seems to have arisen from the fact that it is about to be reorganized.

William Gillette's ill health has necessitated the postponement of his "Ninety Days After Date" from January until February.

It is among the possibilities that Gracie Emmett will be starred by Manager Sidney R. Ellis in "Nora Machree," the late Sadie Scanlan's play.

Hayden Coffin and Mrs. Adelaide De Lew were married in Cincinnati. Mr. Coffin is the leading baritone of the Lillian Russell Opera company.

J. B. Polk has reconsidered his reported determination to retire. He will play an important part in Helen Barry's production of "The Duchess."

Helen Barry's new play, "The Duchess," by Paul M. Potter, will be produced at the National theater, Washington, on Dec. 10. Miss Barry will be managed by A. M. Palmer.

Wooden Legs.

Who first invented wooden legs? Vulcan was a cripple, and in consequence of his difficulty in walking he is said to have made himself an artificial support of gold; but, as Mr. Thoms pointed out long ago, gold is not for every cripple, and every myth is backed by reality. Again, the devil, as represented in the drawings and engravings of the Middle Ages, is a compound of Pluto and Vulcan. The latter was ejected from Olympus, the devil was cast out of heaven. Vulcan was frequently figured with a beard and pointed cap.

In the edition of Tyndale's New Testament printed by Jugge in 1552 there is a wood cut representing the devil sowing tares, and wearing not only the Vulcanian beard and pointed cap, but also a wooden leg. Another mediæval representation of the devil with a wooden leg may be found in one of the paintings on the panels of the pulpit in the ancient little church of Heligoland. It is only fair, however, to point out that the artificial support in the Tyndale wood cut resembles more a clumsy, one legged stool, upon which the lame leg appears to be doubled up at the knee, than a substituted wooden limb. After all this identification, so far as regards costume and lameness, of the mediæval devil and the ancient Vulcan, although it opens up a curious field of speculation to those who are learned in matters of comparative mythology, yet throws no certain light on the question as to when the wooden leg as we know it—a complete artificial substitute for a lost limb—was first invented.—All the Year Round.

His Burden.

Mrs. Plankington—Can I get that new gown I spoke of the other day?

Plankington—No; I guess not, dear. I've got to spend an awful lot of money just now.

Mrs. Plankington (sobbing)—But you said last week I could have it.

Plankington—I know it, but since then one of my principal saleeman is going to get married.—Cloak Review.

WE WANT YOU

to act as our agent. We furnish an expensive outfit and all you need free. It costs nothing to try the business. We will treat you well, and help you to earn ten times ordinary wages. Both sexes of all ages can live at home and work in spare time, or all the time. Any one any where can earn a great deal of money. Many have made Two Hundred Dollars a Month. No class of people in the world are making so much money without capital as those at work for us. Business pleasant, strictly honorable, and pays better than any other offered to agents. You have a clear field, with no competition. We equip you with everything, and supply printed directions for beginners which, if obeyed faithfully, will bring more money than will any other business. Improve your prospects! Why not? You can do so easily and surely at work for us. Reasonable industry only necessary for absolute success. Pamphlet circular giving every particular is sent free to all. Delay not in sending for it.

GEORGE STINSON & CO.,
Box No. 488, Portland, Me.

DO YOU WANT TO ADOPT A BABY?

Maybe you think this is a new business, sending out babies on application; it has been done before, however, but never have those furnished been so near the original samples as this one. Everyone will exclaim, "Well! that's the sweetest baby I ever saw!" This little black-and-white engraving can give you but a faint idea of the exquisite original, which we propose to send to you, transportation paid. The little darling rests against a pillow, and is in the act of drawing off its pink sock, the mate of which has been pulled off and flung aside with a triumphant coo. The flesh tints are perfect, and the eyes follow you, no matter where you stand. The exquisite reproductions of this greatest painting of Ida Waugh (the most celebrated of modern painters of baby life) are to be given to those who subscribe to Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893. The reproductions cannot be told from the original, which cost $400, and are the same size (17x22 inches). The baby is life size, and absolutely lifelike. We have also in preparation, to present to our subscribers during 1893, other great pictures by such artists as Percy Moran, Maud Humphrey, Louis Deschamps, and others of world-wide renown. Take only two examples of what we did during the past year, "A Yard of Pansies," and "A White House Orchid" by the wife of President Harrison, and you will see what our promises mean.

"I'M A DAISY."

Those who subscribe for Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893 will possess a gallery of exquisite works of art of great value, besides a Magazine that cannot be equaled by any in the world for its beautiful illustrations and subject matter, that will keep everyone posted on all the topics of the day, and all the fads and different items of interest about the household, besides furnishing interesting reading matter, both grave and gay, for the whole family; and while Demorest's is not a fashion Magazine, its fashion pages are perfect, and we give you, free of cost, all the patterns you wish to use during the year, and in any size you choose. Send in your subscription at once, only $2, and you will really get over $25 in value. Address the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York. If you are unacquainted with the Magazine, send 10 cents for a specimen copy.

Ask Your Dealer For FEATHERBONE
WHIPS.
FEATHERBONE is made from Enameled Quills—nature's own toughest, and strongest elastic material. Best wearing whips made for 25c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50. All styles for Buggy, Cart, Track Team and Riding. Be sure and ask for a FEATHERBONE!
FOR SALE BY
S. M. HOFF

Going to Buy
A Dictionary?
GET THE BEST,
Webster's International.
A Choice Gift
A Grand Family Educator
A Library in Itself
The Standard Authority
WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY
SOLD BY ALL BOOKSELLERS.
The International is a new book from cover to cover, fully abreast of the times, and is the successor of the authentic "Unabridged." Ten years were spent in revising, 100 editors employed and over $300,000 expended before the first copy was printed.
Do not buy reprints of obsolete and comparatively worthless editions.
Send for free pamphlet containing specimen pages and full particulars.
G. & C. MERRIAM CO., Publishers,
SPRINGFIELD, MASS., U. S. A.

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn. Nov. 25 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and said proof will be made before U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on Jany 25 1893 viz:

Berent I. Konlog HD 12325 for the SW¼ Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of said land viz:

James Evenson, Anton Peterson, Julius Nelson, Nels Evenson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON, Register.

U. S. LAND OFFICE.
Crookston, Minn., Nov. 17 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn on December 29 1892, viz:

Peter E. Engh HD 12282 for the NW ¼ Sec. 23 Tp 152 R. 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Halvor Aamodt, Ole J. Hegg Peter Anderson, Ole J. Johnson, all of St. Hilaire Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn., Nov. 25 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver, U. S Land Office at Crookston Minn on Jany. 6 1893 viz:

Julius Nelson HD 11890 for the S W ¼ sec. 8 Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove her continuous residence upon, and cultivation of said land viz;

James Evenson B. I. Konlog, Nels Evenson Anton Peterson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

E. T. SPAFFORD S. M. DAINARD
E. T. SPAFFORD & CO.
DEALERS IN
LUMBER, LATH AND SHINGLES.
A complete stock of all kinds of Lumber Lath, Shingles, Mouldings, Building Paper Sash, Doors and Screens, Lime, Cement Stucco, Plastering Hair, Brick etc. always on hand at the lowest market prices.
S. M. Dainard, Manager.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE, MINN

E. T. SPAFFORD & CO.
WILL ALWAYS PAY THE
HIGHEST MARKET PRICES
FOR
All kinds of
CATTLE.
Also for Cord wood, Hay, Oats, Barley and flax.
Ground Feed for Sale
S. M. DAINARD.
Manager.

Reserved For
THE
ST. HILAIRE
TOWNSITE
COMPANY

W. A. ARTHUR.
DEALER IN
FRUITS, CONFECTIONARY
TOBACCO AND CIGARS.
STATIONARY OF ALL KINDS
Lunch Counter
Warm meals at all hours.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE MINNESOTA

JUSTUS L. JOHNSON
DEALER IN
pure medicines Fancy articles, perfumer and stationery, paints oils aud dye stuffs.
Cigars, Candy, Fruit and Soft Drinks always on hand.
Barbershop in connection
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE

I CAN SAVE YOU
MONEY
If you wish to make
REAL ESTATE
LOANS.
For full particulars call on or address
H. E. IVES.
SPECTATOR OFFICE ST. HILAIRE.

HOLMES BRO'S
Dealers in
HARDWARE, TINWARE,
We are carrying a heavy and complete line of Heating and Cooking stoves.
GOOD GOODS LOW PRICES.
CALL ON US FOR BARGAINS
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE MINN.

FARMERS STORE
NEW GOODS AT HARD PAN PRICES.
If you want to save money do your trading with
HALL BROS.
DEALER IN
Dry Goods, Groceries
Notions.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE

S. M. HOFF
DEALER IN
HARDWARE
A new and complete stock of all kinds of Hardware, Tinware, Stoves, Fencing wire, Nails, in fact everything usuay kept in a first-class Hardware Store,
AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES
Call and examine Goods
and Get Our Prices.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE

DR PRICE'S Cream Baking Powder.
The only Pure Cream of Tartar Powder.—No Ammonia; No Alum.
Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

First friend: "Heard Old Smithson's going to be married for the fourth time. Must cost him something for licenses!"

Second ditto: "Think he ought to apply for a season ticket!"

He finds it "a wonderful cure for a bad cough." Mr. Wm. F. Anderson, 341 Water St., New York City, N. Y., gives this indorsement: "I have found Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup the wonderful cure it is represented to be. It is just the thing for a bad cough."

Give the fowls some green—cabbage, chopped clover; raw potatoes are better than nothing in the vegetable line.

Mrs. Fannie Dignam, 141 Mott St., New York City, makes a miraculous cure of her rheumatism. She writes: "I owe unspeakable and never to be forgotten gratitude to Salvation Oil. It made a miraculous cure of my rheumatism."

Do not ship poor, thin turkeys. They sell slow, and at poor prices.

"How I Wrote Ben Hur," told by General Lew Wallace, is one scrap from the voluminous and superb program of eminent writers and interesting articles which The Youth's Companion announces. It retains its place in 550,000 families by the versatility and the instructiveness of its general articles, the high character of all its stories, the brightness of its illustrations. Then it comes every week and one gets a great deal for $1.75 a year. The price sent at once will entitle you to the paper to Jan. 1894. Address THE YOUTH'S COMPANION, Boston, Mass.

It is time things were tucked in for winter.

Throat diseases commence with a Cough, Cold, or Sore Throat. "Brown's Bronchial Troches" give immediate relief. Sold only in boxes. Price 25cts.

The thing that pleases you shows your character.

She's Off!

Who or what? Why the good ship——, and if there is a passenger on board of her unprovided with that grand preventive of sea sickness and all disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, all we have to say is, he or she is very unthoughtful. There is nothing comparable to this medicine in cases of malarial fever, rheumatism, nervousness and loss of strength.

Improved farming improves the farm.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.
F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
Sold by Druggists, 75c.

No Use for Him

He—Can I hope for another waltz this evening?

She—Won't it make your wife jealous?

He—Not at all.

She—I'm afraid my card is full to-night.

Perhaps.

"Love indeed is blind," said the moralizer.

"Perhaps that is why love does not mind turning out the gas," suggested the demoralizer.

Grief.

Penelope—What are you crying about, Nellie?

Nellie—Jack.

Penelope—What has he done?

Nellie—He has been playing football and has spoiled his aristocratic face.

At the Telephone.

"Hello, central. I've asked for number eleven four times. Why the devil don't you give it to me?"

"I will. Here it is."

And the girl gave him 44—Truth.

"August Flower"

"I am happy to state to you and to suffering humanity, that my wife has used your wonderful remedy, August Flower, for sick headache and palpitation of the heart, with satisfactory results. For several years she has been a great sufferer, has been under the treatment of eminent physicians in this city and Boston, and found little relief. She was induced to try August Flower, which gave immedaite relief. We cannot say to much for it." L. C. Frost, Springfield, Mass.

UNIVERSITY Commerce AND FINANCE.
619-21 NICOLLET AVE., MINNEAPOLIS.
Students are flocking in. It is becoming generally known that this Institution qualifies its students to merit and receive permanent and remunerative employment. Earnest, painstaking, efficient teachers in English, Business and Shorthand branches. Send for artistic prospectus. HOWARD L. RUCKER, Presit.
GOOD BOARD and ROOM $2.50 per week.

TELEGRAPHY
AND ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING
Taught by practical Telegraphers and Electricians. No department of a Business College, but a thorough special course. Circulars Free. McAllister's School of Telegraphy, 619 Nicollet Av., Minneapolis, Minn.

WAGES LOW PRICES CHEAP.

How Americans a Hundred Years Ago Lived on Fifty Cents a Day.

The Department of Agriculture is about to publish an interesting report, comparing the cost of living early in this century with what it is now. It exhibits vividly the contrast between the poverty of primitive agriculture and the progress in civilization and wealth resulting from high development of all the possibilities of land and labor in rural industrial arts and industries. The small wages paid in those days are as surprising as the low prices of commodites of all sorts.

Game was abundant early in the century and, therefore cheap. Venison cost only 3½ cents a pound. Bear meat was very slightly higher. Pigeons were in extraordinary abundance, selling at a little more than 1 cent apiece. Elderly readers will remember the flights of flocks of pigeons which darkened the skies even as late as fifty years ago. Shad was very cheap, costing only 4 cents each. Owing to the plentiful supply of game tanned skins were low in price. A deerskin fetched about $1.17, while a bearskin worth from $1 to $2. Milk sold at 2 cents a quart, and butter 13 cents a pound. Apples were from 12½ cents to 25 cents a bushel but by 1823 they had reached 50 cents.

Farm wages were only about one-third of what they are now, ranging from 33 cents to 50 cents compensation of well-grown lads. One hundred years ago the remuneration of a boy for doing "chores," such as cutting wood and foddering horses, for one year, was ordinarily $5. The use of a pair of oxen for a day cost 25 cents, while the use of a cow for one year cost $3. It cost 60 cents to make a pair of shoes. The price of a pair of moccasins was 27 cents. Board was only $1 a week.

That was the day of individual and isolated effort, antedating the era of aggregation in factories, classification and division of labor and invention of labor-saving processes and appliances. Prices of farm products fluctuated greatly, according to local scarcity, which could not be mitigated by distribution from regions of plenty. If there were big crops they could not be sold; if partial failures, there was almost nothing to sell. Every locality, in its industries and products, existed for and by itself, having no relation with other communities; therefore, the surplus production of each farm was small, the inducement to produce being wanting, and there was very little money to purchase anything more than the bare necessaries. The industrious family had an abundance of everything that it could grow, such clothing as the loom of the household could produce, such furniture as could be made on the place or in the neighborhood, and little else.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Seasickness Caused by High Railroad Speed.

The bodily effect of riding in extremely fast trains, says the New York Times, must be of interest to the people in a country where trains are running faster and faster every year. The effect of a collision, or even an accident, that under the circumstances would be trifling, perhaps it will be better not to consider, at any rate, this fast New York Central train run along smoothly that its great speed is hardly noticed, and any thought of danger soon disappears. But there is one curious effect that we may expect to see intensified when our fast expresses begin to average a hundred miles an hour instead of fifty-two and one-third miles. That is a touch of seasickness. It is so slight in this case as to be hardly worth considering, except as a foretaste of what we may expect in the still faster trains of the future. We were inclined to attribute it to an unusually early start in the morning to catch this fast train, but when we were asked by a number of persons in Richfield whether the fast train made us seasick, and were told that it often had that effect, we understood the meaning of the little dizziness that went off when we landed.

Two of Them.

Mrs. Chiggers after a quarrel—Abel, you're a fool!

Mr. Chiggers—Well didn't you know it before we were married?

"No—yes."

"Then what did you marry me for?"

(Melting) "Because I was a fool, too, dear."—Chicago Tribune.

"HITS."
OLD, CHRONIC PAINS SUCCUMB TO
ST. JACOBS OIL
IT
HITS
THE SPOT
AND CURES.

Asthma The African Kola Plant, discovered in Congo, West Africa, is Nature's Sure Cure for Asthma. Cure Guaranteed or No Pay. Export Office, 1164 Broadway, New York. For Large Trial Case, Free by Mail, address KOLA IMPORTING CO., 132 Vine St., Cincinnati, O.

"WELL BRED, SOON WED." GIRLS WHO USE
SAPOLIO
ARE QUICKLY MARRIED. TRY IT IN YOUR NEXT HOUSE-CLEANING.

SCHEMES ARE DISCUSSED

SEVERAL MORE SILVER PLANS PRESENTED.

Additional Proposals Are Considered by the Committee of the Monetary Congress—Germany Adheres to the Gold Standard.

Gold and Silver.

Brussels, Dec. 13.—At its meeting today the special committee of the monetary congress discussed at length the proposals of G. F. Tietgen, Danish delegate, M. Allard, Belgian delegate, and Sir William Houldworth, English delegate. The majority of the committee objected to Sir William Houldworth's proposals for a bi-metallic union of the nations with these conditions: That their mints should receive silver bullion in not less quantities than a fixed minimum against receipts, noting quantity and value, at a price determined by international agreement, and that these receipts circulate as money and be redeemable at the bearer's demand." The objections to this plan were that it meant the creation of a new legal tender based upon silver, which the public would hasten to abandon if silver continued to fall, and would have to be redeemed with bullion if silver rose. M. Fourelle, French delegate, moved an amendment to the plan that international legislation be made to facilitate the deposits of silver and the exchange of certificates, which would then be negotiable in the same manner as commercial warrants. The committee adjourned without taking action.

An Election Echo.

Washington, Dec. 13.—In the house today Mr. Cummings (Dem.) of New York offered for reference a resolution reciting an editorial in the New York Sun of the 30th ult., headed "Outrage by the Post-office." This editorial charges that clerks in the department at Washington are in the habit of excluding newspapers from the privilege of being carried in the mails as second-class matter without previous notice to the publisher that such action is intended, and further that "it has been discovered that there are persons residing at the national capital who will attempt the adjustment of difficulties of this sort for a money consideration and seek employment on the score of influence possessed with persons occupying responsible positions."

"And whereas," continues the recitation, "it is further stated in said editorial article that the ostensible reason for interference with the distribution of trade journals is a desire to keep the mails from being loaded down with advertising-matter for which the people have not subscribed; yet, during the months that preceded the election many million campaign documents were carried in the mails at rates not allowed to publications issued for business purposes or in the interest of such causes as temperance or religion." It is again recited that "men holding important office under the administration have received the same privileges permitted to campaign committees, but pronounced illegal when ordinary citizens would seek for them. The postmaster general and the superintendent of the census have each taken personal advantage of the opportunity to use the mails in a manner that the department pronounces illegal for other citizens."

It is resolved that "the committee on post-offices and post roads be directed to investigate the charges above set forth, and to that end call before them Hon. John Wanamaker, postmaster general of the United States, and demand an explanation thereof."

Suffocated By Gas.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Special, Dec. 13.—One man dead and a man and a woman dying is the result of the door of a base burner being left open and the drafts closed. Discovery of the disaster was not made until 1 o'clock this afternoon, when H. G. Hown, who had business with Dr. Borge and failing to find him at his office went to his boarding house. On rapping there for admission and getting no response he pushed the door in. He was met by a strong odor of coal gas in the room off from the dining room. He saw Mrs. Hoff unconscious and breathing with the greatest difficulty. He ran up stairs to the doctor's room and found him dead. The body was cold, and the doctor had apparently been dead for several hours. In the next room was G. P. Hage, of the lumber firm of Jensen & Hage. He was breathing with great labor, but after the windows had been opened a few minutes breathed easier. Late to-night physicians who have worked all the afternoon over Mrs. Hoff and Mrs. Hage say the chances for recovery are very slim. When Mr. Hown entered the house he found the door to the coal stove partly open. All the drafts were shut and the windows closed. Dr. Borge came here a year ago last October from Christiana, Norway. He was thirty years of age. A cablegram has been sent to his people in Norway, and until word is received the doctors of this city will have charge of the body. The coroner will hold no inquest.

Baron Reinach's Death.

Paris, Dec. 13—The Temps to-day states that the first examination of the remains of Baron Reinach proves that he died from the effect of poison and not from apoplexy, which was at first given as the cause of death. The committee to-day examined an accountant employed in the De Reinach banking house. The witness declared that he had never met with the checks that are said to bear the endorsement of men in political life. M. Souligen, an engineer, was then called. He testified in denial of the charge made by M. Chantagrol that the witness acting under instructions from M. de Lesseps attempted to buy his vote. M. Souligen admitted, however, that upon one occasion while chatting with M. Chantagrol, the Panama subject was discussed and the witness spoke of the price that was to be paid for the conscience of the members of the chamber of deputies, but declared he was only joking.

In the senate to-day M. Lacombe questioned the government as to its attitude towards the Panama investigation. M. Bourgeois, minister of justice, declared, amid the cheers of the supporters of the government, that he desired the most complete and searching light to be thrown upon the affairs of the company.

M. Lacour offered a resolution of confidence in the government which was adopted—228 to 14.

A Water Main Burst.

Chicago, Dec. 13.—Widespread damage was caused by the bursting of a large water main at Fifth avenue and Charles Place today. Two blocks of cottages below grade were flooded, many of the occupants, including several who are bedridden, having narrow escapes. All are temporarily homeless. The consolidated bottling company suffer a loss of $20,000 by the flooding in their immense basement. A score of other firms were damaged $1,000 or $10,000 each. Wash day operations and factory work were, owing to the accident, suspended throughout the entire section of the West side, south of Taylor street.

Aquafied Its Stocks.

Trenton, N. J., Dec. 13.—The National Cordage company to-day filed a certificate at the secretary of state's office for an increase of its capital stock by the addition of $5,000,000 common stock. This gives a total of $25,000,000, of which $5,000,000 is preferred stock. The increase was decided upon at a meeting of the board of directors Dec. 6.

A River of Fire.

Lancaster, Pa., Dec. 13.—An immense quantity of oil escaped from a break in the Crescent Oil Pipe company's line in Manor township yesterday, flowing into Miller's Run. Hunters set fire to the oil and the surface of the creek was a mass of flame in an incredibly short time. The entire run bore the appearance of a furnace, the flames mounting up fifty to a hundred feet. Large trees along the banks were destroyed in a few minutes, and the heat was so intense that limestone ledges were reduced to a chalky mass in an incredibly short time. Pipe line employes finally smothered the flames and repaired the leak in the pipe. The loss is large.

Anti-Option Bill.

Washington, Special—C. Woods Davis of Kansas, who has been more active than any other man in his efforts to secure the enactment of the Hatch-Washburn anti-option bill, received telegrams to-day from members of the legislature of South Carolina and Alabama. The one from South Carolina stated that the senate had passed resolutions in favor of the anti-option bill by an almost unanimous vote. Alabama reported that the committee had reported a similar resolution favorably by an almost unanimous [illegible] Mr. Davis said that other legislatures [illegible] be heard from so favorably [illegible] delay in securing a vote on the anti-option [illegible] timent was drifting in that direction.

ELECTRICAL ETCHINGS.

Tersely Told.

Gov. Russell, the youthful chief magistrate of Massachusetts, is left-handed.

Representative-elect August T. Koerner of Meeker county and wife are at the Ryan.

Mr. Blaine's condition has improved very much since the relapse of last week, and he was better yesterday than he was Sunday.

Gen. Rosecrans is much better, but it is not probable that he will be allowed to leave his room for some time, under the most favorable conditions.

Gounod, the composer, says his first inspiration came while playing cards. The games he used to play while writing "Faust" have evidently gone out of fashion.

The condition of Mrs. Maybrick, who has been suffering with hemorrhages, has improved. She is now able to retain nourishment, and is, consequently, gaining strength.

Bishop Hennessey of St. Louis, it is believed, will soon be named as coadjutor, and hence successor of Archbishop Kenrick, whose age interferes with his performance of the duties of his office.

Prof. E. J. Phelps, of the Yale law school and, ex-minister to England, has been appointed to continue his work in connection with the Bering sea arbitration, which will compel him to give up his duties at Yale temporarily.

Count Tolstoi's object in coming to this country next spring is to "live with the farmers and study their agricultural methods." Admirers of the count will join in hoping that he will use a spy glass when investigating the great American mowing machine.

By his family name the earl of Dunraven, who is expected to come over after the America cup next year, would be plain Mr. Quin, but, in addition to the Dunraven title, he is earl of Mount Earl, Viscount Mount Earl, Viscount Adare, Baron Adare, Baron Kenry, and a baronet.

Ex-Gov. Garcelon of Maine, now eighty-five years old, is a rather spry old gentleman and fond of horses. He may often be seen behind a spirited young animal in the streets of Lewistown, and he handles the reins with skill. Twenty-three horses may be found in his stables.

A jury has decreed, at Bridgeport, Conn., that eccentric Miss Agnes Murray shall pay $1,750 to Miss Adelia W. Hubbell as damages for the pain and mortification wrought upon the plaintiff by the defendant's assaulting and battering ram—the bellwether of the flock—which died of suffocation in the skirts against which it had butted.

THE MARKETS.

CHICAGO—WHEAT—No. 2 spring, 72to72½c. No. 3 spring, 64to65½c. No. 2 red, 72 to 72½c.

CORN—No. 2, 41½c.

OATS—No. 2, 30½to30¾c.; No. 3 white, 32to33½c.

RYE—No. 2, 46½c.

BARLEY—No. 2, 64c.

MINNEAPOLIS—WHEAT—No. 1 hard 68½c. No. 1 Northern; 67c.; No. 2 Northern 59to61c.

CORN—No. 2 yellow, 41c.

OATS—No. 3 white, 31½c.

RYE—No. 2, 41to42c.

BARLEY—No. 3, 38to45c.

ST. PAUL—WHEAT—No. 1 hard, 68to69; No. 1 Northern, 67to68c.; No. 2 Northern 60 to62c.

CORN—No. 3, 37to38c.; No. 3 yellow, 38 to 39c.

OATS—No. 2, 31to31c; No 3 white, 31½ to 32c.; No 3, 28to31c.

BARLEY AND RYE—No. 3 barley, 40 to 43c No. 2 rye, 41to43c. malt, 60to70c.

GROUND FEED AND MILLSTUFFS—No. 1, $15.50; to 16. No 2, $16.00to16.50; No. 53 $16.50to$17.00; low grade, $12.50 to 13; corn meal, bolted, $20 to 23. do unbolted, $15.2, to $15.75; bran, bulk, $9.50 to $10.50.

LIVE STOCK.

ST. PAUL—Prime steers, $3.00 to 3.50; good steers, $2.50 to 3.00; prime cows, $2.25 to 2.65; good cows, $1.90 to 2.25; common to fair cows, $75 to 1.50; light veal calves, $3.50 to 4.25; heavy calves, $1.75 to 2.75; stockers, $1.35 to 2.10; feeders, $1.75 to 2.75; bulls, $1 to 2; hogs, $5.50 to 5.55.

CHICAGO—Beeves, $5.75 to 6.35; good to choice, $4.25 to 5.25; others, $2.80 to 4.15; Texans, $2.25 to $5.25; hogs rough and common, $5.50 to 5.60; packing and shipping, $4.70 to 6; butchers and mediums $5.80 to 5.95; fancy heavy, $6.05 to 6.12.

Gladstone May Come.

Chicago, Dec. 13.—Perhaps William E. Gladstone, the Grand Old Man of England, will be the orator of the day at the formal opening of the world's Columbian exposition May 1. Mr. Gladstone's name has been seriously considered by the ceremonies committee, and Secretary Culp believes the committee can secure the famous Briton. Some weeks ago the name of Emilio Castelar was prominently mentioned. That a Spaniard and so eminent an orator as Castelar should be chosen seemed eminently acceptable, but it was found that although Senor Castelar left nothing to be desired in the direction of eloquence, when it came to speaking English he was at a disadvantage. Mr. Gladstone, although past the eightieth mile post, is nevertheless still a sturdy and active man, and, it is said, would not hesitate to cross the ocean on an occasion like the opening of the world's fair. Secretary Culp said to-day that the board of control will probably take some action on the matter to-morrow.

Bismarck Talks.

Paris, Dec. 13.—The Matin prints an interview with Bismarck this morning. In part it is as follows:

"I have said farewell definitely to the government of men. If I had not been dismissed I would doubtless still be in power, had I still enough strength to continue without interruption of the duties confided to me. Now I have no interest in politics. I have paid my debt to my country and I wish to die in peace."

The prince says he will not take a seat in the reichstag. "If I did it would be to speak to everyone. My words would be commented upon, attacked and contrasted. I have no longer the unquestionable authority which power gives. I would be only a private soldier in the melee, perhaps an encumbrance. No, certainly, I will not go to the reichstag."

Montana's Statue.

Chicago, Dec. 13.—Sculptor R. H. Park of this city has completed the model in clay of the Montana silver statue to be exhibited at the world's fair, for which Miss Ada Rehan posed. It will be exhibited to several thousand guests next Tuesday. Col. J. O. Harvey says that all the talk about Cora Tanner Lynn and other actresses having been asked to pose and pay for the privilege related to a statue for Colorado, which project was afterward dropped. The Montana commission had all the money it wanted, and did not ask Miss Rehan to pay a cent.

Killed in a Runaway.

Dodgeville, Wis., Special, Dec. 13—A third fatal accident within a week occurred near Edmund, a station just west of this city, Saturday last. A team ran away, frightening another that was driven by a Mr. Riddle, which also ran away, throwing him and wife upon the ground. Riddle was thrown against a post and killed, and his wife badly hurt.

Her Neck Was Broken.

Marshalltown, Iowa, Special, Dec. 13.—Mrs. Jane Braddock, a widow aged fifty-six, was instantly killed to-day at Liscomb by being thrown from a wagon in a runaway. Her neck was broken. Her son-in-law, R. W. Chadwick, was badly injured, but not fatally.

Would Not Discuss It.

Milwaukee, Special—Archbishop Katzer of this city, is one of the leaders among the Catholic clergy of America opposing the Faribault school system. He was asked his opinion of Mgr. Satolli's practical endorsement of the Faribault system before the recent arch-iepiscopal conference in New York as reported from St. Louis. The archbishop became excited, declared that he was thoroughly familiar with its contents, but would not discuss it.

Ryan Wants to Fight.

[illegible]

You're through with Catarrh, finally and completely,—or you have $500 in cash.

That's what is promised you, no matter how bad your case or of how long standing, by the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy.

Catarrh can be cured. Not with the poisonous, irritating snuffs and strong, caustic solutions, that simply palliate for a time, or perhaps, drive the disease to the lungs—but with Dr. Sage's Remedy.

The worst cases yield to its mild, soothing, cleansing and healing properties. "Cold in the Head," needs but a few applications. Catarrhal Headache, and all the effects of Catarrh in the Head—such as offensive breath, loss or impairment of the senses of taste, smell and hearing, watering or weak eyes—are at once relieved and cured.

In thousands of cases, where everything else has failed, Dr. Sage's Remedy has produced perfect and permanent cures. That gives its proprietors faith to make the offer. It's $500, or a cure. They mean to pay you, if they can't cure you. But they mean to cure you, and they can.

HOW IT FEELS TO DIE.

No Living Man Can Tell Anything About It.

"I was reading an article on how it feels to die," said Dr. W. H. Epworth now at the Southern. "No living man can tell how death feels, or whether the actual act of dissolution is accomplished by emotion or not. A man who, through disease or casualty, has lost consciousness—has become, to all appearances dead—and is then resuscitated, can really tell us nothing about it, for he did not die. The machinery did not come to a complete standstill—the life force did not leave the body. It may be that the poet has dipped deeper than the physician into the awful mystery of death. It may be that he has described terrors not visible to the eyes of the medical man, who interests himself only in the animal mechanism. I have stood by the deathbed of men who told me they were going to hell, and saw them pass peacefully to their long sleep. I have looked at their dead faces a few minutes later, and saw thereon a look of fear, of horror, that was not visible when the heart gave its last faint throb and then stood still.

"I have had others tell me almost with their last breath that they were going to heaven. They passed away with wan, weary faces that were pitiful to contemplate, but before they became rigid a smile sweet as an angel's dream overspread the pallid features. The deep lines of suffering faded out, and the aged looked almost youthful, the weary and worn became radiant. What causes this change, which every physician has noticed? When does death occur? We say when the animal machinery stops, when the breath and pulse cease. That is what the doctor calls death, but it may not really be death after all. The spirit may not leave the body, may not take its departure from earth with the last breath, the last faint heart-beat. It may cling for some moments to its shattered tenement before it takes flight, before it faces those terrors or enters into those transcendent glories which the poet has painted. The death of the body, with which doctors only deal, may be but the prelude to a more important act, the departure of the spirit. Science has gone far, but it has not yet lifted the veil of mystery which the Almighty has hung over the couch of death."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

SYRUP of FIGS

ONE ENJOYS
Both the method and results when Syrup of Figs is taken; it is pleasant and refreshing to the taste, and acts gently yet promptly on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, cleanses the system effectually, dispels colds, headaches and fevers and cures habitual constipation. Syrup of Figs is the only remedy of its kind ever produced, pleasing to the taste and acceptable to the stomach, prompt in its action and truly beneficial in its effects, prepared only from the most healthy and agreeable substances, its many excellent qualities commend it to all and have made it the most popular remedy known.

Syrup of Figs is for sale in 50c and $1 bottles by all leading druggists. Any reliable druggist who may not have it on hand will procure it promptly for any one who wishes to try it. Do not accept any substitute.
CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
LOUISVILLE, KY. NEW YORK, N.Y.

ALLEN'S IRON TONIC BITTERS

SHE STOPPED THE TRAIN.

A Rustic Bride and Bridegroom Who Made Themselves at Home.

"A funny thing happened recently down on the Shenandoah Valley Railroad," said one of a party of drummers who make headquarters at a downtown hotel. "A young married couple came on board at one of those little West Virginia towns—the typical silk-hat and pearl-gray-ulstered bride and groom of a country town—and were given the berth in the sleeper over mine.

"I went to bed early—getting ready for New York you know—and was awakened about 11 o'clock by a rustling and scrambling against my curtain, a lot of little screams and a glimpse of new shoe soles, and so forth, which informed me that the new couple were ascending to their apartment.

"I dozed off pretty promptly, the last thing I remember hearing being the bride's voice, as she cooed: 'Oh, isn't everything nice and convenient, Jimmy? A place to hang your clothes and everything!'

"The next thing I was conscious of was the train standing at a dead still and the conductor and two or three brakeman storming through the car, wanting to know who rang that bell. I'm blowed if those jays hadn't hung their combined wardrobes on the bell rope. Of course the weight had pulled the cord, rung the bell and stopped the car.

"Explanations and apologies were duly made, and the last thing I heard after law and order were restored was the bride's voice in a pouting, self-justifying tone, saying: 'I don't see what they stretch their old clothesline up for if they don't expect people to hang their clothes on it, do you Jimmy?' "—New York Recorder.

MOSQUITOES IN TEXAS.

How the Deadly Insect Gets in His Work to the Envy of His Brother in Jersey.

"Speaking of mosquitoes," said F. M. Goodwin, a guest of the Southern, "reminds me of an experience I once had at Galveston, Tex. I reached the Island City late one night very tired, and was soon sleeping soundly. About 3 o'clock in the morning I awoke fully convinced that I was being roasted alive. I discovered that my bed had no mosquito bar, and that several thousand of those ravenous songsters had been presenting their bills. A mosquito bite is frank poison to me, and causes a swelling resembling a boil. By daylight my eyes were swelled shut, my hands were puffed up like a prize-fighter's after a mill, and from head to heel I was in about the same condition to which the devil reduced Job. It was two days before I could leave the room. Galveston Island and the lowland of the coast are a great breeding ground of the mosquito. When there is a strong breeze from sea they are blown into the bay, and the city is thus kept, during the greater part of the year, comparatively free from the pests. They are always to be found, however, and it is necessary to sleep under bars even during the months of January and February. Railroad brakemen in South Texas are sometimes compelled to wear mosquito netting over their faces while on duty."

How one Little Boy Improved.

Jimmy was the stingiest boy you ever knew. He couldn't bear to give away a cent, nor a bite of an apple, nor a crumb of candy. He couldn't bear to lend his sled or his hoop or his skates. All his friends were very sorry he was so stingy, and talked to him about it; but he couldn't see any reason why he should give away what he wanted himself.

"If I didn't want it," he would say, p'r'aps I would give it away; but why should I give it away when I want it myself?"

"Because it is nice to be generous;" said his mother, "and think about the happiness of other people. It makes you feel happier and better yourself. If you give your sled to little ragged Johnny, who never had one in his life, you will feel a thousand times better watching his enjoyment of it than if you had kept it yourself."

"Well," said Jimmy, "I'll try it."

The sled went off. "How soon shall I feel better?" he asked, by and by: "I don't feel as well as I did when I had the sled. Are you sure I shall feel better?"

"Certainly," answered his mother, "but if you should keep on giving something away you would feel better all the sooner."

Then he gave away his kite, and thought he did not feel quite so well as before. He gave away his silver piece he meant to spend for taffy. Then he said:

"I don't like this giving things; it doesn't agree with me. I don't feel any better. I like being stingy better."

Just then ragged Johnny came up the street dragging the sled, looking proud as a prince, and asking all the boys to take a slide with him, and said:

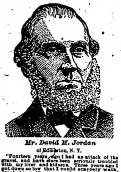
"You might give Johnny my old overcoat; he's littler than I am, and he doesn't seem to have one. I think —I guess—I know I'm beginning to feel so much better. I'm glad I gave Johnny my sled. I'll give away something else." And Jimmy has been feeling better ever since.—Our Little Ones

Girls in Vienna.

The system carried out in Vienna for educating girls is certainly worthy of notice. They are kept at their studies until they are 15 years of age. They then go through a course of teaching in the pantry and the kitchen under some member of the family, or sometimes under trained cooks, for a year or two years. Thus they learn to do everything themselves, and to know the value of things long before they commence housekeeping on their own account, and, though they may never be required to cook a dinner, they become independent of cooks and servants. The Austrian women are most affectionate wives and mothers. They are accomplished and learned as an English governess, and are as witty in society as a Parisian, and are some of the most beautiful women in Europe.

The Pants Question Again.

The difference 'twixt pants and trousers is
(I think no one has told it),
That pants are trousers sold for cash
And trousers bought on credit.



Mr. David M. Jordan
of Edmeston, N. Y.
"Fourteen years ago I had an attack of the gravel, and have since been seriously troubled with my liver and kidneys. Three years ago I got down so low that I could scarcely walk. I looked more like a corpse than a living being. I had no appetite and for five weeks I ate nothing but gruel. Had no more color than a marble statue. After I had taken 3 bottles of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA I could eat anything without distress. Why, I got so hungry that I had to eat 5 times a day. I have now fully recovered. I feel well and am well. All who know me marvel." D. M. JORDAN, retired farmer, Edmeston, N. Y.

HOOD'S PILLS are the best after-dinner Pills.

Driving the Brain
at the expense of the Body. While we drive the brain we must build up the body. Exercise, pure air—foods that make healthy flesh—refreshing sleep—such are methods. When loss of flesh, strength and nerve become apparent your physician will doubtless tell you that the quickest builder of all three is of Cod Liver Oil, which not only creates flesh of and in itself, but stimulates the appetite for other foods.
Scott's Emulsion
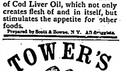
Prepared by Scott & Bowne, N. Y. All druggists.



TOWER'S FISH BRAND
This Trade Mark is on the best
WATERPROOF COAT
in the World!
Illustrated Catalogue Free. A. J. TOWER, BOSTON, MASS.

If you have no appetite, Indigestion, Flatulence, Sick-Headache, "all run down" or losing flesh, take
Tutt's Tiny Pills
They tone up the weak stomach and build up the flagging energies. 25c.

ELY'S CREAM BALM
CATARRH
COLD
HEAD
HAY-FEVER

Ely's Cream Balm
WILL CURE
CATARRH
Price 50 cents.
Apply Balm into each nostril.
ELY BROS., 56 Warren St., N.Y.

MRS. GLADSTONE.

Mrs. Gladstone is as remarkable a woman as her husband is a man, although she is now eighty years of age, she has never worn spectacles and has always enjoyed vigorous health. The secret is, that she has taken care of herself. If you are afflicted with indigestion or constipation you may be certain that you are shortening your days. Get a box of the Laxative Gum Drops and take them freely. They contain nothing in the shape of poison, no powerful drugs, but they are a mild and gentle laxative. Get them of any dealer. Small boxes are ten cents, large ones are twenty-five cents.
SYLVAN REMEDY CO., Peoria, Ill.

Appleton's Business College
16 Fifth Street South Minneapolis.
Bookkeeping, Shorthand, Penmanship, English. Mention this paper. Address,
A. R. ARCHIBALD, Manager.

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till cured. DR. J. STEPHENS, Lebanon, Ohio.

$125.00 A Month and Expenses! To Agents to Sell CIGARS TO DEALERS. SAMPLES FREE!
JOHN O. RISING & CO., St. Paul, Minn.

PENSION JOHN W. MORRIS, Washington, D. C.
Successfully Prosecutes Claims.
Late Principal Examiner U.S. Pension Bureau.
3 yrs in last war, 15 adjudicating claims, atty since.

FAT FOLKS REDUCED
Mrs. Alice Maple, Oregon, Mo., writes "My weight was 320 pounds, now it is 195, a reduction of 125 lbs." For circulars address, with 6c., Dr. O. W. F. SNYDER, McVicker's Theater, Chicago, Ill.

FREE FORMULA Face Massage to patrons ordering our $3 or $3 Beauty Box, containing every requisite for beautifying the Face and Scalp. Removing all Blemishes. 2c stamp for particulars. Samples 50c to any part of U. S. CAROLINE von WERNER, M. D., Syndicate Block, Minneapolis.

CURES CATARRH
LONDON BALM
LONDON BALM CO. NEW YORK
CURES CATARRH HAY FEVER
SOLD BY YOUR DRUGGIST.

PISO'S CURE FOR
Consumptives and people who have weak lungs or Asthma, should use Piso's Cure for Consumption. It has cured thousands. It has not injured one. It is not bad to take. It is the best cough syrup. Sold everywhere. 25c.
CONSUMPTION.

Minnesota Hist. Society

St. Hilaire Spectator.

VOLUME XI. ST. HILAIRE, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 21, 1892. NUMBER 22.

THE NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

DIGEST OF THE NEWS FROM ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

All Important Occurrences of the Past Week, Boiled Down and Arranged for Rapid Reading.

Washington.

The House passed the army appropriation bill.

The fort to be built at Helena, Mont., has been named Ft. Harrison in honor of the president.

"Lijo" Halford, it is said, will be sent as minister to Portugal, that post now being vacant.

The pursuit and punishment of Garza revolutionists in Texas cost the United States government $200,000.

The secretary of the treasury has directed a change in the specifications for the hull of the Calumet, the new revenue cutter for the Chicago station, the contract for which was awarded a couple of months ago. As first drawn the specifications called for an iron hull, and it has been decided to change them so as to require steel.

The court-martial of Commander Henry L. Johnson, United States navy, has commenced at San Francisco. The principal charge against the defendant is negligence in having permitted the Mohican to go ashore recently, while he was commander of the vessel.

Accidental Happenings.

F. S. Gilson's new $40,000 mansion at Charlestown, Mass., was destroyed by fire.

The 5-year-old child of J. Schoenbern, of Smithboro, pulled a pot of coffee from a table and was scalded to death.

Charles Freethy was crushed to death by a fall of earth in the Salisbury mine, near Ishpeming, Mich.

The baggage car and one coach of the Kansas City-Chicago train on the Santa Fe road went through a bridge near Floyd, Mo. The baggageman was injured.

A Mrs. Roberts was crushed to death in a freight wreck on the Pittsburg, Akron & Western road near Lima, O. The caboose and several cars rolled down a hill.

A team attached to a Nashville fire engine ran away, fatally injuring Tom Con, the driver, upset a score of vehicles on the bridge, overturned and wrecked the engine and in all caused a loss of $8,000.

Little Ella Wilson sat down in front of an approaching train at Munhall, Pa. Charles Walz dragged her from the track as the train reached her. His hand was crushed.

Mrs. Jane McWilliams, a venturesome old colored woman, of Muncie, Ind., bantered Mrs. Rabecca Wilson, also colored, to cross the Big Four tracks in front of the approaching express train. Mrs. McWilliams barely escaped with her life and Mrs. Wilson was knocked as high as the telegraph wires and every bone in her body was broken. She died instantly.

Personal Mention.

C. P. Hazard, a pioneer lumber dealer or Buffalo, N. Y., is dead.

A girl in Cornell college has taken up veterinary surgery as her special study and means to make it her future profession.

Mgr. Louis Galimberti, who has just been made cardinal, is the only journalist awarded the red hat.

Naval Cadet Arthur L. Fairbrother of Rhode Island was dismissed from the Annapolis academy for hazing.

Hon. Geo. Harrington, formerly assistant secretary of the treasury and minister to Switzerland, under president Lincoln, died at sea while on his way from New York to Hamburg.

Francois Edouard Joachim Coppee, the French poet, is seriously ill with bronchitis. M. Coppee is fifty years old. He has been a member of the French academy since 1884.

Charles I. Emerson, a California Pioneer, but at present "king of Apemanca," one of the Gilbert groups of Islands, is visiting his old friends in California.

Bishop Hennessey of St. Louis, it is believed, will soon be named as coadjutor, hence succesor of Archbishop Kenrick, whose age interferes with his performance of duties of his office.

Prof. E. J. Phelps, of the Yale law school and ex-minister to England, has been appointed to continue his work in connection with the Bering sea arbitration, which will compel him to give up his duties at Yale temporarily.

Among the Wicked.

Two women, Hattie Starr and Palma Morris, each claim to be the lawful wife of the late Charles L. Harris, the actor.

Marion Heepedgth, the Glendale train robber, was arraigned at St. Charles, Mo., but the case was continued until March.

Mrs. Kate Painter, of Greensburg, Pa., has been arrested on a charge of murdering her husband.

In a dispute over the payment of drinks at Middlesboro, Kentucky, Bartender T. L. Russell shot and killed Abe Hargiss.

Philip Nicholas is in the station-house at Richmond, Va., charged with drowning James Mills and Judson Wilkinson.

Ex-State Treasurer Woodruff, of Arkansas, has been indicted on a charge of larceny of state script. He gave bail in the sum of $30,000.

A warrant has been issued at Pittsburg for the arrest of Sister Julienne, teacher in a parochial school, on a charge of cruelty to a child.

Mrs. W. Slattery, a colored woman, is held in $2,000 bail at Springfield, Ill., for trial for perjury in an application for a pension.

A posse has been organized to exterminate the Starr-Newcomb band of Indian Territory outlaws, who recently murdered Deputy United States Marshall Wilson.

Gov. Flower commuted the sentence of John E. McNamara, of Corning, N. Y., so that he was a free man on December 15. Sixteen years ago McNamara, then 17 years of age, killed his sweetheart. He was sentenced to Auburn prison of life.

Levi Hartley, an inmate of the Soldiers' Home in Missouri, shot and mortally wounded Postmaster J. Keiser, of Clinton, Mo. Hartley had been placed in an insane asylum, his wife securing a divorce and marrying Keiser. The shooting occurred in the post-office.

A robbery that equals in boldness anything of the year occurred at the Burlington grade camp, four miles from the town of Sheridan, Wyo. Two men were killed and three wounded, and several hundred dollars and some watches and goods carried away. The raid was made on A. J. Case's saloon by three masked men.

From Other Shores.

An aerolite has been found near the City of Mexico that weighs 40,000 pounds.

John Emile Lemoinne, the well known French statesman, is dead.

Bismarck announces his permanent retirement from politics.

President Carnot of France is expected to resign. Some of his relatives are mixed up in the Panama canal scandal.

A midwife in Russia is convicted of the murder of over 100 infants.

Fire at Tokio, Japan, has destroyed 000 native huts.

Senor Antonio Bernejo has been appointed minister of the interior of Buenos Ayres.

Venezuela will make a credible showing at the World's Fair.

M. Rouvier, finance minister of France, is implicated in the Panama canal scandal and resigns.

It is said that twenty-five soldiers and revolutionists were killed in the battle last week between Garza's forces and Mexican revolutionists.

Baroness de Roques, mother of Mrs. Maybrick, says that her daughter's condition has become worse within the past few days.

Baron Frederick Wergelsperg, adjutant to Emperor Francis Joseph, of Austria, has committed suicide. No cause for the act has been made public.

A bill providing for a tax on bourse time bargains, in other words contracts for the future delivery of stocks and bonds, was passed in the French chamber of deputies.

A dispatch from Vilna says that a Jewish innkeeper in the outskirts, his wife and four young children have been murdered by tramps. They have all been arrested.

A man named Sheridan, now in the Lambaugh, Eng., workhouse, has come into a fortune of $1,500,000 through the death of an aunt. She and her two sons came to America some years ago.

Frequent skirmishes between federal and republican forces have occurred in Rio Grand do Sul, Brazil. It is believed that a serious battle is imminent. Both sides are accused of cruelties.

The English Liberals have been successful in their attempt to unseat Sir Price Price-Jones, Conservative member of parliament for the Montgomery district. The contest was based on charges of bribery, etc., in the election.

The Prussian reichstag adopted a motion declaring that Rector Ahlwardt, sentenced to five month's imprisonment for libel committed in his notorious pamphlet entitled "Jewish Guns," was entitled to immunity from arrest.

Final official statistics of the cholera epidemic in Russia have just been issued. According to these figures, there have been 130,417 deaths from European and 136,343 deaths from Asiatic cholera since the outbreak of the disease in the empire, making a total of 265,760 deaths.

Owing to an attempt recently made by the Nobels, the great Russian oil refiners, and the Rothschilds to corner the naphtha market, the Russian government intends to adopt a law making the cornering of grain, provisions or any other commodity illegal.

The South American Cable company has formally inaugurated service between Brazil and the coast of Africa. The new cable has a total length of 2,103 marine miles, and at the island of San Luis de Senegal, on the coast of Africa, connects with the Spanish National Submarine Telegraph company's lines.

Labor.

A 10 per cent. reduction has been ordered by the Phoenixville, Pa., Iron Company, in all the mills and shops of the plant, except the puddling mill.

The Industrial Council of Kansas City decided that each member should devote one day's wages to a fund for the Homestead strikers. There are between 5,000 and 6,000 members, and their wages will average $2 a day.

The third annual session of the National Marble Cutters and Setters' association met in St. Louis. Prominent delegates from every large city in America were in attendance.

Miscellaneous Iteam.

Jay Gould's will is filed for probate. It disposes of $72,000,000.

Ives & Co., Montreal foundrymen, failed owing $150,000.

Mr. Cleveland will open the World's Fair with an address.

Western Union directors declared a 1½ per cent. quarterly dividend.

The first term of the Woman's College connected with the Brown University has been a success.

The output of salt in Michigan for the year ending December 4 was 3,812,054 barrels.

The public and parochial schools of Alpena, Mich., are closed because of the prevalence of diphtheria in the town.

Philip D. Armour presents the city of Chicago $1,500,000 in the shape of an institute for manual training, art and science.

The world's fair executive committee has declined to permit the erection of a theater at Jackson park.

The trust advanced the price of alcohol 10 cents per gallon, and rectified goods 5 cents per wine gallon, recently.

Lipman & Co., who failed in Dundee, Scotland, with $1,250,000 liabilities, owe $200,000 in New York.

A New York syndicate has bought the Ametbyst, New York, Last Chance, Hillside, Gold Eagle, Cuba and Hidden Treasure mining properties at Crede, Col., for $8,000,000 each.

At a meeting of the Kansas state officers-elect and the citizens' committee it was decided not to hold any inaugural ball, the Populists deeming such ceremonies too frivolous to usher in their administration. An inaugural reception will be held.

A. R. Clark, doing business as A. R. Clark & Co., wholesale grocers, at 89 Walnut street, Cincinnati, assigned to Howard Douglass, after having confessed judgments in favor of creditors to the sum of over $30,000.

There is a movement on foot in Indianapolis to abolish Sunday funerals, which bids fair to accomplish its purpose. It had its inception in a petition which was signed and circulated by the undertakers of Indianapolis, and to which the names of a majority of the clergyman of the city have been added.

The National Fire Insurance Company established in 1838, one of the oldest insurance corporations in New York, has decided to liquidate its affairs. Its outstanding risks were re-insured in the Commercial Union Assurance Company, of London.

Rev. W. J. McCrory, the late pastor of the Oak Grove Presbyterian Church, Pittsburg, whose church doctrines have caused him to ask for a release from the denomination and from the Allegheny Presbytery, will likely figure prominently in a heresy trial before the matter is settled.

Mr. Peters, secretary of the North Atlantic Steamship Association, states that the decision not to carry steerage passengers on the vessels belonging to the association after January, 1893, applies to American citizens and residents of the United States as well as to persons who have never been in America.

NORTHWEST NEWS BUDGET.

THE WEEKLY ROUND-UP OF IMPORTANT NEWS.

A Concise Account of the Happenings of the Past Week in Minnesota, North Dakota, Iowa and Wisconsin.

Minnesota.

Chief State Grain Inspector Clausen files his annual report.

Minnesota Episcopalians hold a state convention at Hastings.

Ignatius Donnelly, it is rumored, will abandon political life for literature.

An Owatonna man kills himself by drinking a quart of undiluted alcohol.

The St. Paul & Duluth Railroad company is charged with discrimination against Minneapolis by jobbers of that city.

Fred Weyerhauser, a Minneapolis student at Yale, is arrested on a charge of breach of the peace.

George Peters, the murderer of Editor Seward of Stillwater, is declared insane by the jury.

The Minnesota Iron company will build a railway from Lake Superior to the heart of the Mesaba iron district.

Isaac Reckman died at a small station north of Two Harbors. Too much liquor was the cause.

Winslow & Kellogg, general merchants at New York Mills, have assigned. Their assets are less than $15,000, liabilities not known.

John Wann's building, St. Paul, occupied by Schwab & Bro., and the Nonotuck Silk company, is burned. Loss, $105,000; insurance, $82,000.

A woman and two children are burned to death at Union Park, a suburb of St. Paul, the mother losing her life in an endeavor to save her little ones.

Mrs. Anna Smith, the colored woman on trial in St. Paul for killing August Hoppe, is convicted of murder in the third degree.

Seven hundred and sixty-two saddles of venison were shipped from Park Rapids during this season. Between 500 and 600 of these were Indian killed.

C. E. Alder of Uhen, Minn., was given thirty years in jail for forgery, in Justice Bullock's court at Park Rapids. He will be taken to the county jail at Fergus Falls.

Messrs. Miller and Peverill, of Lime Creek, who keep a general store, were closed on two writs of attachments, liabilities about $5,000; assets about $2,000.

Black diphtheria has again appeared in the family of Abe Lang, of Hokah. All precautions are taken to prevent a spread of the disease.

A. L. Thompson, of Cresco, while walking up Main street Mankato fell dead on the sidewalk. Heart disease was the cause of his death. He was serving on the petit jury and was 70 years old.

The stock sheds of City Treasurer Scholz and a large quantity of hay and feed at Montgomery were distroyed by fire, resulting in a total loss of $500.

John Schwager, one of the wealthiest and best known young farmers in Winona county, attempted suicide by taking a large dose of aconite. No cause is known for the deed. Schwager will probably die.

Frank Murray, the Northern Pacific brakeman who committed an assault on Miss Essele, has been indicted by the Wilkin county grand jury. Miss Essele's brother is on the grand jury.

The residence of Wm. Tew at Dundas, was gutted by fire, and a Norwegian carpenter by the name of Toneson, sleeping up stairs, barely escaped being burned up.

A petition is being circulated at Winona by the friends and relatives of Vinc Kukowski, the murderer of August Dommer, and who is now serving a term of 10 years in the penitentiary at Stillwater. The petition is for Kukowski's release and has 400 signers.

A Grand Rapids Special says: D. H. Freeman, of the Foley Mining Company, reports a rich find of hematite ore at a depth of 30 feet in section 24, township 56, range 24. This makes five mines on the western end of the Mesaba which will be ore shippers in the spring.

A Montgomery special says: County Auditor Dressel has instituted proceedings in a civil action for $5,000 against Peter Shippman for libel. The latter was convicted of criminal libel upon the plaintiff in Hustic Barer's court in Sesucur, and a fine of $50 dollars and costs imposed. He has served notice of appeal.

While switching at Cottonwood on the Great Northern, Conductor Kelly slipped, resulting in his getting his foot crushed by a car wheel passing over it. He was placed in a caboose and the run made to Waverly, his home, a distance of 13 miles, in 15 minutes. Drs. Wimer and Robinson amputated his foot.

Judge E. D. French met with a serious accident at Redwood Falls. His horse became unmanageable, throwing him out, breaking three ribs and cutting his face. The doctors do not know how serious his injuries are. He is well known and a prominent G. A. R. man.

Deputy Grand Warden Paine succeeded in rounding up Fred Yost, a fisherman at Cullen lake, in Crow Wing county, with 900 feet of nets. Yost has been a violator of the game laws for some time, and after watching him for many months he was caught in the act of drawing his nets from the water. He will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

The Wilkin county grand jury has indicted Frank Kempfer, twenty-two years of age, for murder in the first degree. Young Kempfer killed his father's hired man about a year ago. They had been drinking and got into a row when Kempfer shot with fatal effect. Frank Kempfer's father, B. Kempfer, shot Peter Smith at Elizabeth several years ago, but was acquitted.

Wisconsin.

Mrs. James Carlisle, of Fort Howard, died suddenly of apoplexy.

Theodore Olson, a La Crosse boy, was arrested on a charge of larceny.

The Depot building at Racine Junction was damaged by fire to the extent of $500.

H. Flinn, a well-known resident of Watertown, died at the age of 68 years.

The new iron bridge at Neosho, Green Lake County, has been completed.

The residence of George Fowler, at Chippewa Falls, was destroyed by fire.

The trial of Dr. Nussel, of Chippewa Falls, cost Eau Claire County $4,000.

It is reported that a large grain elevator with a capacity of 1,500,000 bushels will be built in East Superior.

A Scandinavian laborer, name unknown, was fatally injured by a falling tree near South Superior.

The Landreth Company, of Minitowoc, will build a large pea cannery in the outskirts of Sheboygan.

John Sullivan, a resident of Waterloo, Jefferson County, was arrested on a charge of arson.

Anton Vogel, living near Addison, Green Lake County, fell from a hay loft and broke several ribs.

During the past season the Daniel Shaw Lumber Company, of Eau Claire, cut 87,000,000 feet of lumber.

Mrs. Whitting an old resident of Ashippun, Green Lake County, died at the age of 74 years.

Within the past year Tomah's assessable property has increased from $250,000 to $310,000.

E. Frances Moran, a resident of Janesville, was arrested on a charge of stealing a horse.

Mark Teft, of Milton Junction, fell on an icy sidewalk and broke his arm. He intends suing the village for damages.

Hugo, the 8-year-old son of August Freck, of Columbus, had his right leg broken above the knee while coasting.

Jacob Beuscher, residing at Rockfield, Green Lake County, may loose the sight of his right eye, the result of an accident.

Mrs. Ashley Smith, of Neosho, Green Lake County, fell and broke her hip bone. She is in a critical condition.

The shoe store of J. Kehlnhafer, at Chippewa Falls, was entered by burglars and a large quantity of goods carried off.

Barney Schneider, of Racine, has been adjudged insane and committed to the Racine County insane asylum.

Thieves entered the residence of J. T. Sorenson, at Racine, and stole a gold watch and a few articles.

It is estimated that between 1,500 and 1,600 deer were slaughtered in Douglas County during the season just closed.

Burglars entered six cottages at Stoney Beach, near Oshkosh, but secured only a few articles of small value.

The firm of Dustin & Wake of Necedah, have been forced to the wall. The assets are placed at $2,000; liabilities about the same.

An investment association has been organized at Stevens Point, and $19,800 worth of stock subscribed. It is intended to establish a new chair factory at that place.

Hans Bricksen, Sofias Bricksen, George Colfleich and Rudolph Wildhagen were arrested at Madison and fined $10 and costs each for illegal fishing.

The jewelry store of Col. H. A. George, at West Superior, was entered by thieves and jewelry to the value of several hundred dollars carried away.

John Schefe, a farmer living at Greenville, Outagamie County, was severely and probably fatally injured in a runaway accident.

John Donohue, a young man living near Madison, pleaded guilty to burglary and was sentenced to six months in the county jail.

The grocery store of H. J. Forschler, at La Crosse, was damaged to the extent of about $500 by fire.

Matt Brill, an Appleton young man, was severely injured about the head by a fall at Oshkosh.

Thomas Dumphy, of Janesville, was badly injured in a runaway accident. He will recover.

The Rev. N. C. Chapin, formerly of La Crosse, died suddenly at his home in Minneapolis.

Fred Gage secured a divorce from his wife, Estella Gage, in the Dickinson County circuit court, at Iron Mountain, Mich. The parties formerly lived in Florence.

The drug store of A. J. Wilcox, at Little Falls, Minn., was destroyed by fire, with a loss of $12,000; no insurance. Mr. Wilcox was a former resident of Berlin.

J. D. Mann, a farmer residing near Hartford, lost a valuable horse in a runaway accident. The animal was so badly injured that it had to be shot.

The dam of Charles Champney's mill at Briggsville gave way; though 700 bags of sand were thrown in to stay it. The loss was about $2,000.

William Whitney who was arrested by Dr. Minehan, of Green Bay, for alleged blackmailing recently, was found guilty in the circuit court.

It has turned out that the woman who so strangely kidnapped little Pearl Clifford from Menasha is Lucy Mobratcel, of Green Bay, and is the mother of the child, but Mr. Clifford was made guardian of the child some time ago.

The barn of August Radeeg, a farmer living near Burlington, was destroyed by fire with all its contents. Four horses and a number of cattle and sheep were also burned. The loss will reach about $1,800.

North Dakota.

Ray Wallace, a young man permitted to deliver for the American Express company at Valley City is missing with $800 he collected.

The office building owned by A. G. Clark, and occupied by the Steele Ozone as a newspaper, at Steele, was completely destroyed by fire. The contents were saved, but in a damaged condition.

Dr. Borge, was asphyxiated a day or two ago, at Sioux Falls, as was also Mrs. Hoff, Mr. Hage, the remaining victim, is not expected to live.

The state canvassing board instructed the secretary of state to issue certificate to Wamberg (Harrison), and Bondesvedt (Weaver), presidential electors. Also to all members of the fusion state ticket, except Dahl, Republican secretary of state.

Maps of the definite location of the Soo road for 32 miles in Logan county, completing the line from Minneapolis to Bismarck, were filed in the United States land office. This is believed to mean an early completion of the road to Bismarck.

The World's Fair board met at Jamestown, recently but did nothing of importance. Gov. Burke was present for consultation with the members, who held a meeting at the state headquarters for the insane. Designs for the North Dakota exhibits are to be considered.

The Fargo city council has ordered a special election to be held to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Alderman Knudson, of the Fifth ward. Among the names of candidates proposed is that of Mrs. Swart, a lady who keeps a large private boarding house and possesses considerable executive ability.

The board of trustees of the State Agricultural College met at Fargo and considered their biennial report. The operations of the college have been much hampered by a lack of room, especially for the dormitory. Application will be made to the legislature for a grant to provide the needed buildings, as the grant from the United States cannot be used for that purpose.

Iowa.

L. R. Curren, manager of the new coal company was killed in a runaway accident caused by the neckyoke breaking.

Joe Stark, a notorious saloon keeper of Cedar Rapids dropped dead on the street of heart disease.

Moses D. Saunders, painter and paper hanger of this city, took an overdose of laudanum with suicidal intent and died; cause, poor health and despondency.

David Hemphill, a well-to-do resident of Malcolm, who left a few days ago, no one knows where, has gone insane and is in charge of the officers at Ottuma. He will be brought back here by relatives.

A Le Mars special says: J. W. Miller and Robert Henry are two prominent features living on the Broken Kettle. Miller accuses Henry of attempting to murder him and says Henry struck him with a hatchet. The latter is under arrest.

An Atlantic special says: John Dickens, a German farmer of Union Township, was killed by a team attached to a wagon knocking him down and the wagon wheels running over his chest. He was instantly killed.

State Superintendent Knoeler has filed his annual report. The total enumeration of children of a school age is 675,026; number attending school, 509,830; the average daily attendance, 321,708; school houses, 13,275; value, $13,800,152.

An effort was made at Webster to secure a new trial in the case of Mary E. Miller who secured a verdict of $6,565 for injuries received on a defective bridge against Boone county, but Judge Weaver overruled the motion and Boone county will have to pay.

At Liscomb the team of R. W. Chadwick ran away, throwing himself and mother-in-law, Mrs. Braddock, out of the vehicle onto the ground. Mrs. Braddock was instantly killed, her neck being broken. Chadwick was seriously but not fatally injured.

A Sheldon special says: The board of county commissioners have practically decided to fight a portion of O'Brien county's indebtedness. It is contended that quite a portion of it was illegally made. Public opinion will sustain the board. An effort will probably also be made to collect the tax illegally remitted to the Milwaukee railroad.

M. S. White, of Hopkins, aged 18 tied a rope around his body, while he lead a horse to water. The animal being suddenly frightened dashed through an orchard, turned and ran along a wire fence, the body striking the fence until it became detatched from the rope. It was horribly mutilated.

A Ft. Dodge special says: The Illinois Central Railroad Company has issued orders to agents to allow no coal cars to go off their own lines for outside coal companies. The Corry Coal Company at Lehigh has filed a complaint with the railroad commissioners to compel the railroad to furnish cars.

George I. Bagley, the messenger who stole $100,000 from the United States Company at Davenport, Nov. 18, was sentenced to 2½ years in the penitentiary. Bagly pleaded guilty. Judge Waterman gave as his reason for imposing a light sentence the prisoner's previous good character and his prompt action in restoring the stolen money.

The station agent at Fairfield was robbed by a masked man, who entered the depot and presented a revolver to his head. The agent handed out all the money he had $33, and the robber decamped. The other morning he saw C. H. Vanwert on the street and immediately recognized him as the robber. Vanwert is a painter, and, as the evidence seems conclusive, he will probably be given a job at his trade in the penitentiary.

A BURNING TREE.

Struck by Lightning Last August, It Has Smouldered Ever Since.

Near I. S. Fowler's farmhouse, at the foot of the Greylock group of mountains in Williamstown, stands an elm tree. Twenty or more years ago the late Prof. Albert Hopkins, of Williams College, took measurements which showed the first limb to be 105 feet from the ground. The trunk is 20 feet in circumference at the base. On August 4 last it was struck by lightning, and has been burning ever since. On the night of August 25 the tree was struck by lightning a second time.

This seemed remarkable then, but much more wonderful is the fact that the tree is still burning, and has been constantly from that time. Most of the time it has been a slow, smouldering fire, but Mr. Fowler says that election night it broke out greater than ever before, and sent a column of flame 25 feet above the top of the trunk, which has been gradually reduced until it is now not more than 35 or 40 feet high. The illumination was such that Mr. Fowler's neighbors hurried to his place, supposing one of his buildings was on fire. It made a light by which one could have read a newspaper 20 rods away. Mr Fowler believes the tree will burn to the ground, and says his son is preparing to plant a young elm on the site next spring. —Albany Express.

Bacteria in Paper Money.

Some interesting investigations have just been made by two Spanish medical men into the bacteriological condition of bank notes. They examined two bills which had been in circulation for some time, and found them loaded with micro-organisms of various kinds and degrees of malignancy. The two bills, which together weighed about a gramme, or fifteen grains, contained, it was estimated, between nineteen and twenty thousand microbes. Cultures were made from the scrapings of the notes, and these were injected into the peritoneal cavity of rats and guinea-pigs, most of which died within twenty-four hours, the post-mortem examination revealing signs of peritonitis and congestion of the liver and kidneys.—Medical Press.

CAUSES CONSTERNATION.

SEVERAL PERSONS BITTEN BY A MAD DOG.

A Canine With the Rabies Creates a Good Deal of Excitement at Alexandria—Women and Children Especially in Danger.

Anxious Alexandrians.

Alexandria, Minn., Special, Dec. 20.—Another mad dog scare occurred here to-day. Since the mad dog was killed here three weeks ago, several dogs have died with the rabies. The village council passed an ordinance that all dogs be muzzled or killed. A great howl was raised, in which prominent citizens took part against the council and ordinance. The marshal was ordered to take no action in the matter until to-morrow.

To-day a mongrel bull dog snapped the hand of Joe Arnold of Alexandria, badly tearing it, then running rapidly away. The dog's eyes were fixed and bloodshot, foamed at the mouth and was known to be one of the dogs bitten by a rabid dog here three weeks ago, which in turn had been bitten last August by a dog from Villard, supposed to have the rabies. The next victim was Mr. Frick, of the Minneapolis Journal, bitten in the hand. He then tore the cloak off a little girl in a vain effort to catch her hand. Meanwhile he had bitten some horses tied on the streets.

By this time several persons had started in pursuit of the dog, when it was sighted running in among some teams and wagons, where V. K. Niman was talking with another man. Van Niman was bitten in the fleshy part of the back, the dog snapping at his companion, who escaped by dodging suddenly. The dog was soon after killed, but those bitten are in an agony of mind. The fact of the dog being mad at this time of the year is accounted for by the poisoning being transmitted from one dog to another since last summer. The council is severely censured by one faction for not enforcing its ordinance, while another faction uphold them for their caution.

Excitement raised to a high pitch by the Nelson accident, in which seven men were killed, is increased until many are frantic, and ladies and children dare hardly leave the house. It is not known late this evening what action the village council will take in the matter.

A dispatch received from Alexandria, some hours later than the above, states that the dog shot there to-day was not the mad dog, but a similar one. A dispatch from Garfield says a dog answering his description was shot there after biting three men, names not learned.

Montana's Statue.

Chicago, Dec. 20.—The model of Miss Ada Itehan's symetrical form on which the Montana silver statute is to be constructed, has been completed by Sculptor E. H. Parks and was exhibited to-day to members of the press at his studio. Standing eight feet in height and posing on a globe is the majestic figure. To the base of the globe is the archetype of a Mountain eagle, the original of which was killed near Bozeman, Gallatin county, Mont., and sent to the sculptor to pattern from. A sort of goddess crown covers the head of the figure, which is inclosed in a draped garment to the knees. In her right hand is a sword of justice and in the left a pair of scales are held upward. In one side of the scales will be silver coin and in the other will be gold. The most attractive and prettiest part of the figure are the curves of the outlines of supposed movement of the back, limbs and feet as she steps toward the spectator. The figure is supposed to be in motion, with the left foot backward, and it makes the pose a most majestic one. This statue of justice will be of solid silver—that is, the frame work of the figure—and will cost $65,000. Mr. Parks was warmly congratulated by all who saw the model. The pose is stately and dignified—an ideal statue of justice. Those interested in the Montana exhibit are especially gratified at the progress of the work. A reception will be held at the studio to-morrow, 200 invitations to which have been sent out.

Fatal and Disastrous.

St. Louis, Dec. 20.—A fire originating in the Udell Woodenware company's building this evening destroyed the property situated on the territory bounded by Washington, Locust, Third and Fourth streets. Successive alarms called out practically the entire department, which for a time seemed unable to cope with the flames. After a struggle lasting until nearly 11 o'clock, however, the flames were got under control with a loss aggregating $450,000, which is practically covered by insurance, divided in small amounts among a large number of companies. The individual losses are: Udell Woodenware company, on stock, $150,000; on buildings owned by the Collier estate, $75,000; Tyler Desk company, $30,000; Pacific Express company, $5,000; Trochtech, Dunkar & Renyard, carpets, etc., $10,000 (mostly by water); on building, owned by Collier estate, $35,000; Saccaret Furniture company, $15,000; building, owned by Girard Ballen estate, $10,000; Missouri Glass company, $1,000. Other minor losses by water and scorching will bring the amount up to the total of $450,000. One man lost his life in the fire, but who he was is not known. The man was seen to enter the Udell store during the blaze and never returned. Who he was may not be known for some days.

Prominent Man Missing.

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 20.—The locality about Crawfordsville is greatly excited over the flight of Milo Tomlinson, the well known breeder of fine stock. Tomlinson has for several years done a large business in all kinds of stock. His running horses carried away many honors last season. Both himself and wife are of prominent and influential families. He was supposed to be doing a splendid business and nothing irregular was noticed until about a month ago when one of his large stables burned, together with several blooded horses. The entire outfit was heavily insured. Since then Tomlinson has converted all he has into cash and several days ago fled the country. The young man proves to have been not only a defaulter but a forger.

An Amicable Arrangement.

San Francisco, Dec. 20.—Mrs. Carolina Perkins Stetson, wife of G. Walt Stetson, the well known artist, who has applied for a divorce at Providence, R. I., is a resident of Oakland, Cal. She states that the filing of the suit is no surprise to her, as it was done with her wish and consent. She says she found married life interfered with her literary labors, and as she preferred the latter she left her husband and came to California for her health. She says that she and her husband are on the best of terms, and that the only reason for the separation is the one already stated.

Agent McCourt's Shortage.

Cincinnati, Dec. 20.—It is now stated on good authority that the shortage in the Louisville & Nashville freight office in this city will be at least $50,000. To-day Cashier Shotwell's successor was appointed. The company has attached all the real estate and other property of McCourt, placing its claim at $30,000, but it is not stated in the suit that this is the whole claim. The surety company which is on the bonds of McCourt and Shotwell for $20,000 will probably bring criminal proceedings against them.

Lind Preparing a Report.

Washington, Special, Dec. 20—Representative Lind is preparing a report upon a bill which is designed to cure the defects in the interstate commerce law, which was so severely shattered by the Gresham decision. He says that the bill will be brought in very soon and pass during the session.

An Obnoxious Bill.

Washington, Special, Dec. 20.—James McNaught, general solicitor of the Northern Pacific railroad, is in Washington to look after the mineral railroad grants over which there has been so much dispute, and for the settlement of which a bill is now pending in the house. This present bill is very obnoxious to the railroad and efforts will probably be made to defeat it.

FROM THE STATE CAPITAL.

The Saintly City Summarized.

St. Paul, Special Telegram, Dec. 20.—The financial statement of the state correctional and charitable institutions from Aug. 1, 1892, to Oct. 31, 1892, has been prepared by Secretary H. H. Hart, and contains some interesting figures.

Following is an extract from a statement of the current expenses of state institutions for the year ending July 31, 1892:

Institutions.	Estimated in 1890.	Actual Expenses, 1892.
St. Peter hospital for insane	$160,000	$155,784
Rochester Hospital for insane	160,000	179,470
Fergus Falls Hospital for insane	70,500	53,651
Total, for insane	$408,500	$388,905
Soldiers' home	$ 30,000	$ 35,025
School for the deaf	39,420	37,548
School for the blind	17,500	14,714
School for feeble minded	54,250	52,574
State public school	22,000	23,212
Reform school	45,000	51,151
State reformatory	34,290	38,089
State prison	58,500	56,943
Totals	$715,460	$705,232

Following are the totals and grand totals, which latter include extraordinary repairs and improvements, of special appropriations, to be asked for the state correctional and charitable institutions for 1893-95, according to the trustees' estimate:

Institutions.	Special App.	Total App.
St. Peter's hospital	$ 18,100	$ 28,100
Rochester hospital	151,500	161,500
Fergus Falls hospital	395,600	399,600
Total insane	$565,200	$589,200
Minneapolis soldiers' home		3,000
School for deaf	$ 10,000	$ 14,000
School for blind	10,000	11,200
School for feeble-minded	80,000	83,280
School for dependent children at Owatonna	32,860	35,250
Children at Owatonna
Red Wing reform school	5,000	10,000
St. Cloud reformatory	103,500	105,500
Stillwater prison	3,000	10,000
Totals	$800,560	$861,750

"The appropriations made by the legislatures of 1889 and 1891," say the trustees, "were smaller than we originally recommended, and in our judgment, they have not been large enough. We recommend, therefore, that the appropriation for extraordinary repairs be increased to $20,000 yearly."

The directors of the state agricultural society are in session at the Merchants, preparing their annual report, to be submitted to the governor. Secretary Cross has presented his annual report, but it has not yet been passed upon. The greatest part of yesterday was spent in disposing of protests made during the fair. Treasurer Wilcox's report will be made to-day. The annual report will show that the receipts last fall were in excess of the expenditures, and that the society is in a prosperous condition.

Information has been received that the secretary of the interior has extended the time of the Chippewa Indians for the cultivation of forty acres of land to secure 160 until next September. This applies to the Mississippi Indians on the White Earth reservation who have not yet complied with the law.

A communication received by the state auditor from G. A. Merrill, superintendent of the state public school at Owatonna, shows that the total receipts of the school for the quarter ending Nov. 30, 1892, amount to $163.70.

Charles Hennige has been declared guiltless of complicity with Anna M. Smith in the murder of August Hoppe last June.

The total earnings of the grain inspection department for November, 1892, were $16,106.23.

More Arrests Made.

Pittsburg, Dec. 20.—District Attorney Burleigh took a hand in the Homestead poisoning case to-day, and as a result Hugh F. Dempsey, district master workman No. 3, Knights of Labor, is under $2,500 bail for trial at court on a charge of felonious assault and battery in administering poison, or causing it to be administered, to the nonunion men at the Homestead steel works. A similar charge was also made by County Detective Beitshoover against J. M. Davidson, one of the cooks who confessed to the alleged plot. An information was also made against Pat Gallagher by W. E. Griffiths, charging him with administering the poison on Oct. 5.

Arrested for Robbery.

Chicago, Dec. 20.—A. A. Haskins, one of the most prominent lawyers of Des Moines, Iowa, and son of one of the wealthiest and most prominent men of that state, was locked up at the Harrison street station last night on charges of assault with intent to kill, robbery and disorderly conduct. The charge is made by a woman named Gordon, who says he went to her room and, pointing a revolver at her, demanded that she give him her pocketbook, of which she had previously robbed him. Attorney Haskins was much chagrined to spend five hours in the lock-up, saying it is an erroneous identification. Although the woman's purse was found on him, Haskins asserts that the real thief dropped it in his pocket as he brushed past him in the crowd in order to avoid arrest.

A Young Outlaw.

Port Townsend, Wash., Dec. 20.—Albert Cherrard, aged sixteen, is terrorizing the ranchers near Dungeness. He recently broke into a settler's cabin and carried off two rifles and a quantity of ammunition. Two deputy sheriffs with warrants were sent to arrest the boy but he intercepted them, covered them with his rifle and forced them to lay down their arms and turn back with their hands above their heads. Last week he held up two men and robbed them of their watches and money. Several cabins have also been robbed and two petty thieves have joined the young highwayman. A systematic effort will be made by the officers to capture the full fledged outlaw.

Money Hid in Butter.

Crookston, Minn., Special, Dec. 20.—Chief of Police Gonyea went to Hallock to-day and had R. Snyder arrested as an accessory in the stealing of the $2,000 from Nels Olander of that place last week. Saturday evening Gonyea arrested George Snyder on a train for the deed, and taking him to the station house he was searched. In his trunk he had five rolls of butter he was taking to his parents, so he said. In one of the rolls the chief found half of the stolen money, and after considerable persuasion the prisoner confessed that he and his brother had taken it from the table where Olander had left it. His brother had hidden his share in the hole in the meat block in his meat market where the legs fitted in, and when the chief arrived there to-day he found the money as stated by the prisoner. Snyder will be taken to Hallock to-morrow for a hearing.

An Echo of a Scandal.

Washington, Dec. 20.—The United States supreme court to-day rendered a decision against the trustees of E. L. Harper, the Cincinnati grain plunger and defaulting president of the Fidelity National bank, in a suit brought against him by Preston & McHenry, grain brokers of Chicago, to compel Harper and his associates to pay their unpaid subscriptions to the capital stock of the Cincinnati, Columbus & Hocking Valley railroad, in order to satisfy the judgments of Preston & McHenry and others against the company, which judgments remained unsatisfied after proceedings at law.

Five Plead Guilty.

Eau Claire, Wis., Special, Dec. 20.—Five of the Fall Creek burglars—Haynes, Moore, Ryan, Sullivan and Wilson—pleaded guilty to-day and each was sentenced by Judge Bailey to four years in the penitentiary. One only pleaded not guilty and was held in bonds of $1,500.

Used a Dynamite Bomb.

Cherokee, Iowa, Dec. 20.—An attempt to blow up the Zion parsonage, occupied by Elder John Patterson and family, was made at 2 o'clock this morning. A dynamite bomb tore the porch into fragments and shattered the windows. A son of the pastor has been active in enforcing the prohibitory law in this city.

Made a Chief Clerk.

Washington, Special, Dec. 20.—An evening paper says: "James J. Noah of Minneapolis has been appointed chief clerk of the Indian division of the interior department, vice Hill, resigned. Mr. Noah is an old newspaper man well known in Washington. Mr. Noah was many years ago a resident of St. Paul. He is now correspondent of the Denver News."

GREAT NORTHERN

TIME CARD.

NO. 3 Daily.				NO. Daily
*40 p m	Lv	St. Paul	Ar	6 55 am
*10 "	11	Minneapolis		6 25 am
05 a m	218	Barnesville		10 25 pm
10 45 am	279 Lv	Crookston	Ar	4 00 pm
*11 25 "	20	Shirley		3 30 " *
*x11 45 "	21	Ives		x3 00 " *
x12 20 pm		Wylie		x2 20 " *
*12 45 "	32 Ar	St. Hilaire	Lv	2 00 " *

*Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

S. S. Buzza Agt.

Dr. H. GRUNDY.

Physician

& Surgeon.

Graduate of the University of Toronto Canada and member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario.

Messages from the surrounding country attended to.

Office in Drug Store

THIEF RIVER FALLS,

NORTHERN PACIFIC

THE

GREAT TRAMSCONENTAL ROUTE.

Passes through Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, Manitoba, Montana, Idaho, Oregon and Washington.

THE DINING CAR LINE

Dining cars are run between Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Winnipeg, Helena, Butte, Tacoma, Seattle and Portland.

PULLMAN SLEEPING CAR ROUTE.

Pullman service between Chicago St. Paul Montana and the Pacific Northwest; and between St. Paul, Minneapolis and Minnesota North Dakota and Manitoba points.

THE POPULAR LINE.

Daily Express Trains carry elegant Pullman sleeping Cars, Dining cars, Day Coaches, Pullman Tourist Sleepers and Free Colonist Sleeping Cars.

YELLOWSTONE PARK ROUTE.

The Northern Pacific R. R. is the rail line to Yellowstone Park; the popular line to California and Alaska; and its trains pass through the grandest scenery of seven states

THROUGH TICKETS Are sold at all cupon offices of the Northern Pacific Railroad to points North, East, South and West in the United States and Canada

TIME SCEDULE,

	Leave Crookston Daily	Arrive Crookston Daily
For Staples, Minneapolis, St. Paul Duluth Ashland and points East and South	7:05 p. m.	8:20 a m.
For Grand Forks Grafton Drayton, Winnipeg and points in North Dakota and Manitoba	8:27a. m.	7:10 p. m

For Rates, maps, Time Tables or special Information, apply to Agent Northern Pacific R R. at Crookston Minn., or

CHAS. S. FEE,
Gen. Pass. Agent
St. Paul Minn.

ST. HILAIRE MEAT MARKET.

All kinds of fresh and salt meat always on hand.

I make a specialty of buying and selling cattle of all kinds.

If you want to buy or sell anything in that line it will pay you to give me a call.

JAMES DAINARD.

FRED Eikhof

DEALER IN CHOICE

WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS.

Beer always on tap.

Pool Room in Connection.

Broadway St. Hilaire.

FRANK IVES,

Attorney and Counselor AT LAW,

CROOKSTON and ST. HILAIRE, Minn.

Will Practice in ALL The Courts, OF THE STATE and and before the U. S. Land Office at Crookston and at Washington.

Will give special attention to contests of claims.

BREVITIES.

Wheat is 60 cents.

A Merry Christmas to all.

E. M Hoff is a visitor at Crookston this week.

Fresh Oysters at W. A. Arthurs try them.

S. M. Hoff left today for a short business trip to Crookston.

For No. 1 pure buck wheat flour call on Fricker & Welch.

S M. Dainard went down to Crookston today on business.

Fred Eikhof was in Thief River Falls on business last Monday.

Peter Hall made a business trip to Crookston the first of the week.

A complete line of undertakers goods always on hand at Holmes Bros.

Don't forget the little ones at the Christmas tree next Saturday night.

J. W. Swanstrom of Thief River Falls was in town on business last Monday.

Max Ericsson, of Crookston, was doing business in town last Monday,

G. F. Fuller of the Plano Manufacturing Co., was in town on business today,

Now is the time to secure your flour cheap. Call for bargains on Fricker & Welch.

The price of wheat is still on the decline and it looks as if the bottom would never be reached.

If you want anything in the line of confectionary fruit or oysters call on W. A. Arthur.

The state legislature will meet at St Paul on January 3d. It promisses to be a lively session.

I will pay the highest market price for veal calves, fresh eggs and butter.

S. M. Dainard,

The weather has been rather chilly the past week the thermometer going down as low as 30 below.

Joseph Smith, the Red Lake Falls merchant, passed through here last Monday on his way to Crookston.

Miss Edith Peters returned to-day from St. Paul where she has been visiting friends for several months past.

August Walters, of the Crookston brewery, and Henry Funk, of Crookston, were doing business here to-day

Emil J. Holmes and wife leave today for Cannon Falls Minn., where they will spend the holidays visiting relatives.

Miss Emma Waldum who has been visiting her sister Mrs J. M. Hanson, returned to her home in the southern part of the state to-day.

Lars Elstad who has been in Norway for the past six months returned home last Saturday. He was accompanied by his brother with his wife and family

The Christmas tree entertainment will be held at the Norwegian Lutheran Church at 7:30 p. m. Saturday evening All are cordially invited to attend.

James Damard came up from Crookston last Friday and spent Sunday at home. There seems to be considerable attractions for Jim in this locality.

Manager Columbus of the Crookston opera house was in town several hours last Monday with a theatrical troupe. They were on their way to Thief River Falls.

Judge Mills was in charge of the District court at Crookston last week and Judge Holland, of Brainerd, has charge this week. The court will adjourn the last of this week until March.

School closed last Friday for a two weeks vacation during the holidays and the teachers F. H. Gambell and Miss Lizzie Zarracher left the same evening for Crookston where they will spend their vacation. The school will commence again on Monday Jan. 1st.

Prof. Gambell wishes us to mention the fact that Selvan Hall and Milly Stranahan were neither tardy nor absent from school during the present term. There should be more at the close of the coming term.

The train was seven hours late last Friday on account of a wreck on the main line. It arrived here at 6 P. M. making both trips and leaving for Crookston at 11 P. M.

Just for a chance let the state of Minnesota make a liberal land grant towards securing good wagon roads. The railroads have had their share, now let the highways come in.—Anoka Union.

John Halvorsen of this place and August Peterson of McIntosh has formed a co partnership. And have applied to the village council for a license to start a saloon. They have rented the Brown building and expect to open about Jan. 1st.

About twenty of the young folks of the village surprised Mr. and Mrs. E J. Holmes at their residence last Monday evening and spent a very pleasant evening. Mrs. Holmes is a charming hostess and all were well pleased with the evenings entertainment.

We learn that Red Lake Falls and McIntosh are each having prepared and will introduce in the legislature this winter bills to divide Polk county each village of course wants to become a county seat and they aim to divide the county into three counties.

Yesterday another man was brought before Judge Benson on the supposition that he was insane. He was found to be a victim of epilepsy, however, and was discharged after his examination. He came from St. Hilaire and was named Generieus Erickson.—Crookston Times.

J. G. Daws, traveling freight agent of the Great Northern, was in town to-day on his way to Red Lake Falls. It is intimated that there is trouble down there. The business men at the Falls are not consigning as much freight to the G. N, as that company thinks they should have and have given it out that if the G. N. wants business they must furnish a daily train. Mr. Daws will look the matter over and it is altogether probable that we will have a daily train in the near future. There is nothing like competition.

At the debating club meeting last Friday evening the question "Is marriage a failure?" attracted quite a crowd and was ably argued on both sides The young men got the worst of it, however as the decision was given in favor of the negative. Next Friday evening the question for debate will be "Resolved that there is more pleasure in pursuit than in possession. In addition to the debate there is being prepared an interesting program consisting of declamations and music. All are cordially invited to attend

The farmer who employs himself and his family most profitably succeeds best. If he grows wheat only, and eats up what he has made in the busy season, just as carpenters and bricklayers do in cities. But if he adds good, growing stock to his grain farming, he has some paying work to do in winter, as well as in summer. He has something growing all the time. The farmer who furnishes the most profitable employment to himself and family has to use his head as well as his hands, He must study his farm and surroundings and know what it is best adapted to, and lay out his work accordingly.—Northwestern Agriculturist.

New York Dec. 18.—The world prints letters from a number of Governors of states regarding the immigration question. Following are the replies of the Northwestern executives:

St. Paul Minn. Dec 15.—in my judgment no immigrant should be allowed to land on our shores who does not hold a certificate of the consul from the point of departure that he has never been guilty of crimes against his own government, is possessed of sufficient education to read and write and enough means to provide for his own support at least for a year after he enters our ports,

W. R. Merriam.

Pierre S. D. Dec 15.—American labor has the same right to protection as American capital and it should be protected by the same legislative restriction against foreign competition. All other methods to maintain labor above Europe are unnatural and doomed to failure. Where capital can freely import foreign labor to supplant the higher priced domestic labor there can exist no distinction in values. Protection next year from cholera demands a restriction aside from sentimental or demagogical considerations.

A. C. Mellette,

Bismarck, N. D., Dec. 19.—Gov. A H. Burke wishes to be quoted as not only favoring temporary restriction of immigration to prevent a possible introduction of disease through infected immigrants, but as being most decidedly of the opinion that immigration should be permanently restricted against pauper and ignorant classes and against all others who cannot, through rigid examination, demonstrate their perfect knowledge of our republican institutions and political forms of government.

Paul Boaine, formerly connected with the Crookston Tribune, has purchased Judas Iscariot Hunt's McIntosh News and assumed control of that erratic sheet. Paul also invested $800 in purchasing the old Crookston Chronicle outfit, which was not worth half that sum, and added it to the News plant. It is said that Judas will hunt a job at the state house during the coming session of the legislature. His newspaper career in this county, although short, was exceedingly brilliant. The News during Hunt's administration, was a garbled mass of typographical errors and blotched printing, and his depture from the newspaper field will be a source of relief to the fraternity. However, we wish Brother Boaine success in his new venture, and trust that he will give us a more readable exchange than did his predecessor.—Crookston Tribune.

Crookston Times.—Last evening at about 10:30 the alarm summoned the members of the fire department to duty. The fire had broken out in Dainard Bros. meat market, on Broadway. The company reached the scene almost immediately and very little damage was done by the flames as they were quickly subdued. The origin of the fire is not known.

About a dozen of the boys in the village have started a dancing club. C F. Post was elected president, W. A. Arthur secretary and H. E. Ives treasurer. The club will give a dance every two weeks during the winter. S. M. Damard has contracted with the club to build and have ready before February 1st a hall 24X44 which he is to keep for exclusive use of dances and other entertainments.

It is stated that all of the appropriation made for surveying the Red Lake Reservation has already been spent and the work must now wait until another appropriation is made. It looks greatly as if somebody was doing effective work in delaying the opening of the reservation. In other words the reservation will be opened when the Minnesota lumbermen wish it; and not before

Notice To Farmers.

We will pay you cash for hides, hay barley, oats, cord wood, good steers or anything marketable that you have to sell,

E. T. Spafford & Co.

DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP

Notice is hereby given that the copartnership heretofore existing between E J. Holmes and Minton Holmes has been dissolved, E. J. Holmes assuming all the liabilities of the firm and all parties indebted to said firm are hereby notified to pay the debt to said E. J. Holmes,

E. J. Holmes.
Mrs. Minton Holmes.

CHEAP EXCURSIONS TO CANADA

Low round trip tickets will be on sale by the Great Northern from Crookston Grand Forks and stations north to boundary, and west to Minot, to points in Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick Nova Scotia, on Nov. 27th, Dec, 6th Dec 18th to 22nd inclusive, and Dec 27th 1892. Tickets good for 90 days with transit limits of 15 days each way, going and returning, This will allow holders to stop in the Twin Cities, in Chicago to see the wonderful buildings of the World's Fair, and other points enroute.

Extension of time beyond 90 days made at small additional cost. For particulars and tickets see S. S. Buzza agent at St. Hilaire.

OFFICIAL APPLICATION FOR LICENSE TO SELL INTOXICATING LIQUORS.

To the Common Council of the Village of St. Hilaire in the county of Polk and the state of Minnesota.

The undersigned John Halverson and August Peterson co-partners as Halverson & Peterson hereby make application for a license to be granted to them to sell intoxicating liquors for a period of six months from the first day of January A. D. 1893. up to the first day of July A. D. 1893. The place where said business is to be carried on is designated as follows:

On the ground floor of the building situated on lot 5 of block 40 of the original townsite of St. Hilaire Polk county Minnesota, said room having two doors leading thereto, one front door and one back door.

Said applicants pray that such license be granted to them pursuant to the ordinances of said village of St. Hilaire and the statutes of said state of Minnesota in such case made and provided.

Dated at St. Hilaire this 19th day of December A. D. 1892.

John Halverson.
August Peterson.

Notice is hereby given that the village council of the village of St. Hilaire will meet at the council chamber on Broadway in said village on Thursday the 29th day of December A. D. 1892 at 8 o'clock p. m. at which time objections to granting said license in accordance with the above application will be heard

Witness my hand and seal of said village this 19th day of December 1892

J. L. Johnson
Village Recorder.

INTERESTING ITEM.

It is to the interest of parties contemplating going east to consider the great advantages the Great Northern offers them through its fast passenger service to St. Paul and to all points west to the Pacific coast, their free colonist cars, and magnificent Dining and Sleeping cars. The shortest route, close connections, quickest time and fare as low as the lowest, Any Information cheerfully given,

S. S. Buzza
Agent.

CHATTEL LOANS

I am prepared to loan money on chattle security at reasonable rates. One years time. Call On

H. E. IVES.

WANTED. Salesmen. Local and Traveling, To represent our well known house. You need no capital to represent a firm that warrants nursery stock first-class and true to name. WORK ALL THE YEAR. $100 per month to the right man. Apply quick stating age.

L. L. MAY & CO.
Nurserymen, Florists and Seeds men,
St. Paul Minn.

(This house is responsible.)

MARLIN SAFETY REPEATING RIFLES

Made in all styles and sizes. Lightest, strongest, easiest working, safest, simplest, most accurate, most compact, and most modern. For sale by all dealers in arms. Catalogues mailed free by

The Marlin Fire Arms Co.,
NEW HAVEN, CONN., U. S. A.

All who are indebted to S. M. Hoff are requested to call and settle up at once or the debt will be collected by law.

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
Crookston Minn December 5 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on January 24 1893 viz: Daniel Johnson H D 12058 for the Lot 5 Sec. 5 and Lot 1 Sec 7 Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land viz:

J. A. Sjortrom Anton Sundahl J. A. Peterson. K. Sundahl all of St. Hilaire, Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn. Dec. 7 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on January 26 1893 viz Charles Gomoll H D 11784 for the SE ¼ Sec 25 Tp 152 R 45.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land viz:

Gottlieb Gerlach, August Morel, Charles Peterson Henry Leppert all of Wylie Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn Oct. 20 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on Dec. 20 1892 viz:

Peter Anderson H D 12740 for the W ½ NW ¼ and W ½ SW ¼ Sec 28 Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Ole J. Johnson, Ole J. Hegg, Halvor T Smot, Knut Steen all of St. Hilaire Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn. November 1 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and has said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver of the U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on December 15 1892. viz:

A. P. Sandberg administrator of estate of Peter G. Allsson deceased H D 11173 for the NW ¼ Sec. 20 Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land viz:

J. Johnson, Haakon Johnson, J. Lind. E. Peterson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

CLOSING OUT SALE!

At E M Hoff's Store

My whole stock of

Dry Goods and Notions
Gents Furnshing, Goods
$5,000 worth of ready made clothing
Foot wear of all kinds
and everything belonging to a full stocked general merchandise store will be closed out at cost in the next 90 days.

COME EVERY BODY

AND

SECURE GOOD BARGAINS.

E. M. HOFF

CROWN ROLLER MILL.

EQUIPPED WITH THE LATEST AND BEST IMPROVED MACHINERY.

Manufactures the well known PERFECTION FANCY PATENT and WHITE ROSEFLOUR.

Rye and Feed mill in connection.

Flour and Feed always kept on hand

Custom work a specialty.

FRICKER & WELCH Prop,

ST. HILAIRE MINNESOTA

CHAS G. RAPP.

A large and complete line of

General Merchandise.

CONSISTING OF

Dry Goods, Groceries, Clothing
Boots & Shoes, Hats & Caps
Notions

THE ST. HILAIRE SPECTATOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY EVENING.
H. E. IVES, Propr.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE:
Advance, $1.50 Per Year
If Not in Advance $2.00 Per Year

Entered in The Post Office at St. Hilaire, as Second Class Mail Matter

WEDNESDAY December 21 1892

SELECTIONS

HOT RACE BY PILOTS.

The Hunteliffe Was a Big Prize, and They Didn't Propose to Get Left.

The big steamship Hunteliffe, laden with raw sugar, arrived off the bar from Java and anchored to await orders from either the consignees, Caballos & Sons, of 80 Wall street, or their brokers, Simpson, Spence & Young. The Hunteliffe usually docks at the Wilmington stores in Philadelphia, and her master, believing that he would be ordered to proceed to the Quaker City, did not take on a Sandy Hook pilot when approaching the Hook.

The Philadelphia pilots were on the lookout for the steamer, as the pilotage fees on her are very large because she draws fully twenty-three feet. It so happened that Pilots Gus Clampet and W. J. Marshall, of Philadelphia, each unconscious of the other's act, called up the consignees and brokers' office on the long distance telephone and inquired about the Hunteliffe. Each was notified that she was lying off the bar, and the pilots rushed pellmell for the railroad station, their object being to come on to New York and board the steamer at the bar and thus secure the prize before any of their brother pilots in Philadelphia caught on to their game.

They met at the station and instantly recognized each other. Of course each surmised the other's motive, but they boarded the train, each determined to reach New York ahead of the other.

Arriving at Jersey City they rushed for the ferryboat, and legged it in great style down West street. At the Battery they parted, Marshal cutting across lots to the office of the Mutual Grain Sealing company, where the fast tug W. E. Ferguson was instantly placed at his disposal, while Clampet went to the Raymond Towing company's office on a dead run, and breathlessly demanded a tug. The high pressure tug J. Fred Lohman, with Clampet aboard, was soon puffing down the East river.

When abreast of Bedloe's island the Ferguson was seen putting out from the Battery wall. Pilot Marshall was aboard. All possible steam was piled on the boilers of both vessels. Freeland Dalzel, who is the chief engineer of the Raymond towing fleet, was at the Lohman's throttle, and the way he made her puff along was a caution. The Ferguson began to demonstrate her worth when off quarantine. From that point on she steadily gained on the Lohman, and finally drew alongside of the sturdy little tug. There was tremendous excitement on both vessels. It was a race for a purse of $200, and Pilot Clampet saw the prize slipping out of his grasp when the Ferguson began to draw away.

The Ferguson got alongside the Hunteliffe first, and Pilot Marshall was hoisted aboard in a twinkling. The Lohman was not far behind, and before Marshall had finished shaking the hand of the Hunteliffe's captain Pilot Clampet dashed up and grabbed the captain's disengaged hand. Then both pilots claimed the privilege of piloting the Hunteliffe back to Philadelphia, Clampet asserting his right through having been notified by the brokers.

Both men were very much disgusted to learn that the Hunteliffe will be discharged at this port and not at Philadelphia. Their race proved expensive to the pilots, for the hire of a tug is fifty dollars alone, to say nothing of their fare from and to Philadelphia.—New York Advertiser.

Mrs. Pender's Lucky Discovery.

Josiah Pender, of Edgecombe county, died during the war. A short time before he died he was in the West Indies and from there he sent his wife, a sister of Louis S. Pender, three drafts of $500 each on the Bank of England. These were received, but there being no communication with Great Britain they were put away and finally forgotten. A few days since Mrs. Pender, in hauling over the contents of an old trunk, came across these three checks. At first she was disposed to regard them as worthless paper except that they contained the writing of her husband, but on second thought she determined to ascertain their value. So the drafts were indorsed and sent through the Pamlico bank for collection. It is believed that she will get the money.—Charlotte (N. C.) Observer.

A Hotel Ghost Captured.

The ghost that for years has haunted the Oceanic hotel and raised the hair of the people of West Brighton has been trapped. Since the close of the season the huge building has been inhabited only by John Delaney, a milk dealer, and the family of one of his employees. The other day the milkman heard footfalls and groaning from the upper floor of the deserted building. Cautiously creeping up stairs, he captured the ghost in the act of groaning.

The groans were produced by nothing more supernatural than the limb of a huge willow tree in juxtaposition with a window blind, the rusty hinges of which gave out doleful sounds with every gust of wind. The tapping of the loose shutter produced a very good imitation of a footstep.—Cor. New York Sun.

Many Thousands of Lights.

The original plans for the electric lighting at the World's fair called for 100,000 incandescent lamps. It has already been found necessary twice to increase this allotment, and according to latest advices the number required will fall little if any short of 300,000. One-third of this number will probably be required in the Electricity building alone.

His Name Drawn on His Own Case.

A peculiar incident recently occurred in Brienz, Switzerland. One of the names drawn from the jury box was that of Ulrich Amacher. Amacher was assassinated last January, and the jury was being made up to try his murderer.

FASHION'S DECREES.

Fringes are largely imported in jet, gold, lined crystal, iridescent, garnet and bronze beads.

A new and very shaggy make of cheviot is among the fashionable fabrics for winter traveling costumes, coats and long cloaks.

The newest dress skirts are of the much gored umbrella shape, and some of them have an astonishing "flare" around the lower portion.

With the short waisted empire gowns should always be worn the very short, low French corset, which is merely a support, without at all confining the waist.

Shirt trimmings are everywhere visible, but they are seldom wide. Puffings, plaitings, ruches, tiny frills, fur and feather bands abound, and sometimes on very elegant costumes the slender fur border is headed by a rich bead and metal passementerie.

Feather turbans are again shown with low crowns, plain or indented, the brims close and rolling, the shape long and oval oftener than round, and the whole made of tips of pheasants' or doves' feathers, with aigrettes in front of the same plumage, thickly massed.—New York Evening Post.

THE LATEST NOVELTIES.

Leather is now a favorite medium for silver ornament.

The working out of designs in colored stones is becoming a new art.

Long trident shaped forks without ornament have a good deal of distinction.

Sponge cups of silver for bank tellers and sealing letters are a pretty trifle in view of Christmas.

A spoon for sardines and smelts has a flat bowl of three gold fishes. The handle is made of strips of seaweed.

New letter scales have a circular dial plate on an oblong pedestal. This is a more convenient form than the columnar scale.

There is charming variety in back combs. The handsomest of course have the pierced gold mountings. But these are carried into the shell in numbers of graceful forms.

Fine enameled ornament increases. In brooches the structure is in some strongly defined form, such as a star, cross, triangle or square of stones. These are all united in a round brooch by filling up the interstices with this fine enameled and perforated tracery.—Jewelers' Circular.

Injured by a Meteor.

"I am perhaps the only man in America who was ever hit by an aerolite," said Colonel Sid Fontaine as he settled down in a big armchair at the Southern and piled his crutches up beside him. "I'm in the life insurance business, and one day I procured a buggy and drove out from Sedalia to a farmhouse to settle up a loss. It was nightfall when I started home, but the sky was clear, the road good and I was making excellent time. I noticed that there were an unusual number of 'shooting stars,' and some of remarkable brilliancy. Suddenly the road was lit up with a glare equal to that of the noonday sun, only it had an orange tinge. I glanced up and a ball of fire as large as my hat seemed to be coming right down upon me.

"Before I could think, much less act, it plunged into the buggy, blinding me for a moment by its glare, went through and buried itself in the ground. It bored a hole in the bottom of the buggy as large as a saucer and triangular in shape. It made a hissing noise as it fell, reminding me of the bluff of an enormous gander. My horse took fright and I had considerable difficulty in controlling him. I did not know that I was hurt until I had ridden fully a mile, when my left foot began to pain me. I examined it and found that the great toe was mashed flat and one of the larger bones of the foot broken. That's why I go on crutches. If I could find that meteorite and dig it up I think we two might get a position in a dime museum."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Art Note.

Mother—Our son is going to be a great artist. Just think of it—he has sold his first picture for twenty-five dollars.

Father—No wonder. I had a twenty-five dollar frame put on it.—Texas Siftings.

Too Much.

He had trundled weighty triplets when his wife was wrapped in slumber;
He had got up every morning and had built
the kitchen fire;
He had pounded on her carpets and had sawed up cords of lumber,
And had stretched with endless patience several miles of stiff clothes wire.

He had sworn off on his smoking just to help her on her missions,
And had matched whole coils of ribbons,
with no thought of the disgrace;
He had eaten several samples at her cooking
exhibitions,
With a moaning in his stomach and a smile upon his face.

He had borne the shirts she made him, and his courage ne'er forsook him;
He had stood the socks she darned him,
though the agony was keen;
He had worn her colored neckties, though his dearest friends all shook him,
And the clothes that she selected he displayed with humble mien.

But when one night she showed him some pajamas she had made him
And informed him she expected that in them
he would abide,
He qualled before this torture and the thought of it dismayed him,
And he gave one look remorseful and he laid right down and died.
—Tom Masson in Clothier and Furnisher.

WE WANT YOU

to act as our agent. We furnish an expensive outfit and all you need free. It costs nothing to try the business. We will treat you well, and help you to earn ten times ordinary wages. Both sexes of all ages can live at home and work in spare time, or all the time. Any one any where can earn a great deal of money. Many have made Two Hundred Dollars a Month. No class of people in the world are making so much money without capital as those at work for us. Business pleasant, strictly honorable, and pays better than any other offered to agents. You have a clear field, with no competition. We equip you with everything, and supply printed directions for beginners which, if obeyed faithfully, will bring more money than will any other business. Improve your prospects! Why not? You can do so easily and surely at work for us. Reasonable industry only necessary for absolute success. Pamphlet circular giving every particular is sent free to all. Delay not in sending for it.
GEORGE STINSON & CO.,
Box No. 488, Portland, Me.

DO YOU WANT TO ADOPT A BABY?

Maybe you think this is a new business, sending out babies on application; it has been done before, however, but never have those furnished been so near the original sample as this one. Everyone will exclaim, "Well! that's the sweetest baby I ever saw!" This little black-and-white engraving can give you but a faint idea of the exquisite original, which we propose to send to you, transportation paid. The little darling rests against a pillow, and is in the act of drawing off its pink sock, the mate of which has been pulled off and flung aside with a triumphant coo. The flesh tints are perfect, and the eyes follow you, no matter where you stand. The exquisite reproductions of this greatest painting of Ida Waugh (the most celebrated of modern painters of baby life) are to be given to those who subscribe to Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893. The reproductions cannot be told from the original, which cost $400, and are the same size (17x22 inches). The baby is life size, and absolutely lifelike. We have also in preparation, to present to our subscribers during 1893, other great pictures by such artists as Percy Moran, Maud Humphrey, Louis Deschamps, and others of world-wide renown. Take only two examples of what we did during the past year, "A Yard of Pansies," and "A White House Orchid" by the wife of President Harrison, and you will see what our promises mean.

"I'M A DAISY."

Those who subscribe for Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893 will possess a gallery of exquisite works of art of great value, besides a Magazine that cannot be equaled by any in the world for its beautiful illustrations and subject matter, that will keep everyone posted on all the topics of the day, and all the fads and different items of interest about the household, besides furnishing interesting reading matter, both grave and gay, for the whole family; and while Demorest's is not a Fashion Magazine, its fashion pages are perfect, and we give you, free of cost, all the patterns you wish to use during the year, and in any size you choose. Send in your subscription at once, only $2, and you will really get over $25 in value. Address the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York. If you are unacquainted with the Magazine, send 10 cents for a specimen copy.

Ask Your Dealer For FEATHERBONE
WHIPS.
FEATHERBONE is made from Enameled Quills—nature's own toughest, and strongest elastic material. Best wearing whips made, for 35c., 50c., 75c., $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50. All styles for Buggy, Cart, Track, Team and Riding. Be sure and ask for a FEATHERBONE.
FOR SALE BY
S. M. HOFF
St. H

Going to Buy
A Dictionary?
GET THE BEST,
Webster's International.
A Choice Gift
A Grand Family Educator
A Library in Itself
The Standard Authority
WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY
SOLD BY ALL BOOKSELLERS.
The International is a new book from cover to cover, fully abreast of the times, and is the successor of the authentic "Unabridged." Ten years were spent in revising, 100 editors employed and over $300,000 expended before the first copy was printed.
Do not buy reprints of obsolete and comparatively worthless editions.
Send for free pamphlet containing specimen pages and full particulars.
G. & C. MERRIAM CO., Publishers,
SPRINGFIELD, MASS., U. S. A.

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn. Nov. 25 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof insupport of his claim and said proof will be made before U. S. LandOffice at Crookston Minn. on Jany. 5 1893 viz:

Berent I. Konlog HD 13395 for the SW¼ Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of said land viz:

James Evenson, Anton Peterson, Julius Nelson, Nels Evenson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON, Register.

U.S LAND OFFICE.
Crookston, Minn., Nov. 17 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn on December 29 1892. viz:

Peter E. Engh HD 15282 for the NW ¼ Sec. 23 Tp 152 R. 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Halvor Aamodt, Ole J. Hegg Peter Anderson, Ole J. Johnson, all of St. Hilaire, Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register,

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn., Nov. 25 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver, U. S Land Office at Crookston Minn on Jany. 5 1893 viz:

Julius Nelson HD 11890 for the S W ¼ sec. 8 tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove her continuous residence upon, and cultivation of said land viz;

James Evenson B. I. Konlog, Nels Evenson Anton Peterson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

E. T. SPAFFORD — S. M. DAINARD
E. T. SPAFFORD & CO.
DEALERS IN
LUMBER, LATH AND SHINGLES.
A complete stock of all kinds of Lumber Lath, Shingles, Mouldings, Building Paper Sash, Doors and Screens, Lime, Cement Stucco, Plastering Hair, Brick etc. always hand at the lowest market prices.
S. M. Dainard, Manager.
BROADWAY — ST. HILAIRE, MINN.

E. T. SPAFFORD & CO.
WILL ALWAYS PAY THE
HIGHEST MARKET PRICES
FOR
All kinds of
CATTLE.
Also for Cor wood, Hay, Oats,
Barley and flax.
Ground Feed for Sale
S. M. DAINARD.
Manager.

Reserved For
THE
ST. HILAIRE
TOWNSITE
COMPANY

W. A. ARTHUR.
DEALER IN
FRUITS, CONFECTIONARY
TOBACCO AND CIGARS.
STATIONARY OF ALL KINDS
Lunch Counter
Warm meals at all hours.
BROADWAY — ST. HILAIRE — MINNESOTA

JUSTUS L. JOHNSON
DEALER IN
pure medicines Fancy articles, perfumer and stationery, paints oils and dye stuffs.
Cigars, Candy, Fruit and Soft Drinks always on hand.
Barbershop in connection
BROADWAY — ST. HILAIRE

I CAN SAVE YOU
MONEY
If you wish to make
REAL ESTATE
LOANS.
For full particulars call or address
H. E. IVES.
SPECTATOR OFFICE — ST. HILAIRE.

HOLMES BRO'S
Dealers in
HARDWARE, TINWARE,
We are carrying a heavy and complete line of Heating and Cooking stoves.
GOOD GOODS — LOW PRICES.
CALL ON US FOR BARGAINS
BROADWAY — ST. HILAIRE MINN.

FARMERS STORE
NEW GOOdS AT HARD PAN PRICES.
If you want to save money do your trading with
HALL BROS.
DEALERS IN Dry Goods, Groceries
Notions.
BROADWAY — ST. HIL.

S. M. HOFF
DEALER IN
HARDWARE
A new and complete stock of all kinds of Hardware, Tinware, Stoves, Fencing wire, Nais, in fact everything usuay kept in a first-class Hardware Store,
AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES
Call and examine Goods
and Get Our Prices.
BROADWAY — ST. HILAIRE.

DR. PRICE'S
Cream Baking Powder.
The only Pure Cream of Tartar Powder.—No Ammonia; No Alum.
Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

Christmas Hints.

Don't ask your child what he wants unless you intend giving it to him.

Though money makes the mare go, it makes Santa Claus come.

Don't buy your best girl a present on the instalment plan, as she might jilt you before you had made all the payments.

Rub the price-mark off the present unless it is an expensive one.

If you wish to surprise your girl never ask her what she would like for Christmas.

When you have the Christmas tree up, it doesn't mean that you have it fixed up.

At Christmas time it is well enough to ape the English as far as the plum pudding is concerned.

Some persons never wish you a merry Christmas unless they think they will get something for doing so.

Santa Claus would never make a schoolmaster. Whatever is good he puts at the foot of the stocking.

If we don't have base-ball at Christmas we have the cricket on the hearth.

The bachelor who puts his thumb into the boarding-house Christmas pie is apt to pull out a collar-button.

Silverstein's Christmas Present.

"Hullo, Dinkelspiel! I suppose now that you and your father-in-law have embraced Christianity you keep Christmas?"

"Yaiz. Silfersdein he come py mo undt he say 'Levy,' for dhose Grismas bresent I gif you vorty ber cent. diskount on all dher poys' glothes you vant.'"

"That was nice. How many boys have you?"

"I haf no poys. Only four girls."

It is getting to be more and more the custom for everybody to give everybody else a gift at Christmas, and you can't very well cherish animosity to a man whom you have befriended. Christmas is making all men brothers and uniting them with strong ties of fraternal affection. When its mission is accomplished, and not till then, the proclamation will be fulfilled—"Peace on earth and good will toward men."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
Sold by Druggists, 75c.

The letter carriers rather wished they were hod carries.—Boston Bulletin.

A Child Enjoys

The pleasant flavor, gentle action and soothing effect of Syrup of Figs when in need of a laxative, and if the father or mother be costive or bilious, the most gratifying results follow its use; so that it is the best family remedy known and every family should have a bottle.

The cash girl in the notion store didn't need anybody to tell her that Christmas was coming.—Merchant Traveler.

People Who Make a Noise

Are the abhorrence of the nervous. But why be nervous when Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will rescue from that wretched condition? It invigorates the nervous system through the medium of renewed digestion and assimilation. Moreover, it is a sterling remedy for liver complaint, constipation, rheumatism and an impoverished condition of the blood.

Don't mind it if your pipes froze up last night. The poor plumber should have a fat Christmas as well as anybody else.—Philadelphia Call.

AN EXTENDED POPULARITY. BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES have for many years been the most popular article in use for relieving Coughs and Throat trouble.

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till cured. DR. J. STEPHENS, Lebanon, Ohio.

IMPORTED Percheron & Shire Stallions first class $800, 1, 2 & 3 years' time. Imported mares cheap. Hiram C. Wheeler, Odebolt, Sac Co., Iowa.

$60 to $100 per month can be easily made by selling my Steel Engraver. Snap for Agents. Agents wanted in every county. Sample and terms 25c. GEO. WORSTER, Durbin, N. D.

DOUBLE Breech-Loader $7.99. RIFLES $1.00 WATCHES GUNS BICYCLES $15 All kinds cheaper than elsewhere. Before you buy, send stamp for catalogue to THE POWELL & CLEMENT CO. 166 Main St., Cincinnati, O.

CURES CATARRH
LONDON BALM
LONDON BALM CO. NEW YORK CURES CATARRH HAY FEVER
SOLD BY YOUR DRUGGIST.

TELEGRAPHY
AND ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING
Taught by practical Telegraphers and Electricians. No department of a Business College, but a thorough special course. Circulars Free. McAllisters School of Telegraphy, 619 Nicollet Av., Minneapolis, Minn.

MEN We will send you the MARVELOUS and UNFAILING French Preparation, CALTHOS FREE by MAIL, and a legally executed guarantee that CALTHOS will STOP Discharges and Emissions, CURE Varicocele, and RESTORE Lost Vigor.
Use it & pay if satisfied.
Von Mohl Co., Importers, Cincinnati, Ohio.

CHRISTMAS LONG AGO.

As "Bob" Burdette Remembers It and Brightly Tells It.

Most of the Christmas presents in those days were designed by the manufacturers for the hanging stocking,' writes Robert J. Burdette in the Christmas number of The Ladies' Home Journal. Anything too big to go into a stocking had to go over to somebody's birthday. In any family where there was more than one child, the old reliable "Noah's Ark" was always looked for. We hailed with acclamation of astonished recognition, Noah and Mrs. Noah, Messieurs and Mesdames Shem, Ham and Japhet. There was no way of telling the men and women apart; they were exactly alike; but the elephant and giraffe you could distinguish at a glance, on account of the spots on the giraffe. So also the dog and the cow; because the cow; was always white and blue, while the dog was invariably plain blue. Within twenty-four hours after the landing Ararat, the baby would have all the paint sucked off Shem, Ham and the hired man, and the doctor would be sent for.

The red monkey climbing a red stick was another regular Christmas visitor. He was highly esteemed as a light luncheon by the baby. It never seemed to affect the infant unpleasantly, to himself that is; although the cloudy symphony in red and blue about his innocent mouth was apt to make the beholder shiver. But it made the monkey look sick. Then there was a soldier on a box, with a major-general's uniform, beating a drum. You turned a crank, the general lifted his sticks high in the air, and something in the box made a noise as much like a drum as a peal of thunder is like a piccolo. These things as toys were of no great value, but as practical and useful object lessons they were beyond all price, on the minus side.

The Merry Children.

Mrs. Murrayhill—"Celeste, what is Master Harold crying for?"

Celeste—"I happened to say, madame, that I lived with a little boy who had a hundred and four presents one Xmas."

Mrs. Murrayhill—"Well?"

Celeste—"Why, then he insisted up on counting his, and he has been kicking and crying like this ever since, because he has only ninety-eight."

Mrs. Murrayhill, soothingly—"There, Harold, dear—You shall have some more if you want them. I should think, Celeste, you could get on peaceably with the little fellow to-day of all days.

A Joyous Christmas.

"I don't suppose they make as much of Christmas out West as we do here in the East, do they?" added an Eastern tourist of a Deadwood girl.

"Oh, mercy, yes!" was the enthusiastic reply. "Why, I've known my pa and my brother Dock to win as many as twenty-nine pigeons and ten turkeys at one shooting-match, to say nothing of going to two lynchings in the evening. We always lay ourselves out for a jolly good time Christmas."

Good Evidence.

"Do you think Charlie loves me, mamma?" asked the fair young girl anxiously.

"Certainly he does. Haven't you noticed that he always wears the gloves you bought him for a Christmas present, though they are two sizes too large?"

"German Syrup"

I must say a word as to the efficacy of German Syrup. I have used it in my family for Bronchitis, the result of Colds, with most excellent success. I have taken it myself for Throat Troubles, and have derived good results therefrom. I therefore recommend it to my neighbors as an excellent remedy in such cases. James T. Durette, Earlysville, Va. Beware of dealers who offer you "something just as good." Always insist on having Boschee's German Syrup.

TOWER'S FISH BRAND The Best Waterproof Coat in the WORLD!
SLICKER
The FISH BRAND SLICKER is warranted waterproof, and will keep you dry in the hardest storm. The new POMMEL SLICKER is a perfect riding coat, and covers the entire saddle. Beware of imitations. Don't buy a coat if the "Fish Brand" is not on it. Illustrated Catalogue free. A. J. TOWER, Boston, Mass.

FAT FOLKS REDUCED
Mrs. Alice Maple, Oregon, Mo., writes "My weight was 320 pounds, now it is 195, reduction of 125 lbs." For circulars address, with 6c. Dr. O. W. F. SNYDER, McVicker's Theatre, Chicago, Ill.

"WELL BRED, SOON WED." GIRLS WHO USE
SAPOLIO
ARE QUICKLY MARRIED. TRY IT IN YOUR NEXT HOUSE-CLEANING.

A SONG OF KRISS KRINGLE'S TREE.

Kriss Kringle's bells are jingling,
The frosty air is tingling,
All silvery sounds are mingling,
This merry, merry day.
With many a fleecy feather,
The snow-flakes dance together;
Here comes Kriss Kringle's weather,
In good Kriss Kringle's way.

Kriss Kringle's measures tripping,
Kriss Kringle's sweetness sipping,
The while his gifts we're clipping
From brave Kriss Kringle's tree.
We set the candles burning,
Like stars and planets turning,
And every dream and yearning
There satisfied we see.

Alone and solitary,
Aloof from elf and fairy,
It grew in forest airy
Through many a season dim—
To reach its day of glory,
When winter woods were hoary,
To hear Kriss Kringle's story,
And dear Kriss Kringle's hymn,

O tree that wearies never!
O tree that charms us ever!
O tree that lives forever!
The blessed Christmas tree.
Where love and kindness blending
Round up the year's fair ending,
There heaven's own beauty lending,
Behold Kriss Kringle's tree.

—Margaret E. Sangster, in Harper's Young People.

A CHRISTMAS CAROL.

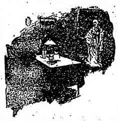
STAVE I.

CRASH! bang! rattle! clank!

It was Christmas Eve. It had been a cold day in New York, especially in the establishment of Dubbs & Dobbs. A check had been returned marked "No Funds;" a new clerk had insulted an old customer; the porter had gone on a premature drunk, and Peter Dubbs had made it chilly for all hands. And now Peter Dubbs was sitting in his second-story back bedroom in the boarding-house, sipping cold gin and water, when there came the succession of sounds with which the story opens.

"Mary Ann cleaning off the table," said Peter, knowingly.

But the rattle, clank and bang sounded again, and was evidently approaching. It was coming up the stairs—it was on the landing outside—the door flew open and it was inside.



"Bless me," said Peter, peevishly, "if it isn't Dobbs!"

So it was. Hiram Dobbs, dead fifteen years, now stood in the room, attired in a nice, cool sheet, with impedimenta in the shape of a chain of cash boxes, ledgers, mortgages and so forth.

"Peter," said Dobbs, in a deep voice; "how d'ye do?"

"How d'ye do, Hiram?" returned Peter, crossly. "Shut that door, please. I know you don't mind drafts, but please to remember I am mortal."

"I was mortal once," said Dobbs, impressively.

"I'm aware of it," retorted Dubbs, sharply. "For goodness's sake, Hiram, don't talk platitudes."

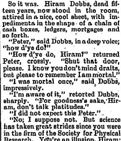
"I did not expect this Peter."

"No; I suppose not. But science has taken great strides since you were in the firm of the Society for Physical Research. You're an illusion, Hiram; or at best, a gaseous compound."

The ghost of Dobbs sighed.

"I'm sorry you're on to me," he said, dismally, "because I've got to go through with this thing. I suppose you know why I'm here?"

"Yes; I know," answered Peter, wearily. "You are going to show me my past and future, so as to soften my heart and make me raise salaries all around. How's the weather, Hiram?"



"Snowing," said the ghost, picking up a bit. "Get on to my robe Peter, and we'll start."

STAVE II.

"This," said the ghost, "is where you were born."

"Yep;" said Peter, with a frown. "I remember it well; same old rattle-trap shanty; hasn't been painted since I ran away from it. How many times I have been shingled and slippered in that house! And there's the old school-house! More fond memories. What became of the school-master, Hiram?"

"He married—a widow, I believe."

"I'm glad of it—he deserved it," said Peter, savagely. "Ah! there's the old grocery store that my Paw used to stand off for provisions while I stole kindling wood from the rear end."

"The good old grocer is dead now," said the ghost of Hiram Dobbs, impressively.

"And doesn't need the kindling wood, now? No; I suppose not. Pass on, Hiram; these recollections are getting painful."

STAVE III.

"Do you remember this?"

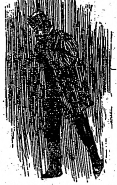
"Well, I should sneer! Ketchum & Cheatham's Emporium, where I first learned that forty-inch-wide goods were thirty-eight, and all wool dress cashmere contained thirty per cent. cotton! And there's old Ketchum—Honest Bill, we used to call him—marking down the bargain mohairs from seventy-five to eighty-seven. He went to Congress, didn't he?"

"No; that was Cheatham—Ketchum started a bank and took the most of it to Europe."

"Bless his old heart! And there's old Drudger, the book-keeper! First man to come and the last to leave, for thirty-nine years. Let me see, did they take him into the firm?"

"No; they took him to the Old Men's Home in a street-car. Virtue, Peter, is always its own reward."

"So I have found," observed Dubbs, "and costs much less to the employer. Any more scenes on the canvas, Hiram?"



"Yes. We will now come to the present. I will show you, Peter, the home of your own book-keeper, and may it be a lesson to you.

STAVE IV.

The drawing-room, dining-room and parlor combined, of a cosy flat. Anthony Tumplington was at tea with Mrs. Tumplington, Aunt Jane, four minor Tumplingtons and the baby! How he swallowed the napkin ring, upset the milk and yanked the table cloth sixteen ways for Sunday, until Aunt Jane and Mrs. Tumplington fairly roared, while Anthony endeavored to conceal his delight by saying "Durn it" under his breath. Even when Baby landed the matter of a saucer full of tripe and oysters in the bosom of his vest, he did no more than knock over two chairs, as he made his escape to the bed-room. And the four minor Tumplingtons—what juvenile lightness of heart and heaviness of appetites, with butter fifty cents a pound! It was wonderful.

"They seem happy, Peter," observed Dobbs, giving his chain a cheery rattle. "Does your money bring you more joy?"

"It's my money that's bringing this joy, if I'm not mistaken," retorted Peter, suspiciously.

Then the table was cleared; Aunt Jane went to work on a tidy, three Tumplingtons fell to playing cut-throat euchre in the corner, while the fourth poured over "Dirty Dan, the Delaware;" Mrs. Tumplington went maudlin over the baby, and Anthony smoked a brier-wood pipe that had seen better days.

"And so," said Aunt Jane, "you won't get a raise on the first of the year?"

"And 'oo sinks it's a shame, don't 'oo?" said Mrs. Tumplington to the baby.

"Don't be rough on the old guy," said Anthony, good-naturedly. "If it does him any good to be short and sharp, it doesn't do me any harm."

"That's you, for all the world!" cried Mrs. Tumplington, dropping into the vernacular. "I think it's real mean in him, not to give you a big salary, and save you all the extra work at night."

"What do you mean?" asked Aunt Jane.

"She refers to the extra set of books I'm keeping," exclaimed Anthony, in his manly, straightforward way. "I've got them fixed so that I can rake in fifteen hundred a year, and I defy any one to tumble to it. It's a system of my own, and could just as well nail three thousand; but, hang it all I believe in doing the square thing."

"Quite right," said Aunt Jane, approvingly.

"Poor old Dubbs," continued Anthony, musingly; "why, the old man thinks he's as sharp as tacks, and everybody in the store is pulling his leg for all he's worth."

"Pulling his—eh?" said Aunt Jane, in surprise.

"His leg. In a metaphorical sense, I mean. The cashier is in cahoots with the salesmen, and the porter stands in with the errand-boys. Dash it all! I hate to see a man robbed; but what can I do? If he begins to investigate, where will I be!" "Quite right," said Aunt Jane. "Be faithful and true, Anthony, and you will not regret it."

"I'm on," returned Anthony, briefly. "And now, I'll shin out and get a tree. Lucilla, resurrect last year's ornaments, and we'll make a stagger at a display that will paralyze the flat. Get to bed, you young rascals, or you won't find so much as a potato in your stockings tomorrow morning."

And, with that, he went merrily out into the frosty air to lay the foundations for his usual Christmas Jag.

STAVE V.

When Anthony came in the office on the morning of December 26th he thought his employer looked at him rather queerly; but he dismissed the thought as due to Imagination and Hot Scotch.

But there was no imagination about the way Peter closed and locked the door and faced his book-keeper.

"Mr. Tumplington," he said, suddenly, "I'm on."

"Sir!" said poor Anthony, turning pale.

"I've tumbled to your doubleentry, Mr. Tumplington," continued Peter, drawing a paper out of his pocket.

"It's a warrant!" cried Anthony. "Gosh—ding it!"

"No; Anthony, it's a partnership agreement," said Peter, cheerily. "I'm going to give you a third interest in the business. When anybody cheats me, I want to reward him; and, besides, you'll protect me from the others, won't you, Tony?"

"My benefactor!" murmured Anthony. "Yes, indeed, I will. Oh, won't Lucilla bless you, and Aunt Jane!—"

"There, there, my good Tony. Ah, Hiram, old fellow, you have put me in the way of a worthy successor!"

Never look a gift horse in the teeth. It is also wrong to look a Christmas gift in price mark.

AN OLD ENGLISH CHRISTMAS.

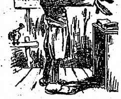
How Sir Roger De Coverly Kept the Feast in Queen Anne's Time.

Sir Roger, after the laudable custom of his ancestors, always keeps open house at Christmas. A gentleman learned from him, say a writer in the Spectator of 1712, that he had killed eight fat hogs for this particular season; that he had dealt out his chimes very liberally among his neighbors and that in particular he had sent a string of hogs' puddings with a pack of cards to every poor family in the parish.

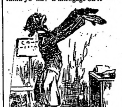
"I have often thought," says Sir Roger, "it happens well that Christmas should fall about the middle of the winter. It is the most dead uncomfortable time of the year, when the poor would suffer very much from their poverty and cold if they had not good cheer, warm fires and Christmas gambols to support them. I love to rejoice their poor hearts at this season and to see the whole village merry in my great hall.

"I allow a double quantity of malt to my small beer and set it a running for twelve days for every one that calls for it. I have always a piece of cold beef and a mince-pie on the table, and am wonderfully pleased to see my tenants passing away a whole evening in playing their innocent tricks and smutting one another.

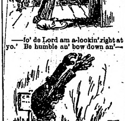
The Shelter of Hypocrisy.



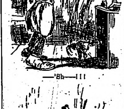
Rev. Shinbones Johnson—"Breddern and sistahs, nebah 'propriet de property which is not your'n. If you see a chicken wanderin' roun, don't think yo' hav' a mawgage on it——



——fo' de Lord am a-lookin' right at yo.' Be humble an' bow down an'——



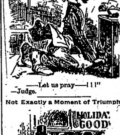
——'Sh——!!!



——Let us pray——!!!"

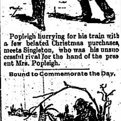
—Judge.

Not Exactly a Moment of Triumph.



Popleigh hurrying for his train with a few belated Christmas purchases, meets Singleton, who was his unsuccessful rival for the hand of the present Mrs. Popleigh.

Bound to Commemorate the Day.



Tramp, who has seen better days—"This ain't exactly my idea of Yuletide festivities; but I've got ter do something out o' respect for old times."

Meals on Christmas Day.

Let your breakfast table show forth its brightest silver, china and glass and its snowiest linen, writes Frances E. Lanigan in a timely paper on "The Table on Christmas Day" in the Christmas number of The Ladies' Home Journal. Have for your centre piece a low bowl of holly, showing the bright, glistening red and green to those gathered about it. Fruit, either white grapes, oranges, or best of all, shaddocks served with powdered sugar, make a good foundation for all the sweets and goodies that this feast day sends into the stomachs of most of us. Oatmeal or pearl hominy served with cream should come next, and lastly, French chops served with peas and creamed potatoes, accompanied by hot rolls, and steaming, fragrant coffee. Hot cakes are best avoided on holidays, I think, and simplify matters in the kitchen.

For luncheon, let bouillon in cups be served as your first course, follow it with thin slices of cold roast beef, ham or tongue, served with brown hashed potatoes, a dish of sardines served with sliced lemon, and another of chopped celery with mayonnaise dressing. A dish of fruit is your most successful desert, and coffee, chocolate or tea, as the tastes of the family dictate, the best liquid accompanment. As most of the dishes of this luncheon can be prepared easily, and as it may be easily served and even more easily "cleared up after," it has something more than its hygienic qualities to recommend it.

Not All Over.

Frost—Well, it's all over.

Snow—What's all over?

Frost—Christmas. I say it only comes once a year, and it's all over until next time.

Snow—Not by a jugful. The bills are not in yet for half the stuff my wife bought and charged to me. Selected.

A Terrible Strain.

Employer anxiously,—Does Mr. De Goode drink?

Confidential Clerk—Not a drop.

"He has been two hours late for three mornings, and he looks as if he had been on a terrible spree."

"It's all right. On Christmas he gave his boy a drum."—Exchange.

It Wasn't Necessary.

First Sweet Girl—Did you have a mistletoe bough in your house?

Second Sweet Girl—No, I had one ready, but forgot to put it up.

"Of all things! Forgot it?"

"Yes; you see, George and I somehow or other became engaged the day before."—Floating.

When you have over-exerted yourself by running, jumping, or working, there is nothing that will relieve the soreness of your joints and muscles so quickly and effectually as Salvation Oil, the greatest cure on earth for pain, 25cts.

A green Christmas makes a cross coal man.—Milwaukee Wisconsin.

The police-force in all parts of the country bear uniform testimony to the great value of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup as a remedy for cough, cold and incipient consumption. They all emphasize the fact that no one should be without it.

Song of a barber—Christmas combes but once a year.—Washington Hatchet.

ALLEN'S IRON TONIC BITTERS is the most powerful Tonic in the World. All genuine bear the signature of J. P. Allen, Druggist, St. Paul, Minn.

A green Christmas makes a fat church yard and a slim livery stable keeper.—Somerville Journal.

"That unrivalled complexion," said a prominent New Yorker alluding to a lady acquaintance, "was the result of using Garfield Tea."
Send for free sample to 319 West 45th Street, New York City.

From the editor's almanac—About this time plant Christmas poems—in the waste-basket.—Boston Post.

Mr. Herman Hicks

"Three years ago, as a result of CATARRH, I entirely lost my hearing and was Deaf For More Than a Year.

To my surprise and great joy when I had taken three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla I found my hearing was returning. I kept on till I had taken three more and I can hear perfectly well. I am troubled but very little with the catarrh. I consider this a remarkable case." HERMAN HICKS, 30 Carter Street, Rochester, N. Y.

HOOD'S PILLS are purely vegetable.

CURES RISING
∴ BREAST ∴

"MOTHER'S FRIEND" is the greatest blessing ever offered child-bearing woman. I have been a mid-wife for many years, and in each case where "Mother's Friend" had been used it has accomplished wonders and relieved much suffering. It is the best remedy for rising of the breast known, and worth the price for that alone. MRS. M. M. BRUSTER, Montgomery, Ala.

I can tell all expectant mothers if they will use a few bottles of Mother's Friend they will go through the ordeal without any pain and suffering. MRS. MAY BRANHAM, Argusville, N. D.

Used Mother's Friend before birth of my eighth child. Will never cease its praise. MRS. J. F. MOORE, Colusa, Cal.

Sent by express, charges prepaid, on receipt of price, $1.50 per bottle.

BRADFIELD REGULATOR CO.,
Sold by all druggists. ATLANTA, GA.

Garfield Tea Overcomes results of bad eating.
Cures Constipation, Restores Complexion, Saves Doctors' Bills. Sample free. GARFIELD TEA CO., 319 W. 45th St., N.Y.
Cures Sick Headache

N. W. N. U. No. 52—1892

Very Anxious.

"That's four times you have tried that bank door to-day," said one of the bank patrols to a young man on the steps of a savings bank recently.

Yes, sir."

"You must be very anxious."

"I am, sir. My father-in-law gave my wife this $50 check as a Christmas present, and until I know whether it's good or not I can't rest."

When you give, give freely. Still, there's no harm if the jumping-jack you give your boy has a string to it.—Indianapolis Journal.

COPYRIGHT 1891

Fixed just right —Liver, Stomach, and Bowels, by Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They do it in just the right way, too—by using Nature's own methods. That's why they're better than the dreadful, old-fashioned pills, with their griping and violence.

But they're better in every way. In size, for instance, and dose. They're the smallest and the easiest to take; only one little Pellet is needed for a gentle laxative—three for a cathartic. They cleanse and regulate the system thoroughly—but it's done easily and naturally. Sick Headache, Bilious Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the Liver, Stomach and Bowels are prevented, relieved, and cured.

They're the cheapest pill you can buy, for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned. You pay only for value received.

Something else, that pays the dealer better, may be offered as "just as good." Perhaps it is, for him, but it can't be, for you.

Swift's Specific
A Tested Remedy For All
Blood and Skin Diseases
A reliable cure for Contagious Blood Poison, Inherited Scrofula and Skin Cancer.
As a tonic for delicate Women and Children it has no equal.
Being purely vegetable, is harmless in its effects.
A treatise on Blood and Skin Diseases mailed FREE on application.
Druggists Sell It.
SWIFT SPECIFIC CO.,
Drawer 3, Atlanta, Ga.

TAKE
Tutt's Tiny Pills
The first dose often astonishes the invalid, giving elasticity of mind, buoyancy of body, good digestion, regular bowels and solid flesh. Price, 25cts.

Asthma The African Kola Plant, discovered in Congo, West Africa, is Nature's Sure Cure for Asthma. Cure Guaranteed or No Pay. Export Office, 1164 Broadway, New York. For Large Trial Case, Free by Mail, address KOLA IMPORTING CO., 132 Vine St., Cincinnati, O.

JAY GOULD.

After all Jay Gould died of consumption. The doctors said he had neuralgia and Jay offered a million of dollars to any one who would cure him of his trouble. It turned out that he did not have neuralgia at all, but simply consumption. Don't you make this same mistake. If you feel that your lungs are weak or that you are subject to colds and coughs, or if your throat be sore and tender, get a bottle of Reid's German Cough & Kidney Cure and take it freely. It contains no poison and it is the only cough remedy on the market that ministers to all of the excretory organs. The small bottles are twenty-five cents, the large size fifty cents. Every druggist has it,

SYLVAN REMEDY CO, Peoria Ills.

EARHUFF ORGANS
The Only Absolutely Mouse and Dust Proof Organ On the Market.
Artistic designs, good workmanship, best Hand rubbed finish. Every Organ Guaranteed. If not handled by your dealer write to factory for prices. Address
J. G. EARHUFF, ORGAN CO.
NORTH ST. PAUL, MINN.

ELY'S CREAM BALM
Cleanses the Nasal Passages, Allays Pain and Inflammation, Heals the Sores. Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell.
TRY THE CURE.
CATARRH
THE CURE FOR CATARRH COLD IN HEAD HAY FEVER DEAFNESS HEADACHE ELY'S CREAM BALM 50c
HAY-FEVER
A particle is applied into each nostril and is agreeable. Price 50 cents at Druggists or by mail. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren St., New York.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.
CATARRH
Sold by Druggists or sent by mail. 50c. E. T. Hazeltine, Warren, Pa.

Minn Hist Society

St. Hilaire Spectator.

VOLUME XI. ST. HILAIRE, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 28, 1892. NUMBER 23.

THE WEEKLY NEWS DIGEST.

EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK IN A CONDENSED FORM.

The Latest and Most Important News of the World, Culled From the Telegraph Reports of the Press Associations.

The Capital.

Secretary Tracy will locate in New York and practice law at the close of his term.

The existing order of the commissioner of the general land office requiring settlers upon Mille Lacs lands since 1884 to be ejected, will probably be revoked at an early date by the secretary of the interior.

Secretary Charles Foster has issued what is stated to be an important circular to custom officers modifying circular 170, regarding requirements as to consular invoices.

The statement of the Hamburg newspaper intimating that the United States consul at Hamburg was about to resume the issue of clean bills of health to vessels clearing from that port for the United States, notwithstanding the fact that fresh cases of cholera were reported there is entirely discredited here.

The offer of mine superintendent Alden, of Butte, Mont., to coin a silver dollar of more intrinsic value than the standard dollar issued by the government at the rate of 90 cents apiece will receive no consideration at the treasury department, for the simple reason that there is no legal authority for the acceptance of such an offer, even if it were regarded as advantageous.

Record of Casualties.

Fire at Carthage, N. Y., caused a loss of $50,000.

The Faulk Furniture Company, at Buffalo, was burned out. Loss $100,000.

In a fire at Green Ridge, Mo., Peter Betscho was burned to death.

Three men were injured by an explosion of natural gas at Muncie, Ind.

The First Baptist Church at Galesburg, Ill., burned. Loss $30,000.

The Cahaba mine, near Birmingham, Ala., is burning.

William A. Shultz, aged 21 years, a son of Augustus Shultz, was thrown from his buggy near Valparaiso, Ind., and killed.

Three painters went down with a falling scaffold at Cincinnati, and all were badly hurt.

A freight train and a passenger train were demolished in a collision on the Cincinnati Southern at McKinley.

Thomas Hodges, aged 20 years, fell through the ice at Hancock, Michigan., and was drowned.

Three trotting horses perished in a fire at Evansville, Ind. They were owned by William Akin.

During a performance by an amateur dramatic club at Elgin, Ill., Miss Rose Schultz was so carried away by her part that she stabbed the villian and seriously wounded him. The injured man is Mahlon Jones.

Michael Noonan, of St. Louis, while working at the factory of the St. Louis Paving Brick Company, in Galesburg, Ill., was struck on the head by a rock from a blast and killed.

At Fort White, Fla., the boiler in the gin-house of Joseph H. Lee exploded, killing Frank Smith, colored and seriously injuring the proprietor and half a dozen others. The building and contents were destroyed.

People in Print.

By the transfusion of artificial or chemical blood into her veins the life of Mrs. Louise Christian of Lyons Mountain, N. Y., has been saved. She has been very ill for a long while and was apparently about to breathe her last.

President Harrison will probably spend the holiday recess duck shooting on Chesapeake bay.

M. Brisson, who was recently invited to form a cabinet for President Carnot and is chairman of the committee investigating the Panama canal scandal, is a prominent Free Mason and a deadly foe of the Jesuits.

The remains of Miss Mary A. West, the noted temperance advocate, left Yokohama, for the United States. A delegation will be sent to Vancouver from Chicago to receive the remains and act as escort.

M. Pasteur will be seventy years old on Dec. 27, and on that occasion he is to receive a costly present from the chief Russian medical men, who are sending a delegation to Paris with the gift and their best wishes.

Sinful Doings.

Sheriff Holtz, at Alton, Ill., was fined $100 for tampering with a jury.

Fifteen Oklahoma invaders were arrested and jailed at Wichita, Kan.

Miss Sarah C. Castle, a stenographer, committed suicide at Elkhart, Ind.

Mrs. Edward Radtka, of Stratford, Ill., suicided with rat poison.

C. J. Armstrong, tax collecter of Butler County, Ala., was waylaid, murdered and robbed.

John Fryhoff, a German gardener at Lima, O., killed his wife and then fired into his own heart the contents of a shotgun.

A. C. Hall, who robbed the postoffice at Lincoln, Neb., was arrested at Sacramento, Cal.

William Gurney, of Smithville, Ind., had trouble with his wife and shot himself through the head twice. He will die.

At Altoona Station, La., Cap. B. B. Pierce and J. W. Garrett were instantly killed by an assassin who fired through a window.

Milo Tomlinson, a well-known horse man of Crawfordsville, Ind., is missing. He had disposed of many forged notes.

A mob at Williamsburg, Col., attempted to lynch John Voorbis, a school teacher, who punished pupils by pulling their teeth.

Texas soldiers kill two Mexican revolutionists who had fired upon them after being released from custody.

Three more arrests have been made at Pittsburg in the alleged poisoning plot at Homestead. The prisoners are H. E. Dempsey, district master workman; J. M. Davidson and Patrick Gallagher.

Henry Starr, the noted Indian Territory desperado, who shot and killed United States Deputy Marshal Floyd Wilson, was captured by United States Deputy Marshal "Kick" Bruner and posse.

O. B. Jones was shot and instantly killed, and his son, Jessie Jones, perhaps fatally shot in the abdomen at their home near Leicester, N. C., while resisting arrest.

Ernest F. Eckert, confidential clerk for H. B. Rea & Co., pork packers, was arrested at Pittsburg charged with the embezzlement of from $10,000 to $50,000. The thefts are said to extend over a period of five years.

Burglars raided the residence of Thomas Flanigan at Ishpeming, Mich., securing several hundred dollars in bills and miscellaneous booty. Attempts were made several times previously to enter the same dwelling.

In Oklahoma territory a white man named Cora recently sued a Creek Indian for unpaid wages and secured judgment. A party of Indians called at the man's house recently, bound him and carried him into the woods where his body was found hanging to a tree.

Five Chinamen recently arrested near Lewiston, N. Y., have been convicted of unlawful entry into the United States, and sentenced to thirty days' imprisonment at hard labor in the Erie county penitentiary. When released they will be deported to China.

The Foreign Budget.

MM. Clemenceau and Deroulede fight a duel, but neither is injured.

There have been 25 cases of cholera in the last week and two deaths at Hamburg.

The commercial convention between France and the United states was ratified by the chamber of deputies.

A London Cable says: Sir Richard Owen is dead. He was one of the world's foremost specialists in comparative anatomy.

The French government has sent telegraphic orders to Gen. Dodds to raise the blockade on the coast of Dahomey.

Because of the failure of the Barings, an English company has allowed a concession of 18,000,000 acres of land in Southern California to lapse.

The rumors of Dr. Emin's death are erroneous. Dr. Emin is now following Stanley's route through the Congo state, and but for an affection of the eyes, is in exceptionally good health.

At the Canadian Express office, at Sarnia, Ont., $7,000 was taken out of the safe in the office while the clerk was at dinner. The robber or robbers, if there were more than one, made good their escape, apparently without leaving a single tangible clue.

News from Ecuador reports an epidemic of small-pox in the province of Azuray. There is no vaccine obtainable in the province, and the disease is spreading rapidly.

The tramp steamer Montserrat, which recently carried a cargo of Gilbert islanders to Guatemala coffee plantations, has now been bought by the slave dealers, and will be used to transport by wholesale these poor, ignorant South sea islanders to the unhealthy coffee plantations of central America.

The Paris journal La Presse states that the Marquis de Mores is confined to bed in a hotel at Brussels with a severe wound in the right shoulder received in a duel with a leading Parisian. The duel grew out of a violent discussion on anti-semitism. The encounter took place several days ago, but was kept a profound secret.

The marriage of Miss W. Cuyler of Baltimore, Md., to Sir Philip Henry Brian Grey Edgerton will take place Jan. 4. Sir Philip is a nephew of the sixth earl of Selkirk. Miss Cuyler is a daughter of the late Patrick Cuyler, of the United States engineering corps. It is claimed by her friends that she is the most beautiful woman in the world. Sir Philip is known in American society.

Labor.

Gompers was re-elected president of the American Federation of Labor.

Coal miners in the Peoria, Ill., district struck for an advance of wages of 7 per cent, and won the contest in a few hours.

The union printers have succeeded in inducing Conkey, the world's fair catalogue concessionaire, to come to their terms. An agreement is already settled upon which the Conkey establishment is "unionized." Accordingly the printer's protest was withdrawn from the world's fair committee.

Political Echoes.

Carl Schurz, in a letter to Dr. Emil Dorn, denies the statement that he is to be appointed minister to Germany.

The executive committee of the National Association of Democratic Clubs met at Washington and decided to continue the club work.

About the Railroads.

The total earnings of the Canadian Pacific for the week ended Dec. 14 were $438,000; for the same period last year, 427,000.

The Louisiana supreme court declared constitutional the law passed two years ago, and known as the "Jim Crow" law, making it compulsory on railroads to provide separate cars for negroes.

General News.

John Shields, an Erie, Pa., iron moulder, is heir to a $5,000,000 estate in England.

Louis Sinn, a Homestead worker, is dying, and it is believed he is a victim of the alleged poisoning plot.

It is reported that Lorillard, the New Jersey tobacco manufacturer, has joined the tobacco trust.

The Texas Rangers were fired upon by two Mexican revolutionists, and returned the fire. The two men were shot dead.

Gov. Tillman, of South Carolina, has signed the bill giving the state railroad commission power to fix rates.

Mrs. Matthew M. Gardner, a society belle of Nashville, Tenn., is suing for divorce, alleging cruel treatment and desertion. Her husband is worth $500,000.

Father Malone of Denver, editor of the Colorado Catholic, speaks strongly in favor of Archbishop Ireland's attitude on the school question.

A determined effort will be made this winter to have the New York legislature abolish capital punishment and substitute life imprisonment.

Bishop Wigger, is said to have apologized to Father Corrigan, thus ending the church wrangle.

The treasurer of Tippecanoe County, Ind., levied upon a Big Four switch engine and fifteen cars to satisfy the claim of the county for unpaid taxes.

Diphtheria and scarlet fever have broken out among the Dutch colonists at Alamosa, Col., who are just now trying to find out whether they have been robbed by the promoters of the colonization scheme.

An inventory has been filed at the probate court in Salem, Mass., of the estate of John G. Whittier. The amount is $133,729, of which $8,500 is real estate. The balance is personal property, largely in stocks and bonds.

In a suit at New York by E. M. Smedburg, the complaint charges Senator Proctor with being engaged in a fraudulent and illegal scheme to depreciate the apparent value of the property and to misappropriate the assets of the Vermont Marble Company, of which he was president from 1880 to 1890.

Sven Wiren, a Danish newspaper man, has arrived in Chicago, bound around the world. Two months ago he left Copenhagen penniless, and intends to make the tour in eighteen months, to demonstrate, as he puts it the "power of the press." He is not quite nineteen years old.

NORTHWEST NEWS BUDGET.

THE WEEKLY ROUND-UP OF IMPORTANT NEWS.

A Concise Account of the Happenings of the Past Week in Minnesota, North Dakota, Iowa and Wisconsin.

Minnesota.

A mad dog bites many people at Alexandria.

State Auditor Bierman's biennial report is given out.

The improvements at Faribault during the year will probably foot up $150,000.

The Duluth Curling Club has begun the erection of a $10,000 club house at Glen Avon.

John Reiser, Jr., of Dexter, hung himself in his granary. No cause can be assigned for the rash act.

Judge E. D. French, of Redwood Falls, was seriously injured by being thrown from his buggy.

Charles Hennige tried in St. Paul for complicity in the murder of August Hoppe by Mrs. Smith is acquitted.

Public Examiner Kenyon files his biennial report on the condition of the state and country treasuries and banks.

The passage of a law for uniformity in the incorporation of villages is being agitated.

The Church of St. Peter Claver was dedicated at St. Paul. It is for colored Catholics.

A branch general store of R. H. Kempton with contents burned at Redwood Falls. The loss will exceed the insurance by $3,000.

George Woods killed himself with a razor at Mendota. He was subject to epileptic fits, and took his life while temporarily insane.

A collision occurs on the Great Northern railway at Nelson, Minn., in which five men are killed, some being burned, and six badly injured.

No tidings has been received from John K. Shaw, the Duluth insurance agent who mysteriously disappeared from his home on November 6, last.

A bill is to be introduced in the Minnesota legislature to tax inheritances and devote the proceeds to the improvement of public highways.

Judge Williston holds that the finding of the medical commission which pronounced George Peters, the Stillwater murderer, sane does not invalidate the verdict of the jury which declared him insane.

The Waseca County Agricultural, Mechanical and Industrial society held its annual meeting in Waseca recently. Steps were taken to purchase county fair grounds.

The German-American bank, incorporated with a capital of $50,000, opened the doors of their new $17,000 building for business at Winona. The day's deposits amounted to $7,000.

While Robert Boles, a baker, was going to his work the other morning he was held up by a footpad, who attempted to rob him, but failed. He also shot at Boles, the bullet going through his hat.

There is a fair prospect of Rochester having an opera house in the near future. Huber Bastian bequeathed $5,000 for a library building, and it is proposed to add $10,000 or $12,000 to this and build an opera house and library combined.

Rochester will probably hold another winter carnival this year, with the accompaniments of tobogganing, skating, ice palace, etc. The subject is now being agitated, and will be carried to a successful conclusion.

Augustus H. Hornsby, a St. Paul real estate dealer, who for years served as an officer in the British army in India, and has relatives among the English nobility, has disappeared, and warrants have been issued for his arrest.

Ramsey county commissioners report that James H. Burns has made heavy over charges for county printing. They instruct the county attorney to bring proceedings to recover the amount overpaid.

Edward Machle, an old resident of Carlton and Pine counties, shot and instantly killed himself at the American house at Barnum. His relatives are in Rochester, N. Y. He has been living alone at Sturgeon Lake, Minn., for some time.

C. D. Bailey was stopped at Crookston, while on his way home from work by a man who presented a pistol in his face and demanded his cash. Mr. Bailey had but a small amount of money on his person, which he delivered to the man, who then left and up to the present time has not been seen.

The mad dog shot at Garfield recently, was received at Alexandria by V. K. Vanniman, one of the four persons bitten. The body will be examined by an expert, and the victims will be sent away for treatment if the disease is proven to be rabies. A great many dogs have been shot, and almost every man is a traveling arsenal, and dogs not muzzled are shot on sight.

A Winona special says: Three laboring men who have been engaged for some time in chopping wood on the Wisconsin side of the river have disappeared. It is believed that in crossing the river they fell into one of the numerous airholes and were drowned. The men's names were Alex Taski, Albert Kunkorch and John Lorbitski.

Wisconsin.

Truman Hayes, of Oregon, Dane County, who was arrested charged with larceny, was acquitted by a jury.

Over $800 has been paid by Marathon County the past year in bounties on wolf and wildcat scalps.

The Kirby-Carpenter Company, of Marinette, last season banked 97,000,000 feet of timber.

Mathias Creese, of the town of Caledonia, Racine County, had his shoulder dislocated by a fall.

Over $500 worth of sheep are reported to have been killed in the vicinity of Lyndon by wolves.

The home of Policeman William C. Burmeister, of Madison, was partially destroyed by fire. The loss will reach $800, with $600 insurance.

A 4-year old son of Mrs. E. N. Taylor, of Ripon, was burned to death. The child was playing near the stove and its clothes caught fire.

William Arndt, of Sheboygan, intends to erect a large warehouse and elevator at that place to be used for the storage of grain and flour.

G. W. Roe, an Oshkosh banker and capitalist, has purchased the Belmont building at Chicago. The price paid was $65,000. The building has a yearly rental of $6,500.

William Steele, an old settler of Jefferson County, died at his home in the town of Plymouth, aged 98 years. Deceased was a well man until a year ago and used to walk four miles every day.

William Barber, an old hunter living at Kenosha, was shot in the knee by the accidental discharge of a weapon in the hands of a boy named Manor. The leg will likely have to be amputated.

Mrs. Kate Fargo, of Fond du Lac, has commenced suit for divorce against her husband, Silas Fargo, in the Florence County circuit court. The parties have been married twenty-one years.

William Hein, of Plymouth, was held up by a masked man who demanded his money. The robber has his trouble for his pains, as Mr. Hein happened to be without a cent at the time.

Prof. R. C. Hindley, a former professor of chemistry at Racine College, now of Philadelphia, will return to Racine, having accepted a position with the Horlick Food Company.

James Radford, a well-known lumberman of Oconto, fell off a freight car at Powers, Mich., and broke his neck. Deceased was 35 years old, and leaves a wife and child.

The brick block owned by A. J. Wilcox and Felix Cardinal, both former residents of Chippewa Falls, was burned at Little Falls, Minn. The loss is $30,000, with only $5,600 insurance.

Warren Flint, of Chippewa Falls, has seven camps on Fisher River, and expects to bank 20,000,000 feet of logs this winter. The outlook at present is very favorable.

Sheboygan is to have another chair factory with a capital stock of $50,000, which has already been subscribed. It will employ 100 men.

Alex. Clermont, the pioneer mail carrier, living at Depere, has been granted a pension of $8 a month. He served in the Black Hawk war.

Fred Hoffman, a cattle buyer of Black River Falls, had his nose broken while assisting in unloading a car load of cattle at Chicago.

The second-hand store of William Perry, at Madison, was entered by theives and ten watches and numerous other articles stolen.

North Dakota.

The skeleton of Killian Bosick, who disappeared from Willow City, N. D., was found in the Turtle Mountains. He had suicided.

Frank Peck, a Grand Forks gambler, was shot in a saloon by a barber named McConkey. The bullet shattered his thigh bone probably necessitating amputation.

In the United States court at Grand Forks Pasquale Difiori was sentenced to a fine of $150, the cost of prosecution, and one day's imprisonment for selling liquor to the Indians.

In the district court at Grand Forks M. Ryan was found guilty of shooting at Officer Sullivan with an intent to kill. The affair occurred in September, since which time Ryan has been confined in the hospital by a serious wound inflicted by the officer in self defense.

Arthur McGahey and Tom Hill, arraigned for shooting at each other at Grand Forks with intent to kill, pleaded not guilty. McGahey is a gambler of east Grand Forks, and is charged with undue intimacy with Hill's wife.

About three weeks ago H. C. Newton, for thirteen years Northern Pacific agent at Castleton, had an operation for catarrh performed by a specialist in St. Paul. He came home, caught cold, and after a brief illness, died. He leaves about $15,000 in property to his family.

Devils Lake has determined by special election to issue bonds in the sum of $17,500 for the purpose of erecting a large public school building. The bonds run for twenty years and draw 6 per cent. A premium of 2 per cent has already been offered for the bonds.

Deputy Marshal Schindler arrested Michael Dealy, president of the Bank of Rolla, on an indictment for subornation of perjury respecting land patents. He goes to Grand Forks and is confident of acquittal.

The new Unitarian church at Fargo, was badly damaged by fire and water. The edifice had just been completed and was accepted from the contractors. The damage will probably exceed $1,000, covered by insurance. The fire is supposed to have started from the furnace. The building was entirely paid for and was to be dedicated during the holidays.

The completion of Lloyd's new opera house at Jamestown, a three story brick structure costing $50,000, shows the prosperity and advancement of Northwestern towns and cities in a striking manner. The building was planned by Architect Carter, of Minneapolis, and is thoroughly equipped with every modern convenience. The theater is on the ground floor and has a seating capacity of 850, while the tributary population is 10,000.

In the United States court at Grand Forks, Augustine Lafort of Rolla was convicted of perjury in making proof on government land. Following this case President Derley, of the Bank of Rolla, and other prominent citizens are defendants in a case which will come up for trial soon, in which they are charged with conspiracy to defraud the government by inducing other parties to make fraudulent proof on government lands. Other cases will follow.

Iowa.

Des Moines will invest $300,000 in public parks.

William Ryan, 59 years old, was frozen to death, while intoxicated, near Lyons.

Rufus E. Graves, the Dubuque bank president, was convicted of fraudulent banking operations.

The Mississippi river at Keokuk is frozen over. Steamboat traffic is absolutely suspended from St. Louis to St. Paul.

Kimball & Champ, the Council Bluffs bankers, charged with embezzlement, were acquitted.

Edgar Moulton, of Cedar Rapids, confidential clerk of Superintendent Riser, of the Chicago & North-Western Railway, committed suicide.

W. E. Walker, a travelling man for the Cottage Organ Company, committed suicide at Perry, by taking morphine. His home is in Des Moines.

Gov. Bois has appointed N. B. Hyatt of Webster City, judge of the Eleventh Judicial district in place of J. L. Stevens, of Ames, resigned.

Rev. Dr. F. L. Patterson, of Mason City died at his home. His illness was of short duration, resulting from erysipelas of the head, which finally settled in his lungs and was the immediate cause of his death.

William Ryan, who worked on a farm near Bryant, came to Clinton recently and got drunk. He started to walk home at a late hour. Not arriving, search was made and his body was found in the hedge about a mile from here, frozen to death.

The will of the late Dr. Donnelly was filed for probate, at Tipton, leaving all his property to two brothers and three children. Mrs. Donnelly immediately began a suit to set aside the will. The sum of $25,000 is involved and the will shuts off her dower.

The breach of promise case at Atlantic, which attained so much notoriety, when called for trial, was settled, Potham paying the handsome plaintiff $600. She sued for $10,000.

A passenger train on the Chicago Great Western railroad near Des Moines came into collision with a freight train within a rod of a long, high trestle, James Bolen, of Kalamazoo, Mich., was seriously hurt. The other passengers and the trainmen escaped with bruises.

A freight train was wrecked at Waucoma and six cars loaded with coal were smashed in the ditch. The entire train is off the track. A broken rail was the cause. The track is torn up and ties cut off for 300 feet. No one was hurt.

The decision of the railroad commissioners in the Oskaloosa viaduct case was made public. The city of Oskaloosa complained that the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific and Burlington & Western crossings impeded travel and asked that a viaduct be ordered constructed under the crossings. The complaint is dismissed as the Board of Railroad Commissioners contend they have no jurisdiction to open streets in incorporated cities.

A Des Moines special says: The Prohibitionists assert that Mayor Lane has given assurance that he will veto the disorderly house ordinance which has passed its third reading in the city council. This is denied by others who favor the new ordinance. Enough aldermen are pledged to pass it on a final vote, but not over the mayor's veto. What Mayor Lane will do is the chief subject of interest now. The ultra Prohibitionists are greatly excited.

Wm. Herman, a tailor, was struck in the head with a piece of board in the hands of Charles Bittinger, in a drunken row at Ft. Dodge. Herman is in a precarious condition with small hopes for his recovery. Phillips Miller assisted Bittinger by kicking Herman while down. Both men are under arrest.

IN A SOUTHERN HOTEL.

A Kicker Who Kicked Most Unreasonably but Emphatically.

The landlord of the Southern hotel bit viciously into a twist of homespun tobacco.

"Now that drummer chap et come in on the 10:30 last night kicked cos he couldn't get a room to hisself with a stove in it. Said the fire in the fire-place burned his shins while his back was freezin'.

"Kicked cos the winder wouldn't shet tight, hadter have a clean towel and he'd be durned if he was gwine to use soft soap. Then he raised Cain cos ther want split-fire clean piller slips and sheet on the bed.

"He kept me and Sam on the trot for en hour, an then couldn't satisfy him. He jest sat in a chair and cussed like a pirut.

"This mornin' he kim down to breakfust lookin' like he'd turn a dost of per-simmons afore the frost teched 'em en tuck he's seat.

"The just thing he ust for was a napkin, I told him we was just out of napkins but jes make hisself ter home an' wipe his mouth on the table cloth.

"Sam fotched him the coffee.

"'Cup er koker, please; I can't drink coffee,' says he, sorter snappin' like.

"'Termorer's our koker day,' says I. Try some poke en co'n bread, it's powerful good these cold mornin's.'

"'Thanks,' says he, but he didn't tech 'em.

"'Let me have a couple er rolls en er cup er tea,' says he ter Sam.

"'Sassafack tea or sto' tea? says Sam.

"'Sto' tea.'

"'Black or green?'

"'Either will do,'

"'Haint got enny,' says Sam.

"'Gimme the other kind, then,' says he.

"'Hain't got enny of that either, boss.'

"'Well, the rolls en a glass er water.'

"'There's biskit, sah, bettern rolls,' says Sam.

"Well, the blamed fool groaned jest for all the worl' like he was gettin' religion.

"Then he tuck a biskit, en pintin' ter the butter, says:

"'Pass me the smearcase, please.'

"Sam had her explain fer him that 'twas butter, fresh country butter. Then he wouldn't have it.

"I was that mad that, if it hadn't bin fer fear I'd hurt the reputation of the house, I'd a tuck an' frailed him right there.

"Whad I charge him?

"Dollarn quartah fer bed and breakfast." And with a sigh for man's inhumanity to man, the landlord arose from his split bottomed chair and sauntered to the depot to meet the noon train.—New York Herald.

The Editor's Mistake.

Great Statesman—"You were in rather a sad condition when you left the banquet the other night."

Reporter—"Yes, I drank more than was good for me."

Great Statesman—"So I noticed. And it showed in your report of my speech. It was terribly mixed up. Didn't the editor raise a row about it?"

Reporter—"No. He didn't blame me any. He thought you were drunk."

Whistle vs. "Hey, There!"

No one but the man who has watched them knows how much faster street car drivers with a shrill nickel whistle get along than the street car drivers who only sing out, "Hey, there, Charlie!"

MURDERS AND SUICIDES.

A REIGN OF TERROR IN THE WORLD'S FAIR CITY.

One Man Shoots Two Pinkertons —A Negro Confesses Having Been Party to Atrocious Crimes Here and Abroad.

A Nice Place to Live.

Chicago, Dec. 26.—The spirit of "Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men," was not universal in Chicago yesterday. In the morgue lie the bodies of two men who have sought in another world the peace they failed to find in this. In the county hospital slowly gasping his life away lies a man who endeavored to enforce his argument with an ax and who succumbed to a ball from the revolver of his would-be victim. In another ward of the same institution is another man bruised and battered so that Christmas will be a vivid recollection for the rest of his natural life, and behind the bars of a prison cell is still another, a colored man, who, while seeking admission to a church, confessed having committed a murder in Paris, France, several years ago. The church gave him up to the authorities.

John R. Egan, an Englishman, was the first of these enumerated. He went broke on the races, and with a bullet he scattered his brains over his bed room floor; and R. W. Benson, a teamster, celebrated Christmas Eve by a wholesale absorption of red liquor and he ushered in the Christmas morning by slashing his throat with a knife. Anthony Lavelle was the third man. He was splitting wood early this morning and called upon his stepson, Joseph Ross, to get up and help. Ross made no reply, and Lavelle invaded the bed room with an ax. A fight followed and Lavelle was fatally shot. Ross, who claims to have acted in self-defense, was arrested.

Steffan O. Albertine is the bruised and battered man at the county hospital. Early this morning he saw two men in the store of his employer and at once began to shoot, with the result of lodging a bullet in the skull of Lieut. Clarke, of the Pinkerton agency, and badly frightening Watchman Dawson, of that institution. When Albertine realized that he was in the business of killing Pinkerton men, he stopped firing, gave up his pistol, and, as he says, was immediately hammered almost into insensibility by the men to whom he surrendered and by the police officers who came in later. Both the police and the Pinkertons say that Albertine was a thief, and that he began shooting when he was placed under arrest. They also deny having beaten him, but he is in the hospital for all of that. Alpini, the employer of Albertine, says that he is not a thief and that he should have killed the Pinkerton men who forced their way into a building where they had no right to be. He also says that he will take out warrants for he arrest of Lieut. Clarke, whose injury is not serious, and for Capt. Doley, of the Pinkertons.

A Labor Victory.

Macon, Ga., Dec. 26.—Judge Emory Speer, of the United States court, rendered a decision yesterday in the case of the striking telegraphers on the Central railroad against the receiver. Judge Speer said that the fact that a man was a member of a labor organization was no reason for his discharge. On the motion of the strikers asking the court to reinstate them in their positions, Judge Speer decided in their favor so far as to order the receiver to replace all the men except where their positions had been filled. In one sense this is a complete victory for the labor organizations, inasmuch as it establishes the precedent that a laborer cannot be discharged for the sole reason that he has allied himself to labor unions. Judge Speer stated that there had been very inconsiderate action on both sides. The case against Haggard and Heppinstall for contempt was postponed until after the holidays.

Rev. Baxter Guilty.

Des Moines, Iowa, Dec. 23.—The trial of Rev. George W. Baxter, pastor of the Presbyterian church at Knoxville, Marion county, was concluded yesterday and the presbytery found him guilty on the following specific charges: First, deliberate falsehood; second, breach of promise; third, being engaged to marry several different women at the same time, and making immoral propositions to women. This verdict was reached after an exhaustive trial lasting four days, and the vote of the presbytery stood 15 to 2 for conviction. Both parties will appeal to the church assembly, to meet in October, 1893. Mr. Baxter in the meantime will be given a "saint's rest" from clerical labor.

Not Guilty.

Hot Springs, S. D., Special, Dec. 26.—Some three years since the funds in the county treasury of Custer county turned up $12,000 short, and Ed Flinn, the treasurer, was arrested, charged with embezzlement. He turned over all his property to his bondsmen, but it was badly handled and the county was really nothing the gainer. On a change of venue his case was transferred to this county for trial, the case coming up Monday. All week it was heard and the jury, after being out all night returned a verdict of not guilty.

After Somerby Again.

Indianapolis, Dec. 26.—Ex-Judge Howe, counsel for Somerby and others in the Iron Hall litigation, appeared before Gov. Chase to-day and asked to be permitted to show cause why requisition papers should not be issued to bring Somerby to this city to be tried for embezzlement. The governor said that he would listen to the attorneys on both sides, but he thought the convenience of the prosecutor should be also consulted, so the matter went over until Tuesday, when both sides will be heard.

Bold Daylight Robbery.

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 26.—A daring robbery was accomplished in this city in broad daylight to-day by two men who assaulted and took from Gersham H. Waldo, cashier of the Detroit Lubricating works, $1,100 with which he was to pay off the factory hands. The robbers jumped into a waiting carriage occupied by a third man who drove rapidly away. An attempt was made to follow the men, but they held their pursuers at bay by pointing revolvers at them, and made good their escape.

Mrs. Langtry Out of Danger.

London, Dec. 26.—Much anxiety was expressed last night when it was announced that Mrs. Langtry had suffered a relapse, but this was removed to-day, when the physicians issued a bulletin stating that during the early hours of the morning her fever had abated, and she showed signs of returning strength. The bulletin added that the crisis of the disease had passed and that Mrs. Langtry was out of danger.

Gas Proves Fatal to Four.

Baltimore, Dec. 26.—Four colored persons were found dead in their rooms this morning. At the colored home of the aged two old women, Fannie Ward and Maria Jones, were asphyxiated by coal gas. Fannie Ward's nude condition and torn clothing indicated a struggle for life. Both the women had been slaves and had been inmates of the home for aged for years. Two colored children were also found dead.

A Dwelling Razed.

Lake City, Minn., Special, Dec. 26.—The residence of Mrs. Maragret Cronin caught fire to-day from a defective chimney and was destroyed with most of its contents. Loss $1,500; insurance $1,000.

THE FIFTY-SECOND CONGRESS

What Is Being Accomplished by our National Lawmakers.

FRIDAY, DEC. 16.

SENATE.

Not in session.

HOUSE.

Not in session.

SATURDAY, DEC. 17.

SENATE.

Not in session.

HOUSE.

The speaker laid before the house yesterday a communication from Secretary Tracy submitting an estimate of appropriation of $300,000 for the completion of the dry dock at Puget sound, Wash.

Representative Terry (Ark.) yesterday introduced in the house a bill providing that railway corporations shall for purposes of jurisdiction be decreed citizens of the respective states into which they conduct or carry on their business.

Secretary Foster, of the treasury, sent to the house yesterday a deficiency statement aggregating $50,000 for the quarantine service for the fiscal year 1893. Extraordinary expense at the quarantine stations on account of the threatened invasion of cholera during the past summer have about exhausted the appropriation for the maintenance of such stations which renders this appropriation necessary.

MONDAY, DEC. 19.

SENATE.

The attendance was very small today.

After the reading of the journal Mr. Gorman announced the death of Senator Gibson.

Mr. Gorman offered the usual resolutions expressive of the senate's profound sorrow at the death of Mr. Gibson and for the appointment of a committee to attend the funeral at Lexington, Ky.

The resolutions were adopted. The senate, at 12:15 p. m., as a further mark of respect, adjourned until tomorrow.

HOUSE.

The small attendance in the house today was an indication that no bills of popular interest would be called up or passed during suspension day. On the bill increasing the pension of veterans of the Mexican war who are now receiving $8 a month the yeas and nays were ordered and an exact quorum, 167, voted. Then, without objection, a bill limiting the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States was passed.

TUESDAY, DEC. 20.

SENATE.

Several important bills were introduced, and two were passed, authorizing the sale of lands of the Brooklyn, N. Y., navy yard and of the lands in the vicinity of Ft. Mifflin, Del. Mr. Bate (Democrat), of Tennessee, made a speech in favor of the repeal of the bill authorizing the employment of federal supervisors and special deputies at elections. An effort was made by Mr. Blackburn (Democrat), of Kentucky, to have the Hudson river bridge bill taken up, but as that would have had the parliamentary effect of sidetracking the anti-option bill, the effort was successfully resisted by Mr. Washburn, of Minnesota, and the friends of the latter measure. Mr. Blackburn's motion was defeated by the very decisive vote of 13 to 41. The anti-option bill was then taken up and was under consideration until the time of adjournment, when it went over without action till tomorrow. Mr. Palmer (Democrat), of Illinois, made an argument against it, chiefly on the constitutional ground that congress had no power to define and punish, by legislation, criminal offenses in states, such power resting exclusively in the states themselves.

HOUSE.

There was a baker's dozen leaves of absence granted from the house, some of them being on account of illness, but the majority being granted to members from distant states, who desired to leave in time to celebrate Christmas at their homes.

On motion of Mr. Lind (Rep.), of Minnesota, a resolution was adopted calling on the secretary of the interior for information relative to the action taken by the state of Minnesota to annul the charter of the Hastings & Dakota Railroad Company. Under the special order the floor was then accorded to the committee on public lands, which, through its chairman, Mr. McRae, called up the bill adjusting the claims of Arkansas and other states under the swamp land act. No action was taken on the bill, no quorum being secured to vote upon it and the house at 4:40 o'clock adjourned.

WEDNESDAY, Dec. 21.

SENATE.

The senate was in session to-day during 4½ hours, three-fourths of the time being devoted to speech-making.

Mr. Hunton continued but did not conclude his argument in favor of the McGarrahan bill; Mr. Palmer finished his argument against the anti-option bill; Mr. Peffer commenced but did not finish a speech in favor of it.

Mr Perkins (Rep., of Kansas) addressed the senate on the subject of the policy to be pursued as to the Indian Territory, he favoring the extension of a state or of a territorial government over the territory, with or without the consent of the five civilized tribes.

The concurrent resolution for the holiday recess was agreed to, and a joint resolution was introduced by Mr. McPherson, which he will press to a vote immediately after the holidays, directing the secretary of the treasury to suspend all purchases of silver bullion under the Sherman act of July 14, 1890.

HOUSE.

The session of the house today was an innocuous one. It accomplished nothing. There was evidently no quorum in the chamber and the members having measures which they desired to be considered restrained from offering them, knowing that a single objection would defeat their propositions.

There was a special order for the day, and under it the committee on commerce called upon a bill providing for aids to navigation, but Antony thought that the aids provided for were too expensive and converted himself into an obstruction, and as there was low water in the quorum stream his obstruction was effective.

THURSDAY, Dec. 22.

SENATE.

The McGanahan bill was up to-day but went over after some discussion.

Mr. Pfeffer concluded his speech in favor of the anti-option bill.

The president forwarded several nominations to the senate which were approved in executive session.

The senate adjourned until Jan. 4.

HOUSE.

Immediately after the reading and approval of the journal in the house today Mr. McMillian, (Dem. Tenn.) moved an adjournment. This was defeated, 42 48. The committees were called for reports, but without important results and as there was evidently no quorum present, the house at 12:15 adjourned until Jan. 4, 1893

At The Wedding.

De Wilton—Why did the clergyman ask him if he would have her for better or worse?

Majilton—I guess it is because they haven't settled definitely whether they will live in New York or Brooklyn.

GREAT NORTHERN

TIME CARD.

NO. 3 Daily		NO. Daily
7 40 p m Lv	St. Paul ... Ar	6 55 am
8 10 "	Minneapolis	6 25 am
06 a m 218	Barnesville	10 25 pm
10 45 a m	Crookston ... Ar	4 00 pm
*11 15 "	Shirley	3 30 "
*x11 45 "	Ives	x3 00 "
x12 20 pm	Wylie	x2 20 "
*12 45 " Ar	St. Hilaire ... Lv	2 00 "

*Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

S. S. Buzza Agt.

Dr. H. GRUNDY.

Physician

& Surgeon.

Graduate of the University of Toronto Canada and member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario.

Messages from the surrounding country attended to,

Office in Drug Store

THIEF RIVER FALLS,

NORTHERN PACIFIC

THE

GREAT TRAMSCONENTAL ROUTE,

Passes through Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, Manitoba, Montana, Idaho, Oregon and Washington.

THE DINING CAR LINE

Dining cars are run between Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Winnipeg, Helena, Butte, Tacoma, Seattle and Portland.

PULLMAN SLEEPING CAR ROUTE.

Pullman service between Chicago St. Paul Montana and the Pacific Northwest; and between St. Paul, Minneapolis and Minnesota North Dakota and Manitoba points.

THE POPULAR LINE.

Eaily Express Trains carry elegant Pullman sleeping Cars, Dining cars, Day Coaches, Pullman Tourist Sleepers and Free Colonist Sleeping Cars.

YELLOWSTONE PARK ROUTE.

The Northern Pacific R. R. is the rail line to Yellowstone Park; the populir line to California and Alaska; and its trains pass through the grandest scenery of seven states

THROUGH TICKETS are sold at all coupon offices of the Northern Pacific Railroad to points North, East, South and West in the United States and Canada

TIME SCEDULE,

	Leave Crookston Daily	Arrive Crookston Daily
For Staples, Minneapolis, St. Paul Duluth Ashland and points East and South	7:05 p. m.	8:20 a m.
For Grand Forks Grafton Drayton, Winnipeg and oints in North Dakota and Manitoba	8:27a. m.	7:10 p. m

For Rates, maps, Time Tables or special information, apply to Agent Northern Pacific R. R. at Crooksto Minn., or

CHAS. S. FEE,
Gen. Pass. Agent
St. Paul' Minn.

ST. HILAIRE MEAT MARKET.

All kinds of fresh and salt meat always on hand.

I make a specialty of buying and selling cattle of all kinds.

If you want to buy or sell anything in that line it will pay you to give me a call.

JAMES DAINARD.

FRED Eikhof

DEALER IN CHOICE

WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS.

Beer always on tap.

Pool Room in Connection.

Broadway St. Hilaire.

FRANK IVES,

Attorney and Counselor AT LAW,

CROOKSTON and ST. HILAIRE, Minn.

Will Practice in ALL The Courts, OF T ESTATE and and before the U. S. Land Office at Crookston and at Washington.

Will give special attention to contests of claims.

BREVITIES.

Wheat is 60 cents.

Fresh Oysters at W. A. Arthurs try them.

J. C. Mathews is dangerously ill with ulcerated sore throat.

For No. 1 pure buck wheat flour call on Fricker & Welch.

Business is lighter than is usual at this season of the year.

C. G. Rapp was at Thief River Falls last Monday on business.

The weather has been very cold but pleasant the past week.

Considerable cord wood is being drawn here and shipped,

The thermometer has been below 30 several times the past week.

Justice Hanson reports that business is brisk in justice court work,

Sore throat or croup is very prevalent here among the children lately.

A complete line of undertakers goods always on hand at Holmes Bros.

R. B. Vining, of Thief River Falls was in town a short time to-day.

Street Commissioner Harris has built a storm house over the artesian well.

Dr. Lemieux of Red Lake Falls was in town last week on a professional call.

Gus Paceman and wife, of Hallock, were in town a short time last Friday.

We learn that there will be a dance in Dainards hall next Friday evening

Dr. Grundy, of Thief River Falls, was in town on professional business last week.

Now is the time to secure your flour cheap. Call for bargains on Fricker & Welch.

School will commence again next Monday. There should be a full attendance.

Ole Wiste came up from Crookston and is spending the holidays with his parents.

R. P. Roberts a prominent merchant of Crookston, was in town to-day on business.

Miss H. Ihlsing is spending the holidays at Crookston with Miss Lizzie Zarracher.

If you want anything in the line of confectionary fruit or oysters call on W. A. Arthur.

A number of the boys from here attended the dance at Thief River Falls last Monday night.

The prospects for a daily train the first of the year are still looking bright, Competition is a big thing.

I will pay the highest market price or veal calves, fresh eggs and butter.

S. M. Dainard.

P. S. Stranahan came over from Donaldson where he is buying wheat to spend the holidays with his family.

A number of the boys here have received invitation to attend a new years ball at Red Lake Falls next Saturday night.

M. E. Bjork returned to-day from Marshall county where he has been spending Christmas with the "old folks at home."

James Dainard drove up from Crookston last Saturday to have his Christmas dinner at home and to attend to his interests here.

The Christmas tree in the Norwegian Lutheran Church last Saturday evening was attended by nearly all in town. A large number of presents were distributed and the little ones especially were delighted.

The railroad and warehouse commissioners passed through here yesterday on a special train to Thief River Falls. They went up to investigate a complaint that the elevators there were not giving the farmers' enough for their wheat. The farmers up there would do better to sell their wheat at St. Hilaire where they are sure to get all it is worth. The Railroad and Warehouse Commissioners are a good deal like a steeple on a church, no earthly good only to look at, and the appeal will result in nothing

Wm. A. Sosdell and bride arrived to-day from Stillwater and will make this place their future home. Will was always a general favorite here and is welcome back,

Conciberable effort will be made this winter in the legislature to pass a local county option law to regulate the liquor traffic. It is thought under this law the counties in the state outside of the cities would go against license,

We regret to announce the death of Sadie Hoff, daughter of Mr, and Mrs. S. M. Hoff. She was taken sick with the croup last week and after a very short illness died on Friday morning Sadie was well liked by all the children and will be sadly missed. The sympathy of all who knew her are extended to Mr. and Mrs. Hoff in their bereavement.

The Minnesota legislature will organize at St. Paul on Jan. 3rd It is thought that the Republicans will organize and control both houses, At present the chiei topic is, who will be the next U.S. Senator? Senator Davis appears to have an excellent show for re-election but there are many Republicans who claim he will be beaten. It matters little who is elected as he will be sure to represent those Republican principles which were so badly smashed last November, and will have little to do but represent the ring that elects him.

Attacks are being made upon the methods of marking the Australian ballot, as required in Minnesota. The subject of attack is the provision requiring the voter to check the name of each candidate he wishes to vote for; the assailants are those who would give the voter the previlege of designating by one X mark the entire ticket he would like to vote. The provision that is attacked is the very best one in the law, and should be the last one altered or repealed. It requires some judgement, though intelligence to vote as now required, and those qualities cannot be too fully developed in the voter. The present method breeds independence in voting, increases the sense of personal responsibility in the voter, makes him less the automaton and more the resuonsible man; gets him out of the habit of voting a straight ticket, and will thus ultimately elevate the average ability of candidates. A change in the methods means the opposite of all these desirable considerations, therefore should by no means be made.—Farm Stock & Home.

No party founded on the mere holding of plunder illegally obtained under class laws can long rule this land,

That's the Republicans.

No party founded on the continued hatred of one section towards another can long live in this country.

That's the Democrats.

Success, just as sure as God rules is bound to come to that party pledged to equal and exact justice to all men, to the congress which is founded upon Right.

That's the Peoples party,

The highest duty of every reformer at this hour is to be patient and keep right in the middle of the road. This is advice which I have some right to give for in the eyes of the world I have more cause for discouragement than any one.

But I am to-day more certain we are right, and more certain of our success than I have ever been.

And I am sure to do just what I advise you to do.

Be patient and keep in the middle of the road.

Thos. E. Watson,

Mr. J. N Cross, who is a Minneapolis lawyer by profession, but is enough of a farmer to know that things are not just as they should be, as they should be has filed a communication with the board of railway commissioners in which he suggests to them that a plan ought to be arranged whereby a railroad should share with the farmer the variations in the price of wheat that is, the railroad ought not to get as much for hauling a bushel of 50 cent wheat to market as it would for hauling a bushel worth a dollar. Under the present system this year—with a big crop and low prices is a very profitable one for the railroads but a most unprofitable one for the farmers. Mr. Cross wants the road to haul a big crop when the price is low just as cheaply as it would a smaller crop. Of course his plans are impracticable and never can be adopted. The most feasible plan would be to return to the old system of tolls. That is instead of paying freight at 15 cents a hundred cash, regardless of the value of the crop, fix a tariff in pounds of wheat, shipped from Fergus Falls let the road take the equivalent of six pounds. If wheat was ninety cents a bushel it would give them the same amount they get now. From Barnesville let them take seven pounds and so on. This would make the railroad share in grade and price, would stop combinations between elevators and railways and would not make the wheat raiser stand all the loss when the price was below cost of production. But these ideas will probably never prevail. Norman County Index,

If Benjamin Harrison, with the aid of the secretary of the interior and the United States Land commissioner, will do something about putting the Indian reservation land in Minnesota on the market before March 4th he will confer a favor upon lumbermen in the northwest who are watching for an announcement of the proposed sale and saving their money in anticipation of the event. He will prevent a possible still greater delay, involved by the prospective change of administration.

From washington we hear that Senator Hansbrough has introduced a bill for the establishment of a military post at or near Grand Forks and for an appropiation for the same. Is it needed for the purpose of inspiring awe into the hearts of the University students or to keep the thugs of East Grand Forks from crossing the river at times? The serious part of it is that there is prospects that it will pass.—Norman County Herald,

Herry Feig is now a candidate for railroad commissioner. Mr. Feig was a candidate for congress and was defeated later on he was a candidate for chief clerk of the house, but apparently has abandoned that to go gunning for Judge Williams place. If Mr Feig would only make up his mind what he really wants, and then let his mind stay made up long enough for people to catch on, he might be accommodated.—Duluth News Tribune.

The legislature, at its next session will be asked to pass a free text book law. Under such a law, each district will purchase and own the books used in the schools, the books being simply loaned to the pupils. It is evident that that system will save a great deal of money to the people in cost of school books and at the same time every child will always be supplied with the necessary books. Wherever the system has been introduced it works admirably. The state text book contract with D.D, Merrill has expired.—Warren Sheaf.

Notice To Farmers.

We will pay you cash for hides, hay barley, oats, cord wood, good steers or anything marketable that you have to sell.

E, T. Spafford & Co.

DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP.

Notice is hereby given that the copartnership heretofore existing between E J. Holmes and Minton Holmes has been dissolved, E. J. Holmes assuming all the liabilities of the firm and all parties indebted to said firm are hereby notified to pay the debt to said E J. Holmes,

E, J, Holmes,
Mrs. Minton Holmes.

CHEAP EXCURSIONS TO CANADA

Low round trip tickets will be on sale by the Great Northern from Crookston Grand Forks and stations north to boundary and west to Minot, to points in Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick Nova Scotia, on Nov. 27th, Dec, 6th Dec 13th to 22nd inclusive, and Dec 27th 1892. Tickets good for 90 days with transit limits of 15 days each way, going and returning; This will allow holders to stop in the Twin Cities, in Chicago to see the wonderful buildings of the World's Fair, and other points enroute.

Extension of time beyond 90 days made at small additional cost. For particulars and tickets see S. S. Buzza agent at St. Hilaire.

OFFICIAL APPLICATION FOR LICENSE TO SELL INTOXICATING LIQUORS.

To the Common Council of the Village of St, Hilaire in the county of Polk and the state of Minnesota.

The undersigned John Halverson and August Peterson co-partners as Halvorson & Peterson hereby make application for a license to be granted to them to sell intoxicating liquors for a period of six months from the first day of January A. D. 1898. up to the first day of July A. D. 1898. The place where said business is to be carried on is designated as follows;

On the ground floor of the building situated on lot 5 of block 40 of the original townsite of St. Hilaire Polk county Minnesota, said room having two doors leading thereto, one front door and one back door.

Said applicants pray that such license be granted to them pursuant to the ordinances of said village of St, Hilaire and the statutes of said state of Minnesota in such case made and provided. Dated at St, Hilaire this 19th day of December A. D. 1892.

John Halverson,
August Peterson.

Notice is hereby given that the village council of the village of St. Hilaire will meet at the council chamber on Broadway in said village on Thursday the 29th day of December A. D. 1892 at 8 o'clock p. m, at which time objections to granting said license in accordance with the above application will be heard

Witness my hand and seal of said village this 19th day of December, 1892

J. L. Johnson
Village Recorder

INTERESTING ITEM.

It is to the interest of parties contemplating going east to consider the great advantages the Great Northern offers them through its fast passenger service to St. Paul and to all points west to the Pacific coast, their free colonist cars, and magnificent Dining and Sleeping cars. The shortest route, close connections, quickest time and fare as low as the lowest, Any information cheerfully given,

S. S. Buzza
Agent.

CHATTEL LOANS

I am prepared to loan money on chattle security at reasonable rates. One years time, Call On H. E. IVES.

WANTED. Salesmen. Local and Traveling, To represent our well known house. You need no capital to represents a firm that warrants nursery stock first-class and true to name. WORK. ALL THE YEAR. $100 per month to he right man. Apply quick stating age. L. L. MAY & CO. Nurserymen, Florists and Seeds men, St. Paul Minn. (This house is responsible.)

MARLIN SAFETY RIFLES

Made in all styles and sizes. Lightest, strongest, easiest working, safest, simplest, most accurate, most compact, and most modern. For sale by all dealers in arms. Catalogues mailed free by The Marlin Fire Arms Co., NEW HAVEN, CONN., U. S. A.

All who are indebted to S. M. Hoff are requested to call and settle up at once or the debt will be collected by law.

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
Crookston Minn December 5 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on January 24 1893 viz:

Daniel Johnson H D 12053 for the Lot 5 Sec. 6 and Lot 1 Sec 7 Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land viz:

J, A. Sjortrom Anton Sundahl J. A. Peterson, K. Sundahl all of St. Hilaire, Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn, Dec. 7 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on January 26 1893 viz Charles Gomoll H D 11784 for the SE ¼ Sec 25 Tp 152 R 45,

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence on and cultivation of said land viz:

Gottlieb Gerlach, August Morel, Charles Peterson Henry Leppert all of Wylie Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn Dec 14 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the, Register or Receiver U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn., on Feb 2 1893 viz:

Peter Sanderson H D 14150 for the NW ¼ SE ¼ NE ¼ SW ¼ and Lots 5 and 6 Sec 6 Tp 151 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Peter Anderson, John Strawberg, O. K. H. Jihnson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn. November 1 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his inention to make final proof in support of his claim and has said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver of the U, S, Land Office at Crookston Minn. on December 15 1892. viz:

A. P. Sandberg administrator of estate of Peter G. Allsson deceased H D 11173 for the NW ¼ Sec. 20 Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land viz:

J. Johnson, Haakon Johnson, J. Lind, E. Peterson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

CLOSING OUT SALE!

At E M Hoff's Store

My whole stock of

Dry Goods and Notions Gents Furnshing, Goods $5,000 worth of ready made clothing

Foot wear of all kinds and everything belonging to a full stocked general merchandise store will be closed out at cost in the next 90 days.

COME EVERY BODY

AND

SECURE GOOD BARGAINS.

E. M. HOFF

CROWN ROLLER MILL.

EQUIPPED WITH THE LATEST AND BEST IMPROVED MACHINERY.

Manufactures the well known PERFECTION FANCY PATENT and WHITE ROSEFLOUR.

Rye and Feed mill in connection, Flour and Feed always kept on hand

Custom work a specialty,

FRICKER & WELCH Prop

I ILAIRE MINNESOT

CHAS G. RAPP.

A large and complete line of

General Merchandise

CONSISTING OF

Dry Goods, Groceries, Clothin Boots & Shoes, Hats & Caps Notions

THE ST. HILAIRE SPECTATOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY EVENING
H. E. IVES, Propr.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE:
Advance, $1.50 Per Year
If not in Advance, $2.00 Per Year

Entered in The Post Office at St.Hilaire, as Second Class Mail Matter

WEDNESDAY December 28 1892

SELECTIONS

HOT RACE BY PILOTS.

The Huntcliffe Was a Big Prize, and They Didn't Propose to Get Left.

The big steamship Huntcliffe, laden with raw sugar, arrived off the bar from Java and anchored to await orders from either the consignees, Ceballos & Sons, of 80 Wall street, or their brokers, Simpson, Spence & Young. The Huntcliffe usually docks at the Wilmington stores in Philadelphia, and her master, believing that he would be ordered to proceed to the Quaker City, did not take on a Sandy Hook pilot when approaching the Hook.

The Philadelphia pilots were on the lookout for the steamer, as the pilotage fees on her are very large because she draws fully twenty-three feet. It so happened that Pilots Gus Clampet and W. J. Marshall, of Philadelphia, each unconscious of the other's act, called up the consignees and brokers' office on the long distance telephone and inquired about the Huntcliffe. Each was notified that she was lying off the bar, and the pilots rushed pellmell for the railroad station, their object being to come on to New York and board the steamer at the bar and thus secure the prize before any of their brother pilots in Philadelphia caught on to their game.

They met at the station and instantly recognized each other. Of course each surmised the other's motive, but they boarded the train, each determined to reach New York ahead of the other.

Arriving at Jersey City they rushed for the ferryboat, and legged it in great style down West street. At the Battery they parted, Marshal cutting across lots to the office of the Mutual Grain Sealing company, where the fast tug W. E. Ferguson was instantly placed at his disposal, while Clampet went to the Raymond Towing company's office on a dead run, and breathlessly demanded a tug. The high pressure tug J. Fred Lohman, with Clampet aboard, was soon puffing down the East river.

When abreast of Bedloe's island the Ferguson was seen putting out from the Battery wall. Pilot Marshall was aboard. All possible steam was piled on the boilers of both vessels. Freeland Dalzel, who is the chief engineer of the Raymond towing fleet, was at the Lohman's throttle, and the way he made her puff along was a caution. The Ferguson began to demonstrate her worth when off quarantine. From that point on she steadily gained on the Lohman, and finally drew alongside of the sturdy little tug. There was tremendous excitement on both vessels. It was a race for a purse of $300, and Pilot Clampet saw the prize slipping out of his grasp when the Ferguson began to draw away.

The Ferguson got alongside the Huntcliffe first, and Pilot Marshall was hoisted aboard in a twinkling. The Lohman was not far behind, and before Marshall had finished shaking the hand of the Huntcliffe's captain Pilot Clampet dashed up and grabbed the captain's disengaged hand. Then both pilots claimed the privilege of piloting the Huntcliffe back to Philadelphia, Clampet asserting his right through having been notified by the brokers.

Both men were very much disgusted to learn that the Huntcliffe will be discharged at this port and not at Philadelphia. Their race proved expensive to the pilots, for the hire of a tug is fifty dollars alone, to say nothing of their fare from and to Philadelphia.—New York Advertiser.

Mrs. Pender's Lucky Discovery.

Josiah Pender, of Edgecombe county, died during the war. A short time before he died he was in the West Indies and from there he sent his wife, a sister of Louis S. Pender, three drafts of $500 each on the Bank of England. These were received, but there being no communication with Great Britain they were put away and finally forgotten. A few days since Mrs. Pender, in hauling over the contents of an old trunk, came across these three checks. At first she was disposed to regard them as worthless paper except that they contained the writing of her husband, but on second thought she determined to ascertain their value. So the drafts were indorsed and sent through the Pamlico bank for collection. It is believed that she will get the money.—Charlotte (N. C.) Observer.

A Hotel Ghost Captured.

The ghost that for years has haunted the Oceanic hotel and raised the hair of the people of West Brighton has been trapped. Since the close of the season the huge building has been inhabited only by John Delaney, a milk dealer, and the family of one of his employees. The other day the milkman heard footfalls and groaning from the upper floor of the deserted building. Cautiously creeping up stairs, he captured the ghost in the act of groaning.

The groans were produced by nothing more supernatural than the limb of a huge willow tree in juxtaposition with a window blind, the rusty hinges of which gave out doleful sounds with every gust of wind. The tapping of the loose shutter produced a very good imitation of a footstep.—Cor. New York Sun.

Many Thousands of Lights.

The original plans for the electric lighting at the World's fair called for 100,000 incandescent lamps. It has already been found necessary twice to increase this allotment, and according to latest advices the number required will fall little if any short of 300,000. One-third of this number will probably be required in the Electricity building alone.

His Name Drawn on His Own Case.

A peculiar incident recently occurred in Briens, Switzerland. One of the names drawn from the jury box was that of Ulrich Amacher. Amacher was assassinated last January, and the jury was being made up to try his murderer,

FASHION'S DECREES.

Fringes are largely imported in jet, gold, lined crystal, iridescent, garnet and bronze beads.

A new and very shaggy make of cheviot is among the fashionable fabrics for winter traveling costumes, coats and long cloaks.

The newest dress skirts are of the much gored umbrella shape, and some of them have an astonishing "flare" around the lower portion.

With the short waisted empire gowns should always be worn the very short, low French corset, which is merely a support, without at all confining the waist.

Shirt trimmings are everywhere visible, but they are seldom wide. Puffings, plaitings, ruches, tiny frills, fur and feather bands abound, and sometimes on very elegant costumes the slender fur border is headed by a rich bead and metal passementerie.

Feather turbans are again shown with low crowns, plain or indented, the brims close and rolling, the shape long and oval oftener than round, and the whole made of tips of pheasants' or doves' feathers, with aigrettes in front of the same plumage, thickly massed.—New York Evening Post.

THE LATEST NOVELTIES.

Leather is now a favorite medium for silver ornament.

The working out of designs in colored stones is becoming a new art.

Long trident shaped forks without ornament have a good deal of distinction.

Sponge cups of silver for bank tellers and sealing letters are a pretty trifle in view of Christmas.

A spoon for sardines and smelts has a flat bowl of three gold fishes. The handle is made of strips of seaweed.

New letter scales have a circular dial plate on an oblong pedestal. This is a more convenient form than the columnar scale.

There is charming variety in back combs. The handsomest of course have the pierced gold mountings. But these are carried into the shell in numbers of graceful forms.

Fine enameled ornament increases. In brooches the structure is in some strongly defined form, such as a star, cross, triangle or square of stones. These are all united in a round brooch by filling up the interstices with this fine enameled and perforated tracery.—Jewelers' Circular.

Injured by a Meteor.

"I am perhaps the only man in America who was ever hit by an aerolite," said Colonel Sid Fontaine as he settled down in a big armchair at the Southern and piled his crutches up beside him. "I'm in the life insurance business, and one day I procured a buggy and drove out from Sedalia to a farmhouse to settle up a loss. It was nightfall when I started home, but the sky was clear, the road good and I was making excellent time. I noticed that there were an unusual number of 'shooting stars,' and some of remarkable brilliancy. Suddenly the road was lit up with a glare equal to that of the noonday sun, only it had an orange tinge. I glanced up and a ball of fire as large as my hat seemed to be coming right down upon me.

"Before I could think, much less act, it plunged into the buggy, blinding me for a moment by its glare, went through and buried itself in the ground. It bored a hole in the bottom of the buggy as large as a saucer and triangular in shape. It made a hissing noise as it fell, reminding me of the bluff of an enormous gander. My horse took fright and I had considerable difficulty in controlling him. I did not know that I was hurt until I had ridden fully a mile, when my left foot began to pain me. I examined it and found that the great toe was mashed flat and one of the larger bones of the foot broken. That's why I go on crutches. If I could find that meteorite and dig it up I think we two might get a position in a dime museum."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Art Note.

Mother—Our son is going to be a great artist. Just think of it—he has sold his first picture for twenty-five dollars.

Father—No wonder. I had a twenty-five dollar frame put on it.—Texas Siftings.

Too Much.

He had trundled weighty triplets when his wife was wrapped in slumber;
He had got up every morning and had built the kitchen fire;
He had pounded on her carpets and had sawed up cords of lumber,
And had stretched with endless patience several miles of stiff clothes wire.

He had sworn off on his smoking just to help her on her missions,
And had matched whole coils of ribbons, with no thought of the disgrace;
He had eaten several samples at her cooking exhibitions,
With a moaning in his stomach and a smile upon his face.

He had borne the shirts she made him, and his courage ne'er forsook him;
He had stood the socks she darned him, though the agony was keen;
He had worn her colored neckties, though his dearest friends all shook him,
And the clothes that she selected he displayed with humble mien.

But when one night she showed him some pajamas she had made him
And informed him she expected that in them he would abide,
He quailed before this torture and the thought of it dismayed him,
And he gave one look remorseful and he laid right down and died.
—Tom Masson in Clothier and Furnisher.

WE WANT YOU

to act as our agent. We furnish an expensive outfit and all you need free. It costs nothing to try the business. We will treat you well, and help you to earn ten times ordinary wages. Both sexes of all ages can live at home and work in spare time, or all the time. Any one any where can earn a great deal of money. Many have made Two Hundred Dollars a Month. No class of people in the world are making so much money without capital as those at work for us. Business pleasant, strictly honorable, and pays better than any other offered to agents. You have a clear field, with no competition. We equip you with everything, and supply printed directions for beginners which, if obeyed faithfully, will bring more money than will any other business. Improve your prospects! Why not? You can do so easily and surely at work for us. Reasonable industry only necessary for absolute success. Pamphlet circular giving every particular is sent free to all. Delay not in sending for it.

GEORGE STINSON & CO.,
Box No. 488, Portland, Me.

DO YOU WANT TO ADOPT A BABY?

Maybe you think this is a new business, sending out babies on application; it has been done before, however, but never have those furnished been so near the original sample as this one. Everyone will exclaim, "Well! that's the sweetest baby I ever saw!" This little black-and-white engraving can give you but a faint idea of the exquisite original, which we propose to send to you, transportation paid. The little darling rests against a pillow, and is in the act of drawing off its pink sock, the mate of which has been pulled off and flung aside with a triumphant coo. The flesh tints are perfect, and the eyes follow you, no matter where you stand. The exquisite reproductions of this greatest painting of Ida Waugh (the most celebrated of modern painters of baby life) are to be given to those who subscribe to Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893. The reproductions cannot be told from the original, which cost $400, and are the same size (17x22 inches). The baby is life size, and absolutely lifelike. We have also in preparation, to present to our subscribers during 1893, other great pictures by such artists as Percy Moran, Maud Humphrey, Louis Deschamps, and others of world-wide renown. Take only two examples of what we did during the past year, "A Yard of Pansies," and "A White House Orchid" by the wife of President Harrison, and you will see what our promises mean.

"I'M A DAISY."

Those who subscribe for Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893 will possess a gallery of exquisite works of art of great value, besides a Magazine that cannot be equaled by any in the world for its beautiful illustrations and subject matter, that will keep everyone posted on all the topics of the day, and all the fads and different items of interest about the household, besides furnishing interesting reading matter, both grave and gay, for the whole family; and while Demorest's is not a fashion Magazine, its fashion pages are perfect, and we give you, free of cost, all the patterns you wish to use during the year, and in any size you choose. Send in your subscription at once, only $2, and you will really get over $25 in value. Address the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York. If you are unacquainted with the Magazine, send 10 cents for a specimen copy.

Ask Your Dealer For
WHIPS.
FEATHERBONE is made from Enameled Quills—nature's own toughest, and strongest elastic material. Best wearing whips made for 25c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50. All styles for Buggy, Cart, Track, Team and Riding. Be sure and ask for a FEATHERBONE
FOR SALE BY
S. M. HOFF
St. H

Going to Buy
A Dictionary?
GET THE BEST,
Webster's International.
A Choice Gift
A Grand Family Educator
A Library in Itself
The Standard Authority
WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY
SOLD BY ALL BOOKSELLERS.
The International is a new book from cover to cover, fully abreast of the times, and is the successor of the authentic "Unabridged." Ten years were spent in revising, 100 editors employed and over $300,000 expended before the first copy was printed.
Do not buy reprints of obsolete and comparatively worthless editions.
Send for free pamphlet containing specimen pages and full particulars.
G. & C. MERRIAM CO., Publishers,
SPRINGFIELD, MASS., U. S. A.

U.S. Land Office
Crookston Minn. Nov. 25 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and said proof will be made before U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on Jany. 5 1893 viz:

Berent I. Konlog HD 12295 for the SW ¼ Tp 152 R. 42,

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of said land viz:

James Evenson, Anton Peterson, Julius Nelson, Nels Evenson all of St. Hilaire, Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON. Register.

U.S. LAND OFFICE.
Crookston, Minn., Nov. 17 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn on December 28 1892. viz:

Peter E. Engh HD 12282, for the NW ¼ Sec. 23 Tp 152 R. 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Halvor Aamodt, Ole J. Hegg Peter Anderson, Ole J. Johnson. all of St. Hilaire, Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register,

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn., Nov. 25 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver, U. S Land Office at Crookston Minn on Jany. 5 1893 viz:

Julius Nelson HD 11800 for the S. W ¼ sec. 8 tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove her continuous residence upon, and cultivation of said land viz:

James Evenson B. I. Konlog, Nels Evenson Anton Peterson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

E. T SPAFFORD S. M. DAINARD
E. T. SPAFFORD & CO.
DEALERS IN
LUMBER, LATH AND SHINGLES.
A complete stock of all kinds of Lumber Lath, Shingles, Mouldings, Building Paper Sash, Doors and Screens, Lime, Cement Stucco, Plastering Hair, Brick etc. always hand at the lowest market prices.
S. M. Dainard, Manager.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE, MINN

E. T. SPAFFORD & CO.
WILL ALWAYS PAY THE
HIGHEST MARKET PRICES
FOR
All kinds of
CATTLE.
Also for Cord wood, Hay, Oats, Barley and flax.
Ground Feed for Sale
S. M. DAINARD.
Manager.

Reserved For
THE
ST. HILAIRE
TOWNSITE
COMPANY

W. A. ARTHUR.
DEALER IN
FRUITS, CONFECTIONARY
TOBACCO AND CIGARS.
STATIONARY OF ALL KINDS
Lunch Counter
Warm meals at all hours.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE MINNESOTA

JUSTUS L. JOHNSON
DEALER IN
pure medicines Fancy articles, perfumer and stationery, paints oils and dye stuffs.
Cigars, Candy, Fruit and Soft Drinks always on hand.
Barbershop in connection
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE

I CAN SAVE YOU
MONEY
If you wish to make
REAL ESTATE
LOANS.
For full particulars call on or address
H. E. IVES.
SPECTATOR OFFICE ST. HILAIRE

HOLMES BRO'S
Dealer in
HARDWARE, TINWARE,
We are carrying a heavy and complete line of Heating and Cooking stoves.
GOOD GOODS LOW PRICES.
CALL ON US FOR BARGAINS
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE MINN.

FARMERS STORE
NEW GOODS AT HARD PAN PRICES.
If you want to save money do your trading with
HALL BROS.
DEALERS IN
Dry Goods, Groceries
Notions.
BROADWAY ST. HIL.

S. M. HOFF
DEALER IN
HARDWARE
A new and complete stock of all kinds of Hardware, Tinware, Stoves, Fencing wire, Nails, in fact everything usuay kept in a first-class Hardware Store,
AT GREATLY REDUCED pRIGES
Call and examine Goods
and Get Our Prices.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE.

DR. PRICE'S Cream Baking Powder.

The only Pure Cream of Tartar Powder.—No Ammonia; No Alum.

Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

The Natural Conclusion Concerning a Sudden Absence.

Bangs, breathlessly—I just ran down to the club to tell you that I am going to London for a few weeks.

Bings—Well, I don't see that that calls for such an effort at informing us.

Bangs—I know; but I was afraid one of those beastly Keely cure rumors might attack my reputation before I could reach England to refute it!

His Second Splice.

"Well, I see old Jack Weathergauge has got spliced again."

"You don't mean to say his first wife is dead?"

"Oh, no, indeed. Weathergauge fell on his way from church Sunday and broke his wooden leg. Carpenter Hodson has been up to Jack's all the morning with a plane and a handsaw."—From Texas Siftings.

The Washburn Library at La Crosse recently received 400 new books. It now has over 12,000 volumes.

Considers it "a household necessity." Mr. A. J. Whiting, Newton, Kansas, accentuates his opinion thus: "I have used Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup in my family for the last eight years and consider it a household necessity."

Mrs. Eliza Wilkson, of Fox Lake had a narrow escape from asphyxiation by coal gas.

Rheumatism knocked higher than a kite. Mr. J. N. Bucher, Mineral Point, Ohio, deposes and says: "I have used Salvation Oil for rheumatism, and in one or two applications, knocked it higher than a kite."

A new $2,000 pipe organ is to be purchased for the Presbyterian Church of Green Bay.

STATE OF OHIO, CITY OF TOLEDO, } ss.
LUCAS COUNTY.

FRANK J. CHENEY makes oath that he is the senior partner of the firm of F. J. CHENEY & Co., doing business in the City of Toledo, County and State aforesaid, and that said firm will pay the sum of ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for each and every case of CATARRH that cannot be cured by the use of HALL'S CATARRH CURE.

FRANK J. CHENEY.

Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence, this 6th day of December, A. D. 1886.

A. W. GLEASON,
{SEAL} Notary Public.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for testimonials, free.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

☞Sold by Druggists, 75c.

Mrs. Jane Walrath, an old resident of Madison, died suddenly of apoplexy, aged 71 years.

Bad taste and unpleasant breath, when resulting from Catarrh, are overcome, and the nasal passages which have been closed for years are made free by the use of Ely's Cream Balm.

I suffered from catarrh for twelve years, experiencing the nauseating dropping in the throat peculiar to that disease, and nose bleed almost daily. I tried various remedies without benefit until last April, when I saw Ely's Cream Balm advertised. I procured a bottle, and since the first day's use have had no more bleeding—the soreness is entirely gone. D. G. Davidson, with the Boston Budget, formerly with Boston Journal.

Apply Balm into each nostril. It is Quickly Absorbed. Gives Relief at once. Price 50 cents at Druggists or by mail. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren St., New York.

A Cough, Cold, or Sore Throat should not be neglected. BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES are a simple remedy, and give prompt relief. 25 cts. a box.

Theodore Brockman, an Appleton school teacher, fell through an open manhole and was seriously injured. He will recover.

SPEAKER CRISP.

Did the reform Club snub Speaker Crisp?

Perhaps it was an oversight.

Anyway, Speaker Crisp's speech read just as well, as if he had delivered it.

For our part, we wonder when we read it, if it would not have been better for him if he had had a bottle of Reid's German Cough & Kidney Cure.

This would have cleared his throat, strengthened the vocal chords, and given force to his remarks.

It is the best thing in the world for public speakers.

For auctioneers, orators, lawyers, clergymen and all people who are obliged to talk.

Get it of any dealer.

SYLVAN REMEDY CO. Peoria Ills.

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till cured. DR. J. STEPHENS, Lebanon, Ohio.

PENSION JOHN W. MORRIS, Washington, D. C. Successfully Prosecutes Claims. Late Principal Examiner U.S. Pension Bureau. 3 yrs in last war, 15 adjudicating claims, atty since.

WANTED Young Men to Learn Telegraphy and Railroad Business. We Guarantee Positions and can secure you Places where you can make board. If you think of learning Telegraphy you will do well to come to us. Address NORTHWESTERN TELEGRAPH INSTITUTE 320 Grand Block, St. Paul, Minn.

FAT FOLKS REDUCED Mrs. Alice Maple, Oregon, Mo., writes "My weight was 320 pounds, now it is 195, a reduction of 125 lbs." For circulars address, with 6c., Dr. O. W. F. SNYDER, McVicker's Theatre, Chicago, Ill.

$60 to $100 per month can be easily made by selling my Steel Engraver. Snap for Agents. Agents wanted in every county. Sample and terms 25c. GEO. WORSTER, Durbin, N. D.

CURES CATARRH

LONDON BALM
LONDON BALM CO.
NEW YORK
CURES CATARRH HAY FEVER
PRICE 50 CTS.

SOLD BY YOUR DRUGGIST.

MAY PAWN THEIR INFANTS

Hard Lines of the Chinese Babies as a Rule.

Chinese babies have a hard time of it, according to a writer in the Jenness-Miller Illustrated Monthly. When they are a month old their heads are shaved, the operation being attended with much ceremony. The almanac is consulted to determine what things the poor youngsters may see and touch and what things they may not.

The first time babies leave home they are taken to see their grandmothers, who present them with four chickens, four onions, two heads of cabbage, several pieces of sugarcane, and a lot of rice pods, as if such things could be of any use to an infant without a tooth in his head.

Parents have such control of their children that they may even pawn or sell them if they desire to, and they can chastise them so unmercifully that the children die of punishment without any attention being paid to it by the authorities. On the whole it appears that the lot of the infant and of the small boys and girls is not an enviable one in the Celestial dominions.

Do Cyclones Come From Above?

There has been of late a tendency toward a change of view in regard to the origin of those widespread storms known as cyclones. M. Faye the French astronomer, has long argued that they originate in the upper regions of the atmosphere, instead of at the surface of the earth.

Recently Mr. W. L. Dallas has announced, as the result of his studies of the cyclones of the Indian Ocean, that the probability seems to him to be that those whirling storms "descend from and retreat to the superior layers of the atmosphere."

Much more study will be required, however to settle the question, but it is surely most interesting to think that storms should come to us in the way suggested. The atmosphere is a sort of ocean, at whose bottom we dwell, and if Mr. Faye's view is correct, the storms that whirl over us must first lash the air far above our heads, just as a whirl started in water may bore its way down toward the bottom, and disturb the little fishes there.

A Mud-covered Forest.

There is a sunken forest of white cedar on the coast of New Jersey which has been continuously "mined" for its valuable timber for more than eighty years. The curious industry of digging for these sunken logs is carried on by the people of Dennisville, a village which was brought into existence solely through the wealth of the buried timber in its vicinity. Over this sunken forest trees of large size are now growing, and in many instances the growing timber is cut away in order to get at the more valuable logs which lie only three or four feet beneath the surface. It is believed that they were sunken by an earthquake.

Help! Help!

How often has the cry been uttered in vain! But there is help for sufferers from liver complaint and constipation, those exceedingly prevalent disorders. A course of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will completely remove them. The malarious, the rheumatic, the dyspeptic and the nervous also derive unspeakable benefit from the great remedy.

The new paper mill at South Centralia has been completed and will soon be running with a full force of men.

"August Flower"

"I have been afflicted with biliousness and constipation for fifteen years and first one and then another preparation was suggested to me and tried, but to no purpose. A friend recommended August Flower and words cannot describe the admiration in which I hold it. It has given me a new lease of life, which before was a burden. Its good qualities and wonderful merits should be made known to everyone suffering with dyspepsia and biliousness." JESSE BARKER, Printer, Humboldt, Kas.

Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil presents a perfect food—palatable, easy of assimilation, and an appetizer; these are everything to those who are losing flesh and strength. The combination of pure cod-liver oil, the greatest of all fat producing foods, with Hypophosphites, provides a remarkable agent for Quick Flesh Building in all ailments that are associated with loss of flesh.

Prepared by Scott & Bowne, Chemists, New York. Sold by all druggists.

"WELL BRED, SOON WED." GIRLS WHO USE SAPOLIO ARE QUICKLY MARRIED. TRY IT IN YOUR NEXT HOUSE-CLEANING.

A SONG FOR NEW-YEAR'S EVE.

Stay yet, my friends, a moment stay—
  Stay till the good old year,
So long companion of our way,
  Shakes hands, and leaves us here.
    Oh, stay, oh, stay,
One little hour, and then away.

The year, whose hopes were high and strong,
  Has now no hopes to wake;
Yet one hour more of jest and song
  For his familiar sake.
    Oh, stay, oh, stay,
One mirthful hour, and then away.

The kindly year, his liberal hands
  Have lavished all his store.
And shall we turn from where he stands
  Because he gives no more?
    Oh, stay, oh, stay,
One grateful hour, and then away.

Days brightly came and calmly went
  While yet he was our guest;
How cheerfully the week was spent!
  How sweet the Seventh day's rest!
    Oh, stay, oh, stay,
One golden hour, and then away.

Dear friends were with us, some who sleep
  Beneath the coffin-lid;
What pleasant memories we keep;
  Of all they said and did!
    Oh, stay, oh, stay,
One tender hour, and then away.

E'en while we sing, he smiles his last
  And leaves our sphere behind.
The good old year is with the past,
  Oh, be the new as kind!
    Oh, stay, oh, stay,
One parting strain, and then away.

—Bryant.

NEW YEAR'S CUSTOMS.

How the Day is Celebrated Throughout the World.

THE custom of celebrating the first day of the year by religious observances, as well as festal rejoicings, long prevailed among most of the ancient nations. The Jews, the Egyptians, the Chinese the Romans and the Mohammedans, although differing as to the time from which they reckoned the beginning of the year, all regard it as a day of especial interest.

The early fathers—Chrysostom, Ambrose, Augustine and others—in reprobation of the immoral and superstitious observance of the pagan festival, prohibited for Christian use all festive celebrations, and directed that the first day, be opened with prayer, fasting and humiliation. The mandate, however was but partially observed. The festal character of the day, generally speaking, was pertinaciously preserved, but the day was also observed as a day of prayer. And this character was more readily attached to it when the year began January 1, as it was the eighth after the nativity of our Lord and held as commemorative of His circumcision.

The Feast of the Circumcision was called the octave of Christmas as early as 487 A. D., and was instituted by Christians to commemorate the ceremony of the Jewish law to which Christ submitted. In the sixth century we find it became a solemn festival, the Council of Tours, in 566, ordering that the chant of Litanies on the first of January should be in lieu of the immoral superstitions of the Pagans. From this date religious services have more or less formed a part of the day's observance.

About midnight in England and elsewhere the bells were solemnly tolled as the old year was departing, then rang out still more joyous peals as the New Year was ushered in. Christians, especially the followers of Wesley, have long held "midnight watch meetings," at which, besides prayer and praise, they review the deeds of the past and form new resolutions for the incoming year.

In the time of Numa Pompilius this day was dedicated to Jauns, the double-faced deity, who faced the future while he looked back upon the past. The Romans offered him a cake of sifted meal with incense, salt and wine. The Hindus call the first day of the year "the day of the Lord of Creation." It is scared to the God of Wisdom, to whom they sacrifice male kids and wild deer, while they also celebrate the festival with illuminations and general rejoicings.

The Chinese began the New Year about the vernal equinox, and the festival observed on the occasion is one of the most splendid of their religious festivities. All the people, including the Emperor, mingle in free and unconstrained intercourse, and unite in thanksgiving for mercies received, as well as in prayer for a genial season and an abundant crop. In Japan the day is spent in feasting and visiting.

A curious custom among the Chinese on New Years's Day is to write riddles on slips of paper, paste them on the sides of a lantern and hang them before the doors; often offering rewards for their solution of packages of tea, bundles of fire-crackers, fans or pencils. People gather around them and try to solve them for sport. On that day, too, all the shops are closed and no business is done for several day's except the selling of candies, sweetmeats and nuts. The families collect in their houses on New Year's morning and make offerings to household gods of rice, vegetables, tea and wine, with incense and candles. After the "gods" have consumed the spiritual essence of the food, as they imagine, the family are at liberty to eat the merely earthly and gross remains.

This ceremony over, the day is given up to feasting and letting off fireworks. Children and servants receive presents from the heads of the family, generally of money, which, if it consists of copper cash, must be strung on a red string, red being a symbol of joy. Among the better classes festivities are kept up for fifteen days, and end with the "Feast of Lanterns," when every variety of shape and style that the fertile imagination of the Chinese can conceive, the paper and bamboo forced into, is presented in lanterns—round, square, flat, men, animals and monsters. Some roll over and over on the ground; others shaped like horses and coach, trundle about on wheels. Every house is brilliantly lighted, and everybody in the street with lanterns. And we may well imagine that a Chinese city is a gay sight at the end of the New Year's celebration.

At New Year's loyal subjects of England present their sovereign with gifts according to their means; masters to the servants, and friends and relatives to one another. In Paris, gentlemen frequently on calling New Year's Day present little gifts of choice jewelry, or gloves done up and hidden in pretty boxes of bonbons. It was quite customary, less than a century ago, even in this country, for gentlemen when calling on New Year's Day to have their pockets filled with little cornucopias, or New Year's boxes of confections in which, to the lady they would especially honor, some choice gift was hidden. And a ring has been delicately tendered in this way by those too shy to speak their minds.

As society in New Amsterdam increased, and the social circle grew larger, this mode of making New Year's calls had to be abolished, or else every gentleman would have to have turned himself into a veritable Santa Claus, overloaded with cornucopias and various boxes of bonbons, not to show undue partiality, to say nothing of the onerous expense.

Among old superstitions of the day it was considered rather unlucky to leave any thing unfinished, for it was thought that "Lady Berchete"—a mystical spiritual being who has the oversight of spinners—was angered by this. The last day of the year is sacred to her, and if she finds any flax left on the distaff that day she spoils it.

It is said that when the Romans conquered Britain some one who came to fight remained to help civilize the barbarians and to teach them among other things, the Roman way of celebrating New-Year's Day. But as the people grew less savage, they invented additions of their own, of which there are many traces still to be found.

But in all countries and at all times the principal way of celebrating this day seems to have been in feasting, calling and gift-making. And it certainly is a beautiful custom, this exchange of calls and souvenirs, for they help strengthen the ties of kindred and friends and social intercourse. The making long-neglected calls, too, renews estranged hearts, and causes them to glow with kindly feelings as the cordial wish for "A Happy New Year" is uttered.

Therefore, we would long have this day observed amongst us, and not through indolence and apathy become an observance of the past. One evil feature of the day, however, we would have abolished as not only useless but decidedly injurious, that is, of both freely offering and urging callers to partake wine to drink health to the New Year, etc. A gentleman can not easily refuse a lady's request. And, when this is repeated from house to house, need we wonder at the result?—J. K. Bloomfield in N. Y. Observer.

TO CARRY LETTERS.

Before the Days of Postage Stamps What Means Did Lovers Use?

Before the use of postage stamps various sums were paid for the delivery of letters. The amounts were regulated by the distance, and were collected on the delivery of the letter.

In the early part of this century the postage on a single sheet of paper was 8 cents, and over forty miles the rate was increased; so that over 500 miles a single sheet was 25 cents. But after a time these rates were gradually reduced, until in 1845 a letter weighing not over half an ounce was 5 cents under 300 miles and over that distance 10 cents.

Sir Rowland Hill, who was at the head of the Postoffice Department of England at this time, introduced the use of the postage stamp, in 1840 and also lessened the charges for postage, In 1847 the United States adopted the use of the postage stamp, the lowest priced one being 5 cents.

But railway and steamboats had now taken the place of the old-fashioned mail coaches and post boys, and with the more rapid sending of the mails the cheaper rates of postage, and the growing population of the country, gradual changes and improvements took place in the postoffice system. And here we are, in 1892, receiving our letters from the Pacific Coast, in six days also from England in the same time; and a few days or hours will place us in direct communication with our friends and correspondent in almost every part of the country.—From St. Nicholas.

IT WAS OVERDONE.

A Lawyer's Little Game Which Worked Altogether too Well.

One of the leading attorneys of Western Kansas, now visiting that city, related to the St. Louis Republic man about Town the way he secured a change of venue for a cilent in that state many years ago. "The man," he said, "had stolen a horse, and the feeling against him in the country in which the crime was committed was so strong that I feared a verdict from those who were familiar with the circumstances. The only hope for him was to have the case tried in another country. When the hour came for me to address the court I had arranged to have a conspicuous and well-known figure around the town to cry out, 'Hang him! hang him!' as soon as my client's name was mentioned. My plan was to show in this way that there was prejudice against my cilent, and thus secure a change of venue.

"The court room was crowded when the prisoner was brought in. He took his seat opposite the judge, and then turned around and viewed the threatening-looking throng that surrounded him.

"'Hang him! hang him! he's a horse thief!' rang out in the court-room. It was shouted in such a way that I was satisfied that I would have no trouble in securing the change of venue.

"'Hang him, I say; he's a horse thief!' echoed again through the court house, and before the officers or any one else could interfere I'll be blamed if they didn't hang him."

Hard to Answer.

A question may look simple, and present great difficulties. "Am I on the road to Scrantown?" asked a lady who was making a tour of discovery from her summer home in a small New England town.

She addressed a man who was weeding a patch of ground near the road.

"You be, ma'am," he replied, surveying her with mild curiosity.

"Well, am I half way there?" she asked.

"Why, as to that, ma'am, it would seem as ef 'twould make a diff'rence where you started from."

THE AGRICULTURAL WORLD

USEFUL INFORMATION CONCERNING FARMING TOPICS.

Good Farming—Reducing the Cash—How to Cheapen Feeds—Some Beef—For the Sake of the Bees—Some Useful Hints.

Good Farming.

The first requisite in good farming is the determination to have the best in every department of farm life. If the farmer desires to have the very best of everything he will make the attempt to have them and the attendant condition will soon follow. But to be content with the ordinary, the common, the indifferent, the inferior, is a sure road to their possession. It would cost no more to have the best, in a general way, than it does to have the poorest, and the best is always worth about double that of the poorest.

Aim high and you are sure to shoot high, and the reverse of this is as true. If the farmer aims to have good crops he will endeavor to have the best methods of obtaining them. But if he is content with the average yield and quality of crops, he will move along in the same rut with corresponding results, while his boys will take no interest because there is nothing to interest them, and sooner or later they will leave the farm for more inviting fields. If the aim is to have the best horses for farm use it will be found that they are as readily obtained as "plugs." Fine, large, active, stylish horses will please the boys and they will take to the farm almost universally.

Good farming is attended with the best of stock of all kinds—cattle, swine, sheep and poultry. The best is in the country, and every farmer may aim to possess it, and he will in a short time succeed in his commendable aspirations, and just in proportion as farmers rise up and demand the best of everything will they be respected, esteemed and honored by all other classes, and by every member of their own class.

If you look at the market quotations you will see a distinction between the inferior and the best in the price of all grains, vegetables, fruits and live stock. The best horses will sell for $200 to $250 while the "plugs" are run off at $40 to $75. The best beef cattle bring double the price of poor "scrubs". The same principle holds good throughout the entire range of marketable farm products.

The drudgery of farm life, which is proverbial, will soon disappear if farmers will determine to have the best in every line. The work itself will be rendered more pleasurable and interesting, while the ability to take leisure will be afforded by the increased profits and advantages of having the best. Drudgery is accompanied with a want of intelligence, to some extent. It is a low object to live to work, while it is honorable to labor, having the object of obtaining that which is useful and necessary in life.

Good farming ends in having all the good things possible. A good farm, a good house, a good farmer, good crops, and good stock will make the farmer and his family and all connected with them not only enjoy good, but be good. The goods go together and the bads together.

Let the farmer step up higher and enjoy a purer atmosphere. Let him "turn a new leaf" in agricultural work. The world is filled with the new, the wonderful, the progressive, the aggressive. Let the farmer take his place and perform his best.—Farm, Field and Fireside.

How to Cheapen Feeds.

The prices of feed bid fair to be high the coming winter, and such will continue to be the case every winter, as long as there is such a tremendous demand for all sorts of millstuffs, on the part of dairy farmers, all over this broad land. The dairymen are all right in their ideas of feeding well, but they are all wrong in not growing more of their own feed.

Wheat is way down to the lowest notch we have seen in thirty years, and bran climbing up in price every day. We are not certain but those farmers who are well situated to do it had better buy the wheat by the carload and get it ground at the custom mill, and feed the bran and middlings, selling the flour for what they can realize.

If we were in Northern Dakota or Minnesota we would not sell wheat at fifty cents a bushel, if we had good cows to feed it to, and butter thirty-one cents a pound in Chicago. We believe there are four pounds of butter in a bushel of wheat fed to a good cow, with good roughage in addition.

But whether in Dakota or New York, everywhere the dairy farmer is at the mercy of the feed vender. This would not be so if the majority set seriously to work to produce their own feed, in some form or other. The mischief is, the most of farmers stop feed when prices of feed go high, no matter what the price of butter is. What a lot of education we all do need on this feed question. There is so little real figuring on it—so little really studied out by the dairy farmers by which they can figure.

The way to bring down the price of feed stuff is for more farmers to go at growing peas and silage corn. Not one man in a thousand knows what he could do if he should try.—Hoard's Dairyman.

Some Beef.

How to provide a suitable supply of fresh meat for the farmer's table is always something of a problem. The Nebraska farmer suggests one way of coming as near the condition as possible. The principal reliance of the average farmer for meat to use on the table is pork. Occasionally a sheep will be killed and a part of the carcass sold and the balance used when fresh meat is wanted. In some cases a beef is killed in the fall, a part is sold and the balance used. But very few have the amount of beef to eat that they should. Because the pork is the easiest to pack away and keep during the summer. It is used almost entirely, and yet there is no denying that the farmer and his family relish beef fully as well as any one, but they usually expect to buy the beef, and as they generally have the pork on hand they eat it and go without the fresh beef.

While it is not always possible to have fesh beef yet corned or pickled beef is fully as palatable as pickled or salt pork and is nearly if not quite as cheap. It will cost no more to the farmer to feed and fatten a good beef to eat than it will be good pork, while it will be relished as a change, and in many cases be more healthful than the pork. Properly managed beef can be kept easier than pork. It should be killed, cut into appropriate pieces and laid out where all of the animal heat will be cooled out, and then put in strong brine. Let stand a week or 10 days, then pour off this brine and put on fresh. If desired as soon as well salted some of the rump pieces may be hung up the same as pork, and be smoked, or some can be made into sausages, and if desired stuffed and smoked for long keeping. If sufficient brine is kept in the barrel to cover the meat and it is kept in a cool place corned beef can be kept for a long time and be of good quality, and will be more desirable for the table than so much pork. With a little care a good heifer that perhaps would not sell quite as well as a steer to send to market, and yet would make fully as good beef, can be fattened to kill for family use and be better than depending so entirely upon hog meat.

Reducing the Cost.

One way of realizing a profit with low prices is by reducing the cost, and in order to accomplish this, the work of growing the various crops, of breeding, feeding and marketing the stock must be carefully considered. With many of the spring crops more or less of the preparatory work can be done during the winter and at a less cost generally than if everything is delayed until the season opens. This will be one item in saving or rather in reducing the cost. In many cases the farm is cut up into a much larger number of fields than is best for the economical management, especially in planting, cultivating and harvesting the crops, and during the winter it is a good plan to reduce the fencing whenever practicable. It is not good economy to reduce the cost in any way that will reduce the yield; while there may be a small reduction in the outlay, this plan will, in the end, increase the actual cost per bushel or pound. On the other hand increasing the yield of the crops will generally decrease the cost and during the winter it will pay to take time and study out how it is possible to increase the yield at the lowest cost.

Plan out the season's work in advance. During the winter do as much preparatory work as possible. Plan to get the work all done in good season. By having the work properly systematized and distributed less hired labor will be needed, and thus will in nearly all cases reduce the cost. Often a proper use of machinery will help to lessen the cost, but at the same time it should not be forgotten that it is often possible to go to an extreme and purchase more machinery than is really profitable. It is only by taking every advantage in doing the work that the lowest cost is possible, and with a low cost a profit is often possible where otherwise, with present prices, a loss would be occasioned. The farm and the work must be studied and the season's work planned out to the best possible advantage.—Prairie Farmer.

For the Sake of the Bees

Prof. A. J. Cook, of the Agricultural college, of Michigan, who is an active worker in the cause of bee culture, and one of the best authorities on the subject, says: It has seemed to me and I am stronger in the faith now than ever, that every state should pass a law making it a serious misdemeanor to spray out fruit trees while in blossom. I do not think such a law would need to be used much, if ever; but as an educator it would do signal service. It would act as our foul-brood and yellows laws have. When men find that there is a law against any proposed course of action, they will almost always hesitate before they act. In a case like this, where there is no cause for wrong action, but every reason for doing that which works no one ill but the most good to all, then surely if a legislature act will have influence, it should be urged by all, whether directly interested or not. Is it not wise for every bee-keeper to agitate this matter, that the public may be educated, at least, and that such legislation may be secured as will aid to prevent any spraying during the time that the fruit trees are in blossom?

Some Useful Hints.

Card and brush stabled cows.

Do not use a scrub bull this winter.

Select your poor milkers, and send them to the butcher.

Have a cow that you can get something out of for something.

The tender shelter of a wire fence is severe.

Continue in one breed or no one can predict what kind of a herd you will have.

Do not feed wet corn fodder. If it has been exposed to rains, spread and dry well before feeding.

If you will give the same time proportionately to the fowls as to the cattle we think you will see profits.

If you look to the milk side of your dairy cows, the beef side will take care of itself.

It is not necessary to have large cracks in the sides of the cow stables in order to give the cows fresh air.

The first plant that forms upon a strawberry runner is the strongest and best. Some careful growers refuse to use any but this when setting new beds.

Have you ever figured out the gain made by feeding the grain that one cow should have to two cows? If not, why do you keep doing it?

Butter churned at a high temperature will contain more caseine and water and not keep as long as that churned at a lower temperature.

Mrs. Sarah Muir

Of Minneapolis.

"I was for a long time a sufferer from Female Weakness and tried many remedies and physicians, to no good purpose. One bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla made so great a difference in my condition that I took three bottles more and found myself perfectly well. I have also given Hood's Sarsaparilla to the children, and find that it keeps them in good health." MRS. SARAH MUIR, 309 16th av., So. Minneapolis, Minn.

HOOD'S PILLS cure all Liver Ills.

Coquelin's Bill to Vanderbilt.

While on one of his European tours Coquelin, the actor, was in Constantinople at the same time as Mr. Vanderbilt, who invited him to come and recite some of his monologues on board the latter's yacht. There was a most exclusive audience, consisting only of Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt. There rate of payment, says the New York Herald, had been previously arranged by Mr. Vanderbilt in a letter which ran as follows:

"You will cause our tears to flow six times and I shall not think it too much if you charge me a hundred dollars each time. Besides, you will make us laugh twelve times, and considering the depressing state of the weather we are now having I am persuaded I ought not to pay you less than $200 every time."

After the performance Mr. Coquelin presented the following bill:

Mr. Vanderbilt to Mr. Coquelin, Dr.

Six tears at $100 each	$ 600
Twelve fits of laughter at $200 each	2,400
Total	$3,000

A Valuable Lesson.

Aspiring Author "with big manuscript"—"The editor is not in, eh? Well, I'll wait for him. Are you regularly employed here?"

Office Boy—great magazine—Yep."

Aspiring Author—"A good beginning. When you grow up you'll know enough to be an author, won't you?"

Office Boy—"I'll know enough not ter be."

SYRUP of FIGS

ONE ENJOYS

Both the method and results when Syrup of Figs is taken; it is pleasant and refreshing to the taste, and acts gently yet promptly on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, cleanses the system effectually, dispels colds, headaches and fevers and cures habitual constipation. Syrup of Figs is the only remedy of its kind ever produced, pleasing to the taste and acceptable to the stomach, prompt in its action and truly beneficial in its effects, prepared only from the most healthy and agreeable substances, its many excellent qualities commend it to all and have made it the most popular remedy known.

Syrup of Figs is for sale in 50c and $1 bottles by all leading druggists. Any reliable druggist who may not have it on hand will procure it promptly for any one who wishes to try it. Do not accept any substitute.

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
LOUISVILLE, KY. NEW YORK, N.Y.

TOWER'S
TRADE MARK.
FISH BRAND

This Trade Mark is on the best WATERPROOF COAT in the World! Illustrated Catalogue Free. A. J. TOWER, BOSTON, MASS.

Tutt's Tiny Pills stimulate the torpid liver, strengthen the digestive organs, regulate the bowels, and are unequaled as an anti-bilious medicine. Dose small. Price, 25c. Office, 39 & 41 Park Place, N. Y.

TELEGRAPHY AND ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING

Taught by practical Telegraphers and Electricians. No department of a Business College, but a thorough special course. Circulars Free. McAllisters School of Telegraphy, 419 Nicollet Av., Minneapolis, Minn.

ALLEN'S IRON TONIC BITTERS

The most Elegant Blood Purifier, Liver Invigorator, Tonic and Appetizer known. The first Bitters containing Iron ever advertised in America. J.P. ALLEN, Druggist & Chemist, St. Paul, Minn.

PISO'S CURE FOR

Consumptives and people who have weak lungs or Asthma, should use Piso's Cure for Consumption. It has cured thousands. It has not injured one. It is not bad to take. It is the best cough syrup. Sold everywhere. 25c.

CONSUMPTION.

Minn. Hist. Society
Dec. 24 1893
SOCIETY

St. Hilaire Spectator.

VOLUME XI. ST. HILAIRE, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 4, 1893. NUMBER 24.

THE WEEKLY NEWS DIGEST.

EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK IN A CONDENSED FORM.

The Latest and Most Important News of the World, Culled From the Telegraph Reports of the Press Associations.

Washington.

Indians at Bad River agency, Wis., complain that government timber is being cut illegally.

The discrimination against American roads by the Canadian Pacific will be investigated by our government.

Bills are prepared providing that the quarantine system shall be placed into the hands of the revenue marine hospital services.

President Harrison discourages the proposition that the government issue from $50,000,000 to 100,000,000 of bonds to relieve the market and check the export of gold.

In all that has recently been written about the depleted condition of the United States treasury little or no attention has been taken of the fact that with each passing year the treasury is a large gainer by the complete destruction by casualty of its outstanding obligations. How much this amounts to, what percentage each year, etc., the best statisticians of the treasury department have no means of ascertaining.

Accidental Happenings.

Mattie Cullough perished in a blizzard in Butler County, Mass.

Five men were killed and one injured by falling earth in the Calumet iron mine, near Sanda, Col.

The 8-year-old daughter of George Elliott, who lives near Burnsville, Ind., was burned to death.

The mansion of Mrs. W. R. King, of Chicago, located near Tecumseh, Mich., burned with a loss of $10,000.

An express on the Reading road collided with a work train. An engineer, a fireman and several passengers were injured.

Fire caused by natural gas at Ossawatomie, Kas., caused the death of Miss Louise Kindle, Miss Griffith, a babe, and Miss Fletcher, a servant.

Parlor car No. 184, on the east-bound Lake Erie & Western passenger train was blown up near Lima, O., injuring the conductor and a passenger. The steam-heater in the rear end of the car exploded.

The post-office, dry goods store, hardware store and two dwellings at Glenshaw Station, Pa., on the Pittsburg & Western Railroad, were entirely destroyed by a fire of unknown origin.

Fire at Statesville, N. C., destroyed $75,000 worth of buildings, including the Carolina Hotel and business block and the Statesville armory. Incendiarism is supposed to be the cause.

A dog and a bull invaded a church near North Derry, Conn., during Christmas services, and fought a desperate battle. There was a stampede, and several persons were injured.

Dynamite in a stick of stove wood demolished a stove at Valparaiso, Ind., flying fragments of iron injuring Mrs. Andrew Bickel and her two children seriously.

A train was run across the line of a road at the Missouri, Kansas & Texas and the Navada & Fort Smith crossing, where the latter is building, to prevent the crossing being made. Two men were hurt. Four hundred armed men are on the spot.

A snow slide at Haley, Idaho, swept away the engine house of the Narrow Gauge mine and wrecked a concentrator mill 500 yards below. Henry Bloss was in the engine house and was instantly killed. A teamster named McConnel was caught and his team killed, but he was dug out alive.

The Continental block at Omaha, a five-story building, occupied by several firms, was destroyed by fire. Orchard's loss on a furniture stock is $120,000; Freeland, Loomis & Co. lose $140,000 on clothing, while the loss on building is $130,000. Other occupants swell the total loss to $500,000.

Personal Mention.

Mrs. Lillie Langtry is reported to be worse, and she is now in imminent danger of a fatal result of her illness.

William Russell, the founder of the Fall Mountain Paper Company of Bellows Falls, Vt., and the oldest papermaker in the United States, is dead.

The will of the late William McKinley, Sr., father of Gov. McKinley, has been probated. After a few charitable bequests the estate, valued at $10,000, is given to his daughter, Miss Helen McKinley.

Chauncey M. Depew is a believer in scrap books. He has eight or ten of them which contain clippings from newspapers and periodicals relating to himself. All of his printed speeches are preserved in this way.

Dr. Charles Emmanuel Schenk, the new president-elect of Switzerland, is sixty-nine years of age, and was educated for the ministry. But he turned his attention to politics and has long been prominent in public affairs.

Sir John Thompson, the new Canadian premier, will not interfere with the decision of the English privy council abolishing Roman Catholic state aid to public schools in Manitoba. The new premier will adhere strongly to the high protective policy.

Hon. G. M. Lambertson, recently appointed assistant secretary of the treasury, arrived in Washington and entered at once upon the discharge of his duties. He took the oath of office in Wisconsin ten days ago.

Among the Wicked.

The election returns placed in the safe in the city clerk's office have been stolen.

Dr. W. H. Williams, of West Lafayette, O., is in jail, charged with arson.

Jealousy caused George Townsend to shoot and kill Charles T. Chichester, near Beatrice, Neb.

Ernest McConquodale was called to his gate at night at Coffeyville, Ala., and was shot dead by unknown assassins.

Four Indians, who tortured to death two Indians charged with witchcraft, in New Mexico, have been arrested by federal troops.

John C. McCourt, the ex-agent at Cincinnati of the Louisville & Nashville road, was held in $10,000 bonds on a charge of embezzling $38,000.

In a row between twenty Polanders at Pittsburg, Joseph Sparkonsky was stabbed several times, and was then clubbed by a policeman. He died an hour later.

C. A. Hardin, the express messenger suspected of the $35,000 robbery between Cincinnati and Nashville, has been exonerated.

Baron Wilhelm von Puttkamer, who is said to be the son of a Prussian statesman, and a nephew of Princess Bismarck, and in the Salvation Army, was seriously stabbed at New York.

Max Newman, the Homestead nonunionist, who shot and killed Thomas Coyne, another non-union worker, on the night of November 15, was acquitted of the charge of manslaughter.

The Rev. Father Schwaler, the priest who committed suicide at Covington, Ky., was buried in consecrated ground, something unusual in the case of suicide.

A clerk in Topeka, Kas., pension office was detected in filling out checks signed in blank and cashing them. Two checks aggregating $4,600 were presented at one bank.

James Dunlap, the notorious bank robber, who is serving fifteen years in the penitentiary for the Northhampton Bank robbery, has been pardoned. He restored the stolen money, and had but a year to serve.

George McInaltiy, of Christian County Ill., was arrested in Decatur, Ill., on a charge of abducting Miss Nora Helsby, the 15-year-old daughter of Joseph Helsby. The couple had left Christian County together for the purpose of getting married.

From Other Shores.

Kevans, who was charged with causing the Dublin explosion, is released.

Garcia in person commands the Mexican revolutionists.

Mexican revolutionists at Loma Blanca, Tex., were routed by United States troops.

The Castilhistas of Rio Grande do sul have invaded Uruguay.

Famine in Sweden causes hundreds to emigrate.

War is threatened between Chile and Argentina, growing out of a Chilean pamphlet to which Argentina takes exceptions.

Fresh turmoil occurs in France. The minister of war is said to have resigned and arrests for treason are expected.

A new line of steamers is to be established between San Diego and Mazatlan, Mexico.

Yellow fever has become almost epidemic in La Guayara. The mortality in Caracas continues to increase.

The Toronto Bar Association adopted resolutions favoring the admission of women to the bar.

The private banking firm of W. W. Trull & Co., of Toronto, has suspended with liabilities of $20,000.

A man and his wife have been arrested at the City of Mexico, charged with biting and burning to death a child 7 years old. The lad had 257 wounds on his body.

The Argentine province of Corrientes is in a state of revolt and 5,000 revolutionists are in control of the province. Ten thousand troops have been mobilized to suppress the revolution.

The rejection of the Franco-Swiss commercial treaty by the French chamber of deputies is bitterly resented at Berne. There is an unanimous feeling in favor of reprisals.

Sixteen Indians, who were taken prisoners in the terrible massacre at Tomachie, in the western part of the state of Chihuahua, two months ago, will be shot.

The boundary dispute between Costa Rica and Nicaragua is assuming threatening dimensions and hostilities may begin at any moment.

In attempting to rescue a young lady and gentleman who had broken through the ice on Loch Ancilean, near Inverness, Gen. Rice, who had plunged into the water, was carried by the current under the unbroken ice and drowned.

Conan Doyle, the novelist, writes to the London Times suggesting that it would be a graceful act on the part of the British Government to offer three of the crack British bands, including the bands of the guards, to play at the World's Fair in Chicago, and a squadron of the Life guard to take part in the opening procession.

Labor.

The difference between the Baltimore & Ohio railroad officials and the grievance committee of the Brotherhood of Trainmen has been settled by the signing of a wage scale, which makes an average increase of from 8 to 18 cents per day.

Delegates to the third annual convention of the Machine Wood Workers' International Union of America went into session at Chicago, nearly two hundred strong. The reports show the organization is in an exceedingly prosperous condition.

The Political World.

It is believed that Murphy will be elected senator in New York, in spite of Mr. Cleveland's objections.

Miscellaneou Iteam.

California raisin-growers are forming a trust.

A call is issued for a Catholic convention to be held in Chicago next September.

Small pox exists in several Puget sound towns.

Navigation on the Rhine, Moselle, Neckar and Main rivers has been stopped by floating ice.

The assets of Corser, the Minneapolis real estate dealer who failed, are $1,000,000, and the liabilities $800,000.

One Republican and eight Democratic presidential electors were chosen in California, as shown by the completed count.

The Illinois National Guard has been reorganized, and now consists of three brigades instead of two.

Dr. Ralph Butterfield, of Kansas City, a miser, supposed to be a poor man has left $185,000 to Dartmouth College.

The national Russian relief committee of the United States makes a statement of what it has accomplished.

United States deputy marshals are defeated by Mexican revolutionists in a fight in Texas.

The supreme court of Wyoming decides the Carbon county contest in favor of the Democrats, giving them control of the legislature.

George J. Gould and Howard Gould appeared before the probate clerk, Finney, in New York, and qualified by taking the customary oath as executors of the will of their father, the late Jay Gould.

State Labor Commissioner Peck denies that he is going to bring suits for libel against any newspapers for what he terms their persecution of him during the recent campaign.

At a depth of 2,220 feet at Manistee, Mich. a stream of strong smelling water of intense bitterness was opened up, which a local chemist who analyzed it claims contains over 5 per cent. of bromide.

Referee William H. Willis has filed at New York his report in favor of granting an absolute divorce to Fanny S. Woolsey, from her husband, Edward J. Woolsey, and he finds that she is entitled to alimony at the rate of $6,000 per year during the rest of her life.

The largest seizure of smuggled opium in years has been made in San Francisco. The contraband drug, consisting of 1,200 half-pound cans, valued at $12,000, was discovered inside of the sheathing in the hold of the steamer Oceanic, from Hong Kong. The duty upon the opium amounted to $7,000.

SOME SERIOUS CHARGES.

ALLEGATIONS OF INTENT TO DEFRAUD MADE.

Three Men Are Charged With Having Entered Into a Conspiracy to Wreck the Minnesota and Dakota Stone Company.

Financial Napoleons.

Chicago, Jan. 2.—Serious charges of fraud are made in a bill filed in the circuit court Saturday by William Monroe alleging that S. P. Horbaugh, W. H. Conglenover and W. F. Reynolds entered into a conspiracy to wreck the Dakota & Minnesota Stone company. It is claimed that they arranged a plan to appropriate to their own use property consisting of some 200 acres of valuable stone land, buildings and quarry equipments worth $100,000. Further charges are made that Horbaugh and Conglenover dishonestly made pretended sales of stock for their own gain. While acting as officers of the company it is said that they simply speculated and juggled with the stock and appropriated the proceeds to their own use. Complainant further charges that the arrangement with the First National Bank at Pipestone, Minn., to compel the corporation to make an assignment was with the full knowledge and consent of Reynolds. It is said that there was no necessity for the assignment and there was more than sufficient cash and assets to pay the liabilities. When the property of the company was sold it was bid in by Reynolds, it is said, in behalf of himself and Conglenover and Horbaugh for $22,000, or one-fifth of its actual value. It is alleged that they did not invest any money in the plant upon the purchase, but simply hypothecated the cash for a loan, and in this way paid the debts of the company. The bill further claims that the three defendants fraudulently appropriated the proceeds of the treasury stock and concealed the books and papers of the company, and endeavored to bribe the other directors to gain control of the assets. Under these circumstances the court is asked to compel the defendants to account, set aside the assignment and to appoint a receiver. An injunction is also sought to prevent any disposition of the real or personal estate.

A Possible Row.

Chicago, Jan. 2.—If the statement of Commodore Skarraitt be correct, a conflict between the government of this country and that of Great Britain for the possession of the Sandwich Islands is not out of the range of possibilities. The commodore arrived at the Palmer house to-day en route for San Francisco to take charge of the war vessel Mohican. "It is possible," he said, "that vessels will be ordered to Honolulu shortly owing to the disturbance among the inhabitants of the island named. If a change in the present rule takes place there will be a strong movement to place the islands under the government of the United States, while at the same time there is a section which advocates British rule. Even if a majority expressed a desire for annexation to the United States it is likely England will enter a vigorous protest. Already British agents are on the spot to prevent an arrangement with America."

A Terrible Strain.

New York, Jan. 2.—Dr. Charles A. Briggs is still receiving the congratulations of his friends over the vote returned in his favor by the court sitting Friday afternoon. But Dr. Briggs himself is not at all elated. He is almost broken down by this strain.

"I am tired of it all," he said wearily, "but the case is by no means near an end. I have no doubt that it will be appealed. They have no legal right to appeal direct to the general assembly of the Presbyterian church at Washington, and in case they do I shall certainly protest their action. I shall take no action until the other side does. It is for them to move and then I can follow."

Dr. Briggs stated that he would resume his lectures at the Union Theological seminary next Wednesday.

Gold, Indians and Trouble.

Durango, Colo., Jan. 2.—Ike Hitt, who spent many years mining in Utah, arrived here from Devils Canon to-day and returns to-morrow with supplies. He says fully 7,000 men are strung along the San Juan river for a distance of 150 miles and that they are coming in at the rate of 300 per day. Most of the men now going in are simply staking claims, though he saw gravel panned out that gave $2.50 to the pan near Devils Canon, where the richest placers are. There has been no trouble up to one week ago, but there was a great deal of claim jumping, and trouble is bound to ensue. The Navajos Indians are collecting along the border and threaten trouble, although so many men are now on the ground that an outbreak would result disastrously to the Indians.

Prof. Briggs' Case.

New York, Jan. 2.—J. J. McCook, the prosecuting attorney in the trial of Rev. Dr. Charles A. Briggs, said to-day: "I do not know what we shall do yet. We must wait for the decision of the committee of the presbytery. The vote does not contain a decision, though it insures a decision favorable to Dr. Briggs. So soon as we get the decision of the presbytery, through the committee, our committee will meet and decide upon what course we shall pursue." Dr. Briggs did not care to talk.

Lumber in Ashes.

Brainerd, Minn., Special, Jan. 2.—Fire to-night completely destroyed the dry kiln and lumber sheds at J. J. Howe & Co.'s mill, together with nearly 400,000 feet of lumber. The planing mill was saved after a hard struggle with the flames. The loss will aggregate over $20,000, which is partially covered by insurance.

Car Works in Tennessee.

Knoxville, Tenn., Jan. 2.—A strong company, with John M. Bass of Fort Wayne, Senator Brice and Sam Thomas as leading stockholders, has been organized and will erect car works and a car wheel factory at Lenoir City, twenty miles west of Knoxville. The car works will have a capacity of fifteen complete cars a day.

No Fired by Capt. Brown.

Washington, Jan. 2.—It is stated at the interior department that there was no truth in the published statement that Dr. Eastman, the agency physician at Pine Ridge, and his wife had been dismissed by Capt. Brown, the agent. It is stated that there has been some friction between the agent and the physician and his wife, and several complaints have been made by each against the other. An inspector was some time ago sent to Pine Ridge agency to make investigation, and his report is now on its way to Washington. Until that report arrives no action will be taken.

THE UMBRIA.

Unwritten History of the Voyage.

New York, Jan. 2.—It was discovered to-day that the steel hawser with which the Umbria was towed by the Hamburg-American steamship Bohemia on Dec. 24 did not part solely because of the strain caused by the high seas. A clean nick in one of the strands indicates that the hawser was cut aboard the Bohemia. It is probable that the Hamburg ship was in danger and there was no time to back the engines so that the hawser could be cast off. It is partially cut by the engineer's chisel and the strain did the rest. Self preservation alone would warrant her in cutting the hawser and leaving the Umbria in a helpless condition. The Bohemia is due at Hamburg to-morrow. The Umbria will not get a new thrust shaft on this side of the Atlantic. The Cunard line has decided to have the fastened part of the shaft repaired in such a way that it will last for one voyage at least, and be practically as good as a new shaft. This work will consume about a week. It is likely that the Umbria will be ready to sail in about ten days. She will steam at three-quarters speed.

Capt. Janes, of the steamship Gallileo, made a statement to-day that Capt. McKay, of the Umbria, refused to take a tow of the Gallileo. Capt. McKay, said he, was anxious to have the Gallileo tow him, but Capt. Janes declined to do so.

It Would Not Work.

London, Jan. 2.—Baroness de Roque, the mother of Mrs. Maybrick, states today that her daughter's health is improving. The Exchange Telegraph company also says that Mrs. Maybrick is recovering, adding that the hemorrhages with which she was recently attacked and which caused the reports that she was in a dying condition were caused by herself and not by the ravages of consumption. According to some of the newspapers here the reported illness of Mrs. Maybrick was nothing less than an attempt on her part to create public sympathy for herself, and to induce Mr. Asquith, the home secretary, to release her from confinement. The St. James Gazette to-day prints an article on Mrs. Maybrick, and congratulates the public on the non-success of the ingenious attempt to regain her freedom. The Gazette declares that her illness was caused by her swallowing a lot of needles that she had secreted from time to time. These needles produced an effusion of blood and other symptoms of lung disease, and the report was at once circulated that she was dying from consumption.

Won't Divide the Church.

Lakewood, N. J., Jan. 2.—Rev. Dr. Hastings, president of the Theological Seminary of New York, says that the verdict in the Briggs case will not divide the church. He fears that complaint will be made by the prosecuting committee to the general assembly which meets in Washington in May. In such event, Dr. Briggs will not appar, as he will stand no chance before a jury of six hundred. It will require a one-third vote of the presbytery to make a complaint to the general assembly. If the complaint is taken to the general synod, Dr. Briggs, Dr. Hastings says, will gladly appear. Dr. Hastings is gratified at the result of the trial. He says that the prosecuting committee worked hard to secure a vote against Dr. Briggs.

The Fairfax Bankers.

Redwood Falls, Minn., Special, Jan. 2.—I. A. Beard and F. A. Gray, the private bankers at Fairfax, who were arrested yesterday, will remain under arrest for a week at least. They are not in confinement, nor were bonds taken. They live in their own houses as usual. Their attorney, Judge Baldwin of this town, to-day makes the statement that he believes there is plenty of property to pay all debts, and leave a good balance for the bankers. They had loaned largely to farmers in the last year, the crop came to nothing, the farmers could not pay at the time stipulated and hence this collapse. The invoice will be ready Monday.

Dr. Smith's Troubles.

Cincinnati, Jan. 2.—The fruits of the Smith heresy case are beginning to be seen, and the present indications are that the civil courts will be called on to settle the trouble. The immediate cause of the present suit is the contention over the position of Prof. Smith in Lane seminary. The executive committee is for Smith, while the board of trustees is divided and a split in the college is threatened. The question as to which of the two boards is the authority will doubtless throw the case into court. The moment that is done it is understood several of the heaviest donators to the endowment of the seminary will sue to recover the amounts donated to the institution.

Great Thing for Bicyclists.

Boston, Jan. 2.—A number of American cycling manufacturers have in contemplation a gigantic scheme—the construction of an asphalt road from thirty to thirty-five feet wide from New York to Chicago. The relay ride between these two cities brought the abominable condition of the roads prominently to the attention of the public. The line would be invaluable for government use, as swift couriers would have an opportunity to perform good work. In addition to this the road would be of great service in sending troops across the country, and it would also be of benefit to the telegraph service. It has been suggested

Had Trouble With Priests.

Dallas, Tex., Jan. 2.—Bishop Fitzgerald of Little Rock has been appointed by Archbishop Jantzen of New Orleans as administrator of the diocese, vice Bishop Brennan, and he took charge to-day. Bishop Brennan has had trouble with the priesthood under him, and has gone to Rome to lay the matter before the pope. No information as to the result of his visit to Rome can be had. His friends, however, say he will be reinstated and that Bishop Fitzgerald has taken only temporary charge of the diocese pending his return.

Laborers Unruly.

Madrid, Jan. 2.—A serious labor riot occurred in this city to-day. While 1,000 workingmen were marching in a body to the town hall to submit certain grievances to the mayor, they became involved in a conflict with the police. The latter made free use of their sabers, while stones and other missiles were showered upon them from all sides. Many policemen and workingmen were wounded before the mob was dispersed. Several arrests were made.

Will Dance in the Pension Office.

Washington, Jan. 2.—The place of holding the inaugural ball next March, about which there has been some discussion in the past few weeks, was settled to-day, when Secretary Noble gave the inauguration committee permission to use the pension bureau for that event.

Boarding Stables in Ashes.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Jan. 2.—One of the largest boarding stables in the city was consumed by fire early this morning, caused by the explosion of a lantern in the loft. Three horses were cremated. Loss, $4,000; insurance, $1,000. The barn was owned by S. Simons.

UNCLE SAM IS COURTING.

HE ASKS FOR ANNULMENT OF CONTRACT

Between the Union Pacific and Western Union, Charging Corrupt Collusion Between the Two Defendant Companies.

Trifling With the Government.

St. Louis, Jan. 2.—A printed and type-written volume of 787 pages, purporting to be a true transcript of a bill of complaint, answer and other proceedings in equity before Associate Justice Brewer, of the United States supreme court, sitting in the circuit court of the United States for the district of Nebraska, was filed Saturday in the United States circuit court of appeals, wherein the United States is complainant and the Union Pacific Railway company and the Western Union Telegraph company are defendants.

The United States alleges that by an act of July 1, 1862, congress granted certain lands and subsidies to the Union Pacific upon condition that it maintain a line of telegraph for governmental purposes, and that after establishing said line the railroad company entered into a contract with the Western Union by which it secured a monopoly of the telegraph wires, and when the United States attempted to enforce the penalties for failure to comply with the contract by which the Union Pacific railway secured said lands and subsidies, the Union Pacific was enjoined by the Western Union from carrying out the terms of its contract with the government, as the United States alleges and charges, "by corrupt collusion between the two defendant companies. On the granting of said writ of injunction to the said Western Union, the United States appeals to the United States circuit court of appeals to declare the contract between said companies void and that an order be issued compelling the Union Pacific railway to fulfill its contract with the government."

Youthful Robbers.

Lake City, Minn., Special, Jan. 2.—While the west-bound local freight train was sidetracked here on Thanksgiving day $11 were stolen from the caboose. When the same train was at this station yesterday $35 were purloined from the caboose. These robberies were traced to a band of seven boys, one of whom had been selected by the others as captain, and last night they were arrested and arraigned before Justice Wells. They admitted their guilt and were fined. The ages of the boys are from twelve to sixteen years, and all of them have respectable parents. Three of the juvenile robbers were armed with revolvers.

Invented a Ballot Box.

Baltimore, Jan. 2.—W. Sumpter Black, a machinist of this city, has just perfected an improved ballot box, which is apparently perfect in every detail and well calculated to become generally adopted. When the ballot is placed in the slot it passes over a self-feeding cylinder between two other rollers, which aid in its deposit. The mechanism is worked by a single revolution and rings a bell as the ballot is deposited. The bell notifies the judge that the ballot has been cast. The box is also provided with a key to throw the mechanism out of gear when the polls have been closed. The patentee was the draughtsman of the original Mergenthaler type setting machine.

Explosion in a Castle.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 2.—Prince Baritanski's castle in the government of Kursk was the scene of a dynamite explosion to-day. A number of tenants were at loggerheads with the prince's superintendent. That part of the castle in which the superintendent's bed room was situated was undermined. The bed room with all its contents was destroyed and part of the wing abolished, but the superintendent, by mere accident, was absent from his room. A number of peasants were arrested, but so far the authorities have not succeeded in discovering the perpetrators.

Against Washburn's Bill.

Monticello, Ill., Jan. 2.—The annual convention of the Central Illinois Farmers' association closed yesterday with an exciting discussion over the resolution offered by S. W. Allerton of Chicago, instructing Senators Cullom and Palmer to use all honorable means to defeat Senator Washburn's anti-option bill now before the senate. The resolutions were passed by a large majority amid great enthusiasm.

Big Street Railway Deal.

St. Louis, Jan. 2.—Recent street railway deals, with rumors of others, have led to a thorough inquiry as to who is behind the new movement, with the result of an arrival at a belief that a consolidation of all the lines in the city would ultimately result with the now well known Eastern syndicate in control, viz.: Lee, Higginson & Co., Boston; Daniel Lamont, W. C. Whitney and others of New York.

River Men Apprehensive.

Pittsburg, Jan. 2—River and coal men are anxiously watching the rivers tonight. The weather has been very mild for thirty-six hours, and it has been raining here and at the headwaters since yesterday. The ice in the first pool has been broken, but the three upper Monongahela pools are still frozen solid, and it is feared that a sudden break-up will cause great damage to craft from gorges.

The Emperor Determined.

London, Jan. 2.—The Berlin correspondent of the Daily Telegraph understands that Emperor William in his New Year address referred to no political matter except the army bill, upon which he spoke with the utmost gravity, assuring the officers that he was determined that the bill should pass.

Large Wheat Shipments.

Inkster, N. D., Special, Jan. 2.—Shipments of wheat have been very large this winter. Two hundred thousand bushels of wheat have been marketed at Inkster and 250,000 bushels at Conway to date.

Serious in Africa.

London, Jan. 2.—Authentic news has been received of a serious state of affairs in Africa. The khalifa is sending a strong force from Omdurmat to attack

Children Burned to Death.

New York, Jan. 2.—The house of William Phillips, a colored laborer, living near Stony Brook, L. I., was destroyed by fire last night. Four small children who were locked in the house were horribly burned. Two of them were dead when discovered. The other died this morning.

Killed Himself While Despondent.

Kalispell, Mont., Special, Jan. 2.—Charles D. McCreary, head bookkeeper in the Conrad National bank, and one of the most popular young men in this city, committed suicide to-day. Despondency the cause.

ELECTRICAL ETCHINGS

Briefly Told.

Three Englishmen now have statues in France—Lord Brougham at Cannes, Jenner at Boulogne-Sur-Mer, and Shakespeare, in Paris.

When Collis P. Huntington's adopted daughter, Clara, became the wife of Prince Hatzfeldt, the marriage settlements included monetary arrangements to be made in case of divorce.

Mrs. Noble, wife of the secretary of the interior, has a way of writing postal cards to herself one day as reminders of special duties to which she needs to give attention on the next day.

Mrs. Anna S. Rowe, daughter of the late Edward A. White, a Boston fire commissioner, who was disinherited by her father's will, has succeeded in setting it aside and getting $100,000 as her share of the estate.

He-ne-a-go, one of the chiefs of the Osages, the richest Indians in the country, recently exhibited himself to the wondering gaze of the people of Kansas City. He wore his first hat for the occasion, and a brand new pair of blankets.

Whitelaw Reid has received a large Sevres vase from the French government, which bears the inscription: "The government of the French republic to Mr. Whitelaw Reid, late minister of the United States of America, as a souvenir of his mission at Paris 1889-1892."

Elizabeth Cady Stanton says that the first Pilgrim to set foot on Plymouth Rock was a woman. It was true that she was carried ashore seated on the joined hands of men who waded through the water from the boat, but she was the first one who landed on the rock.

Susan B. Anthony thinks we are on the verge of an era of unmarried women, because young men do not make money enough to support their wives, and there is such a craze for dissipation among them that the women would rather go in a store for almost nothing than to marry.

Activity on the Border.

St. Louis, Jan. 2.—In view of the threatening situation on the Mexican border, it is understood here that more avtcive campaigning will soon begin. This is deducted from the fact that word has come from apparently reliable sources that the commissary subsistence department of the army is making extensive preparations for feeding the troops. The supplies, it is stated, will be collected with St. Louis asa basing point, and from here forwarded to the Texas points in need of them.

Laredo, Tex., Jan. 2.—Last night a telegram was received at military headquarters in this city stating that Rosario Muerrero and Marcial Benerides, the deputy United States marshals who were captured last Friday by the bandits, had escaped, and one of them, Guerrero, had arrived at Aquilares on the Texas-Mexican railway, and that the other one was making his way toward Laredo as fast as he could. Three companies of the Seventeenth United States cavalry, with camp supplies, forage, etc., have left Laredo for the lower country. Company G, Twenty-third infantry, will soon leave for New Laredo, some twenty miles from Carrizo.

Entirely Too Cheap.

St. Joseph, Mo., Jan. 2.—Saturday Thomas Carroll, a former resident of Easton, but now of Colorado, returned home on a visit and called at the house of Eli Lawless, a prominent farmer, to renew his acquaintance with Miss Annie Lawless, who was a little girl when he went away. In a laughing manner he offered Mrs. Lawless a quarter for her daughter. Thinking he was joking she accepted the money, and the girl, in a spirit of fun, consented also. Carroll was in earnest, however, and coming to St. Joe he secured a marriage license. Returning, he demanded that the ceremony take place at once. Under what she claims was an uncontrolable impulse the girl consented, and they were married by Justice Iba. As soon as the ceremony was over the bride left him and went home, refusing to have anything to do with him. Carroll left for Colorado to-day.

Used Two Revolvers.

Newton, Iowa, Jan. 2.—Harry Woodrow, aged twenty-two, son of J. W. Woodrow, president of the Jasper county bank, shot himself last night. He had spent the evening with Miss Jennie Gardiner, with whom he had been keeping company for some time. On leaving the house he stepped out of the door on the walk and an instant after the door was closed the reports of revolvers rang and Woodrow's lifeless body fell upon the walk. He used two revolvers. Placing one on either side of his head he pulled the triggers and both went off simultaneously. The ball from one passed clear through his head; the other glanced off from near the temple. No cause is known for Woodrow's act. It was probably a lovers' quarrel.

The Electoral Colleges

Philadelphia, Jan. 2.—Chairman William F. Harrity, of the Democratic national committee, has written to all the chairmen of all Democratic state committees and to the chairmen of all the states that cast their votes for Cleveland and Stevenson, calling their attention to the action of congress that directs the presidential electors of the several states shall meet and organize the electoral college, cast their votes, etc. on the second Monday in January. Meetings of the electoral colleges shall be held on Monday, Jan. 9, 1893. This notice is regarded as necessary for the reason that many of the states have not yet changed their laws so as to conform to the provisions of the act of congress of 1887.

Holding Office by Force.

Long Island City, L. I., Jan. 2.—Mayor Patrick Gleason took possession of the city hall to-night with a force of twenty police and a hundred or more of his followers. All were armed with revolvers to prevent the friends of Mr. Sanford, who also claims to have been elected mayor, from gaining possession of the mayor's office. Mayor Gleason intends to assume the duties for a third term by virtue of a certificate of election given to him by City Clerk Burke. Neither Mr. Sandford nor his friends will make any attempt to gain the office by force, but will abide the decision of the courts.

Temporary Business Trouble.

Pine Bluff, Ark., Jan. 2.—A sensation was caused here to-day by the failure of Althermer Bros., wholesale and retail dry goods dealers and planters. Assets, $300,000; liabilities, $100,000. The failure was caused by the refusal of the insurance companies to settle the Althermers' claims of $40,000 for the destruction of their establishment two years ago. This, coupled with disastrous overflows on their plantations and the poor business this fall, caused the failure. The impression prevails here that their troubles will be only temporary.

Wholesalers Fail.

Peoria, Ill., Jan. 2.—Kirkwood, Miller & Co., wholesale dealers in agricultural implements and bicycles, this evening assigned for the benefit of their creditors. The assets are $102,000 and liabilities $200,000. I. G. Edwards is named as assignee. The firm had long been regarded as one of the most substantial in the city.

Smallpox Among Chinamen.

Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 2.—New Northern Pacific steamship Tacoma, from China, arrived at Victoria, B. C., yesterday and was quarantined, with small pox among the Chinese passengers.

Uncle Sam's Obligations.

Washington, Jan. 2.—The public debt statement for December will not be published until Tuesday. It is estimated that it will show a loss in cash during December of $1,000,000, making the net cash about $20,000,000. Pension payments during December have been slightly in excess of $15,000,000, or at the rate of $180,000,000 a year.

For the Benefit of Creditors.

Bird Island, Minn., Special, Jan. 2.—Quady & McMahon have been forced to assign for the benefit of their creditors. Liabilities about $4,400; assets, $5,000. A. Dahl is assignee.

About Some Authors.

Charles Dickens was extremely fond of amateur theatricals. A recently discovered letter of his contains the following lines which are most characteristic of the author of Pickwick, "I am terribly out of spirits this morning owing to the great difficulty, I and the stage carpenter experience in making moonlight, which is a much more troublesome task than we anticipated." There is something very ludicrous in the idea of employing a carpenter to make moonlight.

Dr. Cotton Mather, who died in Boston in 1792, was the author of three hundred and eighty two works, some of them being of huge dimensions. The most bulky of his works contained seven large folio volumes. He died at the age of sixty-five.

Robert Dodsley, famous as a bookseller, and author of much ingenious writing, was a man almost entirely devoid of education. He was a natural writer, developing into an author of no little renown, from the very small beginning of a livery servant.

The poet Shelley, as a boy, was possessed of a marvelous imagination. So wonderful, indeed, was it that it gave his parents many an anxious hour. He would recount imaginary scenes and conversations as though they were actual, and it really seemed as though he were unable to distinguish between the little fictions of his imagination and actual fact. This characteristic was strong with Shelley throughout his not very long life, and frequently gave rise to unfortunate complications between himself and those who did not understand his nature and habit.

Dr. Johnson, who was extremely careless of his personal appearance, called at the house of a friend one night to induce him to call with him upon Goldsmith. The philosopher was sprucely dressed, as neat in every way as any one could wish, and his friends noticing the change, inquired why he had got himself up so spick and span. "Why, sir," replied Dr. Johnson, "I hear that Goldsmith, who is a very great sloven, justifies his disregard of cleanliness by quoting my practice, and I am desirous this night to show him a better example."

Some Stories of Kings.

A great French monarch, who in addition to being great was a man of much benevolence, once, while holding court, brought the ceremonies to an abrupt ending, dismissing every guest from his presence. When asked why he had done so, he explained that he had observed one of his guests pocketing a repeating chronometer watch that did not belong to him. The King knew that the dishonest guest was poor, and was driven to stealing by a most pressing necessity, and he also knew that as it only wanted a few minutes to the hour, the chronometer would soon ring out the time and the culprit would be discovered and publicly disgraced. To avoid this the King dismissed all from his salon, and doubtless later did something to better the condition of the unfortunate robber, and put him in a position to lead an honest life.

A more or less sycophantic clergyman was once preaching before Louis XIV., the King of France. In the course of his address he cried out, "We must all die," and then feeling that this was perhaps not quite the manner in which to speak to a King, he turned deferentially to Louis, and, with a low bow, added, "That is your Majesty, almost all."

Dr. Busby was a great school-master in England in the time of Charles II. Upon one occasion the King paid a visit to the school where he was received by the doctor, and by him escorted through the establishment. It was observed that on the tour of inspection the doctor, preceded the King, wearing his hat, while the monarch, following meekly in the rear, held his under his arm. When the inspection was over the doctor walked to the door with Charles, and in parting apologized to him for wearing his hat in the royal presence, saying that he was forced to do so. "For," he said, "if my boys were to imagine that there was a greater man in the kingdom than myself, I should never be able to rule them." The King, it is said, took the explanation in good part, and remained a friend to the eminent educator all his days.

When the weather becomes very cold, it will require more corn to produce a pound of gain. This seems to be a pretty good reason for trying to get the hogs off early.

Roots may form a portion of the food of milk cows, but must not be fed too largely if the best quality of product is expected. Use them mainly as a laxative and appetizer.

This is a good time for the farmer to get some reliable person to do his chores, and take a week visiting farmers who are following the same branch of farming as himself—an exchange of ideas is helpful.

Good pastures and heavy grass crops are important factors toward a profitable agriculture. Give some attention to these instead of spending all your care and labor upon the grain fields.

The increasing value of farm lands will be a factor in the profits of the farm in the near future. And this profit is now quite as likely to come in the older and settled regions where lands have already a good value, as elsewhere.

With good roads the farmer will have a better choice of markets. Instead of being compelled to buy and sell at the point that can be reached most easily, he will be able to go where he can do best. Impassable roads sometimes prohibit such selection.

GREAT NORTHERN

TIME CARD.

NO. 3 Daily		NO. Daily
7 40 p m	Lv.........St. Paul.........Ar	6 55 am
8 10 "	11 ......Minneapolis.........	6 25 am
05 a m 218	......Barnesville.........	10 25 pm
10 45 am 79	Lv......Crookston......Ar	4 00 pm
*11 25 " 80	..........Shirley......	3 30 " *
*x11 45 " 81	..........Ives........	x3 00 " *
x12 20 pm	..........Wylie........	x2 20 " *
*12 45 " 82	Ar......St. Hilaire......Lv	2 00 " *

*Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

S. S. Buzza Agt.

Dr. H. GRUNDY.
Physician
& Surgeon.

Graduate of the University of Toronto Canada and member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario.

Messages from the surrounding country attended to,

Office in Drug Store

THIEF RIVER FALLS,

NORTHERN PACIFIC
THE
GREAT TRANSCONTINENTAL ROUTE.

Passes through Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, Manitoba, Montana, Idaho, Oregon and Washington.

THE DINING CAR LINE

Dining cars are run between Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Winnipeg, Helena, Butte, Tacoma, Seattle and Portland.

PULLMAN SLEEPING CAR ROUTE.

Pullman service between Chicago St. Paul Montana and the Pacific Northwest; and between St. Paul, Minneapolis and Minnesota North Dakota and Manitoba points.

THE POPULAR LINE.

Daily Express Trains carry elegant Pullman sleeping Cars, Dining cars, Day Coaches, Pullman Tourist Sleepers and Free Colonist Sleeping Cars.

YELLOWSTONE PARK ROUTE.

The Northern Pacific R. R. is the rail line to Yellowstone Park; the popular line to California and Alaska; and its trains pass through the grandest scenery of seven states.

THROUGH TICKETS Are sold at all coupon offices of the Northern Pacific Railroad to points North, East, South and West in the United States and Canada.

TIME SCEDULE,

	Leave Crookston Daily	Arrive Crookston Daily
For Staples, Minneapolis, St. Paul Duluth Ashland and points East and South	7:05 p. m.	8:20 a m,
For Grand Forks Grafton Drayton, Winnipeg and points in North Dakota and Manitoba	8:27 a. m.	7:10 p. m

For Rates, maps, Time Tables or special information, apply to Agent Northern Pacific R R. at Crookston Minn., or

CHAS. S. FEE,
Gen. Pass. Agent
St. Paul Minn.

ST. HILAIRE MEAT MARKET.

All kinds of fresh and salt meat always on hand.

I make a specialty of buying and selling cattle of all kinds.

If you want to buy or sell anything in that line it will pay you to give me a call.

JAMES DAINARD.

FRED Eikhof

DEALER IN CHOICE
WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS.
Beer always on tap.
Pool Room in Connection.

Broadway St. Hilaire.

FRANK IVES,

Attorney and Counselor AT LAW,

CROOKSTON and ST. HILAIRE, Minn.
Will Practice in All The Courts, OF THE STATE and
and before the U. S. Land Office at Crookston and at Washington.
Will give special attention to contests of claims.

BREVITIES.

Wheat is 60 cents.

Fresh Oysters at W. A. Arthurs try them.

George Brady left last Monday for Crookston.

Business has been light since the holidays.

For No. 1 pure buck wheat flour call on Fricker & Welch.

We have been having some extremely cold weather lately.

If you want some nice fresh oysters call on W. A. Arthur.

R. O. Beemish of Crookston was in town on business last Monday.

A complete line of undertakers goods always on hand at Holmes Bros.

Did you start the new year with the usual good resolution, and is it broken already?

Now is the time to secure your flour cheap. Call for bargains on Fricker & Welch.

George J. McManus, the Crookston life insurance agent was in town last Monday.

Miss Ihlsing returned from Crookston last Monday where she has been spending the holidays.

The new county jail at Crookston is nearly completed and will probably be finished by Feb 1st.

If you want anything in the line of confectionary fruit or oysters call on W. A. Arthur.

A. W. Raymond, of the Crookston marble works has been doing business in town for several days past.

The dance in Dainard's hall last Friday evening was well attended and all report having an enjoyable time.

Drop a dollar into the editorial coffers on subscription account and watch the editor grin.—Elk River Star-News.

Miss Mamie Dainard spent New Years' with her brother James Dainard at Crookston, returning home on Monday.

The village school which should have opened last Monday will be closed until after indication of diphtheria have disappeared.

Several county division schemes will surely come before the legislature this winter. The sentiment in this village among the business men seems to be against any division at present.

Mrs. Christopher Sandmoen needs the sympathy and assistance of all in her severe bereavement. With one child dead and three more sick with that terrible disease, diptheria, she needs all the help that can be given.

It now seems almost certain that Senator Davis will be his own successor The force bill, the McKinley prohibitory tariff and Wall street's financial policy goes in Minnesota this year, and Minnesota wheat raisers will not be represented.

Notice To Farmers.

We will pay you cash for hides, hay barley, oats, cord wood, good steers or anything marketable that you have to sell.

E. T. Spafford & Co.

It is with regret that we chronicle the death from diptheria of Alma, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Berg on Monday last. The remains were interred in the cemetry to-day Mr. and Mrs. Berg have the sympathy of all and all wish that they may not be so visited again.

The railroads—of Minnesota—5790 miles—paid into the state treasury as taxes $882,.00 in 1891, and it is no wonder the people voted not to change the system of taxation. The report of the board of state railroad commissioners shows that the railroads are prosperous and doing an increased business.—Fisher Bulletin.

Mrs. Lease has given out a little information about her modest and retiring husband, of whom very little is known. His initials are C. H. and he runs a drug store in Wichita. He does not have to devote much of his time to house work now, as the children are large enough to help themselves. We find this brief biography in the Kansas City Journal.

Fumigate and Disinfect.

There is no use of disguising the fact that there are several cases of diptheria in town. Every house in town should be thoroughly fumigated and disinfected and all persons who have been exposed to the disease or who are not feeling well should take all possible precaution. All who wish a prescription for a preventative can get it by applying at the drug store.

QUARANTINE.

All persons are hereby forbidden to enter any house in this village in which diptheria is known to be under penelty of law. The Board of health has appointed F. H. Gambell as quarrantine marshall and any communication with affected families must be conveyed by him. All persons seen entering these buildings will be promptly arrested. All persons now in quarantine will be promptly arrested if seen in any public place in the village.

By order of the Board of Health Jan. 4th 1893,

H. E. Ives,
Chairman.

A Hebrew shop keeper at Winnipeg who was anxious to do some business on Friday last inveigled a raw looking Englishman into his store and prevailed on him to buy an old muzzle-loading gun for $2. After making the purchase the Englishman took the gun to his hotel, and, on making an examination, found the barrel filled with what he supposed to be old paper. He took the weapon to a gunsmith to have the obstical removed, and to his amazement, the gunsmith drew out bill after bill until he had a pile of money amounting to $705. Where the gun came from and who put the money there are secrets which may never be known, but doubtless thereby hangs an interesting tale. The Hebrew is almost ready for a lunatic asylum.—Ex

Acting Division Superintendent Ponsonby, of the Great Northern, came up in his special car on Monday's train. He informed us that he was on a general tour of inspection. In regard to a daily train he had nothing to say of any account. He had heard it rumored that we would get one but did not know whether it was right or not. He stated that he was not up here to look up the daily train matter. It has been stated that the reason a daily was likely to be put on was that the merchants of Red Lake Falls would not ship their freight over the G. N. unless they got a daily but Mr. Ponsonby stated that they were getting more than their share of freight at Red Lake Falls. The prospects for a daily train are not as good as they were. One thing is certain we will not get it unless competition at Red Lake Falls compels them to put it on.

The Minnesota legislature convened at noon yesterday. In the house W. E. Lee of long prarie, the banker republican candidate was elected speaker and all the other officers elected being republicans. In the senate, senators Deadon of Chicago county, Mott of Lincoln county and Wood of Marshall county elected two years ago on the Alliance ticket flopped and caucused with republicans and elected a full set of republican officers, with the exception that each flapping senator was allowed to name some favorite for a good position. The republicans now have the Governor and both branches of the legislature and will be fully responsible for all legislation and they will also be responsible if needed reforms does not become laws this winter. It is probably a good thing the republicans have full controll, as all will know who is responsible for all legislation and all lack of it.

DIPTHERIA.

Dr. S. Tillier, of Crookston, was here last Friday and reported that there was three cases of diptheria in town, two at Sandmoen's and J. C. Mathews. Today Dr. A. H. Dunlop, of Crookston, was called here by the board of health and after a careful investigation of every sick person in town reported that there was seven cases here as follows: Three children at Mrs. Sandmoens, one child at C. E. Whaley's, one child at Andrew Hall's, one child at P. S. Stranahan's, and Mrs. Thoreson. He also reported that there were several persons now sick who were very liable to contract the disease unless the greatest care is taken. The child of Mrs. Sandmoen and the child of Andrew Berg who died on Monday, undoubtedly died of the dread disease and it is altogether probable that S. M. Hoff's child also had the same disease. The utmost care must be taken by all to prevent it from spreading further.

There is no occasion for going into a panic but there is much occasion for thoroughly realizing that we shall have the cholera to fight in the interior of this country next summer.

That the plague will be knocking at our gates in the spring is almost inevitable. Any faint hope that it had run its course in Europe and would disappear entirely and permanently under the effects of winter's frosts has been dispelled by recent cable advices. In Hamburg and in Poland the plague has reappeared and Dr. Wendt's claim that cold does not kill the bacilli of cholera although it appears to hinder its propagation," is fully substantiated. "Winter is characterized by unmistakable exemption from the disease," says Dr. Wendt "but it may survive even a very cold winter." It will survive this winter in Europe and it will take up its westward march with the coming of warm weather. Science, precedent and reason teach us that. The best we can do is to be well prepared. While the disease is bound to come, efficient quarantining and sanitation can prevent its becoming epidemic in this country, and can restrict its effect to a comparitively harmless minimum.—St. Paul Globe.

The Chinese do everything backward. Their compass points to the south instead of the north. The men wear skirts and the women trousers; while the men wear their hair long, the women coil them in a knot. The dressmakers are men; the women carry burdens. The spoken language is not written, and the written language is not spoken. Books are read backward, and any notes are inserted at the top. White is used for mourning, and the bridesmaids wear black—instead of being maidens these functionaries are old women. The Chinese surname comes first, and they shake their own hands instead of the hands of one whom they greet. Vessels are launched sideways, and horses are mounted from the off side. They commence their dinner with dessert and end up with soup and fish.

Here is what an eminent New Jersey physician says of salt as a remedy for diphtheria: If the circumstances will warrant, tell the people of a diphtheria cure that is easy of application, inexpensive, pleasant and efficient—indeed, a specific as new as may be, to-wit, simple table salt, "sodii chloridum" of the U. S. P. The rationale is this—the chlorine kills the diphtheria poison. The simplest method of application is to moisten the tip of a finger with water and touch the finger so moistened in a salt-cellar. Then convey to the mouth the salt that adheres to the finger. Do this every quarter hour. If the understanding of the patient is not sufficiently developed for this, as much salt as will lie on the tip of an ordinary pocket-knife blade can be administered every quarter hour. What salt does to the low forms of life is well known by its application to a snail. In these diphtheria patients when the disease attacks the larynx, "membrane croup," a water vaporized in the presence of the patient will certainly do good.

CHEAP EXCURSIONS TO CANADA.

Low round trip tickets will be on sale by the Great Northern from Crookston Grand Forks and stations north to boundary and west to Minot, to points in Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick Nova Scotia, on Nov. 27th, Dec, 6th Dec 13th to 22nd inclusive, and Dec 27th 1892. Tickets good for 90 days with transit limits of 15 days each way, going and returning. This will allow holders to stop in the Twin Cities, in Chicago to see the wonderful buildings of the World's Fair, and other points enroute.

Extension of time beyond 90 days made at small additional cost. For particulars and tickets see S. S. Buzza agent at St. Hilaire.

Council Proceedings

Regular meeting of council, all members present.

Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

The following bills were allowed.

Ed Whaley constable fees	$13.50
J. M. Hanson justice fees	8.40
S, Harris street work	10.00

Moved to adjourn until the next regular meeting.

J. L. Johnson
Village Recorder.

Notice is hereby given that I will offer for sale in the livery barn of D. Patterson in the village of St Hilaire Polk Co., Minn. on the 14th day of January 1893 at 10 o'clock a. m., one dark gray Percheron stallion named Fraze No. 9449.

The above described horse is to be sold to pay for board and care given to him by D. Patterson amounting to the sum of $237.60, and also expenses of sale.

Dated at St. Hilaire Minn. this 3rd day January 1893.

Daniel Patterson.

DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP.

Notice is hereby given that the copartnership heretofore existing between E. J. Holmes and Minton Holmes has been dissolved, E. J. Holmes assuming all the liabilities of the firm and all parties indebted to said firm are hereby notified to pay the debt to said E J. Holmes,

E. J. Holmes,
Mrs. Minton Holmes.

I will pay the highest market price for veal calves, fresh eggs and butter.

S. M. Dainard.

INTERESTING ITEM.

It is to the interest of parties contemplating going east to consider the great advantages the Great Northern offers them through its fast passenger service to St. Paul and to all points west to the Pacific coast, their free colonist cars, and magnificent Dining and Sleeping cars. The shortest route, close connections, quickest time and fare as low as the lowest, Any information cheerfully given,

S. S. Buzza
Agent.

CHATTEL LOANS

I am prepared to loan money on chattle security at reasonable rates. One years time. Call On

H. E. IVES.

WANTED. Salesmen. Local and Traveling, To represent our well known house. You need no capital to represents a firm that warrants nursery stock first-class and true to name. WORK ALL THE YEAR. $100 per month to he right man. Apply quick stating age. L. L. MAY & CO.
Nurserymen, Florists and Seedsmen,
St. Paul Minn.
(This house is responsible.)

MARLIN SAFETY REPEATING RIFLES

Made in all styles and sizes. Lightest, strongest, easiest working, safest, simplest, most accurate, most compact, and most modern. For sale by all dealers in arms. Catalogues mailed free by

The Marlin Fire Arms Co.,
NEW HAVEN, CONN., U. S. A.

[illegible] indebted to S. M. Hoff are requested to call and settle up at once or the debt will be collected by law.

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
Crookston Minn December 5 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on January 24 1893 viz:

Daniel Johnson H D 12053 for the Lot 5 Sec. 6 and Lot 1 Sec 7 Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land viz:

J. A. Sjortrom Anton Sundahl J. A. Peterson, K. Sundahl all of St. Hilaire, Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn. Dec. 7 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on January 26 1893 viz Charles Gomoll H D 11784 for the SE ¼ Sec 25 Tp 152 R 45.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence on and cultivation of said land viz:

Gotlieb Gerlach, August Morel, Charles Peterson Henry Leppert all of Wylie Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn Dec 14 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on Feb 2 1893 viz:

Peter Sanderson H D 14159 for the NW ¼ SE ¼, NE ¼ SW ¼ and Lots 5 and 6 Sec 6 Tp 151 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Peter Anderson, John Strawberg, O. K. H. Jhnson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn. November 1 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and has said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver of the U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on December 15 1892. viz:

A. P. Sandberg administrator of estate of Peter G. Allsson deceased H D 11173 for the NW ¼ Sec. 20 Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land viz:

J. Johnson, Haakon, Johnson, J. Lind, E. Petterson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

CLOSING OUT SALE!

At E M Hoff's Store

My whole stock of

Dry Goods and Notions
Gents Furnshing Goods
$5,000 worth of ready made clothing
Foot wear of all kinds and everything belonging to a full stocked general merchandise store will be closed out at cost in the next 90 days.

COME EVERY BODY
AND
SECURE GOOD BARGAINS.

E. M. HOFF

CROWN ROLLER MILL,

EQUIPPED WITH THE LATEST AND BEST IMPROVED MACHINERY.

Manufactures the well known
PERFECTION FANCY PATENT and WHITE ROSEFLOUR.
Rye and Feed mill in connection.
Flour and Feed always kept on hand
Custom work a specialty.

FRICKER & WELCH Prop,

H ILAIRE MINNESOTA

CHAS G. RAPP.

A large and complete line of

General Merchandise.

CONSISTING OF

Dry Goods, Groceries, Clothing Boots & Shoes, Hats & Caps Notions

THE ST. HILAIRE SPECTATOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY EVENING
H. E. IVES, Propr.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE:
Advance,
If not in Advance, $2.00 Per Year

Entered in The Post Office at St. Hilaire, as Second Class Mail Matter

WEDNESDAY January 4 1893.

WHY HE DIDN'T SUCCEED.

An Interesting Conversation Between the Clerk and the Typewriter.

The clerk on the tall stool up in the Neave building was talking with the typewriter, who had a squint in her left eye and a tinge of romance in her nature.

Outside the confusion of carts and drays hurrying over the Fourth street pavement mingled in a roar which was like the voice of a Titan.

It was a warm afternoon, and through the partly open window was borne the noise of commerce, together with a medicum of soot belched from the throats of neighboring giants of industry.

The clerk on the tall stool wrote busily.

"Scratch, scratch," went his pen.

The typewriter, who had a squint in her left eye and a tinge of romance in her nature, was hard at work.

"Plunk, plunk," went the machine.

The clerk was speaking.

"You wouldn't think—scratch, scratch—that I—scratch—was at one time—scratch, scratch, scratch—destined for a higher—scratch, scratch—walk of life—scratch—would you?"

The typewriter paused long enough to scrutinize her copy.

"No—plunk, plunk—I—plunk—would not."

The clerk entered three items in a book in silence.

"Yes—scratch—I had the fire—scratch, scratch—of ambition in my—scratch—soul. Hoped"——

The typewriter lost her place and sighed.

——"to be a musician—scratch, scratch. Was getting on—scratch—splendidly when fortune went against—scratch, scratch—me."

"Do—plunk—tell"——

The typewriter made a period and stopped. The clerk had appealed to the tinge of romance in her nature.

——"me. Ill health?"

"Yes—scratch—ill—scratch, scratch—health."

"Head troubles, I dare say?"

"That's what—scratch—it was."

"Overworked brain of course."

The typewriter was rather eager.

"Not—scratch, scratch—exactly. My—scratch, scratch, scratch—hair fell out. Couldn't—scratch, scratch—expect to attain any great success after that."

The typewriter said nothing, but when she presently resumed operations there was that in her general manner which suggested impatience.—Cincinnati Commercial.

Poor Little Dog.

Last August in one of the mountain bound parlor cars sat a richly dressed young woman tenderly holding a very small poodle. "Madam," said the conductor as he punched her ticket, "I am very sorry, but you can't have your dog in this car. It's against the rules."

"I shall hold him in my lap all the way," she replied, "and he will disturb no one."

"That makes no difference," said the conductor. "I couldn't allow my own dog here. Dogs must ride in the baggage car. I'll fasten him all right for you"——

"Don't you touch my dog, sir," said the young woman excitedly. "I will trust him to no one." And with indignant tread she marched to the baggage car, tied her dog and returned.

About fifty miles farther on, when the conductor came along again, she asked him:

"Will you tell me if my dog is all right?"

"I am very sorry," said the conductor politely, "but you tied him to a trunk and he was thrown off with it at the last station."—Youth's Companion.

An Unexpected Answer.

A celebrated singer, Mme. Le Rochois, was giving a younger companion in art some instruction on the tragic character of Meda, which she was about to sustain.

"Inspire yourself with the situation," said she. "Fancy yourself in the poor woman's place. If you were deserted by a lover whom you adored what would you do?"

The reply was as unexpected as it was ingenuous:

"I would look out for another."—Philadelphia Record.

He Was Pushing On.

Fond Mother—Well, Harold, how are you succeeding at college?

Harold—The professor says I'm getting up in figures.

"Indeed?"

"Yes. I used to be seventh in my class, and now I stand sixteenth. I'm pushing on."—Texas Siftings.

A Parting Injunction.

Young Callowe—I expect to start for London and Paris tomorrow. Can I do anything for you?

Prunella—Yes, be sure not to miss your steamer.—Life.

Not His First Attempt.

Kate—I really couldn't have refused Jack—he proposed so gracefully!

May—No wonder. He has had lots of practice, you know.—Truth.

Crushed.

"Hallo, Mike. Whose walentine is you a-cuttin on the ice?"

"Ah! Go 'way an don't bother me. Ain't yer aweer that there is sacred moments when a man wants ter be by hisself?"—Life.

A Suggestion for Progressive Women.

The public spirited action of the women of America in preserving Mount Vernon has suggested the outline of a plan for the preservation of the homes of others of the great sons of liberty in the various states. An Old Mortality society of women at the national capital could start the ball, and adjunct societies in each of the original states could keep it rolling until in course of time every state would have its organization to promote the object in view.

Washington is the proper place at which to initiate such a work, not only because it is the national capital, but also because it is near so many of these old homes or the premises where these homes once existed. Close to Mount Vernon is Gunston Hall, the residence of George Mason. Not very many miles away, back among the Virginia highlands, are Monticello, the seat of Thomas Jefferson; Montpelier, the place where James Madison resided; the residences of Marshall, of Monroe and of Patrick Henry.

Going elsewhere, farther from this city, but within the circle of its influence, are the homes, or at least the home places, of Franklin, the Adamses, Jay, Hamilton, Dickinson, Rutledge and many other Revolutionary statesmen.

The Americans have too little reverence for the illustrious dead. Some of these men—indeed all of those mentioned, "e'en in their ashes" are potent in the course of history and yet shape the destinies of the continent and of distant lands. The proper restoration and preservation of the old homes of the fathers of the republic in as nearly as possible the condition they were when occupied by the original possessors is a labor of love and patriotism for our women which cannot fail to produce good effects on the present and all subsequent generations.—Washington Star.

How to Hold a Girl.

Ladies like to feel they are being firmly guided in a waltz, but they will no longer tolerate that hugging process which was in vogue, in polite circles even, up to the beginning of the present decade, and which exhibition may still be seen at some of the Saturday night dances in certain quarters of every large city. The correct method of holding one's partner in the waltz would not offend the eye or grate upon the senses of the most fastidious prude that ever wore divided skirts. The idea of one holding the other should not be too strongly entertained. To dance together in sympathetic time and motion should be the dominant thought. The correct mode, however, is of very great consequence, as what is seen in this is frequently used as a measure of character.

The gentleman approaches the lady offering his left hand—one who is au fait will do this gracefully; the lady places her right hand in that extended by the gentleman, who then lowers his right hand in a direct line to the side, the forearm bent so as to form an acute angle. In this angle the lady will place herself, with the center line of the person opposite the line of the gentleman's right side, the partners on parallel lines, not forming an angle. In this position each will be looking over the right shoulder of the other, and by the lady turning her head slightly to the left the effect of the grouping will be greatly enhanced. For partners in the waltz men prefer women who are light, quick and pliant; who do not require to be dragged about, yet who are not aggressive, but able to quickly receive guidance.—Detroit News.

WORLD'S FAIR NOTES.

The National Farmers' Grange has voted against opening the World's fair on Sunday.

One of the curious things to be exhibited at the World's fair is a map of the United States, 18 by 25 feet, made of pickles.

Catharine Weed Barnes, of Albany, will deliver an address before the photographic convention at the World's Columbian exposition.

The managers of the Chicago exposition have made restaurant arrangements which will enable them to seat 45,000 persons at one time.

Spain's Columbian exhibition committee is organizing a military band comprising 100 performers, who will give concerts during the entire period of the fair.

The territories of New Mexico, Arizona and Oklahoma have united on plans for a joint World's fair building, in which each of the territories will have its headquarters.

Honk, Honk, Honk!

Another arctic expedition returned from the north a few days ago. Its arrival was announced by a loud "Honk! honk!" far up in the sky. It was composed of eleven members, and was headed by a gray veteran, who led his forces, arranged in the form of a letter V, without the slightest deviation due south. It was the wild goose expedition, which, having summered in the arctic, had decided to winter in more temperate climes.

It is not to be supposed that they reasoned the question of a change of location among themselves, consulted almanacs and time tables or even compasses to reach their decision or to decide on their course. Their action was influenced not by what psychologists know as higher cerebration. As the country folks say, they felt it in their bones that it was time to move southward, and south they went under the wonderful influence of instinct.—Baltimore Sun.

WE WANT YOU

to act as our agent. We furnish an expensive outfit and all you need free. It costs nothing to try the business. We will treat you well, and help you to earn ten times ordinary wages. Both sexes of all ages can live at home and work in spare time, or all the time. Any one any where can earn a great deal of money. Many have made Two Hundred Dollars a Month. No class of people in the world are making so much money without capital as those at work for us. Business pleasant, strictly honorable, and pays better than any other offered to agents. You have a clear field, with no competition. We equip you with everything, and supply printed directions for beginners which, if obeyed faithfully, will bring more money than will any other business. Improve your prospects! Why not? You can do so easily and surely at work for us. Reasonable industry only necessary for absolute success. Pamphlet circular giving every particular is sent free to all. Delay not in sending for it.

GEORGE STINSON & CO.,
Box No. 488, Portland, Me.

DO YOU WANT TO ADOPT A BABY?

Maybe you think this is a new business, sending out babies on application; it has been done before, however, but never have those furnished been so near the original sample as this one. Everyone will exclaim, "Well! that's the sweetest baby I ever saw!" This little black-and-white engraving can give you but a faint idea of the exquisite original, which we propose to send to you, transportation paid. The little darling rests against a pillow, and is in the act of drawing off its pink sock, the mate of which has been pulled off and flung aside with a triumphant coo. The flesh tints are perfect, and the eyes follow you, no matter where you stand. The exquisite reproductions of this greatest painting of Ida Waugh (the most celebrated of modern painters of baby life) are to be given to those who subscribe to Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893. The reproductions cannot be told from the original, which cost $400, and are the same size (17x22 inches). The baby is life size, and absolutely lifelike. We have also in preparation, to present to our subscribers during 1893, other great pictures by such artists as Percy Moran, Maud Humphrey, Louis Deschamps, and others of world-wide renown. Take only two examples of what we did during the past year, "A Yard of Pansies," and "A White House Orchid" by the wife of President Harrison, and you will see what our promises mean.

"I'M A DAISY."

Those who subscribe for Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893 will possess a gallery of exquisite works of art of great value, besides a Magazine that cannot be equaled by any in the world for its beautiful illustrations and subject matter, that will keep everyone posted on all the topics of the day, and all the fads and different items of interest about the household, besides furnishing interesting reading matter, both grave and gay, for the whole family; and while Demorest's is not a fashion Magazine, its fashion pages are perfect, and we give you, free of cost, all the patterns you wish to use during the year, and in any size you choose. Send in your subscription at once, only $2, and you will really get over $25 in value. Address the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York. If you are unacquainted with the Magazine, send 10 cents for a specimen copy.

Ask Your Dealer For
FEATHERBONE WHIPS.
FEATHERBONE is made from Enameled Quills—nature's own toughest, and strongest elastic material. Best wearing whips made for 25c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50. All styles for Buggy, Cart, Track, Team and Riding. Be sure, and ask for a FEATHERBONE.
FOR SALE BY
S. M. HOFF
St. H

Going to Buy A Dictionary?
GET THE BEST,
Webster's International.
A Choice Gift
A Grand Family Educator
A Library in Itself
The Standard Authority
WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY
SOLD BY ALL BOOKSELLERS.
The International is a new book from cover to cover, fully abreast of the times, and is the successor of the authentic "Unabridged." Ten years were spent in revising, 100 editors employed and over $300,000 expended before the first copy was printed.
Do not buy reprints of obsolete and comparatively worthless editions.
Send for free pamphlet containing specimen pages and full particulars.
G. & C. MERRIAM CO., Publishers,
SPRINGFIELD, MASS., U. S. A.

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn. Nov. 25 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and said proof will be made before U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on Jany. 5 1893 viz:
Berent L. Konlog HD 12395 for the SW ¼ Sec. 5 Tp 152 R. 42.

He names he following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of said land viz:
James Evenson, Anton Peterson, Julius Nelson, Nels Evenson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON, Register.

U.S LAND OFFICE.
Crookston, Minn., Nov. 17 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn on December 29 1892. viz:
Peter E. Engh HD 12282, for the NW ¼ Sec. 23 Tp 152 R. 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:
Halvor Aamodt, Ole J. Hegg Peter Anderson, Ole J. Johnson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register,

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn., Nov. 25 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver, U. S Land Office at Crookston Minn on Jany. 5 1893 viz:
Julius Nelson HD 11890 for the S½ W ¼ sec. 8 tp 152. R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove her continuous residence upon, and cultivation of said land viz:
James Evenson B. L. Konlog, Nels Evenson Anton Peterson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

E. T. SPAFFORD S. M. DAINARD
E. T. SPAFFORD & CO.
DEALERS IN
LUMBER, LATH AND SHINGLES.
A complete stock of all kinds of Lumber Lath, Shingles, Mouldings, Building Paper Sash, Doors and Screens, Lime, Cement Stucco, Plastering Hair, Brick etc. always hand at the lowest market prices.
S. M. Dainard, Manager.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE, MINN.

E. T. SPAFFORD & CO.
WILL ALWAYS PAY THE
HIGHEST MARKET PRICES
FOR
All kinds of
CATTLE.
Also for Cor wood, Hay, Oats, Barley and flax.
Ground Feed for Sale
S. M. DAINARD.
Manager.

Reserved For
THE
ST. HILAIRE
TOWNSITE
COMPANY

W. A. ARTHUR.
DEALER IN
FRUITS, CONFECTIONARY
TOBACCO AND CIGARS.
STATIONARY OF ALL KINDS
Lunch Counter
Warm meals at all hours.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE MINNESOTA

JUSTUS L. JOHNSON
DEALER IN
pure medicines Fancy articles, perfumer and stationery, paints oils and dye stuffs.
Cigars, Candy, Fruit and Soft Drinks always on hand.
Barbershop in connection
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE

I CAN SAVE YOU
MONEY
If you wish to make
REAL ESTATE
LOANS.
For full particulars call on or address
H. E. IVES.
SPECTATOR OFFICE ST. HILAIRE.

HOLMES BRO'S
Dealer in
HARDWARE, TINWARE,
We are carrying a heavy and complete line of Heating and Cooking stoves.
GOOD GOODS LOW PRICES.
CALL ON US FOR BARGAINS
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE MINN.

FARMERS STORE
NEW GOODS AT HARD PAN PRICES.
If you want to save money do your trading with
HALL BROS.
DEALER IN
Dry Goods, Groceries
Notions.
BROADWAY ST. HIL.

S. M. HOFF
DEALER IN
HARDWARE
A new and complete stock of all kinds of Hardware, Tinware, Stoves, Fencing wire, Nails, in fact everything usualy kept in a first-class Hardware Store,
AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES
Call and examine Goods
and Get Our Prices.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE.

DR. PRICE'S
Cream Baking Powder.
The only Pure Cream of Tartar Powder.—No Ammonia; No Alum.
Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

G. H. Waldo, cashier of the Detroit Lubricating Works, was assaulted on the street by two men and robbed of $1,100.

A record of uninterrupted cures for nearly half a century has convinced sensible people, that Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is the best in the market. Why try new things, when you know, that you have what you need. It is infallible.

Earl Dutro, insane, burned himself to death at McArthur, O.

Physicians prescriptions have failed to reach many cases of rheumatism known to have been subsequently cured by Salvation Oil. That is the reason why the popular voice is practically unanimous in its favor. 25 cents.

Silas Jones, aged 78, is under arrest at Kokomo, Ind., charged with bigamy.

For Coughs and throat Disorders use BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES. "Have never changed my mind respecting them, except I think better of that which I began by thinking well of."—Rev. Henry Ward Beecher. Sold only in boxes.

Three persons broke jail at St. Louis.

Two members of the election canvassing board of Choteau County, Mont., have fled.

Look To Yourself

If your liver is out of order, your skin saffron colored, tongue furred, eyeballs tinged with yellow, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters instanter is the correct thing. Don't wait, if you don't want jaundice and perhaps abscess of the liver. Likewise, if you have a malarial chill, touch of rheumatism, indigestion, kidney or nervous trouble, use the Bitters without delay. Give it a fair trial, as it preserves.

Frank Law was shot and killed by his brother while abusing his mother, at Marietta, Ind.

The Most Pleasant Way

Of preventing the grippe, colds, headaches, and fevers is to use the liquid laxative remedy Syrup of Figs, whenever the system needs a gentle, yet effective cleansing. To be benefited one must get the true remedy manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only. For sale by all druggists in 50c. and $1 bottles.

Joe and Fred Reynolds, counterfeiters, are under arrest at Joplin, Mo.

Catarrh Cannot Be Cured

with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is not a quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years, and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing Catarrh. Send for testimonials, free.
F. J. CHENEY & CO., Props., Toledo, O.
Sold by druggists, price 75c.

Mrs. Clara Plummer committed suicide at Wilmington, O., by shooting, owing to domestic trouble.

"German Syrup"

I am a farmer at Edom, Texas. I have used German Syrup for six years successfully for Sore Throat, Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Pains in Chest and Lungs and Spitting-up of Blood. I have tried many kinds of Cough Syrups in my time, but let me say to anyone wanting such a medicine—German Syrup is the best. We are subject to so many sudden changes from cold to hot, damp weather here, but in families where German Syrup is used there is little trouble from colds. John F. Jones. ®

MEN
We will send you the MARVELOUS and UNFAILING French Preparation, CALTHOS FREE by MAIL, and a legally executed guarantee that CALTHOS will STOP Discharges and Emissions, CURE Varicocele, and RESTORE Lost Vigor.
Use it & pay if satisfied.
Von Mohl Co., Importers, Cincinnati, Ohio.

CLIMBING A TREE.

The Ingenious Manner This Feat is Performed by a Native Australian.

A black never uses his knees when climbing. If the tree is small in girth they sometimes use a vine, passing it around the tree and holding onto it as they ascend. The most common way, however, is to ascend by means of notches cut into the tree or bark about one and a half inches deep and about three feet apart. Having fixed upon the side he intends ascending, the climber cuts a notch hith his stone tomahawk about the weight of his waist, and another on a level with his head, but a little to the right or left of the lower notch, as the case may be. These notches are made by a few taps of the hatchet, first horizontally and then at an angle of forty-five degrees; having made the two lower ones, the ascent is made by standing on the ball of the foot with the great toe in the notch, while the climber cuts a fresh notch, level with his head, and so on until the lower branches are gained.

Often the gum trees run 80 feet from the ground up to the lowest limb, the trunk of the tree being perfectly smooth. These notches are cut with great regularity, for, measured on a fallen tree the distance between them seldom varies half an inch. In reascending a tree fresh cuts are made for every fresh ascent.—San Francisco Chronicle.

An Echo of the Summer.

He was in the ribbon department. She saw him and rushed to meet him.

"Ah I have found you at last!" she cried, "This weary search that began away last summer is now ended."

"What," he asked in perfect composure, "can I do for you?"

"I want our engagement broken. It has worried me more than tongue can tell."

"Certainly, miss. Is there anything else to-day?"

Almost.

Young Mr. Yeerwed had been gazing for a long time at the antics of his three-months'-old baby, says Harper's Bazar.

The child had a red face, no hair and no teeth, but it was his own child and he loved it. All at once the little thing looked up and laughed. Mr. Yeerwed was overjoyed.

"By Jove! Maud," he exclaimed, "that baby is almost human!"

The young men and young women who aspire to obtain Academic or College educations, and whose parents cannot well afford them that expense, will be interested in the work of The Cosmopolitan Magazine, which has offered for the year 1893 one thousand scholarships at any of the leading colleges or schools of the United States, upon the condition of introducing the magazine into certain neighborhoods. Yale, Vassar, Harvard, Ann Arbor, Chicago, and Southern colleges, the great schools of art and medicine, all are alike open to the ambitious boy or girl who is not afraid of a little earnest work. The Cosmopolitan sends out from its New York office a handsomely printed pamphlet to any applicant, telling just what is necessary in order to secure one of these scholarships. The scholarship itself includes board, lodging, laundry and tuition—all free.

His Joints.

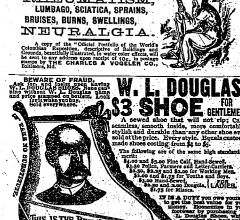
Wife, affectionately—How is your rheumatism this morning, John dear?

Husband—Pretty bad, my dear, pretty bad.

"Why don't you try the mind cure?"

"There isn't anything the matter with my mind. It's my joints, dear, my joints."

ST. JACOBS OIL
CURES
RHEUMATISM,
LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, SPRAINS,
BRUISES, BURNS, SWELLINGS,
NEURALGIA.
A copy of the "Official Portfolio of the World's Columbian Exposition, descriptive of Buildings and Grounds, beautifully illustrated, in water color effects, will be sent to any address upon receipt of 10c. in postage stamps by THE CHARLES A. VOGELER CO., Baltimore, Md.



TAKE NO SUBSTITUTE
THIS IS THE BEST $3. SHOE IN THE WORLD
WILL NOT RIP.

BEWARE OF FRAUD.
Ask for, and insist upon having W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES. None genuine without W. L. Douglas name and price stamped on bottom. Look for it when you buy. Sold everywhere.

W. L. DOUGLAS $3 SHOE FOR GENTLEMEN.
A sewed shoe that will not rip; Calf, seamless, smooth inside, more comfortable, stylish and durable than any other shoe ever sold at the price. Every style. Equals custom-made shoes costing from $4 to $5.
The following are of the same high standard of merit:
$4.00 and $5.00 Fine Calf, Hand-Sewed.
$3.50 Police, Farmers and Letter-Carriers.
$2.50, $2.25 and $2.00 for Working Men.
$2.00 and $1.75 for Youths and Boys.
$3.00 Hand-Sewed, } FOR
$2.50 and 2.00 Dongola, } LADIES.
$1.75 for Misses.
IT IS A DUTY you owe yourself to get the best value for your money. Economize in your footwear by purchasing W. L. Douglas Shoes, which represent the best value at the prices advertised as thousands can testify. Do you wear them?
Will give exclusive sale to shoe dealers and general merchants where I have no agents. Write for catalogue. If not for sale in your place send direct to Factory, stating kind, size and width wanted. Postage Free. W. L. Douglas, Brockton, Mass.

"WELL BRED, SOON WED." GIRLS WHO USE
SAPOLIO
ARE QUICKLY MARRIED. TRY IT IN YOUR NEXT HOUSE-CLEANING.

REMEMBER THE DAY.

The feast at last, the grace is said,
And up bobs every eager head,
And bright eyes like some greedy power,
Go seeking what they may devour.

The turkey at the feast is lost;
The chickens get their drumsticks crossed,
And empty plates, just filled with pies,
The good wife marks with smiling eyes.

Perhaps this day in years to come
May find them wanderers far from home,
And with joy, hunting memories cheer
The shadows of that changeful year.
—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

ROSAMOND'S WAY.

A TALL, shapely figure clad in filmy drapery over a luster of milky satin, and as she turned a gleam of bright-banded brown hair, of eyes of deepest violet, of features like that of some young goddess in marble, of a skin perfectly pallid but almost luminous, the only blush about her being that great bunch of blush-roses in her hand; the maid-of-honor to some bride, as she walked down the aisle of the church, she trod on the flowers scattered there, and never dreamed that she trod on Scott Surrey's heart as well. For, in the instant of her turning, that heart had been cast at her feet.

He had been passing the church with an acquaintance, when the carriages and the awning and the carpet had caught his friend's eye, and Akron had exclaimed:

"Oh, now, see here? And I quite overlooked it. It's the wedding of Lu McIlvaine. Just step in this side door—we shan't be seen."

And they had done so; and Fate in that moment had uttered one of her keenest ironies; for Scott Surrey was an insurance clerk on a salary of $1,400 a year; and Rosamond Knight was the daughter of a man worth a couple of millions.

"Who is she?" he asked, breathlessly.

"So you're hard hit, too," said he. "It's no use, Scott. You only join the undistinguished herd. She's for your betters. She walks on air, and won't look at anything less than a prince royal."

"But who is she?"

"Ah, you won't be deterred? Then I'll take you there. Just to let you see the impossible. Why, the girl spends three thousand a year on her clothes. She's my cousin, Rosamond Knight. At least, her step-father's my cousin; although I'm none the better for the duffer. If she marries to please him, she's his heir. He's persuaded now that I don't want his step-daughter, and don't want his money, and so I have the freedom of the Knight bungalow. Come around at 5, and I'll take you there for a cup of tea, if you really want your wings singed."

He presented himself punctually at Akron's rooms that afternoon, and he had little more idea of what happened afterward than those usually do who are walking in a dream. He was only conscious of rich, soft light, fragrance of flowers, of antique rugs under foot, of a painting here, a statue there; of onyx and gilding and Sevres, of a smiling, grayhaired woman, of various other forms and shadows, of the young goddess, not now in milky satin, but in some soft deshabille of a tea-gown; and he might have hoped that he acquitted himself like a man, but he simply felt like a disembodied spirit.

But Scott heard nothing of that, of course. He was far above anything of the sort. He contrived to keep himself just enough on earth to carry the thread of an idea that Rosamond rode in the park to-morrow, at a time that would be after office hours that day. And what a singular coincidence it was that he should meet her there next day!

Rosamond had allowed it to escape her, too, that she was to attend the private view of the new loan collection at the Metropolitan the next day. Scott knew somebody who knew somebody else who knew Gen. Cesnola; he did not waste a moment in procuring an admission. How the work at the insurance office was done that day, goodness knows; Scott Surrey knew nothing about it. He only knew that there were all the cold white forms glowing with their immortal beauty, and here was this girl mounting the staircase, more beautiful than one of themselves, almost as white, but moving, breathing, glowing, pronouncing his name with a sweet surprise, and letting the waxen lids fall over the violet eyes, till the long lashes swept the cheeks and called up a ghost of color there. They paused on their way to the pictures, and leaned over one of the cases containing those ornaments that decked some fine beauty of a day thousands of years before.

Scott did not see Rosamond now for three or four days. There was a stress of work at the office, and the best men were kept at their desks until it was too late an hour to attempt anything else. And the first thing that brought him to his senses was when, meeting her, he received a formal and lofty acknowledgement as she passed on, and nothing more. And as he had mounted like Phaeton, he fell like Phaeton, and when he opened his eyes after the crash he saw where he was. In love with a lady of high degree—" "There was a man of the north countree sung Akron, when he saw his face, "Well I am glad you've waked so early."

"Glad I've waked! What in the world are you thinking about, Akron?"

"Oh, I've been there myself. Not in the house of Rosamond, though. I know too much to fall in love with a girl who spends my salary on her candies."

"I haven't waked, Akron," said Scott, leaning over the table more earnestly. "If you mean change by waking, I never shall wake. When I am under the ground, fire will run through my very ashes if she comes near. Only that she will never know—she will never care."

"Well, now, Surrey, I tell you what: As your friend, I advise you to call in your little loves and let this charmer go."

Surrey shook his head.

"You might as well advise the flowers not to grow where the sunshines," he said.

Akron waited a few minutes. "Go home and dress," said he then. "I have always said that if I saw a fellow committing suicide I shouldn't be the one to hinder him. She is to be at Mrs. Farleigh-Farleigh's to-night. Cotillon at 1; Aleck Palgrave has hurt his foot. I am on such terms there that I can take you in his place. God forgive me! I know I am helping to ruin you."

"I am ruined now," said Scott, wringing Akron's hand, and in the moment feeling that he was lifted from despair to joy.

Could it be that presently, when some hours had fled like a flash, this radiant creature was in his arms, with her breath as sweet as wild-rose breaths; that, however timidly and reverently he clasped her waist, that at his touch a sudden flush had swept up that cheek unused to color; that those gauzy robes of hers swirled around him? Heaven knows that incoherence he was uttering as to the cruel fate that had kept him at his desk; as to the eternity that existed between Saturday and Thursday; as to the wretch he was.

The wretch he was! Did he accuse himself of dark, Manfred-like sin? Was there an element of the romantic, the mysterious, about him? Perhaps that was not the finishing touch; all the poor lad meant was that in his position, and with his narrow income, he had no right to think of this dazzling child of wealth; but somehow—such fools girls are!—he went over to the unknown in her imagination, and was magnified in the mist of that region of space. It served the purpose, at any rate, of making her think about him more in the intervals of meeting him, and she met him everywhere; for wherever she was to be, there, with Akron's help, he achieved invitations, watched for her coming with a glitter in his eye, and if she did not come, went away early, feeling life a desert. But it did not take many waltzes with him, many strolls through the green-houses, many sherbets in half-curtained corners, for Rosamond to see that Scott Surrey was no hero of dark romance, but an honest, wholesome lad, fit to be the high ideal of the most innocent girl alive. And just as she had discerned the truth Scott Surrey had made up his mind to disappear out of her horizon, even if it cost him his life.

They had been dancing together; he had seen her cheek fling out the banner of pale, sweet bloom with which now it always saluted his coming, and she had given him her "order of dances" to write his name where he would; and later, in an interval of the wild, delicious waltzes, she had said, when he asked her to walk with him, "We will go where it is cooler," and led the way up from the ball-room to the large, dim library, it being the house of a relative where she was familiar.

"Ah," she said, "this is cool and restful;" and she drew off her gloves, and, throwing herself into an armchair, motioned him to another.

He took, instead, a tabouret at her feet. How beautiful she was there, in the half-light of the long, dusky room, with all her rosy, silken muslins flowing round her, and the garland of gray-green poppy-leaves she wore. Was this the unapproachable goddess of that morning in the church, her shining eyes beaming on him now, her smiling lips—

A shiver ran through him as he sat there, his elbows on his knees, his head between his hands, while he covered her with his forgetful gaze; while far-off and faint the dance-music came in gusts whose sweetness was lost in melancholy.

"Why do you look at me so?" she asked, suddenly, with a half-frightened foreboding.

"Because," said he, "I never shall look at you any more. Because I have been a fool, a madman, and have just come to my senses, and am going to leave you before it is too late—for you, I mean—it is too late for me already. It was too late for me when I first laid my eyes upon you, and my whole heart became yours."

"I don't know what you mean," she cried. "Why must you leave me, then?"

"To-day," he said, "your step-father came to my office, and told me that I must."

"How perfectly infamous!"

"He was not rude, nor, can I say, unkind. He said if you married without his sanction you should never have a farthing of his money; and he would not sanction my pretentions; and poverty would be your unhappiness and death."

"Pshaw!"

"I had not thought of his money! I had thought only of my poverty, and of you. But he made me see the misery I might be the means of entailing you. He made me see your wretchedness, your regrets, your—your—ruin as a poor man's wife. But before I disappear—somewhere—into outer darkness—I shall give myself the one joy of telling you that I love you, and you only, and that I would die for you!"

"You had a great deal better live for me!" said my young lady, coolly. And she held out her hand, and Surrey seized it and covered it with kisses. Then he stood up to go.

"Your father drew for me the picture of the life you had lived," he said; "the luxuries to which you were so used that they were the demand of second nature; and I blushed and recoiled when he asked me how much of that life, how many of these luxuries my $1,400 salary could procure for you."

"Did you say $1,400?" said Miss Rosamond, briskly, and in the most matter-of-fact tone. "Come over to the table under the lamp." And, still holding her hand in his, he was blindly following her to the lamp, dazed and bewildered, and not understanding the evidence of his senses, nor that the girl was bringing down emotion from too intense a strain.

A servant passed down the distance of some lighted space, bearing a tea-tray.

"Do you know," said Rosamond, suddenly, "how many cups of tea you drank on the first night you came to see me?"

"I was not altogether sure that I drank any," he answered her.

"How much more self-possessed women are than men," she said. "I am an example of it now. I suppose they are trained to it from their cradles. I knew the first moment that you stood bending before me, and when I swept you the courtesy, and the pug became tangled in my train, that I—that you—that I—had found—my master."

"As if there could be such a question!"

"Well, then, the master of my fate—

I should think you would have seen the blood surging to my temples."

"You were as white as a white rose-leaf, and your eyes were like two violet flames, and your lips——"

"Never mind my lips. And I said: 'Are you fond of pugs?' And you said: 'No, not at all; that is—yes—I mean, I——'" and her laugh rang out like a chime of fairy bells.

"Oh, I said anything and everything that was fatuous and idiotic. I had gone all to pieces."

"And I felt," she exclaimed, "that if you never came to care for me I should want to die. And I felt all at once and at the same time fettered and bound and chained, and that if I didn't break the chain I should want to die anyway. And, then, you never came near me for four days after that morning in the Metropolitan. Where are the writing things? We might have a little more light. Oh, yes, here is a pencil and paper. Sit down," she said, imperiously. "Now, sir, will you make a schedule of what you think can be done with $1,400 in a small family? And remember, I am a district visitor, and know some things myself!"

It was madness; but how could he disobey? There was a short interval of silence, while she bent over him, her breath upon his cheek. "What is this?" she said. Rent of a flat? Servants? Tailor-maid gowns, pin-money? Bless my soul, how many tailor-maid gowns would there be and have a penny left for the table. No tailor-made gowns for me any more; my maid's sister can make me all I want for $10 each. Now, sir—let me—the pencil, please. In the first place, we will abolish the flat; a little house in the country, for half the money—two hundred. Railway fares fifty. Butcher and grocer, three hundred and sixty. Servants, one hundred and twenty. A hundred and fifty apiece now for clothes. You won't always want quite so much; I may want a little more. Fifty for my boots and gloves and pin-money and candy; fifty for your cigars, theater-tickets now and then, and all the rest. Oh, and say a hundred and fifty for light and fire, and twenty for charity; and where are we? With a hundred dollars to lay by every year of our lives! And to think of its coming to me just as I am so tired of the old life! As tired as a circus-girl is of the chalk on her slippers. Who says there isn't a Providence that protects sparrows! Don't you think I—I mean any one—could be happy with all this, if you—if he—if somebody loves her——" And what was somebody to do that moment—he being human, she so sweet, so near?

"Are you glad, Scott?" she whispered, as he was about to put her into the carriage that night.

"Glad? Is an archangel in heaven glad?"

"Shall we go into the country and look for a house to-morrow?" She hung a moment on the step, her starry eyes, her radiant smile, dazzling in the snowy furs of her cloak. And then looked back through the open hallway at the lights, the flowers, the throng. "Good-by, proud world. I'm going home!" she said. "Oh, Scott, what fools those people are not to know how happy they could be on fourteen hundred a year!"—Ledger.

John Hanson Craig, an Indianian, Who Tips the Beam at 907 Pounds.

John Hanson Craig, of Danville, Hendricks county, Ind., is said to be the heaviest man in the United States, as far as is known. A record of his weight at different periods, as given by the Brooklyn Eagle, may be interesting: At birth, 11 pounds; at 11 months, 77 pounds; at 2 years, 206 pounds; at 5 years, 302 pounds; at 11 years, 405 pounds; at 19 years, 601 pounds; at 25 years, 725 pounds; at 27 years, 868 pounds; at 28 years, 792 pounds. At 37 years, in 1880 he tipped the scales at 907 pounds. He stood, at that time, 6 feet 5 inches, and measured 8 feet four inches at the hips. It takes forty-one yards of cloth to supply him with a suit of clothes; it takes three pounds of yarn to make him a pair of stockings. He wears No. 12 shoes. Mr. Craig's father weighed from 115 to 120 pounds, and his mother not over 110 or 115 pounds. His wife weighs about 130 pounds. Two years ago she gave birth to a girl baby, their only child. Mr. Craig's great great grandfather on his mother's side was Governor Chittenden, the first governor of Vermont, who was born in Ireland. Dr. Hanson Catlett, his grandfather, was assistant surgeon general of the United States for thirty-five years and died in the government service at East Liberty, Pa. On his father's side Mr. Craig's grandfather was a native of Scotland and his grandmother a German, having been born in Frankfort. He is a first cousin of William P. Hepburn, solicitor for the United States treasury. Mr. Craig was born in Iowa. He is claimed to be the largest man in the world.

Extra Sleeves Needed by Actors

French actors and actresses always have their coats and dresses fitted on and choose the patterns of them by electric light. For every garment that requires sleeves they order several pairs. The sleeves are the part that grows dirty soonest, comedians constantly seizing each other by the arms, and, their hands being generally anointed with bears' grease or cold cream to hold the poudre de riz, which is laid thick on them seeming almost drab in the glare of the footlights. They often, for spite, grasp the arms firmly and unnecessarily. The firmer the grasp, the deeper sinks the bears' grease into the stuff of the sleeves—London Truth.

Worthy of Witch-Burning Days.

A Kentucky baptist minister says that some years ago a baptist church in that state tried a man for kissing his wife. The formulated charge was entered, "Unbecoming levity." The gentleman accused had been from home several weeks on business, and on his return met his wife at the meeting-house, and in the presence of the congregation embraced her with a sounding smack on the lips. Some of the staid old deacons were so shocked at such levity in the house of God that the gentleman was arraigned on the above charge, and escaped dismissal from the church by agreeing to do his kissing at home in the future—New York Tribune.

The Sentence.

Judge—What's your name?

Prisoner—Thomas (hic) James.

Judge, absently—Ten dollars or ten days for Thomas Hic Jones.

A MISTAKEN SERVICE.

The Young Lady Type-Writer Unavoidably Lost Her Job.

"Oh, yes, frequently," said a young lady who has had considerable experience as a stenographer, in reply to the clubman's question as to whether her employers ever dictated their family letters to her," says the Chicago Mail. "Now, there is Mr. Jones. While his wife was down East he always dictated the letters he sent to her daily, or else had me write them. It got to be quite the usual occurence for him to say, after business matters had been attended to:

"'Well, I guess, Miss Brown, you may write to my wife. You know about what to say.'

"So I would proceed and write a letter in his usual cordial tone, telling her that the baby was doing well and the boys were getting along finely with Mary, the house servant.

"Sometimes, when I was feeling quite in the humor, I would get off long letters of several hundred words each. Mr. Jones would look over the page and jot down his name at the end. I would address the envelope on the machine, seal it and send the message on its way to the absent wife.

"But there came an end to all that. The wife must have become tired of receiving type-written missives. I suppose they do seem rather cold, and perhaps, then she did not like the idea of a third party aware of the contents of her husband's private correspondence.

"One day Mr. Jones did not come down to the office. I suppose he had been out with the boys the night before. Along in the afternoon his brother came over to my desk and said:

"Perhaps we had better get off a letter to Mrs. Jones, as otherwise she might think something had happened.

"So I wrote out a letter in the usual manner and signed it with the rubber fac-simile of Mr. Jones's signature.

"The letter was posted, and I thought no more of it for several days. Mr. Jones did not come down to the office that day or the next, and the third day there was an explosion.

"It seems that the reason he did not come down on the morning that I wrote the letter was because his wife came home the morning before, and he had not heard of it till he went home at night, she thinking she would surprise him. The next day and the next he stayed at home, and the third day the letter that I had written unbeknown to him was forwarded to her, and you can imagine the breeze it created.

"I really believe the woman couldn't have been more angry if she had caught me flirting with her husband instead of doing my best to keep up pleasant relations between them.

"Yes, that is why I found another situation. She put on such funny airs before me, and wouldn't even speak to me when she came into the office, although she had always done so before.

"I think Mr. Jones enjoyed it on the quiet, but he was too honorable and too much of a gentleman to make sport of his wife, even indirectly."

NOMENCLATURE IN A STATE.

Queer Names in Washington Apparently Come From a Variety of Sources.

The names of some of the precincts in this state are certainly wonderful. In Adams county there is a Washtuena, which sounds to the Tacoma News as if it was intended to call it Washington, but the Indian influence controlled before the word was completed. Anatone and Theon are rather simple, but Humptulips and Wynoche are at least unfamiliar. Cathlapoodle and Chelatchie are closely followed in the list by Washougal. Arkansaw and Monticello, in Cowlitz county, show the influence of the chivalrous south, but Toutle and Olequa are distinctly home productions. Fishhook, Pasco and Washtuena are the combination offered by Franklin county, and Garfield has a Pataha and a Tuckanon, Coupeville and Utsalady are familiar in this part of the country, but would sound strange to a foreigner. The country named in honor of the sage of Monticello offers Chinacum and Quilcene to the list of curios, and Enumclaw, Duwamish, Krain, Sammamish and Tolt are the contribution of King county. Ollalla, Coleckem, Manastash, Wenatchee, Peschastin, Swauk, Claquato, Salcum and Skookumchuck are a string of pearls; Lincoln has only Sassis to attract the attention, while Arcadia and Coqualima and Humahuma are in Mason county. Entail, Loophole and Toats Coluee are in Okanogan county. Ilwaco and Tasal in Pacific Kapousin, Ohop and Tanwax seem to be all right because they are nearer home. Avon suggests the home of poetry in Skagit, but they have also Guemas, Sauk and Samish, which are distinctly unpoetic. Port Susan in Skagit suggests home, but Stillaguamish and Tualco puts us at sea again. Lummi, Nooksack and Semiahmoo are all right alongside in Whatcom. Oneco, Penewawa, Tekoa, Cowychee, Kiona and Wenas are east of the mountains.

Unique Proposal of a German Woman.

Frau Helene Lange, according to the Berlin papers, has come forward with a somewhat startling proposal. This is nothing more or less than the demand for one year's service for girls. She suggests that just as German youths are compelled to spend at least one year in barracks, so their sisters should be compelled to spend a year in kindergarten, creches, people's kitchens, hospitals, factory girls' or servants' homes, to which they should give their services. Of course, these institutions must be greatly multiplied to give work to all. As youths may choose their garrison and troop, so the girls may be allowed to choose their branch of service. Certificates could be granted at the end of the year as to work and conduct. Those who desired to stay on, and showed the necessary talent, could be promoted and allowed to direct the one-year recruits. Frau Lange considers that this year of service would form and strengthen the character of girls as no family, school, or social life could.—London Queen.

Remember that in Garfield Tea you have an unfailing remedy for indigestion, sick headache and every attending ill that an abused stomach can make you suffer. Every druggist sells it; 25c., 50c., and $1.

Prisoners in the Camden, Ark., jail were detected in a plot to saw their way to freedom.

Allen's Iron Tonic Bitters give tone and strength to the whole system. All genuine bear the signature of J. P. Allen, Druggist, St. Paul, Minn.

A Mother's Story
"When my boy was 2½ years of age, a fall brought on hip disease, which gradually grew worse until, when he was 6, he could not walk, and we had him treated 9 months at the Children's Hospital in Boston. But when he came home he was worse, and the doctors said nothing could be done. I began giving him Hood's Sarsaparilla and he improved at once. The 14 abscesses on his hip healed up, his appetite improved and he could walk, at first

Willie Duff.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures
with crutches, then without. He is now perfectly well, lively as any boy." MRS. EMMA V. DUFF, Walpole, Mass.

HOOD'S PILLS do not purge pain or gripe, but act promptly, easily and efficiently. 25c.

"MOTHERS' FRIEND"
To Young Mothers

Makes Child Birth Easy.
Shortens Labor,
Lessens Pain,
Endorsed by the Leading Physicians.
Book to "Mothers" mailed FREE.
BRADFIELD REGULATOR CO.
ATLANTA, GA.
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

S.S.S. CURES MALARIAL POISON
Nature should be assisted to throw off impurities of the blood. Nothing does it so well, so promptly, or so safely as Swift's Specific.

LIFE HAD NO CHARMS.
For three years I was troubled with malarial poison, which caused my appetite to fail, and I was greatly reduced in flesh, and life lost all its charms. I tried mercurial and potash remedies, but to no effect. I could get no relief. I then decided to try S.S.S. A few bottles of this wonderful medicine made a complete and permanent cure, and I now enjoy better health than ever.
J. A. RICE, Ottawa, Kan.
Our book on Blood and Skin Diseases mailed free.
SWIFT SPECIFIC Co., Atlanta, Ga.

Ely's Cream Balm
WILL CURE
CATARRH
Price 50 cents.
Apply Balm into each nostril.
ELY BROS., 56 Warren St., N.Y.

It is for the cure of dyspepsia and its attendants, sick-headache, constipation and piles, that have become so famous. They act gently, without griping or nausea.
Tutt's Tiny Pills

IMPORTED Percheron & Shire Stallions, first class $600. 1, 2 & 3 years' time. Imported mares cheap. Hiram C. Wheeler, Odebolt, Sac Co., Iowa.

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till cured. DR. J. STEPHENS, Lebanon, Ohio.

FREE An extract of 70 pages of Dr. Nelson's Celebrated book "Facts for the sick." for 4 cents in stamps. Dr. Nelson corner of Washington and 3rd Aves., South Minneapolis, Minn.

DOUBLE Breech-Loader $7.60. RIFLES $2.00 WATCHES GUNS BICYCLES $15
All kinds cheaper than elsewhere. Before you buy, send stamp for catalogue to THE POWELL & CLEMENT CO. 166 Main St., Cincinnati, O.

TELEGRAPHY
AND ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING
Taught by practical Telegraphers and Electricians. No department of a Business College, but a thorough special course. Circulars Free. McAllisters School of Telegraphy, 419 Nicollet Av., Minneapolis, Minn.

CURES CATARRH
LONDON BALM
LONDON BALM CO. NEW YORK
CURES CATARRH HAY FEVER
PRICE 50c.
SOLD BY YOUR DRUGGIST.

WHOOPING COUGH.

What do you suppose is a sure cure for whooping cough among some of the English people.

It is to pass the child under a donkey three times.

This is about as sensible as most of the cures.

The parasite that creates the whooping cough requires a certain time to develop and until he does this medicine may alleviate but will not cure it.

The best thing in the world is to give the child Reid's German Cough and Kidney Cure.

The tar that forms one of the ingredients will exterminate the parasites or at least go further in this direction than anything else will do.

Then, too, the remedy is harmless, so that there is no danger of giving the little one an over dose.

This is a great thing in itself.

Get this great remedy of any dealer.

The small bottles are twenty-five cents the large ones fifty cents.

SYLVAN REMEDY CO., Peoria Ill.

Garfield Tea Overcomes results of bad eating.
Cures Sick Headache, Restores Complexion, Saves Doctors' Bills. Sample free. GARFIELD TEA CO., 319 W. 45th St., N.Y.
Cures Constipation

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.
CATARRH
Sold by Druggists or sent by mail. 50c. E. T. Hazeltine, Warren, Pa.

N. W. N. U. No. 1.—1893.

Minn Hist. Society

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

St. Hilaire Spectator.

VOLUME XI. ST. HILAIRE, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 11, 1893. NUMBER 25.

HIS PARTING WORDS.

MESSAGE OF GOVERNOR MERRIAM.

A Resume of the State Government During the Past Two Years, With Suggestions on Legislation.

In the joint session of the legislature Gov. Merriam read his farewell address to the members, and it reviewed the work of the different state departments, and made some important suggestions with regard to needed legislation. The message is given below in full:

Gentlemen of the Senate and House of Representatives:

In accordance with a well established precedent I am allowed the privilege of calling attention to the results attained in the various departments of the state government during the two years intervening since the assemblage of the legislature, and to that end I desire to submit briefly for your consideration such items as I deem of especial interest. I shall as well take the liberty of making some suggestions with reference to the future action of this body upon matters considered of importance to the people of the commonwealth. Permit me to again reiterate the sentiment expressed in my last message to this body with reference to the desirability of avoiding all legislation which has for its aim the protection or benefit of any special interest. It is one of the prevailing evils, if I may be permitted to say so, of all legislation of the present time that there is too great a tendency to seek remedies for ills that are impossible to cure through legislative enactment. It is desirable and necessary to enact laws that will protect all citizens equally in their personal and property right, but to attempt to provide a panacea for every trouble, whether imaginary or real, is of doubtful propriety and must result in clogging the statute books with legal forms utterly impossible of execution. Discrimination of any character that is to the advantage of one citizen and works injury to another should be studiously avoided as unfair and not in accord with free institutions. The spirit of paternalism, so-called, in government seems to pervade the public mind to an alarming extent, and, if carried to its logical and legitimate conclusion, must eventuate in the building up of favored classes and communities to the detriment of the people.

The apparent danger of a visitation to our shores of a dreaded plague in the form of Asiatic cholera, through the medium of emigration from the infected cities of Europe, has called the attention of the public mind to a necessity for a revision of all laws governing the admission of emigrants from Western Europe to the United States. It was deemed advisable by the general government to take steps to prohibit temporarily all persons who are classed as emigrants from landing at any of our ports. As the Northwest, and particularly Minnesota and the two Dakotas, were the points of destination for many of those coming from infected ports, it was deemed desirable by the board of health of the state to procure a corps of experienced physicians to examine all trains coming into the state and properly quarantine any person, suspected of having the malady, or those exposed to it. Precautions were wise, as in this way a competent plan was provided for the management of menace to the health and lives of our citizens during the coming season, should emigrants be allowed to land in the United States until the disease is thoroughly stamped out in Europe. It would seem to be of questionable policy for the general government to permit any emigration pending the world's fair, lest this great national exposition be a complete failure through the introduction of this terrible plague within the confines of this country. I recommend that a joint petition be sent to congress requesting that all emigration be suspended during the year 1893, and, as well, to consider the desirability of a revision of all laws governing emigration, and, if possible, seek to forbid our shores to large numbers of people who are not at all in sympathy with our form of government, and who are likely, many of them, to become a charge on the public. The time has arrived for some emphatic action upon the part of the American people against this indiscriminate incursion of foreigners, who come to this country without money, without education, many of them criminals, and few of them calculated to become useful citizens. We cannot protect our own laboring classes and provide proper compensation for them if we are to be perpetually the place of refuge for the thousands who are sent to us by the governments of the old world.

Railroad and Warehouse Commission.

The railroad and warehouse commissioners have submitted their biennial report and have indicated the work that has been accomplished under their direction during the past two years. The board has pointed out the desirability of making some changes in our present law, so as to have it conform as far as possible with the interstate law governing railroads throughout the national domain. They have renewed recommendations of various kinds made in their reports in the past, and I beg to especially invite your consideration of those sections which call attention to the desirability of enacting laws relative to the issuance of passes for the free transportation of passengers. This discrimination should also be done away with at the earliest possible moment. The law should be amended so as to permit the commission to inquire of its own motion into the rates and practices of any of the railroads without being compelled to wait until some formal complaint is made. It is gratifying to state that the sections of the law requiring that cars shall be furnished to individual shippers have been carried into effect very generally during the last two years. The transportation companies as a rule have manifested a desire to comply with the spirit of the law in this respect. The most important work entrusted to the board of railroad and warehouse commissioners is the inspection and weighing of grain. During the past year, with one or two exceptions, the elevators at the terminal points have become private warehouses and are not amenable to the laws of the state. The commission very properly makes some suggestions as to the amendment of the law which should make all warehouses at terminal points public institutions and under the direct charge of the warehouse commissioners. The question of the inspection and weighing of wheat at points outside of the large cities is a most vexatious one, and is a problem most difficult of solution. There is every reason to believe that at country points there has been much discrimination in the way of dockage and in grading wheat, and very many wrongs have been perpetrated in this direction to the detriment of the farming community in the wheat growing districts. There have been many suggestions made as to the most desirable way to avoid these difficulties and as far as possible protect the individual seller at such stations as he may present his wheat for inspection and sale. The board, after giving the matter careful attention, has arrived at the conclusion that it will be well to place all warehouses at country points within the general supervision of the commission, allowing it, through its proper agents, to have general oversight over the various elevator companies, and whenever complaints arise to at once proceed to investigate them, and if possible ascertain the cause of the difficulty. I am rather inclined to the opinion that this is the best plan that has been presented, or is at all practicable, up to this time. I confess that the grading and weighing of wheat at local stations is one of the most intricate questions to determine that has come within my observation, and I am well aware that many hardships arise from undergrading at country stations, and I see no way whereby this difficulty can be compassed unless it be in the way indicated.

The State Prison.

The annual report of the board of managers of the state prison at Stillwater has been submitted, with a very full account of the transactions that have occurred since this body last assembled. A very desirable contract was made in October, 1891, for the use of the convicts during the two years, in accordance with the law under which the state penitentiary is now in operation. The sum received per diem for each prisoner is in excess of any sum heretofore obtained, and in addition desirable arrangements were made for the use of the machinery owned by the state, as well as for furnishing of power to operate the same. The last legislature provided for the purchase of additional machinery for the purpose of manufacturing binding twine, and, although some delay occurred in securing the necessary machines to carry into effect the law, owing to the existence of the twine trust, which controlled not only all of the twine manufactured in the country, but the manufacturers who produced the implements necessary to the making of twine as well, I am pleased to state that the results obtained have met the fullest expectations. Binding twine was sold last year to farmers in various parts of the state and gave good satisfaction. The binding twine machinery is now in full operation, and I have no doubt the results during the coming year will be not only beneficial to the farmers of the state, but of value for the purpose of the employment of the convicts. The present system of contracting the labor of a portion of the convicts for a short time is of great disadvantage to the state and it is not possible to induce manufacturing concerns of responsibility to purchase the necessary machinery to employ the convicts on contract when they are able to purchase the labor for so short a time. It is absolutely requisite, in order to obtain an advantageous arrangement for the state to permit the board of managers to make a contract for at least eight or ten years. In this way the best results would be obtainable as far as the state is concerned. A certain number of the convicts can be employed on state account in the manufacture of twine and in other work about the prison, but at least one-half should be permanently employed in some labor that will bring a revenue to the state and make the institution self-sustaining.

Hospitals for the Insane.

I desire to again call your attention to the desirability of some change in the mode of management in connection with the hospitals for the insane, and to reiterate my recommendations made two years ago. I would suggest that greater supervisory powers be vested in the lunacy commission and that it be charged with a larger responsibility in the commitment and discharge of patients. A very admirable law relative to this subject was brought before this body two years ago, but failed of sanction. There is the greatest need for immediate attention to this matter, and I sincerely hope that the committee which is especially to consider matters relative to the hospitals will present plans for the correction of some of the evils.

The board of managers of the insane hospitals have presented estimates for needed improvements. I need hardly call your attention to the urgent necessity of providing for the unfortunate people of our state who are compelled to be cared for in our insane institutions, and it is as little as our citizens can do to see that ample accommodations are provided for all these within our borders. Increased facilities will have to be provided at Fergus Falls for the natural increase during the next two years, and in addition the center building at the Rochester asylum should be replaced with a fire-proof structure, lest a terrible calamity occur that will cause the death of many of the patients now confined within the asylum. I especially urge upon you the necessity of the granting of the demands of the board, in order to properly provide for the future.

The State Board of Health.

Owing to the universal alarm resulting from the near approach of cholera, I convened the board of health in extra session for the purpose of consultation and taking such active measures as may be necessary to preclude this disease from gaining a foothold in this state. It was apparent that our only means of protection consisted in thorough and efficient interstate quarantine. I summoned in consultation with this board representatives of all the railway systems of this state, and their co-operation was enlisted in bringing about immediate steps for the exclusion of all immigrants en route to the state that were believed to have been in any way exposed to contagion. It was found upon investigation that we were in need of more legislation to carry into effect adequate interstate quarantine. In view of a probable epidemic of this disease the coming year, your attention is solicited to ascertain and supply these wants. The efficiency of this board is hampered by the action of the last legislature in reducing the annual appropriation for its support. Its duties are onerous and indispensable and require, in the face of impending peril, your solicitous attention.

Capitol Building.

The last legislature selected a commission to inquire into the desirability of selecting a site upon which to place a new building for the use of the state officers. In my judgment, the time has now arrived, in view of the present crowded condition of our capitol building, to seriously contemplate the necessity of providing for the future uses of the executive officers of the state. The present structure is entirely inadequate for the needs of the officials charged with the performance of the public duties of various kinds, and as some years would necessarily elapse before a new building could be completed, it would be well to provide during the present session for the future uses of the state in this regard. A very small sum based upon the assessed valuation of the property of the state levied yearly, would provide the amount requisite during the next ten years to construct an edifice in keeping with the wealth and population of Minnesota. Two-tenths of a mill collected each year would yield something like $125,000, and this sum could be placed in a separate account to be used specifically for the building of a state capitol. The building would necessarily be designed with a view to the future growth of the state, and to that end could be constructed with the purpose of having it ready for use eight or ten years hence. The amount collected year by year would be so small as to be hardly felt by the taxpayers, and by the time the building was an absolute necessity we should be possessed of a handsome edifice entirely proportionate to the importance of the state. I sincerely commend to you the desirability of prompt consideration and action upon this subject.

World's Fair Commission.

The members of the world's fair commission selected in accordance with the law passed by this body at its last session, felt the necessity of a larger sum of money than was appropriated by the twenty-seventh session of this body in order to carry out the true spirit of the act under which they are operating, and to secure such, appealed to the people of the various counties who responded with commendable promptness. With this additional fund the commission have been enabled to construct for the use of our people at the exposition a building which bears creditably upon the state, and to cover every field of material interest within our borders in a broad and liberal manner, not permitted by the original appropriation. Inasmuch as the advantages to be gained by the proper presentation of the resources of Minnesota at the world's fair will be general, I would recommend an appropriation be made by the legislature sufficiently large to repay these various contributions. I sincerely trust that no means will be spared to in every sense present to the large numbers who will come to Chicago from abroad in a proper way the unusual opportunities afforded to any who may desire to make their permanent home within our borders.

Swamp Land Grants.

I desire to again call the attention of this body to the desirability of disposing of the several unsettled swamp land grants. The state has granted from time to time during the last twenty-five years, quite an amount of swamp lands to aid in the construction of various railroads. Some of the roads have selected nearly or quite the number of acres to which they are entitled. Others have delayed for one cause or another until a large amount of unfinished business has accumulated in the land office, necessitating the employment of extra clerks, and causing more or less expense. Some of the grants have been forfeited by non-performance of contract, while others await further legislation to determine rights. A sufficient number of acres have been deeded to the state by the general government to fill the grants to railroads (saving possibly one road) and state institutions, whose rights have been fully determined. The time has now come for the land to be deeded to the proper parties and the state relieved of further annoyance and care. To that end I suggest that a law be enacted directing the parties entitled to land to select the same within a reasonable time, say three or five years, and after the expiration of that time to provide that all grants of every kind and nature be declared absolutely forfeited.

Banking Department.

The report of the bank examiner gives in detail the result of the work accomplished in his department. I again desire to call attention to the desirability of furnishing the bank examiner with a sufficient number of clerks to properly discharge the duties which have been assigned him. There has been no additional appropriation for clerical force allowed this department for a number of years, although the duties that have been placed upon the banking department by legislation have quadrupled. By the natural growth of the state various banking institutions have been started, and in addition the department is charged with the responsibility of examining a large number of building associations, all of which necessitate quite an amount of clerical work. I would recommend that all banking and trust companies and all building and loan associations be charged a fee commensurate with the capital invested, to be placed into the state treasury, to defray the expenses of additional help. A large amount could be obtained in this manner, which would aid in defraying the expense of maintaining the office of the examiner.

The Itaska State Park.

At the session of the legislature of 1891, an act was passed creating a state park around Lake Itasca, the source of the Mississippi river. Pursuant to the provisions of that act, on May 4, 1891, I appointed Mr. J. V. Brower as commissioner of the park. Mr. Brower at once proceeded to secure concessions from the owners of the lands in the reservation, and with much success, so that now, the state can acquire the entire ownership of the tract, with a very reasonable outlay. The entire area of the park amounts to 19,701.00 acres. I also requested Mr. Brower to examine the question of what is the real source of the Mississippi, and his conclusions regarding that topic are given in his report submitted herewith. It will remain for the legislature to decide whether it will provide for the outlay necessary to purchase the lands included in the limits of the Itasca State Park.

State Finances.

You will learn by the report of the state treasurer of the very satisfactory results reached in carrying out the law authorizing the funding of the public debt. A very large saving of interest resulted in the exchange of the securities provided by the acts authorizing the sale of the 3½ per cent bonds and the purchase and cancellation of the railroad adjustment bonds. The state debt is now comparatively small, and in a few years it will be paid off through the operation of the sinking fund authorized by law. The law under which the state treasury is managed should be amended so as to require that a larger bond be furnished by the state treasurer, and the executive, the treasurer and the auditor should make up a commission which should indicate where the public moneys are to be deposited and upon what terms. I ventured two years ago to suggest the desirability of not increasing the tax levy. It was, however, deemed advisable to do so, and in accordance with the action of the legislature at that time the tax for revenue purposes was raised to 2.2 mills on the dollar, based upon the entire property of the state. It will be seen by the statements attached to this paper that there will be quite a surplus resulting from the collection of taxes for the years 1893-4, should the present rate be maintained and all money expended awarded, and I sincerely trust that the tax levy will be reduced to the amount suggested as necessary two years ago. At least a reduction of eight-tenths of a mill, computed upon the present assessed valuation of the property of the state, can be made, thereby reducing the amount of taxes to be collected nearly $480,000 per year for the years of 1894-5. This would be a very material saving to the taxpayers of the state, and in my judgment would be sufficiently large to pay all expenses as well as providing for all needed expenditures. The accompanying documents will indicate the directions in which sums are required for the construction of new public buildings, as well as for such other purposes as seem necessary.

I need not indicate to you your responsibilities which you have assumed at the instance of the people, and that you are charged with the execution of no ordinary trusts. I have no doubt that the result of your labors will prove advantageous to the people of the state.

In Conclusion.

My successor to this office brings ripe training in public life, a high reputation as a citizen of character and ability; all of which entitle him to the good will and sympathy of the people of this commonwealth, and I trust he may enjoy the same consideration at the hands of his associates in official life and the public that has been so generously accorded to me.

I cannot permit the opportunity to pass without testifying to the ability and high sense of duty to the people which has marked the discharge of the duties assigned to my co-workers in official life. Each and every one is deserving of commendation for his uniform and unwavering attention to the public service. Finally, I may be permitted to express my warmest thanks for the uniform courtesy and cordial co-operation extended to me by my associates during the four years I have been honored with the office I am about to surrender.

I resign the trust reposed in me by the people of Minnesota with the sincere hope that the choicest blessings of a Divine Providence may in the future be showered upon this fair commonwealth and its loyal citizens.

W. R. MERRIAM,
Governor of Minnesota.

THE FINANCIAL REPORT.

Estimated Receipts and Disbursements for Fiscal Years 1894 and 1895.

This estimate is made on a basis of a tax levy of 1.14 mills:

Receipts—	1894.	1895.
State taxes	$855,000	$855,000
Railroad taxes	875,000	900,000
Insurance taxes	120,000	120,000
Insurance fees	16,000	17,000
Telegraph and telephone taxes	20,000	21,000
Incorporation fees	32,000	35,000
Interest on deposits	20,000	20,000
Seed grain loans	10,000	10,000
Mining taxes	12,000	15,000
Earnings of state institutions	100,000	100,000
Forestry transfer	35,000	40,000
Miscellaneous	10,000	10,000
Total	$2,105,000	$2,143,000

Disbursements—	1894.	1895.
Executive expenses	$100,000	$100,000
Judicial expenses	135,000	135,000
Printing and paper	30,000	70,000
Support state insti'ns	835,000	840,000
Imp'ments, repairs, etc.	50,000	50,000
Boards and commiss'ns	65,000	65,000
Societies, etc.	45,000	45,000
Fire companies	31,000	32,000
Miscellaneous	225,000	225,000
Print'g laws in newsp's	....	35,000
Legislative expenses	....	150,000
Totals	$1,516,000	$1,747,000

Recapitulation—
Receipts, 1894	$2,105,000
Disbursements, 1894	1,516,000
Surplus, 1894		$589,000
Receipts, 1895	2,143,000
Disbursements, 1895	1,747,000
Surplus, 1895		396,000
Total surplus, 1894-1895		$985,000

Suggestions as to expenditure of surplus revenue, to be available April, 1894, and April, 1895:

Fergus Falls insane asylum, new buildings, etc.		$300,000
St. Peter insane asylum, new buildings, etc.		18,000
Rochester insane asylum, new buildings, etc.		100,000
State public school, Owatonna, new buildings, etc.		35,000
State reformatory, St. Cloud, new building, etc.		103,000
Institute for defectives, Faribault, new buildings, etc.		75,000
Extraordinary repairs		52,000
State university		150,000
World's fair		100,000
Deficiencies—
Judges' salaries	$45,000
Wolf bounties	5,000	50,000
Total		$983,000

Legislation Urged.

Albany, Jan. 4.—The legislature convened to-day, William Sulzer of New York being made speaker of the house and Mr. Malbey, of St. Lawrence county, the Republican leader. The governor's message was read in both houses and adjournment was had for one week.

Better Than Natural Gas.

Findlay, Ohio, Jan. 4.—It has been finally settled that the natural gas supply of this great gas belt is no longer equal to the demand. The pressure is so low that it is useless for heating purposes in homes even. Several of the largest factories here are experimenting with crude oil for fuel and have found it almost as cheap as natural gas, far safer, more easily controlled and always uniform in pressure.

To Prevent Students Betting.

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 4.—The local Congregational clergymen lately sent a joint letter to the Yale faculty urging the prohibition of all betting and gambling at the university, especially on foot ball and other games, to which some of the students are prone. President Dwight says that the faculty has taken the matter into consideration and will frame some measures, if a feasible plan can be devised.

Missing Daughters.

Vienna, Jan. 4.—Many persons have reported to the police in the last four days the loss of their daughters, between eight and twelve years of age. It is feared that the children are the victims of a criminal conspiracy.

Fire at Bismarck.

Bismarck, N. D., Special, Jan. 4.—The Odd Fellows' building, a brick, was gutted by fire to-day. Braithwaite's shoe stock is a complete loss, principally from water. The upper story was occupied by offices.

A Painter Eaten by Wolves.

Warsaw, Jan. 4.—The Polish painter Wierzwinski, while out riding, was attacked by wolves near Bielostock, and both he and his horse were devoured.

AFFAIRS OF STATE.

GOV. NELSON'S INAUGURAL SPEECH.

A Message to the Legislature Which Embodies a Concise and Masterly Review of the State's Business.

Gov. Nelson took the oath of office in the presence of the members of the house and senate, and then delivered his annual message to the legislature, in which he reviewed the condition of the state's finances and institutions, and outlined necessary and useful legislation.

Gentlemen of the Senate and House of Representatives: In obedience to law and conformable to custom, I submit to you this message, touching the condition of our state and its public affairs. The financial affairs of our state government are in a sound and prosperous condition. With a population of 1,400,000, and an assessed valuation of $600,000,000, there is an outstanding indebtedness of only $2,154,000, subject to an annual interest of but $77,380, and on the last day of November, 1892, there was a balance in the state treasury to the credit of the different funds of $1,088,040.54. Such a showing as this clearly indicates that the government has been conducted prudently and on careful business principles.

The correctional and charitable institutions of the state are fulfilling their mission to an extent that keeps us abreast with the times and up to the demands of modern civilization.

It is gratifying to observe that, notwithstanding our rapid growth, no increase has taken place in our prison population during the last three years. As a matter of fact there was a smaller number of state convicts on the 31st day of October, 1892, than on the 31st day of October, 1889. This fact indicates the prosperous, industrious and law-abiding character of our population and demonstrates that the problem of American civilization is here finding its best solution.

The reformatory at St. Cloud is successfully accomplishing the benign purpose for which it was intended, but its usefulness is likely to be embarrassed and handicapped by existing recent legislation. Constant employment is absolutely necessary for the physical and moral well-being and the permanent reformation of the convicts. When the reformatory was located upon a vast granite quarry, it was hoped and expected that the problem of keeping the convicts employed was solved, and that ample work for many years to come would be found in the quarries. But under the provisions of chapter 112 of the General Laws of 1891 only 33 per cent of the convicts can be employed in quarrying and preparing granite for sale. The balance of the convicts, if engaged in granite work at all, can only be employed in quarrying and cutting stone for public buildings of the state, and for walls and improvements on the grounds of the reformatory. With this law in force, it is evident that the state, in order to provide employment for two-thirds of the convicts, must either utilize the granite for public buildings or inaugurate some new industrial enterprise within the limits of the reformatory. Under these conditions, inasmuch as additional buildings are urgently needed at the institution, it would seem to be the part of wisdom, at as early a day as practicable, to make use of the granite and the labor of the convicts, as far as possible, in the construction of such buildings.

State Institutions Revenue.

The manufacture of twine has been successfully established at the state prison and meets with much favor among our agricultural population. This enterprise should be greatly enlarged and extended; not only for the reason that it affords a permanent field for convict labor, as little in conflict with other labor in the state as can well be obtained, but more especially for the reason that our state prison twine, if furnished to the consumer at near its actual cost, will always to some extent afford our farmers protection against unjust combinations and abnormal prices on the part of the twine manufacturers.

It is encouraging to note that, though for a time insanity seemed to increase at an undue pace, yet that within the last two years the increase has not been as great as was anticipated, nor out of proportion to the increase of our population. The growth of our state, which in the future will be less rapid and more from within than in the past, will no doubt tend to further decrease the proportion of the insane. This promising outlook will obviate the necessity for any unusual haste in constructing additional buildings, and will also save us from any material increase in appropriations for the current expenses of the hospitals for the insane. An appropriation of $38,500 is urgently needed to finish and equip the southwest wing of the third hospital at Fergus Falls. This wing, when completed, will furnish accommodations for 200 additional patients, and will thus meet our immediate want for room for some time to come. Large appropriations are asked for buildings at the hospitals at Rochester and Fergus Falls, and at the school for the feeble minded. When you come to consider these requests in detail you will no doubt take such action as the necessity for further accommodation calls for and as the burdens of taxation will warrant.

The soldiers' home at Minnehaha Falls is successfully performing its great mission of affording a cheerful and pleasant retreat for the needy and homeless veterans of our wars. The institution is a monument of the gratitude and patriotism of a great people. Subsidiary and supplemental thereto and existing under the same law, is a scheme of furnishing assistance at their residence to such needy veterans as have families, or homes of their own, and to the widows and dependant minor children, and dependant parents of soldiers. This mode of relief is especially intended for those who cannot well enter the home, but who are nevertheless as much entitled to public aid as the inmates of that institution. Under the prudent and rigid rules adopted by the board of trustees, none but those absolutely in need can get relief, and this aid is not given in money, but in the absolute necessaries of life and only to a limited extent. From personal observation in many cases, I am convinced that this method of assistance is as salutary and as much needed as the home itself, and is much more inexpensive. The money from which this relief is granted is known as the soldier's relief fund, and is derived from a tax of one-tenth of a mill on all the property of the state. This fund is fast overgrowing the demands made on it. At the beginning of the present fiscal year there was a balance from the preceding year of $24,407.84, and there will be derived from the tax levy of the current year the sum of $59,558.85, thus giving a total available fund of $83,966.69 for the current fiscal year. During the fiscal year ending July 31st, 1892, there was expended but $39,370.42 out of this fund, and there is not likely, in view of the increasing results of the dependant pension law, to be any greater demand on it in the future. In view of these facts, it seems to me it would be advisable to transfer $40,000 of this fund to the so-called soldiers' home fund, which would afford that fund ample supply for its wants during the fiscal years commencing Aug. 1, 1893, and Aug. 1, 1894, thereby obviating the necessity of any other appropriation for that fund during those years. In addition to this, the annual tax levy for the soldiers' home relief fund should be cut down from one-tenth of a mill to one-half that rate, which I think would be ample to meet all necessary demands.

Educational Facilities.

In the field of education Minnesota occupies high and advanced grounds at all points. Our state university has within the last ten years grown beyond all precedent in quality, scope and members, and to-day ranks as one of the leading educational institutions of our country, to which we can all look with pride and admiration. In 1883 the total attendance of students was 252. In 1892 the number has reached 1,374. And during 1893 the number will exceed 1,500. Departments of law and medicine have been established and are in most successful operation. There were 463 law and medical students in attendance in 1892, and in 1893 the number will no doubt reach, if not exceed, 600. The fees charged students in these departments are nearly sufficient to pay the salaries of all the instructors, and will in the near future be more than ample for this purpose. Perhaps nothing pertaining to the progress and growth of the university has been more marked and original than the establishment of a school of practical agriculture, giving special instruction in all that pertains to the theory and practice of agriculture in all its branches. In connection with this school and as a part thereof is a dairy hall, ample and well equipped, in which instruction is given in the theory and practice of cheese and butter-making by an expert instructor. This school has been well patronized by the sons of our farmers. In 1891 the attendance was 104. In 1892 it was 118, and in 1893 it will be over 140, and would be far more if there were sufficient accommodations. While the state has dealt liberally with the university, yet its growth has of late been so rapid that appropriations have not always kept pace with its wants. An increase in the force of instructors has been made from time to time, and is still needed, and such increase, to my knowledge, urgently calls for additional appropriations. The library and assembly rooms are located in the old main building, which was so injured by a fire in April, 1892, that the assembly room has been unfit for use since that time. The quarters occupied by the library afford very inadequate room, and are wholly unsafe in case of fire. An assembly room sufficient for the great audience of students and a safe and commodious place for the large and valuable library are among the most urgent wants of the university. The regents think that, with economy and advantage, these two—library and assembly rooms—should be combined in one suitable and substantial building, and for this they appeal to you for a liberal appropriation at your hands.

Our normal schools are increasing in usefulness and in attendance, and seem to keep on advanced ground in all that pertains to their special lines of education.

Our high schools have become excellent feeders for our university, and have, to a large extent, assumed the sphere, and absorbed the work of the old-fashioned academies, and thereby they have brought the advantages of higher education close to the doors of the mass of our people.

Our common school system—the priceless jewel of our liberty—grows in quality and effectiveness year by year. Through summer training schools, at the university and at other points in the state, as well as through teachers' institutes, the teachers acquire a skill and aptitude for their work which greatly raises the standard of our common schools. Liberal appropriations for these training schools is money well invested, and there can be no serious objection to setting aside a portion of the one mill school tax for this purpose as recommended by the superintendent of public instruction. The contract for the supply of text books for our common schools, which has been in existence for fifteen years, expired last August. We are now remitted to the status, which existed prior to 1877, under which the pupils supplied themselves with such books as the school board for the time being selected. Under this system books were dear, changes frequent, and there was an entire lack of uniformity. To avoid these drawbacks, some action, it seems to me, is urgently needed on your part. To secure the highest order of books, at the lowest possible price, with uniformity and stability, ought to be the central idea of any plan that may be devised.

The Judiciary.

There are sixteen judicial districts in the state, with twenty-nine district judges, doing the nisi prius or original trial work, and in addition to this there are a number of municipal courts, with considerable local jurisdiction. We cannot well shut our eyes to the fact that this judicial force is in the aggregate, in proportion to our population, unusually large, and that the work is very unevenly distributed, in some districts there is very little to do, while in no district, do I think, is there any substantial overwork. I think it would be the part of wisdom and good administration to affect a judicious rearrangement of our judicial districts, so as to distribute the work more evenly and to leave each judge a reasonable and proper amount of work to do.

The dairy industry of the state, especially in view of the fact that it is to that source we must look for relief when wheat raising ceases to be promising, deserves our earnest care and protection. In connection with the school of agriculture and the experimental station at St. Anthony Park is our dairy school now in most successful operation. It is here where our dairymen of all classes can obtain proper instruction and training by precept and example, by instruction and experimental work. And this is the proper place and sphere for it. The department in charge of the state dairy and food commissioner, as a matter of both law and practice, seems to have no concern with purely educational and experimental work, but is limited, and in its very plan and purpose limits itself to police supervision and police protection. This work and duty is undoubtedly necessary and essential, both for the protection of the consumer and the dairymen, and therefore should receive all proper aid and encouragement. But having in mind this limitation and distribution of work, it seems to me that the force employed and the salary roll in this department is out of proportion to the duties entailed and the work to be done. The salary roll is nearly $15,000—a greater sum than that of any other of the executive departments of our state government except the grain inspection department, which much more than pays its own expenses from fees collected. The present commissioner is in no wise at fault for the existing order of things. He found it there when he entered the office. It came into being under the act of 1887, when the appropriation for the department was increased from $6,000, as it existed under the original act of 1885, to $15,000. To my mind it would be wholesome and wise economy to return in this respect to the act of 1885. A $6,000 salary roll strikes me as ample for this department. I commend the subject to your consideration for, such action as you may deem advisable.

Constitutional Amendments.

At the last election two constitutional amendments were submitted to the people. One of them, that relating to special legislation, was adopted. This will necessitate the enactment of general laws to provide for those cases and subject matters inhibited by the amendment. The other amendment, that relating to taxation, was evidently rejected because it authorized, among other things, the substitution, in the case of railroad companies, of a mere license fee in place of a tax upon gross earnings. In 1890 the people declared themselves in favor of this tax by voting to reject Chapter 101 of the General Laws of 1889. There is at present no adequate system of taxation for mining, express, parlor car and sleeping car companies. Under existing laws, insurance companies, both foreign and domestic, pay a tax of 2 per cent per annum upon their gross premium receipts, in addition to taxes upon both real and personal property in this state in case of foreign companies. From this source we obtained during the last fiscal year a revenue of $127,244.25. While from the tax upon the gross earnings of railroads we obtained a revenue of $894,091.43 during the same period. Thus from these two sources we obtained a total revenue of $1,021,335.23. In the light of these facts and in justice to the other taxpayers, it would seem to be advisable and sound policy to enact a law proposing an amendment to the constitution, authorizing the levy and collection of a tax upon the gross earnings of all the companies and industries named in the rejected amendment, except such as are now paying these taxes, in addition to taxes upon real estate. A tax upon gross earnings is more remunerative, more equitable and more expanding than a mere license fee, unless such fee is measured by and based upon gross earnings. I believe an amendment of this kind would find favor with the people, and so I commend this important subject to your careful consideration.

Grain Elevators and Grain Inspection.

Wheat raising is the leading agricultural industry of our state, and it is of such paramount importance that a depression in the same vitally disturbs more or less all the commercial and manufacturing interests of our people. Everything, therefore, which pertains to the handling, marketing and transportation of our wheat crop is not only a matter of the highest importance to our farmers, but is something that concerns every citizen who has our prosperity and well-being at heart. In 1885 the legislature, in obedience to public demand, enacted a law for the purpose of regulating and controlling the weighing, grading and inspection of grain at the terminal points of St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth, and for the further purpose of regulating and controlling grain elevators and warehouses at those places. That portion of the law relating to weighing, grading and inspection has been utilized and put into successful operation. All that handle grain at these terminal points avail themselves of this feature of the law. The following table indicates the growth and volume of business in the inspection department from its origin to the present time:

Number of car loads inspected "on arrival":

Crop	Wheat.	Coarse Including Flax.	Total No. Car loads.
1885	92,886	4,767	97,653
1886	113,923	6,412	120,335
1887	115,215	8,637	123,853
1888	74,068	13,410	87,478
1889	107,979	22,675	130,654
1890	117,141	15,532	132,673
1891	200,081	21,465	221,546

Inspected "out of store" into cars:

Crop	Wheat.	Coarse Including Flax.	Total No. Car loads.
1885	18,414		18,414
1886	24,004		24,004
1887	30,800		30,800
1888	31,210	965	32,175
1889	30,941	5,526	36,467
1890	44,015	6,479	50,764
1891	58,838	9,795	68,633

Inspected "out of store" into vessels:

Crop	Wheat.	Coarse Including Flax.	Total No. Bushels.
1885	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
1886	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
1887	16,867,410	205,563	17,073,973
1888	5,561,111	1,429,069	6,990,180
1889	17,416,788	3,575,480	20,992,268
1890	14,807,431	1,702,871	16,500,302
1891	44,187,919	945,265	45,133,184

And although the fees charged for the service are small—in fact, less than anywhere else for the same work—yet the department is more than self-sustaining, and has to-day a large surplus on its hands, as appears from the following table, a comparative statement showing earnings, expenses and balances for the several years since the establishment of the department, viz.:

Year Ending Aug. 31—	Earnings.	Expenses.	Balance on Hand
1886	$63,471 20	$62,184 90	287 20
1887	84,401 51	64,731 30	20,507 41
1888	90,731 96	81,496 98	30,192 41
1889	69,661 57	78,047 09	20,905 90
1890	103,204 07	91,961 08	32,148 98
1891	100,652 20	88,321 66	43,470 52
1892	173,701 75	132,428 22	84,753 05

This large surplus of nearly $85,000 should be utilized, by being covered into the revenue fund, for which appropriate legislation is needed at your hands. A further reduction in the inspection fees will prevent the recurrence of so large a surplus.

That portion of the law of 1885 which aims to regulate and control grain elevators and warehouses has through the action of their proprietors fallen into well nigh disuse, as appears from the last report of the railroad and warehouse commission, to which I call your special attention. These elevators and warehouses that thus decline to submit to supervision all avail themselves of the weighing, grading and inspection provisions of the law, as all grain consigned to them from interior points is weighed, graded and inspected by state officers, and thus while enjoying the benefits, they decline to share the burdens of the law. This is a condition which, to my mind calls for immediate and effective legislative remedy. That you have ample and plenary jurisdiction in the premises is made plain by the supreme court of the United States in the case of Munn vs. Illinois, to which I call your attention.

Under existing law the weighing, grading and inspecting of grain by state authority, and under state supervision, is limited to the terminal points I have mentioned, and the city of St. Cloud. The grain, when it reaches these points, is either owned by local or terminal dealers in grain, or by big farmers, who can ship direct from wagon, in car load lots to the terminal dealers. It is these men therefore who, in their deal between each other, have the state as umpire, both as to weights and grades. But the ordinary farmer, he who is unable to ship in car load lots, and is obliged to sell his grain by the wagon load to the local dealers—and most farmers belong to this class—he has no state umpire, either as to weight, grade or dockage. No state weigher, or state inspector, is at hand, or can be invoked to right his wrong, if any, but he is remitted to the vague and dilatory remedy of the common law. This discrimination in legislative protection and legislative relief, has always struck me as anomalous and unjust. And therefore I have always favored, and still favor some plan, neither restrictive nor burdensome, placing all grain elevators and warehouses, doing a public business, under state inspection, and state supervision, to the end that the state may effectively, and beneficially mediate between the warehouseman and the farmer.

What the Farmer Needs.

But, in addition to this, the farmer needs prompt and unrestricted facilities for the erection and maintenance of grain elevators and warehouses at all stations and sidings, with necessary side track and switching accommodations for the same. Years ago it was the custom among railroad companies to give exclusive privileges to or to discriminate in favor of particular elevator or warehousemen. While in most cases the railroads have now abandoned this policy, yet there are still traces of the old evil in some quarters. A notable instance is that of the Farmers' Warehouse Association of Farwell, Minn., vs. The Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie Railway Company, described in the report of the railroad and warehouse commission of 1891 on page 15. This association, having first applied for leave to erect a grain warehouse on the right of way at the station of Farwell, which application the company without just cause denied, then erected the warehouse on their own land contiguous to the right of way, and have ever since—now more than three years—been vainly endeavoring to obtain the necessary side track facilities for the same. Such conduct on the part of the railroad company, aside from mere technical law, is unjust and irritating in the extreme, and tends to keep up a state of feeling between the producing and carrying interests of the country that ought not to exist. The railroad company, in thus obstructing and defying this righteous claim of the association, obstructs and defies the state, for back of the humblest farmer, in a case of this kind, ought to stand the whole dignity and power of the state. It is not for railroad companies to say who ought or who ought not to have warehouse and sidetrack facilities. All should be put on a footing of equality. All discrimination should be eliminated to the end, that untrammelled competition—one of the best regulators and protectors—may be secured and maintained. To entail the duty of maintaining grain elevators upon the railroad companies, as has been contended for in some quarters, would tend to give them a monopoly of the business, and thus stifle competition, which is far from desirable. In view of all these facts, to which I have called your attention, I cannot forbear to earnestly recommend that you devise and enact legislation that will promptly and effectively furnish the necessary relief and redress in all cases of this nature.

While Minnesota is rapidly developing her vast mineral resources, and is fast becoming a great manufacturing state, it is still in the pursuit of agriculture that a large plurality of her people are engaged. In those sections where dairy and diversified farming prevails, fair profits, as a rule, are secured, and the farmers are quite prosperous. But where wheat is still the chief crop, and main reliance, there, owing in part to the diminished and inferior yield of 1892, and in part to the unusually low price superinduced by a glut in the wheat market, arising from the large surplus of the great crop of 1891, and the generous winter wheat crop of 1892, some depression, though none of a serious character exists. With an average crop, not exceeding eleven bushels per acre, and an average price, not exceeding 55 cents per bushel, it is evident that our farmers are to some extent laboring under more than ordinary disadvantages, and deserve more than ordinary attention at our hands. Under these circumstances, it is our duty, and should be our ambition, to keep the expenses of our state government, in all its branches, at as low a level as the needs of the public service will justify. And we should repress and eliminate, as far as we can, all that savors of sinecurism, wherever it occurs, or wherever it may be invoked. And above all, we should, at this juncture, refrain, except in cases of urgent necessity, from inaugurating or entering upon new plans or new enterprises involving the expenditure of public money. We cannot give our farmers a better yield, nor better prices, but we can, at least, aid them to make the burdens of government rest more lightly on their shoulders.

My predecessor has administered the affairs of state economically and with great tact and wisdom, and has placed the public service on a sound and legitimate business footing, for which he deserves the gratitude of all friends of good government. I hope I may be able to approximate the high standard of public administration which he has placed before us.

And now, as you and I are about to enter upon the discharge of the duties assigned to us, may we be imbued with that wisdom which is from on high, and may our labors under the blessings of a benign providence redound to the greatness and the goodness of our state and common country.

Better Than Natural Gas.

Findlay, Ohio, Jan. 4.—It has been finally settled that the natural gas supply of this great gas belt is no longer equal to the demand. The pressure is so low that it is useless for heating purposes in homes even. Several of the largest factories here are experimenting with crude oil for fuel and have found it almost as cheap as natural gas, far safer, more easily controlled and always uniform in pressure.

To Prevent Students Betting.

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 4.—The local Congregational clergymen lately sent a joint letter to the Yale faculty urging the prohibition of all betting and gambling at the university, especially on foot ball and other games, to which some of the students are prone. President Dwight says that the faculty has taken the matter into consideration and will frame some measures, if a feasible plan can be devised.

Missing Daughters.

Vienna, Jan. 4.—Many persons have reported to the police in the last four days the loss of their daughters, between eight and twelve years of age. It is feared that the children are the victims of a criminal conspiracy.

A BIG FRAUD CHARGED.

CROOKEDNESS AMONG INDIAN AGENTS.

Investigation of a Recent Distribution of Funds at Pine Ridge for the Release of Specified Claims.

On the Anxious Seat.

Sioux City, Iowa, Special, Jan. 9.—Friends of Dr. Charles R. Eastman, agency physician at Pine Ridge, tell the story of the distribution of $100,000 among the Indians there and throw a new light on the transaction. Special Agent J. H. Chisney, who was sent to investigate the charges of crookedness, has completed his work, but his report is not yet public. It is said the agent charges Agent Brown and an officer named Cooper, who disbursed the money, with gross frauds, the profits of which they divided. When the money was paid the Indians were gathered together and passed through a turnstile, each signing his release of his claim as he passed out. The witnesses who were supposed to see the amount of money paid each Indian only saw the signatures. The money was paid at another desk twenty feet away and in many cases was only 20 per cent of the amount of the claim. The Indians complained and through Dr. Eastman had the investigation ordered. It is charged that Deputy Marshal George Bartlett was removed by Agent Brown because he knew too much of the methods employed. Jobbery in connection with cattle purchase and other supplies is charged.

Beard and Gray.

Redwood Falls, Minn., Special, Jan. 9.—The preliminary examination of Beard and Gray, the Fairfax bankers, was appointed for yesterday, and O. B. Turrell, who is interested in the bank failure, was summoned from St. Paul to attend at Fairfax. An appeal was made by the attorney for the bankers for a postponement of the examination for ten days, and ultimately the preliminary examination was waived. Bail was fixed for $1,000 on each of the two counts of receiving deposits after insolvency. With the charge of embezzlement, in default of bail, the prisoners were last evening sent to the Brown county jail at New Ulm in charge of the constable of Fairfax. The probabilities are that they will be bailed out. Every step taken by the authorities in this affair has been new to them, and hence the occurence of so many irregularities. Had it not been for this it is believed that bail would have been promptly produced last evening. The public sentiment is strongly against Beard and Gray, but Mr. Turrell says there have been no developments yet to show any trace of guilt, and the bankers, until further light is thrown on the subject, are entitled to the benefit of the doubt. The attorney of the bankers returned from New Ulm this evening. A number of earnest watchers waited for the train, but the attorney came without his clients. They cannot get a hearing until Tuesday. They are then to be brought out under a writ of habeas corpus.

Shot by a Cowboy.

Great Falls, Mont., Special, Jan. 9.—News reached here to-day of the death of John M. Nabors, deputy United States marshal, which occurred yesterday at Robare, ninety miles northwest of Great Falls, on the eastern border of the Blackfoot reservation. He died from the effects of wounds received several days ago in a pistol encounter with a cowboy named Barber. The latter sued Nabors for the possession of a horse. A justice of the peace at Robare, before whom the case was tried, decided in favor of Barber. The decision angered Nabors, and as he was riding out of Robare he met Barber. They immediately began to quarrel over the matter and in the heat of passion Nabors drew his revolver and opened fire on Barber, one bullet grazing Barber's leg. The other went wide of the mark. The latter returned the fire emptying his revolver at his assailant. One bullet went through Nabor's shoulder and another struck him in the left hand, shattering that member and coming out near the elbow. Blood poisoning set in and Nabors died as stated. Barber gave himself up and a coroner's jury exonerated him. The dead man was forty years old and had lived in Northern Montana several years.

Fighting Classified Labor.

Indianapolis, Jan. 9.—The management of the Vandalia railroad has determined to follow the example of other roads and discharge all freight handlers who refuse to leave the unions. B. F. Kennedy, of the grievance committee, says that City Freight Agent Perry, who discharged the men yesterday, says that all the roads have determined to pursue a similar policy, and that a determined stand is to be made against every class of organized labor.

Caused by a Lamp Explosion.

Elkland, Pa., Jan. 9.—The explosion of a lamp set fire to the Elkland Furniture works. The building and its contents were destroyed. The fire also destroyed the foundry of Bailey Bros. and damaged the Elkland Carriage works. The loss was $100,000; partially insured.

Fall River Flames.

Fall River, Mass., Jan. 9.—The Troy building, occupied by Charles T. Sherer & Co., dry goods; Covel & Osborne, mill supplies and hardware, and Porter Bros., dry goods, was burned to-day. Loss $135,000; fully insured.

What Eiffel Is Charged With.

London, Jan. 9.—The Paris correspondent of the News has ascertained that the indictment against Gustave Eiffel charges him with designedly keeping and concealing large sums of money obtained through the fraudulent operations of Charles De Lesseps.

Mexico's Scourge.

Torreon, Mex., Jan. 9.—Nearly all the towns and cities of Northern Mexico, except Monterey and Durango, are affected with an epidemic of typhus fever and the rate of mortality from the disease is alarming. The epidemic has reached Eagle Pass, Tex.

It Was a Mulhattanism.

Ishpeming, Mich., Jan. 9.—The sensational story sent from here that Lemuel Sherman had been murdered by Anton Murray, an emissary of a French secret society, is a canard. Sherman accidentally shot himself. No suspicion of guilt attaches to Murray.

Domestic Trouble the Cause.

La Crosse, Wis., Special, Jan. 9.—Frank Dvorak, a carpenter, aged fifty-five, after quarreling with his family last night went into his shop and seating himself on a tool chest put a bullet through his head. He had a family by a divorced wife and had married a widow with a family and had two children by her.

To Restrict Immigration.

Washington, Jan. 9.—The president has under consideration the circular prepared at the treasury department to restrict immigration. Next week the circular with the president's approval will be issued.

GREAT NORTHERN

TIME CARD.

NO. 8 Daily		NO Daily
7 40 p m Lv	St. Paul Ar	6 55 am.
8 10 " 11	Minneapolis	6 25 am
06 a m 218	Barnesville	10 25 pm
10 45 am 279 Lv	Crookston Ar	4 00 pm
*11 15 " 20	Shirley	3 30 " *
*x11 55 " 21	Ives	x3 00 " *
x12 20 pm	Wylie	x2 20 " *
*12 45 " 31 Ar	St. Hilaire Lv	2 00 " *

*Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

S. S. Buzza Agt,

Dr. H. GRUNDY.

Physician

& Surgeon.

Graduate of the University of Toronto Canada and member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario.

Messages from the surrounding country attended to,

Office in Drug Store

THIEF RIVER FALLS,

NORTHERN PACIFIC

THE

GREAT TRAMSCONENTAL ROUTE.

Passes through Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, Manitoca, Montana, Idaho, Oregon and Washington.

THE DINING CAR LINE

Dining cars are run between Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Winnipeg, Helena, Butte, Tacoma, Seattle and Portland.

PULLMAN SLEEPING CAR ROUTE.

Pullman service between Chicago St. Paul Montana and the Pacific Northwest; and between St. Paul, Minneapolis and Minnesota North Dakota and Manitoba points.

THE POPULAR LINE.

Daily Express Trains carry elegant Pullman sleeping Cars, Dining cars, Day Coaches, Pullman Tourist Sleepers and Free Colonist Sleeping Cars.

YELLOWSTONE PARK ROUTE.

The Northern Pacific R. R. is the rail line to Yellowstone Park; the popular line to California and Alaska; and its trains pass through the grandest scenery of seven states

THROUGH TICKETS Are sold at all cupon offices of the Northern Pacific Railroad to points North, East, South and West in the United States and Canada

TIME SCEDULE,

	Leave Crookston Daily	Arrive Crookston Daily
For Staples, Minneapolis, St, Paul Duluth Ashland and points East and South	7:05 p. m.	8:20 a m.
For Grand Forks Grafton Drayton, Winnipeg and points In North Dakota and Manitoba	8:27a. m.	7:10 p. m

For Rates, Maps, Time Tables or special information, apply to Agent Northern Pacific R R. at Crookston Minn., or

CHAS. S. FEE,
Gen. Pass. Agent
St, Paul' Minn.

ST. HILAIRE MEAT MARKET.

All kinds of fresh and salt meat always on hand.

I make a specialty of buying and selling cattle of all kinds.

If you want to buy or sell anything in that line it will pay you to give me a call.

JAMES DAINARD.

FRED Eikhof

DEALER IN CHOICE

WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS.

Beer always on tap.

Pool Room in Connection.

Broadway St. Hilaire.

FRANK IVES,

Attorney and Counselor AT LAW,

CROOKSTON and ST. HILAIRE, Minn.

Will Practice In ALL The Courts, OF T ESTATE and and before the U. S. Land Office Crookston and at Washington.

Will give special attention to contests of claims.

BREVITIES.

Wheat is 60 cents.

Fresh Oysters at W. A. Arthurs try them.

John Sorsolell was at Crookston last week on business.

For No. 1 pure buck wheat flour call on Fricker & Welch.

C. A. Brink was at Crookston on business last week

If you want some nice fresh oysters call on W. A. Arthur.

Fred Eikhof was at Thief River Falls on business last Monday.

We have been having another cold snap the past week.

Miss Mary Kvande is visiting Mrs. Martin Williams this week.

C. G. Rapp went down to Crookston to-day on business.

A complete line of undertakers goods always on hand at Holmes Bros.

O. F. Fost and H. E. Ives were at Grand Forks on business last week.

George McManus, the Crookston life insurance man, was in town to-day,

Business has been fairly good for this season of the year, the past week.

J. Stadsvold and wife, of Crookston, are visiting M. Hendrickson this week.

Now is the time to secure your flour cheap. Call for bargains on Fricker & Welch.

Dr. Grundy, of Thief River Falls, was in town on a professional call last Saturday.

J. C. Mathews who has been sick the past several weeks, is better and is able to be out,

Mr. Van Pelt, representing the Gotzian Shoe Co., was doing business in town to-day.

If you want anything in the line of confectionary fruit or oysters call on W. A. Arthur.

The debating club will not hold meeting until after the present epidemic of diphtheria is past.

Joseph Smith, of Red Lake Falls, was in town a short time last Wednesday on his way to Crookston.

George Ossman the hide and fur man was in town this week and succeeded in buying a carload of hides.

The friends of Senator Davis claim that he will be his own successor without a doubt.

A number of the young folks of the village enjoyed a pleasant card party at Mrs. C. G. Rapp's last evening.

A few cords of wood from some of our delinquent subscribers would be very acceptable this cold weather.

Miss Josie Harris returned home last Friday from Ada where she has been visiting friends for several months past

The village school will probably commence again a week from next Monday if our sick people continue to improve.

The price of wheat still shows tired feeling that has existed for over a year. It may do better but at present the time seems remote.

Conductor Harry Norris has taken a weeks lay off for a visit to the twin cities and conductor H. T. Murry will run in his place this week.

Every true American will sympathise with James G. Blaine in his great struggle with death, The great statesman is having a hard battle and all wish that he may recover.

Frank Gravel was in town last Monday with a new line of coffee which he claimed was worth about twenty-five dollars a pound. He informed us that he lost money on all he sold.

Both houses of the legislature are fully organized and ready for work of the committees having been appointed the first of the week. Our members from this district have not fared very well in the committee appointments at the hands of the Republicans, They have everything in sight now and are fully prepared to inagurate the reforms they have promised so long. Will they do it?

The County Commissioners have appointed the Crookston Times, East Grand Forks Courrier and the McIntosh Times as the official papers for Polk county. The Times seems to have a "pull" with the commissioners.

The county division boomers are, we learn making preparations to soon move upon the state capital and capture the legislature in a body. These same parties have tried this same scheme several times before and have always failed, and they will again.

The Railroad Gazette states that 4.015 miles of track were laid in the U. S. during 1892, Washington leading all other states with 467 miles. The number of miles laid in Minnesota was 189, in Wisconsin 89, in North Dakota 92.

The country newspapers are nearly all taking a turn at roasting the express companies, and they well deserve all that can be said. They charge almost any price so long as it is high enough and it is about time the legislature did something to protect the people.

CITIZENS MEETING.

All citizens of the village of St. Hilaire who are interested in the future prosperity of the village are hereby requested to meet at the SPECTATOR office at 7 p. m. on Saturday evening Jan. 14th. Let all who can be present as matters of importance will come before the meeting.

In ten years the little state of Massachusetts increased ten million dollars more in wealth than the nine great agricultural states of Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Nebraska, North Carolina and Minnesota. The nine states have an area of 485,000 square miles, about 16,000,000 inhabitans and a valuation of $5,792,919,000. The reason of this is that Massachusetts is a money loaner while the nine states depend upon productive labor, Money earns while labor loses. —Living Issues.

Keep out the rags—this is the first duty of the government next year. The answers given to the joint committee of congress tell what everyone knew. Cholera is certain to appear in Europe next year. It is sure to spread along lines of travel, as it always has done, by way of the rags. Restrict immigration. Reduce steerage travel to its minimum limits. Relentlessly weed out all immigration below a certain level and coming from the dregs of European society This is hard. It is necessary —Philadelphia Press

We notice that Senator Lommen has introduced in the Senate a bill cutting the legal rate of interest to six per cent, and allowing eight percent on contract. While we fully believe that the people are paying altogether too high interest on money, we do not believe a bill of this kind will remedy the evil. A change effecting the volume of our national currency would lower the rate but under the present conditions if we want money we must bid for it with other states and if our state laws prevent us from paying more than 8 percent, the money will go elsewhere. At present money in this locality is hard to get at 10 per cent and an 8 per cent rate would certainly make it much closer,

THE DIPHTHERIA

All of the diphtheria patients are at present doing nicely in fact much better than could be expected. There has been no new cases reported for several days, and it looks as if the disease had been checked. The board of health have instituted a strict quarantine on everyone who comes in contact with a diphtheria patient and if a spread of the disease can be prevented it will die out in a week or two. Our citizens have generally been very careful to obey all instructions and every place in town has been thoroughly disinfected and cleaned. At present none of the patients are reported dangerous and all stand a good chance to recover. The trouble is not yet over however and all should take every precaution to prevent the disease from spreading.

The Minnesota Grain Growers' Association has, after careful deliberation and discussion, formulated a memorial and petition to the next legislature that contains three distinct propositions: First a protest against the building of a new capitol at this time. Second, a request that the state build warehouses at Duluth, Third, legislation compeling all railways to furnish storage for grain and facilities for loading on track at all local stations on their lines. The propositions are all good and timely. It will be more creditable to the state to have more comfortable and some luxurious farm houses than to have a magnificent and costly capitol; a state warehouse at Duluth, or some effective check on existing methods of wheat handling is imperative no matter how much prejudice there may be about the state engaging in such enterprises, and the best way to stop "wheat stealing out of the cars," is to make railroads as responsible for the delivery of wheat to consignees as they are for other kinds of freight.—Farm, Stock and Home.

The story is being told that when Mr. Cleveland was elected mayor of Buffalo, a fortune teller told him that he would be elected governor by an overwhelming majority, and later he would be chosen president, but would be defeated for re-election; he would run a third time and be elected, but would not live out his second term of office. Ex.

An old law of the reign of George III. has been revived in England, where public profanity has shown a tendency to increase of late. For every oath uttered in public a laborer must pay one shilling, a man a little above that grade must forfeit two shillings and a gentleman five. The choice oaths commonly used in public by English gentlemen are unquestionably well worth the money. With this law enforced in the United States there is reason to think the tariff laws might be wiped off the statute books.—Pioneer Press.

Are you going to put your whole farm into wheat next year and take the chances of profits or bankruptcy? Those who have closely figured out the problem say that with a yield of 15 bushels per acre it costs the farmer 58 cents to raise a bushel of wheat and market it. How many years in the past ten or fifteen have you threshed 15 bushels per acre, and what has the wheat you have raised cost you on an average of several years? It would be a business method for our farmers to take some of the stormy winter days and long evenings to figure out the profit and loss, real and probable, on every agricultural product that properly belongs to Minnesota farming. A little experience and a little study of the subject ought to make farming a successful industry to all. A large number do succeed; why shouldn't all? No business prospers unless its details are understood and attended to. Farming is no exception; if you want to win in it you must learn how, by making it a study We don't believe the methods of the majority of our farmers are the best they could have. We don't believe large wheat raising pays as well as a mixed agriculture selected with good judgment. The probable losses are too risky an element in wheat growing, the expense of harvesting comes when help is high priced and too much costly and perishable machinery is needed. Some men are trying to get rich with 80 acres of land and 100 acres of machinery. Experiance has proven that wheat growing as the principle industry of the farm is a failure. If you will figure up the profits of the average farmer for ten years in the wheat he has grown you will generally find that he hasn't made a living out of it. If he has made money in farming, as many have, he has made it out of something else. Take time to study thoroughly what you are doing and you will succeed,—Marshall Reporter.

Notice To Farmers.

We will pay you cash for hides, hay barley, oats, cord wood, good steers or anything marketable that you have to sell.

E. T. Spafford & Co.

CHEAP EXCURSIONS TO CANADA

Low round trip tickets will be on sale by the Great Northern from Crookston Grand Forks and stations north to boundary and west to Minot, to points in Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick Nova Scotia, on Nov. 27th, Dec, 6th Dec 18th to 22nd inclusive, and Dec 27th 1892. Tickets good for 90 days with transit limits of 15 days each way, going and returning, This will allow holders to stop in the Twin Cities, in Chicago to see the wonderful buildings of the World's Fair, and other points enroute.

Extension of time beyond 90 days made at small additional cost. For particulars and tickets see S. S. Buzza agent at St. Hilaire.

Notice is hereby given that I will offer for sale in the livery barn of D. Patterson in the village of St Hilaire Polk Co., Minn. on the 14th day of January 1893 at 10 o'clock a. m., one dark gray Percheron stallion named Fraze No. 9449.

The above described horse is to be sold to pay for board and care given to him by D. Patterson amounting to the sum of $237.60; and also expenses of sale.

Dated at St. Hilaire Minn. this 3rd day January 1893.

Daniel Patterson.

DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP.

Notice is hereby given that the copartnership heretofore existing between E. J. Holmes and Minton Holmes has been dissolved, E. J. Holmes assuming all the liabilities of the firm and all parties indebted to said firm are hereby notified to pay the debt to said E. J. Holmes,

E. J. Holmes,
Mrs. Minton Holmes.

I will pay the highest market price for veal calves, fresh eggs and butter.

S. M. Dainard.

INTERESTING ITEM.

GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY LINE

It is to the interest of parties contemplating going east to consider the great advantages the Great Northern offers going through. Its fast passenger service to St, Paul and to all points west to the Pacific coast, their free colonist cars, and magnificent Dining and Sleeping cars. The shortest route, close connections, quickest time and fare as low as the lowest, Any information cheerfully given,

S. S. Buzza
Agent.

CHATTEL LOANS

I am prepared to loan money on chattle security at reasonable rates. One years time. Call On

H. E. IVES.

WANTED. Salesmen. Local and Traveling, To represent our well known house. You need no capital to represents a firm that warrants nursery stock first-class and true to name. WORK ALL THE YEAR. $100 per month to the right man. Apply quick stating age. L. L. MAY & CO.
Nurserymen, Florists and Seeds men,
St, Paul Minn.
(This house is responsible.)

MARLIN SAFETY REPEATING RIFLES

Made in all styles and sizes. Lightest, strongest, easiest working, safest, simplest, most accurate, most compact, and most modern. For sale by all dealers in arms. Catalogues mailed free by

The Marlin Fire Arms Co.,
NEW HAVEN, CONN., U. S. A.

All who are indebted to E. M. Hoff are requested to call and settle up at once or the debt will be collected by law.

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
Crookston Minn December 5 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on January 24 1893 viz:

Daniel Johnson H D 12053 for the Lot 5 Sec. 6 and Lot 1 Sec 7 Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of said land viz:

J. A. Sjortrom Anton Sundahl J. A. Peterson, K. Sundahl all of St. Hilaire, Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn. Dec. 7 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on January 26 1893 viz. Charles Gomoll H D 11784 for the SE ¼ Sec 25 Tp 153 R 45.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land viz:

Gotlieb Gerlach, August Morel, Charles Peterson Henry Leppert all of Wylie Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn Dec 14 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on Feb 16 1893 viz:

Peter Sanderson H D 14150 for the NW ¼ SE ¼ NE ¼ SW ¼ and Lots 5 and 6 Sec 6 Tp 151 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Peter Anderson, John Strawberg, O. K. Ellenson H. Johnson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn. January 3 1893

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his inention to make final proof in support of his claim and has said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver of the U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn, on February 15 1893. viz:

Anton Peterson HD 12782 for the SE ¼ Sec. 7 Tp 152 R 43.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land viz:

Julius Nelson, James Evenson, Daniel Johnson, Erick Anderson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

CLOSING OUT SALE!

At E M Hoff's Store

My whole stock of

Dry Goods and Notions
Gents Furnshing, Goods
$5,000 worth of ready made clothing

Foot wear of all kinds and everything belonging to a full stocked general merchandise store will be closed out at cost in the next 90 days.

COME EVERY BODY

AND

SECURE GOOD BARGAINS.

E. M. HOFF

CROWN ROLLER MILL.

EQUIPPED WITH THE LATEST AND BEST IMPROVED MACHINERY.

Manufactures the well known
PERFECTION FANCY PATENT
and WHITE ROSEFLOUR.

Rye and Feed mill in connection.

Flour and Feed always kept on hand

Custom work a specialty.

FRICKER & WELCH Prop,

HILAIRE MINNESOTA

CHAS G. RAPP.

A large and complete line of

General Merchandise.

CONSISTING OF

Dry Goods, Groceries, Clothing
Boots & Shoes, Hats & Caps
Notions

THE ST. HILAIRE SPECTATOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY EVENING
H. E. IVES, Propr.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE:
Advance, $1
If not in Advance, $1 50 Per Year

Entered in the Post Office at St Hilaire, as Second Class Mail Matter

WEDNESDAY January 11 1893.

BREVITIES

CHATS ABOUT MEN.

How-Qua, a merchant of Canton, is the richest man in China. He is said to be worth $50,000,000.

Senator George Gray, of Delaware, closely resembles Congressman Boutelle, of Maine, in appearance.

Benjamin Poor, of Raymond, N. H., cast his first vote for Monroe in 1816, and has not missed a presidential election since. He is almost a centenarian.

Ex-Secretary W. C. Whitney always has the appearance of being extremely busy and preoccupied. He is undoubtedly a hard worker and an industrious thinker. And still he is a millionaire and more.

Dennis T. Flynn, the Republican delegate from Oklahoma territory, was fifteen years ago an office boy in Mr. Cleveland's office in Buffalo. He subsequently studied law, and finally entered upon the practice at Kiowa, Kan.

Among "chums" of his own rank the Duke of Westminster rejoices in the nickname of "Jack Sheppard," which was bestowed upon him in his school days at Eton in consequence of his extraordinary resemblance to the famous boy burglar delineated by Cruikshank.

John P. Mason, of Lynchburg, Va., a very strong man, saw a bull attacking a colored woman in a field recently. He ran to the woman's assistance, and the bull, leaving the woman, turned upon him. Mason grabbed the bull by the horns, threw him to the ground and broke the brute's neck.

Ten years ago Henry S. Ives was a clerk at $1,000 a year. Four years ago he was a guest of the warden of Ludlow jail. Today he can afford to pay $15,000 a year rent for the house in which he has installed his bride. Some Wall street financiers are inclined to think that before he is forty Ives is going to be one of the great capitalists.

RAILROAD JOTTINGS.

It is reported that the Minneapolis and St. Louis railroad is soon to go out of the hands of Receiver Truesdale and to be at once reorganized.

The Savannah, Americus and Montgomery railroad has been placed in the hands of a receiver and President S. H. Hawkins has been appointed to that position.

D. J. Mackey still has the presidency of roads covering 710 miles of main line—the Louisville, Evansville and St. Louis, the Peoria, Decatur and Evansville and the Chicago and Ohio River.

The Great Northern railway recently completed a branch from St. Helaire to Red Lake Falls, and has begun train service in connection with the St. Helaire and Thief River Falls trains from Crookston.

The Pennsylvania has nearly completed its improvements in Baltimore. It has built iron bridges over the grade crossings of ten streets and enters Baltimore on an elevated terminal two miles long.

There are now 320 divisions of the Order of Railway Conductors. In Indiana there are fifteen divisions, in Illinois twenty-six and in Ohio twenty. Pennsylvania leads all states, having thirty-two divisions. The membership now exceeds 20,000.

FASHION'S FANCIES.

Whipcord is the favorite material whereof the tailor made gowns of many young women are composed.

Some of the new Russian velours show as many as three or four different colors. Thus, black dahlia, golden brown and green will be combined in one cloth.

The return of the crinoline some time in the near future seems to be one of the accepted facts. Already fashionable dressmakers are stiffening their dresses as far as the knees.

The fashionable minktail trimming that was so popular at the beginning of the season is already practically out of the market, the supply of this little animal's tails being entirely exhausted.

Sealskin seems to be in greater favor than ever, and it apparently becomes more and more beautiful as the time goes on, probably because the manipulation of the skins unceasingly grows toward perfection.

For a middle aged lady nothing can be more fitting, and elegant at the same time, than a ruby velvet gown covered with black silk guipure lace, richly draped. A wide sash and stomacher of ruby velvet are worn over the corsage, which is of lace, finely gathered.—New York Tribune.

RECENT INVENTIONS.

A machine that sticks stamps with a deftness that is extraordinary.

A machine that points meat skewers as fast as you can feed the wood to it.

A spatula composed of a blade of rubber having a broad tin steel core and handle.

A bung like a truncated cone, that is adapted to screw into a bunghole that is made tapering.

A combined lead pencil and mucilage holder, the mucilage being in one end and the lead in the other.

A dinner bucket in which the central channel with an alcoholic lamp heats the surrounding compartments.

A horse's nose bag in which a rubber diaphragm tightly fitting about the animal's head prevents the waste of the oats.

A tip for crutches or canes, which can be regulated so as to be extended from the end of the cane or crutch when desired.

A safety device for window cleaners, consisting of a strap fastened to each side of the window frame and also to a hook in the belt of the cleaner.

TURF TOPICS.

Trainer Bither says Kremlin, 2:07¾, can go an eighth in fourteen seconds, a 1:56 clip.

R. M. Maynard, the once famous jockey, committed suicide at Columbus, Ga., recently.

Mascot, who was bought several years ago for $20,000 by Marcus Daly, was recently sold for $700.

The veteran jockey, William Hayward, has retired from the pigskin and has applied for a license as trainer.

Old Orchard, Me., has greatly improved its mile track since last summer, and the turns and stretches have been reloamed.

Nancy Hanks' stride when at speed is only 19½ feet, yet no trotter with a stride of twenty-two feet has ever come within several seconds of her record.

Nettie B, a 5-year-old daughter of Ansel, 2:20, was handled but six weeks before taking a record of 2:20¼ at Lexington. Her dam is by General Benton.

An Iowa genius has invented and patented a revolving grand stand. The stand is to travel on a circular track, and turns so as to command a view of the horses at every stage of the race.

One of the most remarkable horses is the old pacer Jewett. Sixteen years he has been on earth, and he has campaigned about thirteen of them, and yet he wins money in his class.

Dr. J. C. McCoy, proprietor of the kite track at Kirkwood, Del., and William Thompson, of Gloucester, N. J., have joined forces in trying to get the Delaware legislature to legalize pool selling.

STAGE GLINTS.

E. J. Henley will appear in "Captain Herne, U. S. A.," at the Union Square theater, New York, on Jan. 9.

During his engagement in Boston E. S. Willard will be seen for the first time in this country as Hamlet and Shylock.

May Brookyn has been engaged by A. M. Palmer for "Lady Windermere's Fan," which is to be produced in Boston in January.

Max Arnold, the German dialect comedian, who last appeared in public with "The Hustler" company, has become totally blind.

"Ye Earlie Trouble," which is undergoing revision and will be renamed by the author, Henry Guy Carleton, will shortly be taken on tour under Frank Cotter's management.

Joseph Jefferson has abandoned his contemplated California tour. He will rest in New York awhile, after which another season of twelve weeks will be played. His tour just ended is reported to have netted him $75,000.

Elsie Leslie, who was almost the pioneer of child actresses in "Little Lord Fauntleroy," having arrived at the age of fifteen, has retired temporarily from the stage to pursue in Paris the study of the French language and the art of acting.

THE NEWEST NOVELTIES.

Claret pitchers are cut intaglio.

Glass vases are tied with bows of metallic ribbon.

Dresden china is now fashionable for small wares and special dishes.

Bohemian glass is now made like an alexandrite, which is green by day and red by night.

A handsome whisky flask is of dark blue glass mounted in silver, with cuttings of fish, shells and seaweed.

One of the finest pieces of bric-a-brac is a caravel of silver, covered with pictures in enamel. These are from antique subjects and each sail is a different picture.

The latest fashions in pocketbooks are black seal: cigar cases of lizzard skin: card cases of salmon colored seal: memorandum books of lizzard or alligator skin. All are tipped with silver.

Modern delft is one of the most attractive wares now shown, since it is used in such a variety of interesting articles. An ink set simulates a steamship with small boat hanging from the davits.—Jewelers' Circular.

An Omission.

Seedy Individual (approachingly)—My dear sir, you look like an American. I am one of your countrymen. For heaven's sake help me to get something to eat.

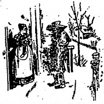
Tourist (recognizing)—Why, Dugley, old boy, is this you?

Seedy Individual—Yes, Cholly, old fellow.

Tourist—Why, what could have brought you to this?

Seedy Individual (wiping away a tear)—A book called "How to Make a Trip to Europe on $200," but—but it didn't say how to get back.—Million.

Looking for Work.



Farmer's Wife—Why don't you go to work?

Tramp—I would if I had the tools.

Farmer's Wife—What sort of tools do you want?

Tramp—Knife and fork.—Texas Siftings.

WE WANT YOU

to act as our agent. We furnish an expensive outfit and all you need free. It costs nothing to try the business. We will treat you well, and help you to earn ten times ordinary wages. Both sexes of all ages can live at home and work in spare time, or all the time. Any one any where can earn a great deal of money. Many have made Two Hundred Dollars a Month. No class of people in the world are making so much money without capital as those at work for us. Business pleasant, strictly honorable, and pays better than any other offered to agents. You have a clear field, with no competition. We equip you with everything, and supply printed directions for beginners which, if obeyed faithfully, will bring more money than will any other business. Improve your prospects! Why not? You can do so easily and surely at work for us. Reasonable industry only necessary for absolute success. Pamphlet circular giving every particular is sent free to all. Delay not in sending for it.

GEORGE STINSON & CO.,
Box No. 488, Portland, Me.

DO YOU WANT TO ADOPT A BABY?

Maybe you think this is a new business, sending out babies on application; it has been done before, however, but never have those furnished been so near the original sample as this one. Everyone will exclaim, "Well! that's the sweetest baby I ever saw!" This little black-and-white engraving can give you but a faint idea of the exquisite original, which we propose to send to you, transportation paid. The little darling rests against a pillow, and is in the act of drawing off its pink sock, the mate of which has been pulled off and flung aside with a triumphant coo. The flesh tints are perfect, and the eyes follow you, no matter where you stand. The exquisite reproductions of this greatest painting of Ida Waugh (the most celebrated of modern painters of baby life) are to be given to those who subscribe to Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893. The reproductions cannot be told from the original, which cost $400, and are the same size (17x22 inches). The baby is life size, and absolutely lifelike. We have also in preparation, to present to our subscribers during 1893, other great pictures by such artists as Percy Moran, Maud Humphrey, Louis Deschamps, and others of world-wide renown. Take only two examples of what we did during the past year, "A Yard of Pansies," and "A White House Orchid" by the wife of President Harrison, and you will see what our promises mean.

"I'M A BABY."

Those who subscribe for Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893 will possess a gallery of exquisite works of art of great value, besides a Magazine that cannot be equaled by any in the world for its beautiful illustrations and subject matter, that will keep everyone posted on all the topics of the day, and all the fads and different items of interest about the household, besides furnishing interesting reading matter, both grave and gay, for the whole family; and while Demorest's is not a fashion Magazine, its fashion pages are perfect, and we give you, free of cost, all the patterns you wish to use during the year, and in any size you choose. Send in your subscription at once, only $2, and you will really get over $25 in value. Address the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York. If you are unacquainted with the Magazine, send 10 cents for a specimen copy.

Ask Your Dealer For FEATHERBONE
WHIPS.
FEATHERBONE is made from Enameled Quills—nature's own toughest and strongest elastic material. Best wearing whips made for 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50. All styles for Buggy, Cart, Track, Team and Riding. Be sure and ask for a FEATHERBONE.
FOR SALE BY
S. M. HOFF
S..H

Going to Buy
A Dictionary?
GET THE BEST,
Webster's International.
A Choice Gift
A Grand Family Educator
A Library in Itself
The Standard Authority

WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY

SOLD BY ALL BOOKSELLERS.

The International is a new book from cover to cover, fully abreast of the times, and is the successor of the authentic "Unabridged." Ten years were spent in revising, 100 editors employed and over $300,000 expended before the first copy was printed.

Do not buy reprints of obsolete and comparatively worthless editions.

Send for free pamphlet containing specimen pages and full particulars.

G. & C. MERRIAM CO., Publishers,
SPRINGFIELD, MASS., U. S. A.

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn. Jan. 7 1893.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and said proof will be made before U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on Feb. 21 1893 viz:

John August Landbeck HD 1973 for the S NE ¼ and Lots 3 and 4 Sec. 3 Tp 152 R 44.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of said land viz:

John Ellason, Martin Ryland Elias Svenson, Ernest Svenson. All of St. Hilaire Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON, Register.

[illegible] LAND OFFICE.
Crookston, Minn., Nov. 17 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn on December 29 1892 viz:

Peter E. [illegible] HD 1622 for the NW ¼ Sec. 24 Tp 152 R. 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Halvor Aamodt, Ole J. Hegg Peter Anderson, Ole J. Johnson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn., Nov. 25 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn on Jany. 5 1893 viz:

Julius Nelson HD 11890 for the S. W ¼ sec. 8 tp 152 r 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of said land viz:

James Evenson B. I. Konlog, Nels Evenson Anton Peterson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

E. T. SPAFFORD S. M. DAINARD
E. T. SPAFFORD & CO.
DEALERS IN
LUMBER, LATH AND SHINGLES.
A complete stock of all kinds of Lumber Lath, Shingles, Mouldings, Building Paper Sash, Doors and Screens, Lime, Cement Stucco, Plastering Hair, Brick etc. always hand at the lowest market prices.
S. M. Dainard, Manager.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE, MINN.

E. T. SPAFFORD & CO.
WILL ALWAYS PAY THE
HIGHEST MARKET PRICES
FOR
All kinds of
CATTLE.
Also offer Cordwood, Hay, Oats,
Barley and flax.
Ground Feed for Sale
S. M. DAINARD.
Manager.

Reserved For
THE
ST. HILAIRE
TOWNSITE
COMPANY

W. A. ARTHUR.
DEALER IN
FRUITS, CONFECTIONARY
TOBACCO AND CIGARS.
STATIONARY OF ALL KINDS
Lunch Counter
Warm meals at all hours.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE MINNESOTA

JUSTUS L. JOHNSON
DEALER IN
pure medicines Fancy articles, perfumer and stationery, paints oils and dye stuffs.
Cigars, Candy, Fruit and Soft Drinks always on hand.
Barbershop in connection
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE

I CAN SAVE YOU
MONEY
If you wish to make
REAL ESTATE
LOANS.
For full particulars call on or address
H. E. IVES.
SPECTATOR OFFICE ST. HILAIRE.

HOLMES BRO'S
Dealer in
HARDWARE, TINWARE,
We are carrying a heavy and complete line of Heating and Cooking stoves.
GOOD GOODS LOW PRICES.
CALL ON US FOR BARGAINS
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE MINN.

FARMERS STORE
NEW GOODS AT HARD PAN PRICES.
If you want to save money do your trading with
HALL BROS.
DEALERS IN Dry Goods, Groceries
Notions.
BROADWAY [illegible]

S. M. HOFF
DEALER IN
HARDWARE
A new and complete stock of all kinds of Hardware, Tinware, Stoves, Fencing wire, Nails, in fact everything usuay kept in a first-class Hardware Store,
AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES
Call and examine Goods
and Get Our Prices.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE

DR. PRICE'S
Cream Baking Powder.
The only Pure Cream of Tartar Powder.—No Ammonia; No Alum.
Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

FLAT REBELLION.

A Woman Who Wouldn't Be Dictated to by Her Dressmaker.

Since the short waist, the Empire waist, is looming more and more largely on the horizon, it may be interesting to give the opinion on this subject of a Parisian woman of the world who has very decided views on all things relating to dress. Her views on the short waists are contained in the following fragment of a dialogue she had with the head of one of the firms of fashionable dress-makers in Paris

"I shall rebel, sir! Nothing in the world shall induce me to wear your Empire dress!"

"But, madame"—

"Your waist line under the arm! Why, it is preposterous. On trying on the costume you sent me last month I found to my horror that I looked like a big baby in it. You know I wrote to you at once saying that I should never make such a fright of myself, and now, as soon as I enter your place, you propose to make another such gown for me. It is madness!"

"But madam"—

"No, sir, no. You have had your own way a little too long, you dressmakers, and you have begun to think that we shall fall in with all your caprices. But let me tell you that we will not a aucun prix submit to the Empire dress. So do not say anything more, I have said my last word."

BETRAYED BY HER WALK.

How the Detective Can Spot a Shoplifter.

The genuine shoplifter is a woman who brings art in aid of her trade. She has the inside of her skirt armed with a huge pocket.

She does her work by slight of hand. She will sit down like the lady who was after the feathers and, when she has a lot of stuff spread out in front of her, she will deliberately brush some of it into the big pocket of her skirt.

Sitting very close to the counter, there is but little fear of detection, especially since she usually manages to distract the attention of the salesman.

Then she goes to another part of the store and plies her trade over gain.

The store detective divides his time equally between watching the lady's hands and her walk. She wobbles when she walks. This is the way the shoplifter is usually detected.

After she has loaded down her bag with silks and small articles the stuff is likely nine times out of 10 to "can't" over to one side, causing her dress to hang lopsided and reacting upon her walk in such a fashion as to make her gait unsteady and wobbly.

She steers left footed or right footed.

That is the signal for the detective, and he loses no time in following the woman and in demanding when he stops her that she submit to examination.

PENSION JOHN W. MORRIS, Washington, D.C.
Successfully Prosecutes Claims.
Late Principal Examiner U.S. Pension Bureau.
3 yrs in last war, 15 adjudicating claims, atty since.

CURES CATARRH
SOLD BY YOUR DRUGGIST.

LONDON BALM
LONDON BALM CO.
NEW YORK
CURES CATARRH HAY FEVER

FREE An extract of 70 pages of Dr. Nelson's Celebrated book "Facts for the sick," for 4 cents in stamps, Dr. Nelson corner of Washington and 3rd Aves., South Minneapolis, Minn.

TELEGRAPHY
AND ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING
Taught by practical Telegraphers and Electricians. No department of a Business College, but a thorough special course. Circulars Free. McAllisters School of Telegraphy, 413 Nicollet Av., Minneapolis, Minn.

FEET THAT ARE TOO SMALL.

Pedal Extremities Must Be Proportionate to the Size of the Person.

Louis Xavier, a Parisian sculptor, thus discusses the human form divine: "It is not true, as the world generally supposes, that ideal statues are composites. Yes, I have read that sculptors use a number of models for one statue, copying the head of one, the bust of another, the limbs of a third, and so on. Some sculptors may resort to such ridiculous patchwork, but I imagine the effect would be far from pleasing. Perfectly formed women are by no means as rare as is generally supposed. Not one woman in a dozen has been seriously deformed by tight lacing, and the high-heeled shoes that formerly played havoc with shapely limbs have about gone out of fashion. But the perfectly formed female foot is a rare avis. The world appears to have adopted the Chinese idea that the smaller the foot the prettier it is, and the result is that perfectly molded feet are cramped and abused until not a line of beauty is left. Now, any sculptor, any artist, will tell you that a foot too small to harmonize with the figure is an actual deformity. I would rather see the foot too large than too small. Think of Juno who stands 5 feet 7 inches and tips the scale at 150 pounds teetering to and fro on No. 1 or No. 2 feet? She should wear a No. 4 at the very least, and a No. 6 would not be out of proportion. Like the foot, the hand should harmonize with the body. A little string of a hand on a lusty Minerva who towers up nearly six feet tall is shocking to true artistic taste. Did you ever see a man whose nose was too small for his face? Well, it is just as necessary that the hand and foot should be in harmony with the figure as that the nose should fit the face. Some day people will learn this and then as many people will wear padded shoes as now limp along in footgear a size too small. Madam will then be as much ashamed of a hand too small as she now is of one too large."

Wise Provision

A philosophical observer has made a discovery, and communicates it to the world through the columns of a "contemporary." Like many such things, it looks so simple when once stated that one cannot help wondering why it was never found out before.

"Did you ever notice when a man smites his finger with a hammer while putting down a carpet under his wife's supervision, how quickly he thrusts the bruised and throbbing member into his mouth? People think it is because the application is soothing. But the movement is purely involuntary, like winking. The man cannot help it.

"The fact is that nature knows what a man is apt to say under such circumstances, and so has provided him with an automatic stopper. Whenever he hits his thumb hard enough to hurt,—and it doesn't take a very hard blow almost to kill a man when he is doing something he doesn't like to do,—by a sort of interlocking system his thumb flies into his mouth, and for the critical moment speech is cut off."

"August Flower"

Eight doctors treated me for Heart Disease and one for Rheumatism, but did me no good. I could not speak aloud. Everything that I took into the Stomrch distressed me. I could not sleep. I had taken all kinds of medicines. Through a neighbor I got one of your books. I procured a bottle of Green's August Flower and took it. I am to-day stout, hearty and strong and enjoy the best of health. August Flower saved my life and gave me my health. Mrs. Sarah J Cox, Defiance, O. ⊗

TAKE NO SUBSTITUTE.
THIS IS THE BEST $3. SHOE IN THE WORLD
WILL NOT RIP.

BEWARE OF FRAUD.
Ask for, and insist upon having W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES. None genuine without W. L. Douglas name and price stamped on bottom. Look for it when you buy. Sold everywhere.

W. L. DOUGLAS
$3 SHOE FOR GENTLEMEN.

A sewed shoe that will not rip; Calf, seamless, smooth inside, more comfortable, stylish and durable than any other shoe ever sold at the price. Every style. Equals custom-made shoes costing from $4 to $5.

The following are of the same high standard of merit:
$4.00 and $5.00 Fine Calf, Hand-Sewed.
$3.50 Police, Farmers and Letter-Carriers.
$2.50, $2.25 and $2.00 for Working Men.
$2.00 and $1.75 for Youths and Boys.
$3.00 Hand-Sewed, } FOR
$2.50 and 2.00 Dongola, } LADIES.
$1.75 for Misses.

IT IS A DUTY you owe yourself to get the best value for your money. Economize in your footwear by purchasing W. L. Douglas Shoes, which represent the best value at the prices advertised as thousands can testify. Do you wear them?

Will give exclusive sale to shoe dealers and general merchants where I have no agents. Write for catalogue. If not for sale in your place send direct to Factory, stating kind, size and width wanted. Postage Free. W. L. Douglas, Brockton, Mass.

THE CURE FOR CATARRH COLD IN HEAD HAY FEVER DEAFNESS HEADACHE
ELY'S CREAM BALM
50c

—ELY'S CREAM BALM—Cleanses the Nasal Passages, Allays Pain and Inflammation, Heals the Sores, Restores Taste and Smell, and Cures
CATARRH
Gives Relief at once for Cold in Head.
Apply into the Nostrils.——It is Quickly Absorbed.
50c. Druggists or by mail. ELY BROS., 56 Warren St., N. Y.

"WELL BRED, SOON WED." GIRLS WHO USE
SAPOLIO
ARE QUICKLY MARRIED. TRY IT IN YOUR NEXT HOUSE-CLEANING.

THE WEEKLY NEWS DIGEST.

EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK IN A CONDENSED FORM.

The Latest and Most Important News of the World, Culled From the Telegraph Reports of the Press Associations.

The Capital.

Some army officers object to serving as Indian agents.

It is reported that President Harrison will issue a proclamation suspending the bonding privileges to Canadian railroads.

The United States government brings suit against the Union Pacific and Western Union, asking that the contrast between the two companies be declared void, and that the Union Pacific be compelled to fulfill its contract with the government.

Record of Casualties.

The electric plant of the Fort Wayne Electric Company burned. The loss is $200,000.

Several passengers were injured by the wrecking of a Missouri Pacific accommodation train near El Dorado, Kas.

The first officer of the steamer Glengoil was swept overboard and drowned on the voyage between Newport News and Liverpool.

Near Java, Mont., on the Great Northern Railroad, a snow plow was buried by a snow slide and four men killed. The men were buried under many feet of snow.

Three workmen were badly injured at Ashland, Wis., while at work raising the Wisconsin Central track over Corkscrew bridge. The scaffolding upon which they were working gave way.

Andrew Passetti, an Italian, living in Skunk Hollow, near Pittsburg, saved two small children from being run over by an engine on the Junction road, but to save their lives he will probably lose his own.

A storm at Long Branch did great damage. The bluff at Chelsea Avenue was totally washed away. The water main and gas pipes have been washed out, and considerable damage done to the comyany's plant.

The tug Onward arrived at Travers City, Mich., with the bodies of Williams and Bullgren, who were drowned when the steamer Gilcher went down in Lake Michigan last fall. Their bodies were found on Fox Island.

Mrs. Huston widow of Gen. John B. Huston, of Lexington, Ky., one of the most distinguished lawyers of Kentucky, was burned to death. She probably fell asleep while sitting in front of the fire, when her clothing became ignited.

The engine of the westbound passenger train on the Northern Pacific jumped the track a mile below Buckley, Wash., and rolled forty feet down an embankment. Two express and mail cars followed the engine and took fire. No lives were lost.

People in Print.

The pope has founded an apostolic vicarate in the British Honduras and has appointed Mgr. Di Pietro to the office.

Maj. P. P. Frost, financial editor of the Boston Globe and widely known throughout New England, died of heart failure.

The prevailing opinion is that M. Floquet's election as president of the French chamber of deputies is certain.

William C. Pratt, widely known among Eastern educators, has been made vice president of the Armour institute, Chicago.

Frank Moran, who has been manager for J. L. Sullivan for some time past, has severed his connection with the ex-champion.

An Ogdensburg, N. Y., clergyman is delivering a series of ten sermons entitled "Ten Roads to Perdition From Ogdensburg."

Madeline Brohan, one of the most charming actresses of the Francais, turns out to be the daughter of a Scotchman named Brown.

Deacon White, who astounded Wall street a little more than a year ago by his failure for nearly $1,000,000, has now paid his debts.

Gilbert Pillsbury, one of the last of the old-time Abolitionists and an uncle of the attorney general of Massachusetts, is dead, aged seventy-nine.

Franklyn W. Smith of Boston is still agitating the establishment of a national gallery of history and art in Washington to cost ultimately $10,000,000.

Bishop Hortsman of Cleveland, Ohio, is endeavoring to introduce the English language exclusively into all the preaching services in the churches of his diocese.

Mrs. Langtry is rapidly recovering from her severe attack of illness. She expects shortly to be able to start on a trip on her yacht White Ladye, which she recently purchased.

Rev. Ellen Runkle, the first woman in Ohio (if not in the United States) to perform the marriage service, was herself married a few days ago, the ceremony having been performed by Rev. Mattie Mummaw. Both women belong to the United States Brethren church.

Sinful Doings.

Tascott is in Alaska, likewise in Colorado.

Upper social circles in St. Louis are agitated by a scandal which leads to a probably fatal shooting.

Louis Wagner shot and killed Mrs. Fannie Speer, then committed suicide. It is thought the deed was committed in a fit of jealousy.

A mob released a man named Casey from jail at Bethlehem, Pa. He was charged with assault. Casey's sweetheart headed the mob.

The residence of Dr. Bussery, at Clarksville, Tenn., was robbed of $10,000 and burned. The building and contents were worth $15,000.

A Chicago detective says that Tascott did not kill Mr. Snell, and that the real murderers are in Chicago and furnish Tascott money to keep away.

Patrolmen Peter H. Hill and Michael Dempsey, of Cleveland, O., who were bound over to the criminal court for the killing of the Italian, Frank Carsse, were completely exonerated by the grand jury.

In a family row at Huntsville, Tex., Albert McDonald shot and killed his father and fled. The penitentiary bloodhounds were put upon his trail, and he was caught in a short time. He confessed the crime.

While drunk, at Sharpsville, Pa., John Quinn brutally beat his wife and then cast her out in the cold. The woman is now lying in a critical condition and her death is hourly expected. Quinn was arrested and is now in jail.

Larris Cain, deputy city collector, insurance agent and once a highly respected citizen of Rich Hill, Mo., has been arrested charged with a $4,000 embezzlement and larceny. When arrested Cain was suffering from the effects of a dose of morphine taken with suicidal intent.

As Father Lawler was celebrating mass at St. Thomas Aquinas' Church, at Pittsburg, Thomas Quinlan attempted to commit a murderous assault upon him. Quinlan used a hatchet. He was overpowered before the priest was injured.

Charles C. Ferris, superintendent of the pharmaceutical production department of the Meyer Bros. Drug Co., St. Louis, committed suicide by shooting himself in the head with a 38 calibre revolver. The theory of his suicide most generally accepted is that he was temporarily insane.

The jury in the case of the state against Thornton Stringfellow, for killing Charles H. Pratt editor of the Gainesville, Fla., Daily Leader, was out only fifteen minutes. Stringfellow caught Pratt with his wife and killed him. The verdict of the jury was not guilty.

A. Baggatine, an aged Italian, was sandbagged by four men at Winnipeg the other night and badly beaten. His son left recently for Italy, and it is supposed the assailants were after money, which the son left with the old man.

News has reached Spokane, Wash., of the murder of a miner named Dickinson by Perkins Bothers in Warren's county, Idaho. The dispute arose over a mining election, and during the altercation Dickinson was shot. This is the second murder within a few weeks in this section, and much more trouble is expected, owing to the prevalence of the lawless element.

Buffalo, N. Y., detectives arrested in that city four men who are believed to be the ringleaders of a singularly bold gang of thieves, who, for several months have been stealing on an extensive scale from the Lake Shore and Nickel Plate cars between Dunkirk and Erie. The names of the arrested men are Charles Flynn, Frank King, Charles Ready, alias "Spike," and William Boardman, alias "Skinny."

The Foreign Budget.

The Canadian government suspends sections of the customs law which were objectionable to the United States.

The Polish painter, Wierzwinski, while out riding at Warsaw was attacked by wolves near Bielostock, and both he and his horse were devoured.

All passengers ticketed for the United States by English steamers have to be fumigated at Halifax. Their goods are all placed in fumigating machines.

The Berlin correspondent of the London Times says that two fresh cases of cholera were reported in Hamburg and one in Wandsneck. There were two deaths from cholera in Altoona.

Typhus is raging in several of the interior cities of Mexico. The morality is 25 to 30 per cent. In Zacatecas and Guanajuato the epidemic is at its worst, more than 500 cases being reported at present at the former place.

An act granting a bonus of $125,000 to the Ottawa & Parry Sound Railway, which will traverse a rich timber district and shorten the distance between New York and the Northwestern by several hundred miles, has been passed at Ottawa, Ont.

A transfer was made in the City of Mexico, the other day of all interests in the concession for a railway from Guaymas to Deming, a distance of about 1,400 miles. The purchaser is a strong English organization called the Mexico Northern Pacific Railway company.

Mr. Jules Simon says in regard to the recent dynamite outrages in Paris: "It is not the weakness of political administration that causes them—it is the want of a moral leadership. I look with pain upon the state in which I shall leave this world when I die."

The Paris Figaro says that the next batch of persons selected by the government for prosecution for complicity in the Panama affair includes four more members of the chamber of deputies and an ex-minister. The Figaro also says it is reported that M. Floquet, president of the chamber of deputies, will withdraw from parliament in consequence of the connection of his name with the scandal.

Sporting Scraps.

The test case against the four winners in the Pearce cup race for furious riding has been dismissed.

Rumor sayeth F. Ed. Spooner and "D. B." Wylie are to double up for a tandem record trip from Chicago to New York early next season.

A shooting tournament, open to the world, will be held in Chicago next June. It will last 30 days, and $50,000 in prizes will be given.

A match skating race of 25 miles for $1,000 has been arranged between Alex Paulsen, of Norway, and Harry Hamburg, to take place at Glens Falls, Jan. 24.

The total receipts of the Yale-Princeton game were $38,000. The expenses, including rent of field, amounted to $9,000, leaving a balance $29,000 to be divided among the two colleges.

Many parents have reported to the Vienna police recently the loss of their daughters, between eight and twelve years of age. It is feared that the children are the victims of a criminal conspiracy.

Jim McHale, of Philadelphia, who whipped Gilman in Minneapolis, is trying to arrange a match with Billy Frazier, the ex-parson. He wants the contest to be for a purse of $1,000 and a stake of $500 a side.

About the Railroads.

The Transcontinental association is no more.

Railroad earnings in the United States during the year ended June 30, last, were $1,222,711,693.

It is rumored that C. P. Huntington, of the Southern Pacific, has obtained control of the Duluth & Winnipeg and Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic railways.

General News.

Dr. W. L. Challis failed at Atchison, Kas., owing $135,000.

Leadville's gold and silver output last year amounted to $8,160,388.

The Philadelphia beer pool has been declared a trust by the courts, and therefore illegal.

The Haytien building at the World's Fair grounds was the first erected by foreign powers to be completed.

Republicans and Populists combined and organized the Montana Assembly, electing Matthews, a Populist speaker.

The American Sugar Refining Company announces to stockholders that the dividends on the preferred stock will hereafter be declared quarterly instead of semi-annually.

President Bonney, of the World's Congress Auxiliary, has issued the program of arrangements for the congress of horticulturists to be held four days during the Expositian, beginning Aug. 16.

A young farmer named Garber, living ten miles west of Ft. Scott, Kan., having learned that his wife and his brother-in-law, Charles Kirby, loved each other, traded his wife to Kirby for a horse.

A large vein of natural gas was struck in well No. 12 at Sandy Creek, N. Y., recently. The tools were thrown high in the air and the drillers ran for their lives. The noise of the escaping gas was heard two miles away.

J. B. Greenhut, of Peoria, Ill., ex-president of the Whisky Trust, is at the Grand Pacific, Chicago. After being in consultation with the various officers of the trust he entered an emphatic denial to the charge that the trust was behind speculative movement in whisky.

A constitutional convention of the League of American Wheelmen has been called for Feb. 20 at Philadelphia. A three days' session will likely be held. The annual meeting of the national assembly and election of officers will also occur at the same time and place.

A call has been issued for a conference in Pittsburg of all persons who will join in the formation of a political party for the abolition or suppression of the drink traffic in the United States, and for such other moral, economic, financial and industrial reforms as are needed in the country.

A deal which is expected to materially increase the volume of the pork packing business of St. Louis became known recently. The firm of Francis Whittier & Sons have sold out their hog plant at the National stock yards in East St. Louis and it is understood that Swift & Co., of Chicago, Kansas City, Omaha, will take possession of the property and greatly improve it preparatory to embarking in the business of packing beef on a very large scale.

ELECTRICAL ETCHINGS.

Briefly Told.

Sir William and Lady Gordon Cumming have planned another visit to this country.

Ex-Prime Minister Crispi and a party of Italian friends propose to visit the Chicago exposition.

William F. Harrity has an income of $25,000 a year as president of a Philadelphia business concern.

More people recognize Col. Robert G. Ingersoll at sight than any other citizen who walks or rides about New York city.

Gen. Trochu's estimate of Bismarck is that he might have been a great man, but he has become only a great Prussian.

Pasteur is said to have been affected to tears by the reception given him at the Paris institute on his seventieth birthday.

Mrs. Leland Stanford has a passion for shoes, and she probably has more pairs at a time than Queen Elizabeth ever dreamed of possessing.

Sara Bernhardt is a great believer in the value of advertising. She is even making what she can out of the quarrel between her son and his young wife, which recently led to a separation.

Baron Alphonse de Rothschild has presented 1,000,000 francs to the board of public charities of Paris, the interest of which is to be divided among poor women in the lymph hospitals of that city.

And once more the report that Emin Pasha is dead is denied. Emin takes his pen in hand to let us know that he is in good health and hopes that these few lines will find us enjoying the same blessing.

M. Dupuy, the new minister of commerce, is one of the conspicuous self-made men in the existing French cabinet. His father was a liveried servant of the prefecture of Puy, while his mother kept a small tobacco shop.

The empress of Austria (now residing at her palace in Corfu, on which, from first to last, quite $2,500,000 has been expended) has ordered her steam yacht, the Miramare, to be prepared for a cruise to Maderia, the Canary islands and the West Indies.

M. Clemenceau is one of the few men who cannot be interviewed. When a reporter goes to see him and asks: "What do you think of such and such things?" M. Clemenceau always answers: "Let me hear what you think first." And the conversation usually stops there.

Contempt for Goddard.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Jan. 9.—Champion Corbett, who has been in town several days with his theatrical company, says in regard to the assertions of Joe Goddard that Corbett was afraid to meet him: "I shall pay no attention to him. I know he has posted $2,000 in Chicago, but I cannot bother with him. He's another one like Slavin. He will be given the laugh. I expect to meet Jackson or Mithcell next fall."

Chicago, Jan. 9.—James J. Corbett, the champion pugilist, said to-night: "I will fight Mitchell in October. I saw Hall in Boston a few days ago, and he tells me Mitchell really means to fight; so that leaves little doubt about our meeting. I think there will be great interest in the fight, as it will be a sort of international affair." He further said that Goddard had no claim upon him, and the men entitled to his attention before Goddard are Mitchell and Peter Jackson.

Hard Lines for Shipping.

London, Jan. 9.—The extreme depression into which the shipping industry of England and the continent has fallen is shown by a startling array of statistics just made public. There are numbers of idle steamers in every seaport in the kingdom. On the Tyne alone there are 150 laid up, with a total tonnage of 350,000. Seventeen vessels are laid up at London. At Liverpool there are 156 steamers idle, with a total tonnage of 150,000. The total number of vessels laid up at English and Scotch ports is 470, and the total tonnage is 850,000. Besides these there are laid up in continental ports 60 steamers, with a total tonnage of 100,000. As a result of a laying up of so many vessels there are 500,000 men idle, which means a loss of £500,000 in wages monthly.

AN ILLINOIS NECROMANCER.

Rockford, Ill., Jan. 9.—Col. Seymour of this city, a mind reader, has begun preparations for a feat he proposes to accomplish next summer. He will June 21 throw himself into a state of insensibility, and will be buried. The grave is to be watched by a committee day and night while a crop of barley is sowed, ripened and is harvested over it. Mr. Seymour will then be disinterred and will return to life. His feat, it is claimed, has been performed by the fakirs of India under conditions that prevented imposition, and Mr. Seymour says he has such control over his mind and nervous system that he is confident he can perform the act.

A Wretch's Deed.

Cleveland, Jan. 9.—John Woolley, a shiftless fellow, this evening cut his wife's throat with a razor and then severed his own jugular with the same weapon, dying in a short time. The couple had had a quarrel, Mrs. Woodley telling her husband that she was tired of supporting him and that there must be a change. This enraged the fellow. Mrs. Woodley cannot live. Woodley was forty-two years of age and had several grown children. who helped their mother support the family.

The Latest Combine.

Pittsburg, Jan. 9.—A movement is on foot to form a combination of manufacturers of wire and cut nails. The Western firms in Cleveland, Joliet and Pittsburg consolidated about a year ago, and a proposition has been made to the latter to combine with the Washburn-Moen company. It is proposed to consolidate the three industries, with a capital of $25,000,000. The reasons given for the combine are the overstocked markets and ruinous prices prevailing.

Peculiar, This.

Louisville, Jan. 9.—A telegram from Vice President Leech, of the Louisville City National bank, dated Baldwin, Fla., says the man under arrest at Starke as W. H. Pope, the defaulting teller of the bank is not the dishonest banker. An extra edition of a morning paper contained an advertisement of the bank withdrawing the reward offered for Pope's capture. This seems a little peculiar, and some believe that the man arrested is Pope, but the bank officers do not want to identify him yet.

The Pope's Episcopal Jubilee.

Rome, Jan. 9.—The pope opened his episcopal jubilee to-day by giving a reception to children in the Consistorial hall. There were present 500 children, with their parents. A choir of children sang a hymn dedicated to Christopher Columbus, after which the pope distributed medals among the children and dismissed them with his blessing.

Alleged Forger of Checks.

La Crosse, Wis., Special, Jan. 9.—Last night on a dispatch from Elroy William Wood was arrested for trying to pass a bogus check at the bank. It is believed he is the man who beat the Mauston bank out of $400 by a forged check.

A Statue of Longfellow.

Hastings, Minn., Special, Jan. 9.—5-cent subscription is to be taken up in the public schools of this (Dakota) county on or before next Wednesday towards a bronze statue of Longfellow at the world's fair.

Elections in Sweden.

Stockholm, Jan. 9.—Elections began yesterday for members of the folkriksdag, or popular branch of the Swedish parliament. The leading question at issue is the extension of the franchise. The Liberals and Socialists are polling a large vote, and the Socialists have carried Gothenburg, Malmo and probably Stockholm.

Purchase of Wisconsin Pine.

Chippewa Falls, Wis., Special, Jan. 9.—F. W. Muller of Davenport, Iowa, has purchased from the Withee estate a large tract of pine on the Eau Claire river.

National Timber Park.

Grand Forks, N. D., Special—The chamber of commerce passed resolutions to-night urging that congress perpetuate the reservation in the Turtle mountains for a national timber park, also resolutions asking that national control of quarantine regulations be assured, in view of danger from cholera.

Charlie Mitchell Again in Jail.

New York, Special—George W. Atkinson an English sporting authority, has written a letter to Richard K. Fox, in which he says: "Charley Mitchell is in Pentonville jail and twice a day he is compelled to work on the tread mill, but it is probable that his work will not be so severe during the balance of his confinement."

THREE TROUBLES.
3 Three things which all workingmen know give the most trouble in their hard-strain work are: Sprains, Bruises, and Soreness.
THREE AFFLICTIONS
3 Three supreme afflictions, which all the world knows afflict mankind the most with Aches and Pains are: Rheumatism, Neuralgia and Lumbago.
THREE THINGS
3 to do are simply these Buy it, try it and be promptly and permanently cured by the use of
ST. JACOBS OIL CURES ALL PAIN

BANDITS OF THE SAHARA.

The Touaregs Said to Be the Worst of all Organized Robbers.

The Touaregs are the most formidable band of professional brigands in the world. They occupy the entire central part of the Sahara, from Ghadames on the north to Timbuctoo on the south. It is impossible to give an approximate idea of their numbers. Dr. Supan estimates the population of the entire Sahara at 2,500,000, and it is probable that the twenty-six sub families of the great tribe of the Touaregs number at least 400,000 souls, says the Globe-Democrat.

All the trade routes from Algeria and Tunis and some of those from Morrocco and Tripoli pass through their territory. It was these fanatical nomands who murdered Miss Tinne, the handsome young heiress of Holland, whose devotion to the cause of discovery led to her tragical fate in the desert. The Touaregs murdered the entire Flatters expedition.

They killed a half dozen Catholic priests who were toiling across the desert to found missions in the Soudan. Lieutenant Palat, and a little later, Camille Doulls, both of whom were undertaking the hazardous journey to Timbuctoo, met death by violence in the Touareg country. But their hand is turned no more against the whites than against every traveler in their land who has plunder worth seizing.

The Central Sahara is a land where violence is supreme, where treachery is the only law. Not one of the murderers of white travelers has been punished. Earnest Mercier and M. Le Chatelier have graphically described the reign of terror in this great region. Many thousands of Arabs or Arab-Berbers, who live by camel raising, spend their lives in the Thuareg country or around its borders. They guard their herds with arms in their hands, but very often the guards are killed by a sudden descent of Touaregs, and the herds are driven away to enrich the bandit camps. Only those Arab tribes are safe that pay heavy blackmail to be let alone.

Trading caravans are always on the lookout for black specks on the horizon that may indicate the approach of the desert pirates. As soon as a suspected group appears in the distance the camels are collected and made to lie down, the goods are piled up behind them, and inside this double rampart the traders open fire when the enemy comes within range. More than half the time the Touaregs win the day, and the booty that falls to them they regard as an ample recompense for the losses they sustain.

Catarrh Cannot Be Cured

with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is not a quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years, and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing Catarrh. Send for testimonials, free.
F. J. CHENEY & CO., Props., Toledo, O.
Sold by druggists, price 75c.

SYRUP of FIGS
ONE ENJOYS
Both the method and results when Syrup of Figs is taken; it is pleasant and refreshing to the taste, and acts gently yet promptly on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, cleanses the system effectually, dispels colds, headaches and fevers and cures habitual constipation. Syrup of Figs is the only remedy of its kind ever produced, pleasing to the taste and acceptable to the stomach, prompt in its action and truly beneficial in its effects, prepared only from the most healthy and agreeable substances, its many excellent qualities commend it to all and have made it the most popular remedy known.

Syrup of Figs is for sale in 50c and $1 bottles by all leading druggists. Any reliable druggist who may not have it on hand will procure it promptly for any one who wishes to try it. Do not accept any substitute.
CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
LOUISVILLE, KY. NEW YORK, N.Y.

ALLEN'S IRON TONIC BITTERS
The most Elegant Blood Purifier, Liver Invigorator, Tonic and Appetizer known. The first Bitters containing Iron ever advertised in America. R. P. ALLEN, Druggist & Chemist, St. Paul, Minn.

N. W. N. U. No. 2.—1893.

The best informed authorities state that no claims for damages against the United States growing out of the raids of bandits along the border have been presented to the government at Washington. The Mexican legation was however, ordered to point to the United States the evils arising from the raids and to request that vigilance along the border be increased and more troops be sent to prevent further incursions from American territory.

The Sturgeon Bay and Lake Michigan Canal and Harbor Company have deeded to the government the Sturgeon Bay canal, 12 miles in length, extending from Sturgeon Bay to Lake Michigan, the consideration being $81,833. The last river and harbor bill contained an appropriation for this purchase.

Col. Nicholas Smith, the elegant son-in-law of the late Horace Greeley, who got himself disliked as consul at Three Rivers, Canada, by calling the place filthy, has been transferred to Liege, Belgium.

James Beardsley, a millionaire resident of Bridgeport, died from injuries received in a struggle with three burglars on the night of Dec. 23. Mr. Beardsley was seventy years of age.

Anton von Schmerling, who is noted as one of the founders of the Austrian constitution, is dying in Vienna.

John Caldwell, of Hartford Township, Mich., had a great distrust of banks, and secreted $3,000 in currency on his son's farm. He was suddenly stricken with apoplexy and died before divulging the hiding place of the money, and so far the most diligent search has failed to find it.

"An excellent remedy" is what Mr. W. H. Ames 712 S. 17th St., St. Louis, Mo., says of it, in these words: "I have used Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup and found it to be an excellent remedy for coughs and colds."

Jim Hall has wagered $100 with Billy Madden that Mitchell will fight Corbett.

A bad case of rheumatism cured with 75 cents. Mr. Aug. Schenfle, St. Louis, Mo., writes: "Last week I had a very bad attack of rheumatism. Used three bottles of Salvation Oil which stopped the pain and cured me."

The duke of York has been promoted to a captaincy in the British army.

For Throat Diseases and Coughs use Brown's Bronchial Troches. Like all really good things, they are imitated. The genuine are sold only in boxes.

Jan. 4 to 14 are the dates for the next Philadelphia cycle show.

Don't Believe It.
No matter what people may say to the contrary, constipation is easily and thoroughly curable. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters gives complete relief. Use it promptly, persistently. Avoid drastic purgatives. They gripe, weaken, necessitate increasing doses, disorder the stomach. Not so the Bitters. This thorough medicine is also a preventative of malaria, and removes biliousness, dyspepsia, rheumatism and kidney trouble.

Food Made Me Sick
"First I had pains in my back and chest, then faint feeling at the stomach, and when I would eat, the first taste would make me deathly sick. Of course I ran down rapidly, and lost 25 pounds. My wife and family were much alarmed and I expected my stay on earth would be short. But a friend advised me to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and soon my appetite came back. I ate heartily without distress, gained two pounds a week. I took 8 bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla and never felt better in my life. Today I am cured and I give to Hood's Sarsaparilla the whole praise of it."
C. C. Aber.
C. C. ABER, grocer, Canisteo, N. Y.
Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures
HOOD'S PILLS cure Nausea, Sick Headache, Indigestion, Biliousness. Sold by all druggists.

Signs of Health.
You don't have to look twice to detect them—bright eyes, bright color, bright smiles, bright in every action. Disease is overcome only when weak tissue is replaced by the healthy kind. Scott's Emulsion of cod liver oil effects cure by building up sound flesh. It is agreeable to taste and easy of assimilation.
Prepared by Scott & Bowne, N. Y. All druggists.

FROM THE "PACIFIC JOURNAL."
"A great invention has been made by Dr. Tutt. That eminent chemist has produced
Tutt's Hair Dye
which imitates nature to perfection; it acts instantaneously and is perfectly harmless."
Price, $1. Office, 39 & 41 Park Place, N. Y.

THE BLIZZARDS.

The present winter promises to be fertile in blizzards.

Perhaps they are a good thing, clearing the air of many of the cholera germs that might work us woe next summer.

But they also bring colds and pulmonary trouble in their train.

When you are thus afflicted get a bottle of Reid's German Cough and Kidney cure.

It is the best thing for every malady that arises from a cold.

For throat troubles it is unrivalled.

You need not fear diphtheria when you have this great remedy in the house.

As for croup it is absolutely robbed of its terrors.

Try it once and you will be convinced.

You need not get up in the night to watch over the bedside of your child.

No! you can go to sleep in perfect confidence.

Get it of any druggist.

The small bottles are twenty-five cents, the large ones are fifty cents.
SYLVAN REMEDY CO., Peoria, Ill.

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till cured. DR. J. STEPHENS, Lebanon, Ohio.

PISO'S CURE FOR
Consumptives and people who have weak lungs or Asthma, should use Piso's Cure for Consumption. It has cured thousands. It has not injured one. It is not bad to take. It is the best cough syrup. Sold everywhere. 25c.
CONSUMPTION

Minn Hist Society
HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

St. Hilaire Spectator.

VOLUME XI. ST. HILAIRE, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 18, 1893. NUMBER 26.

THE NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

DIGEST OF THE NEWS FROM ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

All Important Occurrences of the Past Week, Boiled Down and Arranged for Rapid Reading.

Washington.

The Indian agent at Pine Ridge is charged with corrupt practices.

The Cramps will build the cruisers Iowa and Brooklyn, as the contracts for both of the war vessels will be awarded to that firm.

A demand is made upon our government for $1,000,000 indemnity for the killing of a British subject in Jersey City, who, it is charged, was hanged without a trial by jury.

Accidental Happenings.

Boston has a $1,655,000 fire.

Conductor William R. Bernie, of the Fort Wayne road, fell between the cars and was killed at Lima, Ohio.

The steamer New Mary Houston was sunk at Cincinnati by the ice. She was valued at $25,000.

The ice gorge in the Ohio river at Cincinnati breaks and over $300,000 damage to property is done.

One man was killed and two others were injured at Montreal by a train running into a street car.

W. Miller fell down stairs in the Vance hotel, at Burlington, Iowa, and was killed.

Several Fall River, Mass., firms suffered losses by fire, the total being $150,000.

Alfred Lozon, a mail carrier, perished on the ice between Mackinac City and Mackinac Island. Three others were nearly dead when they reached shore.

At a party given to his son at Pottstown, Pa., Nathan Pollock proposed to drink the young man's health and dashed off a glass of what he thought to be wine. It was carbolic acid, and Pollock died almost instantly.

A moonshiner in Buchanan county, Va., met death in a peculiar manner. Pursued by officers, he hid in an old cabin. The posse stopped several hundred feet from the spot. A bet was made by one of the officers that he could put a bullet through a knothole in the old cabin. He won his bet and killed the moonshiner, who was looking through the hole.

Personal Mention.

John P. Squire, the Boston pork packer, is dead. He was worth $10,000,000.

Mrs. Warren, wife of the Rev. Dr. W. F. Warren, died in Cambridge, Mass. She was editor of the Heathen's Woman Friend.

Burr Bros.' dry goods store at Odessa, Miss., was burned. Loss, $75,000.

Ex-Prime Minister Crispi and a party of Italian friends propose to visit the Chicago exposition.

William F. Harrity has an income of $25,000 a year as president of a Philadelphia business concern.

More people recognize Col. Robert G. Ingersoll at sight than any other citizen who walks or rides about New York city.

Charles G. Douglass of Philadelphia, who was wrongfully accused of robbing the city, died from chagrin at the charges against his honor.

Edward Scull of Pennsylvania is the oldest representative in congress. The youngest is Joseph Bailey of Texas, who was born in 1863.

The remains of Miss Mary Allen West arrived in San Francisco Sunday from Japan, and have been forwarded to Miss Frances E. Willard at Chicago.

Egbert Judson, a San Francisco capitalist, died in that city yesterday. He was a bachelor eighty-one years old. He leaves a fortune of several million dollars.

Philip Schuyler, a descendant of Gen. Schuyler, of Revolutionary fame, died last week in Watervliet, N. Y., where he had resided a lifetime in the old family homestead.

Mme. Cosima Wagner rules at Baireuth in the most autocratic manner, and will not permit the slightest exception to her rules. At rehearsals neither performers nor members of the audience are allowed to carry wraps, parasols, purses or small belongings of any kind.

Among the Wicked.

Ex-Clerk Waldron, of the New Haven, Conn., board of public works, is $4,500 short in his accounts.

E. R. Gimberson, an Omaha liveryman, shot and killed Mrs. Nellie Beach and committed suicide.

Harry J. Buckley, of the Diamond Plate Glass Company of Elwood, Ind., is missing. He is reported to be a defaulter in the sum of $500.

The Illinois supreme court affirms the sentence of five years each of thirteen white caps, who whipped Henry G. Burger in Dubois county.

The trial of De Lantry for the murder of William Love is expected to occur during the present term of the circuit court at Woodstock, Ill.

John Dougherty, head cook in the Transit house at South Omaha, Neb., was assaulted in the hotel hallway by Charles Stewart, the head porter, and stabbed to death.

John Chaffee, a leading merchant of New Orleans, and a planter, was shot and probably fatally wounded the other night in the parish of St. John, about twenty miles above the city. The shooting is shrouded in mystery.

"Famous" Smith, who killed J. J. Gentry at Weber's Falls, Ark., and swore he would never be taken alive, has been captured at the Falls by a posse of ten officers. He was surprised at night and made no resistance.

At Roslyn, Wash., John D. Denetro assaulted his wife with a hatchet, inflicting two serious wounds. Thinking she was dead, he put a bullet through his brain. Domestic infelicity was the cause of the tragedy. Mrs. Denetro will recover. Denetro is an Italian, and six years ago came from St. Louis, where he owned a wholesale liquor house.

Thieves and thugs are evidently floating to the San Juan in great numbers. It appears that a band of robbers have located in the mountains between Green river and the Henry mountains. Several persons have been held up, and the entire outfit of an Idaho prospector named Berry was taken from him. His loss is about $700.

From Other Shores.

The French cabinet resigns in consequence of the Panama canal scandal. The trial of Charles de Lesseps and others begins.

Paymaster Harris, of the British war ship Nymphite, has been sentenced to eighteen months' hard labor and dismissal from the service for falsifying his accounts and embezzlement.

The Austrian government has signed the agreement with the Rothschild syndicate for the conversion of 486,000,000 gulden paper rentes and 60,000,000 gulden 4 per cent gold rentes.

The Berlin correspondent of the Times says the Prussian budget is expected to show a deficiency of 3,000,000 marks, due to the decrease of receipts from state railways.

Prof. Von Bulow is suffering from another attack of insomnia and hyperaesthesia. He is under medical treatment at Pankow. In his absence Herr Moskowski conducts the philharmonic concerts.

An attempt was made to enter the Wheal Owl mine at Penzance, Cornwall, where eighteen miners lost their lives by the flooding of the pit. It was found that the water had risen eight feet since the previous night, rendering it impossible to enter the mine.

Elections were held recently for members of the folkriksdag, or popular branch of the Swedish parliament. The leading question at issue is the extension at the franchise. The Liberals and socialists are polling a large vote, and the socialists have carried Gothenburg, Malmo and probably Stockholm.

Tefik Pasha, who was to have represented the sultan of Turkey at the wedding of Prince Ferdinand, did not arrive until the next day after. He says that he took the wrong train. The explanation is regarded as a lame one. After the arrival of the crown prince and bride in Bucharest Tefik Pasha will have an audience with them.

A German savant proposes to disinfect the Elbe and other rivers by means of electricity. He claims that an electric current passed through the water will cause a chemical change that will kill cholera and other germs. He says that sewers can be disinfected in a similar manner.

The Reichsanzeiger, referring to the recent article in the Vorwaerts, in which it was said that many men prominent in public life had been beneficiaries of the Guelph fund, says that the government had supposed that the receipts considered last spring concluded the whole affair. Deception and forgeries, the Reichsanzeiger continues, are evident from the fact that when any draft upon the fund for secret political purposes, the only vouchers were receipts signed by the chancellor or an official he designated for the purpose. These vouchers were burned after the accounts had been made up. No form of the receipts mentioned by the Vorwaerts ever existed.

Labor.

A strike of engineers is threatened on the Western Maryland railroad.

Molders at Chattanooga, Tenn., threaten to strike against a reduction in wages.

The management of the Vandalia road has determined to follow the example of the Pennsylvania and discharge all freight handlers who refuse to leave their unions.

Gossip of the Sports.

William Pitts and Dan Bailiff, two Indiana pugilists, have been matched to fight to a finish for $500 a side.

Millie McGill, the youngster who made a phenomenal record with St. Louis in 1891, has been signed to pitch for Chicago next year.

Ted Pritchard, the English middleweight champion, has cabled the Olympic club that he will not visit America to fight Alex Greggains for a $5,000 purse. Pritchard may be matched against Billy McCarthy, the Australian.

Joe Tansey and Ed Blake, an Ohio middle-weight, have been matched to fight to a finish before the Ohio Athletic club of Columbus, the match to take place the latter part of this month. Tansey will train for the battle in this city.

John A. Sullivan of Boston and Wiley Evans of SanFrancisco have been matched to fight before the Newport Athletic club of Newport, Ky., for a purse of $1,000. The contest will take place next Thursday evening.

It is possible that Capt. Anson may retire from the base ball diamond and go into the billiard business. Anson and Champion Frank Ives are figuring on a scheme to bring a number of French billiard experts to Chicago during the world's fair.

Three of the most prominent members of the Yale athletic team have notified the management of their inability to wear the Yale uniform the coming season for various reasons. Allen has gone into business in New York; Wade, the bicycle rider, has rheumatism and has been ordered to stop riding, and Stillman, the shot putter, has, it is said, decided not to return to college.

Joe Donoghue's offer to skate for fun any rival claimant who could not find backing, has been accepted by John Ennis and A. S. Franklin. The latter and Gus C. Walton, Donoghue's representative, have signed an agreement to skate a 100 mile race for pure sport on any date between Jan. 20 and Feb. 20. The location is to be settled on by lot, and the date left to the selection of the referee, who is required to give each man twenty-four hours' notice.

Miscellaneou Items.

The Briggs case is to be appealed to the general assembly.

Three beers and a sandwich are now sold at St. Louis for 5 cents.

Edgar Mills of San Francisco is dead. He leaves a fortune of $1,000,000.

Trask & Co., the New York stock brokers who failed recently, have resumed business.

Martin Peterson was awarded $10,000 in a suit against the Lake Shore road at Goshen, Indiana., for personal damages.

Mrs. Alice A. Minick, the first woman to graduate from the law department of the Nebraska state university, was admitted to practice in the federal court at Lincoln, Neb.

President Wainright, of the St. Louis Brewing association, when asked if there was anything new in the "beer war," said there is no war. For the first time in the history of the St. Louis brewing business all the breweries are selling beer for the same price, $4 a barrel, that is all.

K. H. Clark, wholesale and retail jeweler of St. Joseph, Mo., failed for $40,000. The principal claims are held by Eastern manufacturers. The assets will reach about $35,000. The failure was precipitated by the assignment of the Baldwin Jewelry company.

A Delaware syndicate has secured an option on a tract of 1,000 acres of land at Ashburn Station, Mo., on the St. Louis, Keokuk & Northwestern railroad, and will establish a powder-making plant larger than any in the West. A party of sixteen gentlemen, accompanied by a civil engineer, visited the land, inspected it and secured the option.

VICTIMS OF DYNAMITE.

THE POWERFUL AGENT CREATES HAVOC IN AFRICA.

As One of the Results of the Explosion of Dynamite in the Congo Country Fifty Persons Lose Their Lives.

Quick Work.

St. Paul de Loanda, Jan. 16.—A train crowded with Europeans and natives was halted on the Congo railway near Matadi recently and the engine was detached to join a wagon loaded with fifty-four boxes of dynamite and eighty-two casks of gun powder. The engine moved down grade with great speed and collided with the wagon, exploding the dynamite. Fifty persons were killed, including Lequeque, head of the Societe Anonyme Belge.

Desperate Indeed.

Dolores, Colo., Special, Jan. 16.—News was received here to-night that Phil Foote, the most noted desperado in the West, has again distinguished himself by the daring robbery of Henry Mager, paymaster of the Henry Mountain Mining company, on the Colorado river in Utah. He got away with $3,000. Some six months ago Foote held up the dealer in a faro bank in McDermott's club rooms in Salt Lake. He made his escape, after a running fight with officers, reached the Henry mountains in safety, and with his companion constructed a raft and embarked on it for a voyage down the most dangerous part of the river, it being their intention to get into the wilds of Arizona away from the United States marshals. When the raft got as far as Cataract Canon it was caught up in the whirling eddies and dashed to pieces against the rocky cliffs. Foote and his companion were thrown into the river and carried over the cataract, and were only saved by being carried into one of the numerous little box or side canyons. Their clothes were literally torn from their backs, and they were bruised and bleeding. They constructed another raft from lumber which had washed into the little canyon, and after another perilous voyage managed to reach Dandy Crossing, where they effected a landing. Since that time Foote's whereabouts have been unknown until yesterday, when he appeared on the road between Rabbit Valley and Salina and made Mager shell out. It is thought that he has his stronghold in the Rabbit valley, and United States marshals will proceed against him at once. He is a desperado of most resolute type, and it is not likely that he will be taken alive.

Highwaymen at Work.

Helena, Special, Jan. 16.—The first hold up by highwaymen in several months occurred last night at Wickes, a small station west of Helena. Three highwaymen robbed H. H. Ebert, station agent of the Montana Central, of about $100. A sack containing several hundred dollars in gold lying near at hand was overlooked, and a roll of bills of good size was in the agent's hip pocket, and was not secured by reason of the fact that he was sitting down when ordered to throw up his hands. As he sat very still the currency was not discovered. The robbers took to the hills and have not been caught, although searching parties are scouring the country. A snow storm was raging at the time, and all track was soon lost.

Much Suffering at Homestead.

Pittsburg, Jan. 16.—The continued cold weather has increased the suffering at Homestead, and it is stated that nearly 300 people are on the verge of starvation. Contributions are still coming in, but the aggregate amount is so small that it will not procure the bare necessities. In the mill there is a great deal of dissatisfaction over the wages. Yesterday was the first pay day under the new scale, and many of the workmen claim their envelopes do not contain more than one-half the amount received for the same period before the strike. A number of the men stated to-day that they would quit or strike just as soon as there was warm weather. The officials deny that there is any dissatisfaction, and claim that if the wages are smaller it is the fault of the men, who are not working as hard as formerly.

A Clergyman in Rebellion.

New York, Jan. 16.—Rev. Edward Clark, D. D., who has for the past twenty years been the pastor of the Church of the Puritans, to-day to the public announced the termination of his allegiance to the Presbyterian general assembly. "I cannot endure the tyranny of the general assembly," Dr. Clark said. "It cannot dictate what I shall think and believe, or rather, I cannot think and believe what it may dictate. I am done with it."

Chicago Blazes.

Chicago, Jan. 16.—Fire this evening, supposed to have been started by careless workmen thawing out frozen water pipes, destroyed the two large warerooms and manufacturing plant of the Neufelde manufactory. Loss, $100,000. The Goolman Manufacturing company, which occupied a portion of one of the buildings, loses $30,000. Total insurance is about $65,000.

No More Discrimination.

Toronto, Jan. 16.—It is generally understood here that the government has decided to abolish its Welland canal discrimination against the American routes to the seaboard. A toll of 20 cents per ton has been levied on all vessels passing through that canal and a rebate of 18 cents per ton was allowed vessels taking the Canadian route.

Quade Is Bested.

Chicago, Jan. 16.—Jimmy Borry of Chicago won the 150-pound championship of the Northwest from Bob Quade of Kansas City last night. The fight came off in the residence of a sporting man on the South side. Barry knocked Quade out in the tenth round with a swing on the jaw, and had the best of the fight throughout.

This Is Suspicious.

Pittsburg, Jan. 16.—The attorneys for the defense in the case of Hugh F. Dempsey, district master workman, K. of L., on trial for complicity in the alleged Homestead poisoning case, were to-day furnished a letter intimating that the Carnegie company had paid one witness, James Cooper, $500 for his testimony.

The New Home Rule Bill.

London, Jan. 16.—The Chronicle says it hears that the new Irish home rule bill was drafted by Right Hon. James Brice, chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster, and that Mr. Gladstone gave Mr. Brice a seat in the cabinet for the very purpose of drafting the bill.

Ocean Travel.

New York—Arrived: La Champagne, Havre.

Lizard—Passed: Hermann, for Antwerp.

Havre—Arrived: La Gascogne, New York.

Liverpool—Arrived: Lancastrian, Boston.

Agreement With Marine Underwriters.

Cleveland, Jan. 16.—The committee appointed by the vessel owners at Detroit to confer with the underwriters have prepared an agreement satisfactory to the latter, together with a call for a general meeting of vessel owners to be held in Cleveland Jan. 19 to pass upon the report.

Europe Suffering.

London, Jan. 16.—The weather throughout Europe is intensely cold. In Russia the mercury is reported to have fallen to 69 deg. centigrade below zero, and in Siberia to 79 deg. below zero. In some parts of Hungary the thermometer is 52 deg. below zero. Many deaths from cold have been reported. Several feet of snow have fallen in France.

MINNESOTA LEGISLATURE.

Proceedings of the Legislature Day by Day.

MONDAY, Jan. 9.

SENATE.

A roll call showed many absentees, but there was a quorum present and on declaration of this by the presiding officer the regular order of business was taken up. The reading of the journal was commenced, but ended on motion of Senator Peterson, of Brown. Under the head of resolutions, Senator Canestorp offered a resolution authorizing the appointment of a committee on mileage to ascertain the number of miles to which each member is entitled.

The introduction of bills came next, and the following were read and referred or otherwise disposed of:

Mr. Sanborn, S. F. No. 19—Joint resolution favoring the free and unlimited coinage of silver on a proper basis with an agreement with the nations of Japan and China.

Mr. Barr, S. F. No. 20—Providing for the appointment of a commission to prepare a bill for the government of the cities of the state.

Mr. Dean, S. F. No. 21—Joint memorial to senate and house of representatives of the United States relative to the establishment of a national quarantine against cholera.

Mr. Wood, S. F. No. 22—Amending section 4, Chapter 83, Laws 1874.

Mr. Wood, S. F. No. 23—Making debts for threshing a first lien on grain.

Mr. Wood, S. F. No. 24—Relating to the appropriation of school money.

Mr. Wood, S. F. No. 25—Providing that boards of county commissioners shall have the right to fix the salaries of county officers.

Mr. Dedon, S. F. No. 26—Amending law relating to weights and measures.

Mr. Dedon, S. F. No. 27—Providing for the sale of property against which there are tax judgments.

Mr. O'Brien, S. F. No. 28—Providing for the regulation of insurance companies and making the face value the measure of loss.

Mr. Canestorp, S. F. No. 29.—Appropriating $150,000 for legislative expenses. Passed under the suspension of the rules.

Mr. Canestorp, S. F. No. 30—Providing for the erection of public grain warehouses on right of way of railroad corporations, and providing for condemnation proceedings.

Mr. Canestorp, S. F. No. 31—Making the board of railroad commissioners elective.

Mr. McMillan, S. F. No. 32—Regulating primary elections and party conventions and providing penalties for fraudulent practices.

The appointments made by Gov. Merriam duing the past two years were approved.

HOUSE.

The session of the house yesterday afternoon was very short, and outside of the introduction of half a dozen bills nothing was done. The committee on rules is not prepared to report, and until it does the committees will not be announced by the speaker.

The following bills were introduced and referred to committees to be appointed:

H. F. 10, by Mr. Rodger—To provide for the classification of steam boilers, and to prescribe a penalty for the violation thereof. Committee on judiciary.

H. F. 11, by Mr. Fleming—To repeal chapter 161, of General Laws of 1889, relating to changes of the place of trial of actions commenced in municipal and justice courts. Committee on judiciary.

H. F. 12, by Mr. Markham—Relating to the taxation of certain bonds owned by railroad companies in this state, and to repealing to the taxation of the same, and to provide for the submission of this act to the people of the state or their approval or rejection. Committee on judiciary.

H. F. 13, by Mr. Fletcher—To amend chapter 46, General Laws of 1889, to establish a probate code. Committee on judiciary.

H. F. 14, by Mr. Fletcher—To make records of assignments of mortgages, notice of ownership, and to repeal chapter 40, General Laws of 1866. Committee on judiciary.

H. F. 15, by Mr. Cairns—To abolish days of grace on notes, drafts, checks, acceptances, bills of exchange, etc. Banks an banking.

H. F. 16, by Mr. Noyes—Extending an act to prevent cattle running at large in Washington county. Committee on agriculture.

H. F. 17, by Mr. Elliot—To amend the act to establish a uniform standard of admission to the bar. Committee on judiciary.

TUESDAY, Jan. 10.

SENATE.

Immediately after roll call, President Clough announced the standing committee.

Senator Wood introduced a bill providing for the election of presidential electors by congressional districts.

Senator Day introduced a bill providing for an inheritance tax.

Senator McMillan introduced a bill providing for the establishment of school savings banks in school districts.

Senator Donnelly introduced a resolution instructing the committee on education to prepare a bill providing for an amendment to the constitution requiring educational qualification for suffrage. Adopted.

Senator Peterson introduced a bill instructing the state railroad commission to secure as soon as possible the actual cost of construction of all the railroads of the state, amount of land grants, etc.; referred to the committee on railroads.

Senator Sevatson introduced a bill to amend section 11 of chapter 43 of the laws of 1878, in relation to uses and trusts. It does not interfere with trusts created for a life time. It was referred to the judiciary committee.

Senator McMillian offered a bill amending the law authorizing the county surveyor to establish county boundary lines to the committee on towns and counties. The section affected is section 3 of chapter 175 of the General Laws of 1885.

HOUSE.

The committee on rules and joint rules reported permanent rules for the house. The rules are substantially the same as those governing in the previous session of the legislature.

The Speaker announced the committee appointments.

Mr. Wilson called up the senate bill, passed under suspension of the rules, appropriating money for the good roads convention on the explanation that the appropriation was not desired by the managers of the good roads convention, the bill was tabled.

A large number of bills were introduced and referred among the more important being the following:

By Mr. Nilsson, of Ramsey—Making eight hours a day's labor; to committee on labor.

By Mr. Underleak—Relating to the improvements of roads and highways; committee on roads and bridges.

By Mr. Wyman, of Hennepin—Regulating fees of the office of surveyor-general of logs and lumber; to committee on logs and lumber.

By Mr. Langum—Relating to the termination of prison contracts and convict labor at Stillwater; to state prison committee.

By Mr. Cairns, of Hennepin—Regulating primary elections and conventions; to committee on elections.

By Mr. Greer—Regulating grain and warehouses, and providing for the license of all outside of St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth; to grain and warehouse committee.

By Mr. Markham of Aitkin—Relating to actions for the collection of wages; to committee on judiciary.

Mr. Underleak offered a joint resolution limiting the session to 60 days. Notice of debate was given by Mr. Comstock, of Hennepin, and it went over to to-morrow.

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 11.

SENATE.

The only business transacted in the senate to-day was the introduction of bills, among which were the following:

Senator Craig—Regulating the inspection of swamp lands by certain railroad companies, and requiring the inspection to be made within one year from the time of the passage of the bill.

Senator E. R. Smith—Providing for the amendment of section 71, chapter 46 Laws of '80, relating to the probate code.

Senator Kelly—Providing for the repeal of chapter 418 of the Special Laws of the session of 1881, relating to the county commissioners of Houston county. The bill was passed under a suspension of the rules.

Senator Kelly—Providing for the return of lands condemned for railroad purposes to the original owners if not used by the roads within five years.

Senator J. D. Smith—To abolish "days of grace" on notes, drafts, etc.

Senator La Due, Providing for the further appropriation of $400,000 for the uses of the world's fair commission.

HOUSE.

The proceedings in the house this morning opened with a resolution by Mr. Tyler, authorizing the enrolling clerk to appoint an assistant. Bjorge gave notice of debate and it went over.

Among the bills introduced were the following:

Limiting amount of personal property exempt from taxation to $200. Taxes.

To empower cities of Minnesota to issue bonds for permanent improvements, gas and water works, etc. Bonds must not exceed 5 per cent of assessed valuation. It is the bill framed by the committee of city attorneys last week.

To provide for the establishment of public warehouses on railroads right of way. Ordered printed.

Mr. Wyman, provides for an act to make the state certificates the teacher's professional certificates, and diploma's issued by state university as trial certificates for two years, and the indorsement of the state superintendent thereafter will make it valid as a permanent state certificate. This act applies to the graduates of the classical, literary or scientific courses. It also provides for the suspension of the certificate for cause by the state superintendent.

To compel railroad companies to supply all cars with automatic safety appliances in connection with brakes not later than Jan. 1, 1896, and providing penalties for violation of the same. Railroads.

THURSDAY, Jan. 12.

SENATE.

Senator Dougherty offered a resolution allowing the committees on tax and tax laws and banks and banking one clerk to serve both committees, at a salary of $5 a day. Senator Leavitt gave notice of debate and the resolution went over.

Senator J. D. Smith offered a resolution authorizing the chairman of the judiciary committee to appoint a clerk at a salary of $10 per day. On roll call the resolution was adopted by a vote of 46 to 0.

Senator Mott offered a resolution providing a $3 a day berth for Henry Burkhart as a second file keeper. The resolution was adopted with only four dissenting votes.

Senator Sanborn presented a report from the State Historical Society.

The report was referred to committee on public buildings and grounds.

A number of bills were presented and referred to committees.

Resolutions of sympathy were passed on the death of Senator Grinnel of Dodge county.

HOUSE.

Mr. Wyman, from the committee on appropriations, reported recommending the indefinite postponement of the senate bill appropriating $1,000 for the good roads convention. The report was adopted.

Mr. Van Sant moved the reconsideration of the resolution, yesterday defeated, paying Chas. Pray and Lamb $2.50 per day for 10 days' services as file clerks.

Mr. Williams, of Ramsey, moved to amend by adding Geo. R. Moore. The amendment was adopted and the resolution was referred to the committee on legislative expenses.

Mr. Salls made an effort to reconsider the house anti-option memorial, but was defeated.

Mr. Kelly introduced a resolution providing that all appointees of the speaker shall draw pay from the first day of the session, and another was introduced to give George R. Moore five days' pay at $2.50 per day for the services as page. Both were referred to the committee on legislative expenses.

A number of bills were presented and referred to committees.

ESCAPED FROM REBELS.

Summary Work of a Peoria Boy in Georgia During the War.

"I was once captured by the confeds," said Major John Allen, who was setting the pace for the yarn-spinners, according to the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. "It was in '63, and I was out with a gang of men rejuvenating a telegraph line, when a squad of confederates made a sneak and captured four of us. We were turned over to a Georgia sergeant and three long, loose-jointed 'crackers' to be escorted to camp, a distance of about four miles. We had heard terrible stories about Andersonville and Libby, and were not enthusiastic over our prospects.

"The prisoner at my side was a smooth-faced boy of 18 from Peoria, Ill. He looked so down-hearted that I tried to cheer him up a bit. 'Oh, I ain't a cryin',' he said. At this the 'crackers' laughed and made some uncomplimentary remark. Quick as a flash the young Sucker, wheeled, snatched the musket from the hands of the nearest guard, knocked him down with it, and shot the man on his left. Two of our comrades ran, leaving myself and the kid to take care of the other two guards. They both fired, but in the excitement missed us though not ten feet distant. I sprang on the sergeant and bore him down, while the kid walked into the other with his clubbed musket.

"My man was too much for me, and I was rapidly getting the worst of it, when the kid snatched a pistol from the belt of one of the prostrate men and shot my antagonist through the head. Two of the men down were only stunned, and he put the pistol to their heads and blew their heads out as coolly as though killing chickens. 'Well, son, you got all four of 'em,' I said. 'You bet I got 'em,' he replied. 'This is a bully gun, and I'm going to take it home with me—that is if I ever get home,' he added, with a little sigh, as he watched the death struggles of his last victims. I was a trifle afraid of that boy after that, and tried to put a good deal of kindness into my voice when giving him orders."

A SANGUINARY SCANDAL.

ILLICIT LOVE CAUSES A TERRIBLE TRAGEDY.

A Wisconsin Man Shoots His Wife and Her Paramour, the Latter Dying and the Woman Fatally Hurt.

The Wages of Sin.

Rice Lake, Wis., Special, Jan. 16.—E. O. Allen, who came here a few months ago from Wonewoc, Wis., shot and killed Bert Van Tassell, aged thirty-five years and mortally wounded his (Allen's) wife at Mrs. Hunter's restaurant in this city last night. About two weeks ago Allen claims to have caught Van Tassel in a compromising position with his wife, and attempted to shoot him at that time. Allen was arrested and lodged in jail, but was released and returned to this city. Since then he had not lived with his wife, who was working in the restaurant where Van Tassell boarded. Last night Allen, who had been drinking some, went to the restaurant, ostensibly to pay a board bill, and shook hands with all present, including his wife and Van Tassell. He asked Mrs. Hunter for some tobacco, and while her back was turned he opened fire on Van Tassell. Two bullets from the Bulldog revolver took effect in his left lung and forehead. Allen then turned the weapon on his wife, and fired three shots. Two took effect in the right arm and one in the abdomen. He attempted to fire another shot at her prostrate body, but the weapon missed fire. Van Tassell died almost instantly. Mrs. Allen is in a precarious condition, and her recovery is very doubtful. Physicians probed for the ball this morning, but were unable to locate it. Allen was tried and convicted before Judge McKinney at Cleveland, Ohio, in 1885, of the murder of his second wife and another man. After serving one year he was pardoned. He is a heavy drinker and about forty years old. Mrs. Allen is a young and fine-looking woman. After the shooting Allen gave himself up to the officers, and will have his hearing tomorrow.

Causes Some Criticism.

Huron, S. D., Special, Jan. 16.—Senator Kyle's hostility to Congressman Pickler's timber culture bill, while under consideration by the senate committee on public lands, has created profound astonishment here, and some criticise his action very severely. The Pickler bill affects the interests of thousands of settlers in the Northwest and particularly in South Dakota where much land is held under the old timber culture law and entrymen have failed to make trees grow because of climatic conditions, although their efforts extend over a period of eight years. To such entrymen the Pickler bill proposed to give the land without the government fee of $1.25 an acre on compliance with the provisions of the homestead law. Senator Kyle's vote and co-operation with the Democrats in preventing this bill to be added as an amendment to a consolidated bill covering numerous matters of interest to the people of the Northwest is likely to defeat the measure entirely, in which case much litigation will follow.

Discussed Noxious Weeds.

Pierre, S. D., Special, Jan. 16.—No senate session to-day. The following bills were introduced in the house: Snyder, county printing; Fenelon, auditor's salary, licensing surveyors, encouragement to orchard planters; Withee, prohibiting employment of a clerk in county offices at public expense; Sheldon, publication of foreclosure notices; Prather, attaching Gregory and Todd counties to Charles Mix. The senate legislative appropriation passed. Several hours were devoted to a discussion of the noxious weed bill by farmer members, and the fact was developed that wild mustard is in several counties a very profitable crop, yielding well and selling for 2 cents per pound. The discussion was heated and amusing, being engaged in by a dozen practical farmers, chiefly old men divided about equally for and against the weed. Mustard won by 15.

After a Dakota Divorce.

Yankton, S. D., Special, Jan. 16.—Thomas C. Davenport, a wealthy manufacturer of Philadelphia, ran away from that place some time ago with his wife's sister, taking with him his eight-year-old daughter. He came here and applied for a divorce to-day. Davenport's son arrived in search for his sister, but she has been spirited away and cannot be found. Davenport has been married twenty-nine years, and became infatuated with his sister-in-law while she was employed as a stenographer by him.

Riotous Assemblages.

Paris, Jan. 16.—The socialist meeting to-night at the Tivoli Vaux hall ended in a general row. The anarchists stormed the platform, and after a fight captured the chair. Four anarchists then tried to orate simultaneously, and the tumult was renewed. Water bottles and chairs were hurled from the platform at the heads of the people below, and many were wounded. The proprietor turned off the gas and 100 police cleared the hall. Gendarmes dispersed an anti-semetic meeting at Lyons Sunday, after an exciting struggle.

Arrested for a Fearful Deed.

Goshen, Ind., Jan. 16.—George Taylor, a noted Michigan crook with several aliases, was arrested here yesterday for murder. His victim was Mary Comley, whom he murdered at Niles, Mich., Dec. 7, 1892, by first shooting her and then cutting her throat. The crime was committed for revenge, the murderer having been sent to prison for robbery on her testimony.

Sandbagged and Robbed.

Fargo, N. D., Special, Jan. 16.—Word reached here to-day that Alfred Plummer, a farmer living three miles from here, had been sandbagged in Chicago and $2,200 taken from him. He is at present in New Orleans, where he thinks he has traced his man.

A Little Bluffing.

Toulon, Jan. 16.—It is reported that Admiral Buges' squadron has been ordered to make a demonstration before Tangier in concert with the Italian squadron in case England sends war ships to the Moroco coast.

To Abolish Pension Agencies.

Washington, Jan. 16.—Members of the appropriation committee have under consideration a proposition to abolish all pension agencies for the payment of pensioners, and the disbursement of this money from the treasury directly by means of checks.

Statehood for Mormondom.

Washington, Jan. 16.—Mr. Caine of Utah introduced in the house to-day a bill to enable the people of the territory he represents to form a constitution and state government and to be admitted into the Union.

THE FIFTY-SECOND CONGRESS

What is Being Accomplished by our National Lawmakers.

MONDAY, Jan. 9.

SENATE

The senate was in session today for over five hours. Half of the time was spent on Mr. McPherson's (Dem., New Jersey,) joint resolution authorizing and directing the secretary of the treasury to suspend all purchases of silver under the Sherman act; and the other half on the bill granting additional quarantine powers, and imposing additional duties upon the marine hospital service.

HOUSE.

The District of Columbia appropriation bill was passed this morning. Then an hour was consumed in the consideration of a bill to promote the efficiency of the militia, but there was no determination. The remainder of the day was devoted to the consideration of a bill permitting the Norfolk & Western railroad to enter the District of Columbia. This was bitterly opposed, and after a three-hours' struggle, by permission of both houses, a truce was declared and the struggle was postponed by a recess until 11:45 tomorrow.

TUESDAY, Jan. 10.

SENATE.

The routine morning business (none of it important) occupied half an hour and at its close, the bill granting additional quarantine powers and imposing additional duties on the marine hospital service was again taken up, the pending question being upon the amendment offered yesterday by Mr. White, (Dem.), of Louisiana, that all provisions of the act shall expire on Jan. 1, 1895. After considerable discussion the bill was passed.

The anti-option bill was then taken up and Mr. Vilas concluded his argument against the bill.

At the close of Mr. Vilas' speech the vote was taken on the amendment offered by Mr. White (Dem.), of Louisiana, to strike out the last provision to section 2. The vote was, yeas 10, nays 20, and so there was no quorum present. The senate at 4:40 adjourned.

HOUSE.

After a sharp and decisive contest the opponents of the bill allowing the Norfolk & Western Railroad Company to extend its lines into the District of Columbia, gracefully admitted themselves defeated, and the bill was passed without a division.

All the business days of the present week were assigned by the committee on rules to various committees. The joint resolution changing the time for the meeting of congress and for the inauguration of the president gave rise to a rather interesting discussion.

The vote then came on ordering the joint resolution to a third reading. The vote resulted 49 to 121, thus defeating the measure. The house then adjourned.

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 11.

SENATE.

The death of Senator Kenna, of West Virginia, was immediately after the reading of yesterday's journal, announced to the Senate by Mr. Blackburn. Feeling remarks were made by him in praise of the dead senator, and the usual resolutions were presented and adopted, including invitations to the house of Representatives, the president and members of the supreme court to attend the funeral ceremonies in the senate chamber at 1 o'clock tomorrow. A committee of seven senators—Messrs. Faulkner, Blackburn, Ransom, Daniel Walthall, Manderson and Squire, was appointed to take order as to the funeral and to accompany the body to West Virginia; and then, as a further mark of respect, the senate adjourned.

HOUSE.

The minority report against the repeal of the Sherman silver bullion purchase act was presented to-day.

Mr. Robinson, of Pennsylvania, introduced a bill increasing from $1 to $2 per barrel the internal revenue tax on fermented liquors.

The house adjourned out of respect to the memory of Senator Kenna.

THURSDAY, Jan. 12.

No business was transacted in either house to-day owing to the funeral of Senator Kenna.

A WASTED EFFORT.

The Missionary Could Only Get Them to Say They Would Take the Same.

The tall, thin missionary with a bald head and red nose was impressed with the looks of the two Indians who had been sitting motionless in the sun for three hours, says the Detroit Tribune.

"Here," declared the missionary, "is the raw material of useful manhood. It simply needs to be reclaimed by the hand of religion."

With a triumphant and ineffably sweet smile, as if the victory were already his, he turned to the aborigines.

The noble red men opened their eyes, but made no reply.

"Come, ye who weary," urged the missionary.

"Huh!"

The Indians seemed quite contente with their present position. The inducements held out by the bald-headed party with a red nose were not sufficiently powerful to arouse within their breasts any consuming desire for a change.

"Be men!" exclaimed the man of God.

"Huh!"

The denizens of the forest evidently preferred to be Indians. Possibly it was more fun, but they didn't say.

"Before you are two roads," explained the missionary. "The one leads to ruin and uselessness, the other to salvation and glory."

The natives looked puzzled.

"Which will you take?" the tall, thin exhorter impressively demanded.

Instantly the Indians were upon their feet, their eyes kindling with intelligence. The missionary was almost overcome with delight.

"I say," thundered he in his deepest tones, "which will you take?"

He listened eagerly, rapturously for the reply.

"A little of the same," they cordially declared.

Almost before they knew it the missionary was gone.

GREAT NORTHERN

TIME CARD.

NO. 3 Daily		NO Daily
7 40 p m	Lv........St. Paul..........Ar	6 55 am
8 10 "	" ......Minneapolis........	6 25 am
05 a m 316	......Barnesville..........	10 25 pm
10 45 am	Lv...Crookston....Ar	4 00 pm
11 25 "	........Shirley.....	3 30 "
x11 45 "	........Ives........	x3 00 "
x12 20 pm	........Wylie....	x2 20 "*
12 45 "	Ar.....St. Hilaire.....Lv	2 00 "

*Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

S. S. Buzza Agt,

Dr. H. GRUNDY.

Physician

& Surgeon.

Graduate of the University of Toronto Canada and member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario.

Messages from the surrounding country attended to,

Office in Drug Store

THIEF RIVER FALLS,

NORTHERN PACIFIC

THE

GREAT TRAMSCONENTAL ROUTE.

Passes through Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, Manitoca, Montana, Idaho, Oregon and Washington.

THE DINING CAR LINE

Dining cars are run between Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Olunipeg, Helena, Butte, Tacoma, Seattle and Portland.

PULLMAN SLEEPING CAR ROUTE.

Pullman service between Chicago St. Paul Montana and the Pacific Northwest; and between St. Paul, Minneapolis and Minnesota North Dakota and Manitoba points.

THE POPULAR LINE.

Daily Express Trains carry elegant Pullman sleeping Cars, Dining cars, Day Coaches, Pullman Tourist Sleepers and Free Colonist Sleeping Cars.

YELLOWSTONE PARK ROUTE.

The Northern Pacific R. R. is the rail line to Yellowstone Park; the popular line to California and Alaska; and its trains pass through the grandest scenery of seven states

THROUGH TICKETS Are sold at all cupon offices of the Northern Pacific Railroad to points North, East, South and West in the United States and Canada

TIME SCEDULE,

	Leave Crookston Daily	Arrive Crookston Daily
For Staples, Minneapolis, St. Paul Duluth Ashland and points East and South	7:05 p. m.	8:20 a m,
For Grand Forks Grafton Drayton, Winnipeg and points in North Dakota and Manitoba	8:27 a. m.	7:10 p. m

For Rates, maps, Time Tables or special information, apply to Agent Northern Pacific R. R. at Crookston Minn., or

CHAS. S. FEE,
Gen. Pass. Agent
St. Paul Minn.

ST. HILAIRE
MEAT MARKET.

All kinds of fresh and salt meat always on hand.

I make a specialty of buying and selling cattle of all kinds.

If you want to buy or sell anything in that line it will pay you to give me a call.

JAMES DAINARD.

FRED Eikhof

DEALER IN CHOICE

WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS.

Beer always on tap.

Pool Room in Connection.

Broadway St. Hilaire.

FRANK IVES,

Attorney and Counselor AT LAW,

CROOKSTON and ST. HILAIRE, Minn.

Will Practice in ALL The Courts, OF T E STATE and and before the U. S. Land Office Crookston and at Washington.

Will give special attention to contests of claims.

BREVITIES.

Wheat is 60 cents.

The train was one hour late to-day.

Fresh Oysters at W. A. Arthurs try them.

The flour mill has been shut down for a few days.

For No. 1 pure buck wheat flour call on Fricker & Welch.

If you want some nice fresh oysters call on W. A. Arthur.

S. M. Dainard and wife went over to Grand Forks to-day,

S. M. Dainard went down to Crookston last Friday on business.

A complete line ot undertakers goods always on hand at Holmes Bros.

C. G. Rapp left last Friday for a couple of weeks visit to Chicago.

Conductor Norrie is in charge of his train again after a week's lay off.

George Williams, of Thief River Falls was in town visiting friends last Monday

Now is the time to secure your flour cheap. Call for bargains on Fricker & Welch.

Sever Elstad returned to-day from Crookston where he has been for a couple of weeks.

If you want anything in the line of confectionary fruit or oysters call on W. A. Arthur.

Christ Bjerk came down from Marshall county last Monday and has been spending the week here,

J. W. Swanstrom, of Thief River Falls was doing business in town a couple of days the first of the week,

Mr. Ernest Johnson and Mr. A. Larson, of Chicago, were in town last week the guests of Mr. C. G. Rapp,

School will commence next Monday morning January 23rd Let parents see that their children attend from the start.

40 below here last Friday night is certainly cold enough, still the time has been here when 40 below was not rare enough to even excite remarks.

Rev, Willett wishes us to announce that hereafter there will be services in the M. E. Church every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The telegraph line between here and Thief River Falls will be finished this week. The poles are all in and the wire is being strung as rapidly as possible,

A rumor came over the wire last Sunday that James G. Blaine had died that morning but hapily the rumor was false and Mr Blaine is reported to be better. All wish that he may have many more years yet to live.

We are having plenty of cold weather here but reports indicate that we are naving a monopoly of it. The recent cold snap has extended all over the country even in the south ank a great deal of suffering is reported Here we understand cold weather and do not freeze

A meeting of the citizens of the village was held at the SPECTATOR office last Saturday evening and several matters of interest to the village was talked over. One thing in favor of the future prosperity of our village is that all of our citizens work together.

Notice To Farmers.

We will pay you cash for hides, hay barley, oats, cord wood, good steers or anything marketable that you have to sell,

E, T. Spafford & Co.

We learn that several of our Democrats have aspirations to lick postage stamps for Uncle Sam for the next four years, Sorry, boys, the job is only big enough for one. In Crookston we hear that if every Democrat who wants a government position is successful there would not be enough left to hold a caucus, The danger of such a catastrophy is not great however.

At the auction sale last Thursday the stallion which Dan Patterson was keeping was sold to Mrs. A. L. Patterson for $240. The horse was brought into the country last spring and a company of farmers east of the river was to buy the horse. The owners left the horse with Patterson for the farmers but they refused to take him and the matter will fought in the courts. Meantime the horse has been sold for board.

Dainard Bros. had the misfortune to lose their meat market at Crookston by fire last Thursday night. They will lose considerable as they had a large amount of meat on hand and only a small insurance.

As an evidence of the growth of Polk county, not only in wealth but in population, Deputy Treasurer Mathews informs us that there are over 500 more personal property taxpayers on the books this year than last.—Crookston Times,

The people are not asking hasty legislation on immigration, Perhaps total suspension for any length of time would be too radical, although many people think that suspension for one year would do this country no harm, and that the experiment would be valuable as educational,—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

The Great Northern Railway has at last completed its line to the Pacific coast and regular trains will be put on in a short time, The Great Northern now has 4,630 miles of track. It is a big railroad and J. J. Hill is a great man but we would rather own some of its stock than be one of its patrons especially where there is no competition

What will be the battle cry of the People's party for 1893? The question has been answered by Gen. Weaver thus: "The American battle cry for 1893 should be, "Free coinage, more money, hands off by Europe, strike at the ballotbox against the agressions of monopoly and the gold mongers." We like the General's idea of concentration, There is strength in it.—Fertile Journal

Many persons who regard themselves as tolerably well informed on most public questions will be surprised to be told, for example, that in the state of Illinoise, alone, it has been estimated that the loss sustained by farmers and owners of horses and wagons generally from bad roads, is placed at $16,000,000 a year. Through the whole country it is thought that the loss from this source at the very lowest figure cannot be less than $200,000,000 a year.—Albany Express,

We pay too much money in bulk—in actual transported dollars—to the East, Not only do we pay interest money, but freight money, cost of transportation on what we sell and what we buy. We can do without much of this and must. In short the real trouble in the West is that it pays the East for everything, and thus allows others to husband its profits and carry them elsewhere to be spent or distrebuted.—Kansas City Journal.

The senatorial situation at St. Paul is getting to be decidedly warm, The Democrats last week caucused and nominated Daniel Lawler and the People's party nominated S. M. Owen. The first vote was taken yesterday both houses voting separately. Senator Davis having a majority of two over all If the same number vote for him in joint meeting to-day he will be elected, but there are many who claim they will not do so. It looks to us however as if Davis would get it on the joint ballot to-day.

Postmaster Rapp has made application to have the St. Hilaire post office made a money order and postal note office and the request has been granted. Nearly all of the blanks have already arrived and they will be ready to do business in a few days. Money orders or postal notes can be purchased ranging from one cent to one hundred dollars the exchange being from five to forty cents. As a means for sending money it is absolutely safe as a new order will be issued if the old one is lost.

The state normal schools come to the front again this winter, and ask the legislature to appropriate $150.000 for new buildings and other improvements, The great trouble with a majority of our state institutions is that the towns in which they are situated do more hard work to try and get money out of the state for buildings to boom real estate than they do for the success of the institutions. Normal schools are a good thing but it costs entirely too much money to run them.

The debating club will hold its meeting in Dainard's hall next Friday evening at 7.30 p. m. The question for debate will be, "Resolved that teaching school is preferable to the practice of law." An interesting program consisting of declamations and music is being prepared. All are invited to attend especially as debaters are to be chosen for the debate with the club at Thief River Falls.

The diphtheria has been slowly disappearing and in a few days will be entirely gone. There has been no new cases the past week and all have been improving rapidly. At present the only places where the disease exists are at Andrew Berg's and O. A. Skele's, They are doing well and the last of this week will probably see all well. The people of St. Hilaire are to be congratulated upon the rapid termination of that terrible disease without further deaths. It might be well, however, not to relax precaution for some time yet.

Very few people know what it costs to run the Grandin farm, nor how large the receipts are. We publish the following interesting statistics of the 1899 crop: There were 12,721 acres in wheat which yielded 165,785.15 bushels or an average of 16.28 bushels per acre. There were 1,031 acres in oats, which yielded 38,970.05 bushels, or an average of 37.25 bushels per acre. There were 600 acres in barley with a production of 14,702,29 bushels or an average of 24.24 bushels per acre. The total expenses for 1892 were $62,593.01; cost per bushel of wheat 33 cents; average cost per bushel of barley, 21 cents. The crop was sold as soon as threshed, when the market was higher than it is now, so the wheat crop brought no less than 50 cents a bushel. For the year 1893 there will be 14,000 acres put in crop or 1 657 acres more than this year.—Caledonia Times.

The campaign is over for sure. Now that Gov. Merriam and Gov. Nelson have set the pace of indorsing the Democratic assault on the railroad and elevator combines, even the Tribune gets up pluck enough to come out and admit that the "present law gives practically the whole benefit to the large dealers in the cities and yields the producers little or no benefit of protection." All that is now lacking is an offer from Charley Pillsbury of a ten thousand dollar bet that the Tribune cannot prove that practically the whole benefit goes to himself and the other large dealers, —St. Paul Globe.

An exchange speaking of a cyclone says: "It turned a well inside out in the State of Miss., turned a cellar upside down in Wis., moved a township line in Neb., blew all the staves out of a whiskey barrel in Iowa and left nothing but a bunghole; changed the day of the week in Ohio; killed an honest Indian agent in the far west; blew the hair off a bald headed man in Texas; killed a truthful lawyer in Illinoise; blew the mortgage off a farm in Minn,; scared a red-headed woman in Mich.; blew the cracks out of a fence in Dakota; and took all the wind out of a prohibition orator in Maine.

The idea of issuing postage stamps to commemorate the discovery of America by Columbus did not originate with the United States but with the Argentine Republic. That nation issued memorial stamps only on and for October, 12, 1992 commemorating by word and picture the landing of Columbus All stamps of this issue that were not sold on that day were destroyed subsequently, and the stamps are beginning already to become exceedingly rare and are now valued at one pound sterling, $4.86 apiece.—Grand Forks Herald.

Colonel Weber, the Commissioner of immigration, says that with educational test, 57,000 of the 275,000 immigrants over 15 years old, admitted to this country between February 1 and November 1 1892, would have been excluded; and with the money test of $100 for each immigrant 194,000 out of 202,000 would have had to turn back to Europe.

Those daily papers that are always insisting that farmers are prosperous, are fast getting rich, are now blaming them for rushing the wheat to market and depressing the price, A year ago when farmers were advised to hold their wheat, those papers denounced such advise, insisted that the best time for a farmer to sell his produce was when it was ready for the market. Now the farmer is trying to follow that advise and the papers tell him how idiotic he is, and imply, if they do not assert, that in his financial case the farmer can hold his wheat easily enough if he would. What wonder that the farmer realizes that "in a multitude of counsel there is much danger" and gets rattled accordingly.—Farm Stock and Home.

It has been suggested that the legislature sell the public lands now owned by the state, and which were given the state by congress for internal improvements and with the proceeds establish a fund to be used for the improvement of the wagon roads of the state. This would be a very practical thing for the legislature to do, but by disposing of the lands in this way there wouldn't be anything in it for those legislators that do scheming or for the lobbyists. It is a little doubtful if the thing can be done.—Slayton Gazette,

CHEAP EXCURSIONS TO CANADA

Low round trip tickets will be on sale by the Great Northern from Crookston Grand Forks and stations north to boundary and west to Minot, to points in Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick Nova Scotia, on Nov. 27th, Dec 6th Dec 13th to 22nd inclusive, and Dec 27th 1892. Tickets good for 90 days with transit limits of 15 days each way, going and returning, This will allow holders to stop in the Twin Cities, in Chicago to see the wonderful buildings of the World's Fair, and other points enroute.

Extension of time beyond 90 days made at small additional cost. For particulars and tickets see S. S. Buzza agent at St. Hilaire.

I will pay the highest market price for veal calves, fresh eggs and butter.

S. M. Dainard,

INTERESTING ITEM.

It is to the interest of parties contemplating going east to consider the great advantages the Great Northern offers them through its fast passenger service to St. Paul and to all points west to the Pacific coast, their free colonist cars, and magnificent Dining and Sleeping cars. The shortest route, close connections, quickest time and fare as low as the lowest, Any information cheerfully given,

S. S. Buzza
Agent,

CHATTEL LOANS

I am prepared to loan money on chattle security at reasonable rates. One years time. Call On

H. E. IVES.

WANTED. Salesmen. Local and Traveling, To represent our well known house. You need no capital to represents a firm that warrants nursery stock first-class and true to name. WORK ALL THE YEAR. $100 per month to the right man. Apply quick stating age.

L. L. MAY & CO.
Nurserymen, Florists and Seeds men,
St. Paul Minn.

(This house is responsible.)

MARLIN SAFETY RIFLES

Made in all styles and sizes. Lightest, strongest, easiest working, safest, simplest, most accurate, most compact, and most modern. For sale by all dealers in arms. Catalogues mailed free by

The Marlin Fire Arms Co.,
NEW HAVEN, CONN., U. S. A.

All who are indebted to S. M. [illegible] are requested to call and settle up at once or the debt will be collected by law.

U. S. LAND OFFICE.

Crookston Minn December 5 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on January 24 1893 viz: Daniel Johnson H D 12053 for the Lot 5 Sec. 6 and Lot 1 Sec 7 Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of said land viz:

J. A. Bjortrom Anton Sundahl J. A. Peterson, K. Sundahl all of St. Hilaire, Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

U. S. Land Office

Crookston Minn. Dec. 7 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on January 26 1893 viz Charles Gomoll H D 11784 for the SE ¼ Sec 25 Tp 153 R 45.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land viz:

Gotlieb Gerlach, August Morel, Charles Peterson Henry Leppert all of Wylie Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

U. S. Land Office

Crookston Minn Dec 14 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on Feb 16 1893 viz:

Peter Sanderson H D 14159 for the NW ¼ SE ¼ NE ¼ SW ¼ and Lots 5 and 6 Sec 6 Tp 151 R 43.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Peter Anderson, John Strawberg, O. K. Ellenson H. Johnson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register

U. S. Land Office

Crookston Minn. January 3 1893

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver of the U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn., on February 16 1893. viz: Anton Peterson HD 12783 for the SE ¼ Sec. 7 Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz: Julius Nelson, James Evenson, Daniel Johnson, Erick Anderson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

CLOSING OUT SALE!

At E M Hoff's Store

My whole stock of

Dry Goods and Notions
Gents Furnshing, Goods
$5,000 worth of ready made clothing
Foot wear of all kinds
and everything belonging to a full stocked general merchandise store will be closed out at cost in the next 90 days.

COME EVERY BODY

AND

SECURE GOOD BARGAINS.

E. M. HOFF

CROWN ROLLER MILL.

EQUIPPED WITH THE LATEST AND BEST IMPROVED MACHINERY.

Manufactures the well known PERFECTION FANCY PATENT and WHITE ROSEFLOUR.

Rye and Feed mill in connection.

Flour and Feed always kept on hand

Custom work a specialty.

FRICKER & WELCH Prop,

HILAIRE MINNESOTA

CHAS G. RAPP.

A large and complete line of

General Merchandise.

CONSISTING OF

Dry Goods, Groceries, Clothing
Boots & Shoes, Hats & Caps
Notions

THE ST. HILAIRE SPECTATOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY EVENING.
[illegible] H. E. IVES, Propr.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE:
Advance, [illegible]
If not in Advance, [illegible] Per Year

Entered in the Post Office at St. Hilaire, as Second Class Mail Matter

WEDNESDAY January 18 1893.

SELECTIONS

ALUMINIUM ROWING SHELLS.

College Contests Next Spring May Be Decided in White Boats.

Daniel J. Galanaugh, the Philadelphia boatbuilder, is constructing the first 8-oared racing shell ever built from aluminium metal. It is intended for the use of the Cornell college crew and will be finished the latter part of March. Galanaugh is the first boat builder to experiment with aluminium in the construction of racing shells. His first effort was on a single scull shell for the use of George W. Statzell, commodore of the Schuylkill navy and ex-champion single sculler of the Schuylkill river. It is proved to be a very strong boat and some four pounds lighter than those constructed from any other material hitherto used.

The shell was loaned to an oarsman who was entered at Newark, N. J., regatta, and there Charles E. Courtney, the Cornell trainer, saw it. He was much taken with the new style of shell and urged its adoption so strongly and so persistently that the Cornell boating authorities finally appointed a committee to go to Philadelphia and interview the maker. Galanaugh felt so positive that he could build a shell at least ten seconds faster than the one constructed of either paper or cedar that he agreed to take the risk of building an eight at his own expense, and if it does not prove ten seconds faster than any other shell the crew can get they need not take it.

The keel and the gunwale are now laid in his shop on the banks of the Schuylkill. The boat will be 62 feet in length over all, 23 inches beam amidships, 8¼ inches deep amidships, 6¼ inches deep forward and 5¼ inches deep aft. The shell will be composed entirely of aluminium, with the exception of the washbox, which will be of wood and the outriggers, which will be of steel tubing, cold drawn. The shell will weigh 175 pounds, all told. Ordinary paper and cedar shells weigh about 225 pounds, and Waters, the famous shell builder, of Troy, N. Y., claims that a 200-pound 8-oared shell is an exceedingly light one. The aluminium shell will be built in two pieces, being divided fore and aft and then joined together amidships. It is designed to carry an average weight of 175 pounds per man.

The aluminium from which this shell is being made is one-twentieth of an inch thick and weighs about seven ounces to the square foot. Galanaugh's contract calls for the completion of the boat by the latter part of March, when the Cornell crew will come to Philadelphia to try the shell on the Schuylkill. If it is satisfactory Galanaugh will receive $300.

The fact of Cornell's ordering this shell has caused considerable comment in college boating circles, and Harvard intends having one as soon as possible. A number of oarsmen from that college visited Philadelphia Saturday, the result of which was the ordering of an aluminium shell for the Harvard crew. Galanaugh has orders now for twelve aluminium boats—two four oared, two eights, one double and seven single shells. One of the fours is for a Portland (Or.) club, and one of the singles goes to the Narragansett club, of Providence. —Philadelphia Record.

A Relic of Robespierre.

The Bibliotheque Nationale in Paris has just come into possession of a document in the handwriting of Robespierre. A workman in a paper mill was engaged in sorting out some papers that were to be reduced to pulp, when his attention was arrested by some paper yellow with age and covered with writing in rather faded ink. On examining it he found it to consist of a number of sheets of an essay on the responsibility of parents for the crimes of their children, which was presented to the Academy of Amiens in 1785.

Accompanying it was a letter concluding as follows: "I am far from considering that I have great talents; nevertheless I have ventured to present you with my contribution. It is from a desire to be of use; it is from a love of humanity that I offer it to you.—Robespierre." In 1785 Robespierre was a young provincial lawyer residing at Arrash. The essay was rewarded by the Amiens academy with an honorable mention.—London News.

The King of Sweden.

King Oscar of Sweden celebrated his twenty-fifth anniversary as a doctor of philosophy last month. As Duke of Ostgothland the university of Lund conferred that degree upon him a quarter of a century ago in recognition of his services to literature and science. His majesty spent the day at the university and allowed the bishop of Flensburg to place again a wreath of laurel upon his brow. The university is naturally proud of its adopted alumnus, as the king is a man of learning, able to converse intelligently upon almost any topic and a poet of no mean parts.

His majesty is the tallest monarch in Europe, overlapping even the czar of Russia by several inches. A fine shock of hair covers his head, and a long, heavy beard adds dignity to his face. In his robes of state he looks the ideal king.—Chicago Times.

An Idea for Church Fairs.

One of the ladies in charge of the bazar in Chicago for the benefit of the Children's Home building of the exposition has hit on the device of sending distinguished authors several copies of their works, requesting them to put their autograph within. This of course enhances the value of the books, and she intends to sell them for double their original cost. The idea is not a bad one for other fairs and bazars, and then it increases the author's already handsome income and sets him up with his publishers.—Hartford Courant.

The Trial Too Great.

She felt that she had not sufficiently tested his love for her in making him wait thirty-seven minutes while she adjusted her hat.

When she took her seat beside him in the carriage there came over her an awful doubt lest his heart was not all hers.

She resolved to try his affection.

"Plantaganet"——

She threw her soul into the words.

——"are you prepared to make a sacrifice for me?"

He instinctively gathered the reins in one hand and turned a startled face upon her.

"An—anything"——

For some reason he faltered perceptibly.

——"you want, my darling."

"Would"——

She looked pleadingly into his eyes.

——"you die for me?"

He breathes freer.

"Willingly," he declared.

"Then"——

She nestled still closer to his side.

——"perhaps you will let me drive a little way."

Gently, but firmly, he told her it would be impossible.—Detroit Tribune.

All That He Wanted.

He had looked over the samples of the various goods in stock, and finally the tailor asked:

"Can't I make you a nice dress suit?"

"Naw," said the young man languidly "Naw, I think not. I nevah get my dress suits this side of the watah!"

"We have some very fine imported broadcloth," persisted the tailor.

"Of cou'se, but I prefer a London maker."

"We have a London tailor's tag that by special permission, we put on our goods when desired," explained the tailor

"Yaas, but no one sees the tag, you know."

"Well, we have a special case for packing and carrying our dress suits when traveling that has a London tailor's name on it. Very handsomely gotten up, with the name in gold letters, and below it the inscription, 'Special Tailor to the Duke of Wildoats.'"

"Weally?"

"Certainly. Special arrangement, you know."

"Aw, well, I don't need the suit, but I'll—aw—take the case."—Detroit Free Press.

Afraid to Risk It.

The clerk had just got his week's salary from the cashier.

"If it's all the same to you," he said, turning the money over in his hand, "I'd a little rather have a five dollar bill in place of this gold piece."

"What's the matter with it?" asked the cashier.

"Nothing, only I don't want to ask the street car conductor to change a gold piece."

"Why not?"

"I don't like to be looked at suspiciously, even by a street car conductor."

"Would he look at you suspiciously if you handed him that five dollar gold coin?"

"Of course he would."

"Why?"

"Because I've got an old overcoat on."—Chicago Tribune.

The Force of Habit.

On the day before the execution the keeper informs a doomed man that a visitor wishes to see him.

"Do you know who he is?" asked the doomed man.

"No."

"Well, just ask him if he wants to collect a bill, and if he does tell him to call after tomorrow."—Texas Siftings.

A Question of Time.

"Now, Johnny, suppose the clock should strike sixteen, what time would it be?"

"That would depend."

"On what?"

"On what time it was when the clock struck sixteen."—Harper's Bazar.

A Test of Poverty.

Carleton Gates—Are you really so hard up?

Tramp—Hard up? Why, boss, if suits of clothes wuz sellin at a cent apiece I wouldn't have enough to buy the armhole of a vest!—Truth.

Business Before Pleasure.

He—It's too bad our little summer romance couldn't go on forever, isn't it?

She—Yes, Jack. But then I've got to get married some time, you know.—Chicago News-Record.

Nothing New Under the Sun.

The English fashion of iron bedsteads is fast coming in. Our ordinary wooden ones wooden do there, where iron and brass are the rule, and almost the only others used are the huge old oaken four posters, roofed and walled in with dimity curtains, rarely seen now except in country houses and inns. We shall fancy it a new and Anglomaniac fashion, but it is older than England. In the Old Testament we (we who do read that most fascinating library of world literature) learn that the iron bedstead was quite the fashion in the time of King Og, for his bed "was a bedstead of iron."—Deut. iii, 11. This royal gentleman was the last of the giants, and in all probability the burly figures in the Guildhall, London, known as Gog and Magog, are the wooden mummies of his latest twins. Og was of portly proportion, as that bedstead of his, if I reckon rightly, was about 17 feet long by 7 wide. Nothing new under the sun, except corns from tight shoes.—Baltimore News.

WE WANT YOU

to act as our agent. We furnish an expensive outfit and all you need free. It costs nothing to try the business. We will treat you well, and help you to earn ten times ordinary wages. Both sexes of all ages can live at home and work in spare time, or all the time. Any one any where can earn a great deal of money. Many have made Two Hundred Dollars a Month. No class of people in the world are making so much money without capital as those at work for us. Business pleasant, strictly honorable, and pays better than any other offered to agents. You have a clear field, with no competition. We equip you with everything, and supply printed directions for beginners which, if obeyed faithfully, will bring more money than will any other business. Improve your prospects! Why not? You can do so easily and surely at work for us. Reasonable industry only necessary for absolute success. Pamphlet circular giving every particular is sent free to all. Delay not in sending for it.

GEORGE STINSON & CO.,
Box No. 488, Portland, Me.

DO YOU WANT TO ADOPT A BABY?

Maybe you think this is a new business, sending out babies on application; it has been done before, however, but never have those furnished been so near the original sample as this one. Everyone will exclaim, "Well, that's the sweetest baby I ever saw!" This little black-and-white engraving can give you but a faint idea of the exquisite original, which we propose to send to you, transportation paid. The little darling rests against a pillow, and is in the act of drawing off its pink sock, the mate of which has been pulled off and flung aside with a triumphant coo. The flesh tints are perfect, and the eyes follow you, no matter where you stand. The exquisite reproductions of this greatest painting of Ida Waugh (the most celebrated of modern painters of baby life) are to be given to those who subscribe to Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893. The reproductions cannot be told from the original, which cost $450, and are the same size (17x22 inches). The baby is life size, and absolutely lifelike. We have also in preparation, to present to our subscribers during 1893, other great pictures by such artists as Percy Moran, Maud Humphrey, Louis Deschamps, and others of world-wide renown. Take only two examples of what we did during the past year, "A Yard of Pansies," and "A White House Orchid" by the wife of President Harrison, and you will see what our promises mean.

"I'M A BABY."

Those who subscribe for Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893 will possess a gallery of exquisite works of art of great value, besides a Magazine that cannot be equaled by any in the world for its beautiful illustrations and subject matter, that will keep everyone posted on all the topics of the day, and all the fads and different items of interest about the household, besides furnishing interesting reading matter, both grave and gay, for the whole family; and while Demorest's is not a fashion Magazine, its fashion pages are perfect, and we give you, free of cost, all the patterns you wish to use during the year, and in any size you choose. Send in your subscription at once, only $2, and you will really get over $25 in value. Address the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York. If you are unacquainted with the Magazine, send 10 cents for a specimen copy.

Ask Your Dealer For FEATHERBONE
WHIPS.

FEATHERBONE is made from Enameled Quills—nature's own toughest, and strongest elastic material. Best wearing whips made for 25c., 50c., 75c., $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50. All styles for Buggy, Cart, Track, Team and Riding. Be sure and ask for a "FEATHERBONE."

FOR SALE BY
S. M. HOFF
St. H

Going to Buy
A Dictionary?
GET THE BEST,
Webster's International.

A Choice Gift
A Grand Family Educator
A Library in Itself
The Standard Authority

WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY

SOLD BY ALL BOOKSELLERS.

The International is a new book from cover to cover, fully abreast of the times, and is the successor of the authentic "Unabridged." Ten years were spent in revising, 100 editors employed and over $300,000 expended before the first copy was printed.

Do not buy reprints of obsolete and comparatively worthless editions.

Send for free pamphlet containing specimen pages and full particulars.

G. & C. MERRIAM CO., Publishers,
SPRINGFIELD, MASS., U. S. A.

U.S. Land Office
Crookston Minn. Jan. 7 1893

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before U. S. Land Office Crookston Minn on Feb 21 1893 viz:

John August Lundbeck HD 11973 for the S NE ¼ and Lots 3 and 4 Sec. 3 Tp 152 R. 44,

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of said land viz:

[illegible]on Ellason. Martin Ryland Elias Svensen, Svensen, all of St. Hilaire Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON. Register

U.S. LAND OFFICE.
Crookston, Minn., Nov. 17 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn on December 29 1892. viz:

Peter E. Engh HD 15282 for the NW ¼ Sec. 23 Tp 152 R. 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Halvor Aamodt, Ole J. Hegg Peter Anderson, Ole J. Jounson. all of St. Hilaire Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn., Nov. 2[illegible] 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver, U. S Land Office at Crookston Minn. on Jany. 5 1893 viz:

Julius Nelson HD 11890 for the S½ W ½ sec. 8 tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove her continuous residence upon, and cultivation of said land viz;

James Evenson B. I. Konlog. Nels Evenson Anton Peterson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

E. T. SPAFFORD S. M. DAINARD

E. T. SPAFFORD & CO.
DEALERS IN
LUMBER, LATH AND SHINGLES.

A complete stock of all kinds of Lumber Lath, Shingles, Mouldings, Building Paper Sash, Doors and Screens, Lime, Cement Stucco, Plastering Hair, Brick etc. always on hand at the lowest market prices.

S. M. Dainard, Manager.

BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE, MINN.

E. T. SPAFFORD & CO.
WILL ALWAYS PAY THE
HIGHEST MARKET PRICES
FOR
All kinds of
CATTLE.
Cor wood, Hay, Oats,
Barley and flax.
Ground Feed for sale
S. M. DAINARD.
Manager.

Reserved For
THE
ST. HILAIRE
TOWNSITE
COMPANY

W. A. ARTHUR.
DEALER IN
FRUITS, CONFECTIONARY
TOBACCO AND CIGARS.
STATIONARY OF ALL KINDS
Lunch Counter
Warm meals at all hours.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE MINNESOTA

JUSTUS L. JOHNSON
DEALER IN
pure medicines Fancy articles, perfumer and stationery, paints oils and dye stuffs.

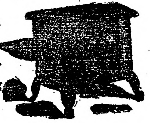
Cigars, Candy, Fruit and Soft Drinks always on hand.

Barbershop in connection

BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE

I CAN SAVE YOU
MONEY
If you wish to make
REAL ESTATE
LOANS.
For full particulars call [illegible] dres
H. E. IVES.
SPECTATOR OFFICE ST. HILAIRE.

HOLMES BRO'S
Dealers in
HARDWARE, TINWARE,



We are carrying a heavy and complete line of Heating and Cooking stoves.

GOOD GOODS LOW PRICES.
CALL ON US FOR BARGAINS
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE MINN.

FARMERS STORE
NEW GOODS AT HARD PAN PRICES.
If you want to save money do your trading with
HALL BROS.
DEALERS IN Dry Goods, Groceries
Notions.
BROADWAY [illegible]

S. M. HOFF
DEALER IN
HARDWARE

A new and complete stock of all kinds of Hardware, Tinware, Stoves, Fencing wire, Nails, in fact everything ususy kept in a first-class Hardware Store,

AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES
Call and examine Goods and Get Our Prices.

BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE.

DR PRICE'S Cream Baking Powder.

The only Pure Cream of Tartar Powder.—No Ammonia; No Alum.

Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

The report from Cincinnati of an iron pipe combine to include Chicago, St. Louis, Pittsburg, Buffalo and Anniston, is discredited by both the iron pipe cast-casting men at Pittsburg.

Suit has been brought at New York by Harry Phillips, a real estate and loan broker, against R. G. Dun & Co., the damages being placed at $100,000. Civil proceedings in the same amount, and a criminal action have been brought against Edward Eden. Mr. Phillips is a promoter of financial enterprises.

A deal is being engineered to consolidate the wire, wire nail and wire rod interests in the United States. The capital will be $25,000,000.

The model of the caravel, Santa Maria, the flag ship of Christopher Columbus, for the world's fair, has arrived in New York.

The testimonials which the mail brings in every day run thus: "Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup cured the baby of croup." It cured me of a most distressing cough;" or "it cured my little boy of sore-throat." "We could not do without it."

George Simmons lost a satchel at Raleigh, N. C., containing $5,000 in bonds.

Should be kept at stables and stock-yards.—Salvation Oil is the best friend not only of man, but of dumb beasts as well. For swelled joints, strained tendons, old sores, saddle galls, and wounds of all kinds, there is no remedy like Salvation Oil. Price 25 cents per bottle.

The salmon pack on the Frazer river for 1892 was the smallest in many years.

The Most Pleasant Way

Of preventing the grippe, colds, headaches, and fevers is to use the liquid laxative remedy Syrup of Figs, whenever the system needs a gentle, yet effective cleansing. To be benefited one must get the true remedy manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only. For sale by all druggists in 50c. and $1 bottles.

Judge Coffee signed an order at San Francisco settling the final account of P. J. Corbett as guardian of the estate of Henry MacDonald. His findings are to the effect that Corbett mismanaged the estate and wasted the property and is entitled to no compensation for his services.

"'Brown's Bronchial Troches' are excellent for the relief of Hoarseness or Sore Throat. They are exceedingly effective."—Christian World, London, Eng.

At a special meeting of the Boston stock exchange a resolution was adopted calling for the repeal of the Sherman act of 1890 so far as it relates to the purchase of silver by the government.

Catarrh Cannot Be Cured

with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is not a quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years, and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing Catarrh. Send for testimonials, free.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Props., Toledo, O.
Sold by druggists, price 75c.

The sensational story sent from Ishpeming, Mich., that Jemael Schuman had been murdered by Anto Murray, an emissary of a French secret society, is a canard. Schurman accidentally shot himself. No suspicion of guilt attaches to Murray.

Charges for Big Guns.

There are nine 110-ton guns in the British navy at the present time. The projectile fired from these guns when attacking ships or forts weighs exactly 1,800 pounds, and leaves the muzzle with a velocity of 2,105 feet per second, and has a destructive energy equal to 55,305 foot tons. When these monster engines of death are to be turned upon an army of men or a flotilla of ships they are loaded with cylinders of steel, each of which is filled with 2,300 four-ounce bullets. The amount of powder used behind such projectiles is something enormous —960 pounds to each charge.—St. Louis Republic.

Six cases of small pox are reported in Brooklyn.

The ballots used by the Colorado presidential electors were solid silver cards.

The Minter Dry Goods company of Sedalia, Mo., has made an assignment. Assets, $45,000; liabilities, $33,000.

It is estimated that there are 500,000 bushels of coal and 100 barges drifting in the ice near Cincinnati.

Schools at Prairie Mound, Ill., have been closed by diphtheria.

An Army of Ailments.

Lies in ambush for persons who postpone reforming a disordered condition of the stomach, liver and bowels. For unhealthful conditions of these organs, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is a sovereign remedy, and against the ills to which they give rise an adequate defence. Be on time if you are troubled with indigestion, liver complaint or constipation. The Bitters will cure these, as well as malarial, nervous and kidney ailments.

Now is the time to treat Catarrh of long standing. Ely's Cream Balm reaches old and obstinate cases, where all other remedies fail. Do not neglect procuring a bottle, as in it lies the relief you seek.

Rev. H. H. Fairall, D. D., editor of the Iowa Methodist says editorially, "We have tested the merits of Ely's Cream Balm, and believe that, by a thorough course of treatment, it will cure almost every case of catarrh. Ministers as a class are afflicted with head and throat troubles, and catarrh seems more prevalent than ever. We cannot recommend Ely's Cream Balm too highly."

Apply Balm into each nostril. It is Quickly Absorbed. Gives Relief at once. Price 50 cents at Druggists or by mail.
ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren St., New York.

"German Syrup"

My acquaintance with Boschee's German Syrup was made about fourteen years ago. I contracted a cold which resulted in a hoarseness and cough which disabled me from filling my pulpit for a number of Sabbaths. After trying a physician, without obtaining relief I saw the advertisement of your remedy and obtained a bottle. I received quick and permanent help. I never hesitate to tell my experience. Rev. W. H. Haggerty, Martinsville, N.J. ⊕

HOME TREATMENT For All Chronic Diseases Pamphlet sent free. ST. PAUL MEDICAL & SURGICAL INSTITUTE, Merrill Bldg., St. Paul, Minn.

PROMPT, GOOD WORK.

SAINT JACOBS OIL TRY IT

RHEUMATISM.

Mr. Willet F. Cook, Canajoharie, N. Y., writes: "Awoke one morning with excruciating pains in my shoulder. Tried various reliefs for sudden pains without effect; went to my office; the pain became insufferable; went home at 11 o'clock and used ST. JACOBS OIL; effect magical, pain ceased, and at 1 o'clock went to work; cure permanent."

NEURALGIA.

LITTLE RAPIDS, WIS.

My wife suffered with such intense neuralgic pains in the face, she thought she would die. She bathed her face and head with ST. JACOBS OIL, and it cured her in four hours.

CARL SCHEIBE.

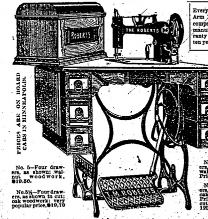
"WELL BRED, SOON WED." GIRLS WHO USE

SAPOLIO

ARE QUICKLY MARRIED. TRY IT IN YOUR NEXT HOUSE-CLEANING.

ROBERTS' HIGH-ARM IMPROVED SEWING MACHINE

Is sold only on one condition, and this is: It must be returned at our expense if it does not give entire satisfaction after you have used it thirty days. This cut is a representation of the Roberts High-Arm New Improved Sewing Machine.



Every Roberts High-Arm Machine is accompanied by the manufacturer's warranty certificate of ten years.

PRICES ARE ON BOARD CARS IN MINNEAPOLIS.

The Roberts is made especially for us and bears our brand, and we do not wish a single machine kept that is not perfectly satisfactory.

No. 5—Four drawers, as shown; walnut woodwork, $19.50.

No. 5½—Four drawers, as shown in cut; oak woodwork; very popular price, $19.70

No. 6—Six drawers, 3 on each side; walnut woodwork. Price, $20.50.

No. 6½—Six drawers, 3 on each side; oak woodwork. Price, $20.80. See cut. Weight (crated) 120 lbs.

READ THIS—To show our confidence in our sewing machines we make the following offer: We will ship one machine by express on 30 days' trial, to any express office on a railroad within 400 miles of Minneapolis under the following conditions: When a machine arrives at the express office the person ordering it deposits with the express agent the price of the machine together with transportation charges and the return charges on the money. The express agent is instructed on each C. O. D. bill to hold the money 30 days. If by the expiration of 30 days the machine is not returned to him, the express agent sends us the money, but if returned he pays back every cent of the money deposited to the person who deposits it, and sends us the machine at our expense both ways. If you want the machine shipped on these terms, please be particular to say so in your order.

Please note that we do not ship machines by express upon these terms to any point more than 400 miles from Minneapolis, as the charges would be too high, and it would be much better to ship by freight. Machines ordered by freight and paid for may be returned if unsatisfactory, after 30 days' trial at our expense, both ways, and money will be refunded. Similar to the Domestic, White, Goodrich and other well known machines. Made of the best material: simple and durable; cylindrical self-threading shuttle and large bobbin; self-setting needle, and all latest improvements to a lock-stitch machine; comparatively noiseless and very light running; all working parts finished in nickle plate; handsome, strong and durable throughout.

For further description see our No. 107 Catalogue, just out, which will be sent by express, express paid, on receipt of 15 cents. This catalogue contains 815 pages and over 100,000 cuts and prices on Hardware, Cutlery, Bicycles Stoves, Tinware, Lumber, Doors, Windows, Toys, Sporting Goods, Paints, Oils, Baby Carriages, Musical Instruments, Pianos and Organs, Fencing, Sewing Machines, Buggies, Wagons, Rubber Goods, Books, Bibles, Stationery, Lamps, Queensware, Clocks and Watches, Silverware, Drugs, Tents and Flags, Stack and Wagon Covers, Carpets, Clothing, Hats, Caps, etc., Furniture, Harness, Farm Implements, Dry Goods, Notions, and also a full line of Groceries. Address T. M. ROBERTS' SUPPLY HOUSE, 503 and 510 Nicollet avenue, Minneapolis, Minn.

WITH A CALENDAR.

All these calendar leaves, my friend,
Are alike as to the spaces,
Yet finely unlike from beginning to end
In the words that line their faces.

So, though all days of the year must be
Of the four-and-twenty measure,
Yet wide may be their diversity
For others' behoof and pleasure.

Need life be a rueful monotone
Because of its pain and sorrow?
Those are the pillars of Wisdom's throne
Whereon to-day and to-morrow

We can inscribe some word or deed
That shall spur a soul to duty;
Shall hearten its toil or succor its need,
Or lift it up with beauty.
—Charlotte Fiske Bates, Harpers's Bazar.

A NEW YORK MARRIAGE.

Everett Mableford had been for many years a man of prominence in New York. He had by no means reached his present dignity of repute by a fervid struggle from lower ranks, in which mountain's of opposition must be scalded and chasms of disheartenment bridged over. There had been nothing in his quietly successful career half so traditionally "American."

He had never profited by any sudden caprice of fortune. I am not prepared even to state that he was a representative American product at all, apart from the question of his being a distinctively New York one. And yet possibly he could alone have existed in New York. He had that carelessness about the city of his birth—its importance, its population, its general bigness—which is rarely found in a Boston man, and which may be external, but is not always latent, in a Londoner. He had grown with the great, growing, monotonous metropolis, and he occupied himself very lukewarmly in thinking Central Park a superb airing ground, or in estimating the Seventh avenue boulevard as a future Champs Elysees.

I first met Mabelford on really friendly terms when the Twentieth Century Club was started by a few New York ladies and gentlemen who believed in the perfectly untrammelled discussion of all subjects left remarkable beneath the visiting moon. With his commanding form, his powerful curving nose, his abundant iron-gray moustache, his ready smile and his eye of a fresh, crystalline hazel, he was truly as winsome as he was imposing to look upon. Both he and I were interested in the progress and welfare of the club as an idea, an undertaking.

Broadly viewed, he stood in his era as an instance of healthful and placid receptivity rather than of any active intellectual creation. "You sometimes remind me," I once said to him, "of a commodious and well-furnished room, perilous to any rash insect that should creep into the folds of its tapestries, blessed by salubrious ventilation." As a look of genial dismay crossed his face, I added, laughing: "And you have some very good, fanciful bric-a-brac on your mantel, and what there is choice of its kind, without a hint of trumpery."

He shook is head, answering my smile as he did so. "Bric-a-brac won't complete your metaphor properly," he said. "It has too artifical a suggestion. You must allow a few flowers, growing with natural grace on my window ledges."

"I'll allow you one," was my reply, as a certain new thought crossed me. "Your daughter, a blush rosebud with the dew in it!"

My words pleased him, for he knew the genuine appreciation from which they had sprung. And they were beyond doubt invited by Hilda Mabelford, his only child of whom I had just spoken.

Hilda was then a little past her twentieth year. She had lost her mother while quite a child, but the watchful, adoring fondness of her remaining parent had more than softened the rigors of this bereavement. No effort had been spared to make her education ample and important. She had enjoyed every possible advantage of travel, every most careful and thorough detail of tuition. She was today a living embodiment of her father's best and most sensible theories.

"What chiefly strikes me as amazing in New York society," Hilda Mabelford once said to me, with her arch and wise little smile, "is that it should really consider itself an aristocracy at all. In London, in Paris, in Vienna, the matter is all perfectly apparent. But here! Why, who are the best of us, from any ridiculously patrician point of view, but a family of immigrants? They tell me that I am born, on both sides, of people who have position.' It seems to me that the Mabelfords and the Ten Eycks both have respectability, through several generations of gentlemen and ladies, but I can't perceive that this fact gives them the right to call themselves better than many other persons whose record here is just as clean and honest as theirs. I confess, but I can never quite determine, what is meant by 'position' in New York. We are a democracy, are we not? Our 'position' is what we make and maintain, each for himself, by moral conduct, mental advancement and polite breeding. If fate should ever launch me among a body of natives who denied that two and two make four, I don't see how I could help growing didactic over the majority of the multiplication table. Do you?"

"No," I laughed, amused as much by her sudded appeal as by the refreshing nudity of her frankness. "I think you see our pitiable sham of caste here just as it must affect European eyes. I have the fancy that all of London which concerns itself in the least with New York must be looking at us with a smile of mixed surprise and mockery."

"So it does!" exclaimed Hilda, vehemently. "And we might have shown London something so much more consistent, consequent and dignified. But to-day she shames us by a liberality of social feeling to which our petty cliques are despicably provincial—ours, in the greatest city of the greatest republic on earth! What author, painter, actor, of conceded power, does New York socially countenance? Not one born and nurtured within her own atmosphere. And yet London delights to honor her own sons of just this noble intellectual kind!"

Hilda spoke these words with a remarkable degree of earnestness. I knew that with her father's full permission she had rather coolly disdained the fashionable, white-waistcoated, lustrously-booted throng of young gentlemen, and that she had extended hospitality to more than one able man of letters, worthy artist or capable actor. I knew that the "swells," who graciously allowed her to be des notres by right of birth, were becoming scandalized by her republican tenets.

At one time Mabelford had spoken with combined feeling and force of the way in which he regarded his daughter's choice of a future husband. I listened intently enough for I had just then the strongest reason to acquaint myself with his full judicial attitude.

"I want Hilda," he said, to marry a man who is worthy of her, and whom she sincerely loves. But I have no wish that his worthiness shall take any form of worldly distinction. It isn't at all requisite with me that he shall be a nabob, or the son of a nabob, or even the remote cousin of one. If he is not an adequate definition of that indefinable somebody whom we call a gentleman, I shall be heartily sorry. But I think that my explanation of a gentleman, if I could ever phrase it accurately rather than feel it intuitively, would be at once wider and narrower than that of many people whom I know. Should Hilda choose a man with intellect below her own, I should not deplore this selection as a mistake; it is indeed more than probable that she will hit upon some one who is either considerably above her or considerably below her in gifts of the mind."

"Your first prophecy," I said, "strikes me as by no means astute."

"Pshaw, my friend; don't rate Hilda too high. I've done my best to make her what she is. But she is no genius; she is simply a very carefully trained young woman."

He did look the next few weeks, and he found that a Mr. Julius Asher was on terms of marked intimacy with his daughter. From the first Mabelford had liked this man, and after more than one agreeable and stimulating talk with him had decided that he was conspicuously able and intelligent.

Julius Asher was the son of a certain Mr. Tobias Asher, a Hebrew, who had gained a large fortune as a dry goods merchant in New York, and who now dwelt in easy luxury not far from Central Park. No great pecuniare expectations could be predicted for Julius; the Asher family was a large one, and although he would undoubtedly receive a handsome share of his father's wealth, such patrimony would prove by no means princely. But Julius, on the other hand, stood in the way of brilliantly succeeding as a lawyer. He had already won for himself, at the age of three-and-thirty, a valuable standing at the bar.

Mabelford soon saw the truth. Of all Hilda's admirers none had found so much favor with her as Julius Asher. Asher had never strived for acceptance among the fashionable potentates. He tolerated no patronage just as he permitted no rebuffs. Those who received him did so on the most strictly equal terms. He was sensitive about asking the slightest social indulgence; his secure self-esteem would have resented any hint of condescension. He was quite indifferent to being made one of the idlers at the prosperous New York clubs.

It was a thunderbolt to Mabelford. He looked at Hida with blank incredulity. Then he tried to control the evidence of how such things affected him, and said to her taking both her hands:

Mabelford had hardly made the discovery of which I have just written before his daughter, as he afterward told me, confessed to him that Julius Asher had asked her to become his wife.

"My dear child, are you serious?"

"Serious, papa?" echoed Hilda. Her face was tinged with flying blushes, and her lips trembled. "Do you think I would speak to you as I have done without being serious?"

"No, no, surely not, my dear," answered her father. "But you are aware—I mean you fully understand." He was still holding the girl's hand in his own as he now abruptly, almost precipitately paused. He searched her face with a look where grief and a kind humor were queerly commingled. "O, Hilda," he faltered, "you see exactly what I want to say. Don't you, darling?"

"No," she said, with a little hardness coming into her voice, while she drew away both hands. "I hope you do not mean, papa, that you dislike Julius Asper."

"Dislike him!" Mableford exclaimed. "Oh, far from that, Hilda!"

Her voice instantly softened. She looked up at her father with eyes that swam with tears. "Oh, I'm so glad of it if you really do like him!" she broke forth. "I want you so to like him. Nearly every one does, I find. He is so gentle, so modest, and yet he holds his own with so much manly simplicity."

"Yes," answered Mableford, gloomily. "I suppose he has to do a good deal of holding his own. It might have gone ill with him if he hadn't."

"Papa!" cried Hilda, her eyes flashing, "you like him and yet you—you remember that against him! Oh, I—I can hardly believe it of you! He wanted to speak to you first himself, but I told him I was enough of an American girl to say the first word, and that there might be this objection raised, though I had heard my father declare, twenty times at least, that his feelings were those of—of the warmest sympathy, and that all the bitter malignity, all the merciless hue-and-cry of past ages, had always made him feel indignant and shocked beyond measure. For you know that you did say this, papa!" Hilda now went on excitedly. "You know—"

"Yes, I do know it," Mableford broke in. "I haven't, I assure you, my dear, the remotest intention of denying it. I said all this about that wonderful, tenacious, indestructible people, but I always spoke of them with a collective significance, or perhaps not that either. It's all so entirely different a matter now, my dear—it has to do with the individual, not the race—it relates to a practical part of this—this question, Hilda, and one which closely concerns your happiness. I must have time, my child. I must think it all over."

Several hours later, Mabelford, who had come to me in dire dismay and trouble, and had told me of the conversation which I have just recorded from hearsay, broke into a self-mocking and most unwontedly cynical laugh. "I stammered there before my child," he said, "like a shamefaced schoolboy. I didn't dare meet those good, brave eyes of her. Why, this Julius Asher is a glorious young fellow. There's not the faintest thing against him; there's everything for him."

There was a little silence, during which Mabelford stared at me with a querulous, challenging look. His evident desire that I should contradict him would have held for me at any other time a pungent spice of fun. This grave, seignorial Mabelford might have continued his simile of the schoolboy; he was just now like one bent on picking a quarrel, rust coelum. But I somehow took the affair with phlegm and sombreness. I did not even smile, and I soon said with some bitterness:

"You know, I suppose, that he is a Jew."

Mabelford's eyes kindled. "Do you say that contemptuously?"

"I state it as a fact."

"And it is one supremely to his credit."

"You mean because he has made for himself so pleasant and secure a position."

"No, I mean nothing whatever of the sort. I mean because the Hebrew race is worthy of undying respect, and because its generations on generations of outraged yet patiently enduring ancestors invest it with a dignity which no other nation really possesses. When I observe, in this nineteenth century, the petty antipathy and the vulgar avoidance which are shown Hebrews of capacity and achievement by men who are in all ways their inferiors, I ask myself whether I would not rather be a fetish-worshipping Hottentot, without a single educational boon amid my barbarism, than tread the soil of civilized centres and yet so neglect all chances to glean a little golden wisdom."

"Truly, Mabelford," I said, you astonish me." I tried to catch his eye now, but he would not let me do so. He had risen and began to pace the floor of my library.

"Think of what a history is theirs!" he exclaimed; and the fancy crossed my mind that he now addressed his own thoughts more than he did myself. "For years and years they were forbidden the exercise of all trades except that of peddling old clothes; they were denied intercourse with their fellow-citizens; they were oppressively, brutally taxed; they were often in Ghettos and in Judengassen; they were often denied even the right of marriage, except under tyrannical laws meant to check their future growth. They have suffered countless fierce persecutions; they have fallen in droves under the sword and at the stake. From England they were expelled in the thirteenth century, from Spain and Portugal in the fifteenth! And yet, amid untold outrage and scorn, their superb vitality has endured, has even thriven, and today they number over six millions of souls in Europe and America!"

"Well, my friend," I replied, you're undergoing your temptation of St. Anthony. You'll come out all right before long, depend upon it. I agree with you most heartily in all that you have said about the frightful wrong inflicted on the Hebrew race, and their unquenchable ethnological pluck. (Pardon my hint of slang at so solemn a moment.) But I don't believe Julius Asher requires half so remote and awful an endorsement to make you accept him as a son-in-law. He's too fine a fellow to need it, and you're too sensible a reasoner to ask it."

Mabelford rose, and came toward me! "Confound you!" he cried, with a scowl, "you're laughing at me!"

"Of course I am," I said. "You'll laugh at yourself tomorrow."

He never quite did that. But he gave his full consent to the marriage. The gossip of consternation and disapproval raged in select cliques for almost a month afterward. But it died away like the foam on deep waves, that soon hisses itself to nothing. And underneath it all lay that tide of good which always takes its life from a strong and courageous protest against blind and senseless codes. The union of Hilda and Julius has been a very happy one for themselves—an equally happy one, no doubt, for him who did not find an easy task in sanctioning it.

I think Mabelford has now more than partially forgotten the sudden struggle with which he was so unexpectedly confronted. But to me it is still a very real memory, and has convinced me more than ever of how long and wide a shadow the sins of our dead forefathers can yet cast over this laboring little planet.—Edgar Fawcett.

A ROOFLESS THEATRE.

How a Greek Tragedy Was Performed in Olden Times.

A Greek theatre was so arranged that the actors should stand on a high stage, furnished with scenery and all other requisites, while a distant body of performers, called the chorus, had their place in what we should call the pit, but which the Greeks called the orchestra—a large flat circular enclosure, larger than the arena of any modern circus, and reaching from the verge of the stage to the rim of the lowest tier of benches which surrounded the enclosure. Here the chorus, who supplied both music and action to the development of the drama, had their traditional place.

The flimsy contrivances of gauze and canvas which do duty for scenes in a modern theatre were very far from satisfying the artistic nature of the Greeks. If the exterior of a house was to be represented, the facade would be built up of huge blocks of wood, painted to resemble stone. If an interior were portrayed, solid walls and massive furniture would be seen on the stage. For open-air scenes, the artist endeavored as far as possible to bring in the resources of nature to their aid; and as there was a park at the back of most theatres, the eyes of the specators were regaled with real trees, real emerald turf, and sometimes real waterfalls plashing down a rock. The theatre itself had no roof; the performance took place in broad day, with the sun shining overhead, and the blue sky beaming down on the spectators.

The tragedy commenced by the curtain rolling down—it sank on rollers into the stage, while ours rises up to the flies—and revealing the scene in all its beauty to the spectators. Then the sound of instruments was heard and the chorus, four or six abreast, marched in artillery order into the orchestra. They played flutes and lyres as they walked, the tune generally being a military march, to the sound of which they performed various martial evolutions in the orchestra, and then grouped themselves round the altar which rose in the midst of the large arena. When they took their place at the altar, the tune of the march ceased, and some sitting, some standing, in the attitude of classic repose, they commenced the overture to the tragedy.

ROUGH ON POOR HIRAM.

His Enterprising Mamma Fails to Make a Little Railroad Deal.

An elderly woman with New England thrift written all over her face stood at the ticket office in a Boston station the other morning and inquired the price of a ticket to New York, according to the World.

"Four ninety-eight," answered the agent, laconically.

"Couldn't you make a reduction for a party?" she asked.

"How large a party?" demanded the ticket-seller, becoming interested.

"Three," answered the thrifty woman.

"No, madam, no reduction."

"Well, do you make a reduction for children?"

"How old a child?"

"Fourteen," answered the mother, nodding towards a young, raw-boned giant in woolen muffler and mittens.

"No, madam. Full fare for all children over 11."

She turned away and rejoined her husband and son, who stood waiting the result of her financiering.

"It can't be done, Hiram," she announced. "You can't go with your pa and me. I've always heard that these railroad companies were awful hard on the poor. So you'll have to go back home to Saugus, but we'll bring you something home."

And Hiram, sadly wiping his eyes on his woolen mittens, returned to Saugus, while his parents took two tickets from the grinding railroad company.

IN THE PAST TENSE.

A Love Story Broken Up Into Small Fragments.

The fair girl had promised to be his wife, and he was more than proud of it.

Possibly she was not, because he had only his money to recommend him.

In any event, she had made him swear to keep it a secret until she should tell him to divulge it.

It might have been she had others on the string whom she wished to let down easy, says the Detroit Free Press.

Such things have happened.

One week after he had given her his sacred word of honor she made a round of calls.

When she came home she was any thing but angelic in her temper.

She said little, however, for she knew he would be around in the evening.

He did that seven times a week and was thoroughly unhappy because it was not possible to make it eight or ten.

When he met her betimes she was so frigid that he asked if the register were not turned off.

"Did you," she said, "tell your sister and several other people we were engaged?"

"Yes," he responded, hesitatingly.

Her face flushed and her lips quivered with anger.

She was about to fly off the handle, but she took a second thought.

He could see the change, and he felt relieved.

"Pardon me," she said, "for almost forgetting myself. You only spoke the truth. We were engaged."

And the emphasis she crowded into that "were" broke his heart into 575 pieces.

WHAT'S IN A NAME.

It Might Be Johnny, but It Meant a Howling Terror.

He was a small boy traveling with his father and mother on a train, and the way in which he war-whooped up and down the car aisle made him a terror to the other passengers, says the Detroit Free Press.

"Sit still!" said his father, in a fog-horn voice; "how can I hear myself think when you're making such a racket?"

"There, there, Johnny, dear; don't disturb pa," said his fond mother.

But the infant terror kicked and cried, and refused to keep one position a second at a time.

"I'd like to have the raisin' o' that boy, I just would," said a sharp-featured woman who had her knitting along.

"Sit still, Johnny, dear," said his mother placidly, for the nine hundredth time.

"Why don't you call him John? He might pay more attention to you, then," said his father, crossly.

"What's in a name?" asked the mother; "by any other name he would be our Johnny still."

"Then for heaven's sake, give him another name," retorted his pa, "for he hasn't been still a moment with the one he has."

Then he plugged his ears with cotton while the other passengers encored his last remark.

His Calculation Was Correct.

Professor Truman Henry Safford is one of the most remarkable lightning calculators now living, says Tit Bits.

One day a gentleman who had heard of his powers and wished to make a test, said to him, "I have a little problem for you, Professor Safford. I was born August 15th, 1852, at three o'clock in the afternoon; this is June 20th, 1883, and it is just three o'clock. Now can you tell me my age in seconds?"

The great man frowned, bent his head, and began to walk rapidly up and down, twisting his moustache and clasping and unclasping his hands in his nervous way. After a moment or so he returned the answer, which was somewhere in the billions.

The gentleman produced a paper containing the problem worked out, and said, with a superior smile, "Well, Professor, I'll give you the credit for great genius, but you're several thousands out."

The Professor stretched out his hands for the paper, and, running over the calculation, said, contemptuously, "Humph! You've left out the leap-years!"

F. W Thornton of Fayetteville, N. C., dry goods, failed. He owes $200,000.

A dangerous $2 counterfeit bill is being circulated in St. Louis.

The affairs of the Life Union and National Benefit society of New York, and of the State Mutual Benefit association of Syracuse, N. Y., are in bad shape.

The coast defense vessel Monterey developed an excess of 5,400 horse power speed limit, and the Union Iron works will receive $20,000 over the contract price.

The Rev. Edward L. Clark, pastor of the Church of the Puritans, New York, has resigned from the ministry of the Presbyterian church. He said the church was too narrow.

Allen's Iron Tonic Bitters strengthen the system. All genuine bear the signature of J. P. Allen, Druggist, St. Paul, Minn.

Cleanliness, exercise, and diet are the cardinal virtues of good health. Take care of the first two and if you know what and how to eat you need never be ill. It is claimed that Garfield Tea, a simple herb remedy, overcomes the results of wrong living.

The Grip

Left me in a terribly weak condition: my health nearly wrecked. My appetite was all gone. I had no strength, felt tired all the time, had disagreeable roaring noises in my head, like a waterfall. I also had severe headaches and severe sinking pains in my stomach. Having heard so much about Hood's Sarsaparilla, I concluded to try it. All the disagreeable effects of the Grip are gone. I am free from pains and aches, and believe Hoods Sarsaparilla is surely curing my catarrh. I recommend it to all." Geo. W. Cook, St. Johnsbury, Vt.

Geo. W. Cook.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures

HOOD'S PILLS cure Constipation by restoring the peristaltic action of the alimentary canal

ULCERS,
CANCERS,
SCROFULA,
SALT RHEUM,
RHEUMATISM,
BLOOD POISON.

these and every kindred disease arising from impure blood successfully treated by that never-failing and best of all tonics and medicines,

SWIFT'S SPECIFIC SSS

Books on Blood and Skin Diseases free.
Printed testimonials sent on application. Address
The Swift Specific Co.,
ATLANTA, GA.

WORDS OF WARNING

There is a malady always lying in wait for the sons of men. It comes with every change of weather, with every rain storm, in every blizzard its name is cold. It is the parent of more than half of the maladies that afflict the human race. When it fastens its bony fingers upon you take ... re and escape from its clutch as soon as possible. Get a bottle of Reid's German Cough & Kidney Cure. This great remedy is the best thing for colds of any thing that was ever tried. It contains no poison and you can give it to the feeblest child without danger. If your druggist will not get it for, you write us a postal card, send it to the SYLVAN REMEDY CO Peoria Ill. and we will send you free, by mail, a trial bottle.

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till cured. DR. J. STEPHENS, Lebanon, Ohio.

FREE An extract of 70 pages of Dr. Nelson's Celebrated book "Facts for the sick." for 4 cents in stamps. Dr. Nelson corner of Washington and 3rd Aves., South Minneapolis, Minn.

Garfield Tea Overcomes results of bad eating. Cures Constipation, Restores Complexion, Saves Doctors' Bills. Sample free. GARFIELD TEA CO., 319 W. 45th St., N.Y.
Cures Sick Headache

TELEGRAPHY
AND ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING
Taught by practical Telegraphers and Electricians. No department of a Business College, but a thorough special course. Circulars Free. McAllister's School of Telegraphy, 519 Nicollet Av., Minneapolis, Minn.

CURES CATARRH
LONDON BALM
LONDON BALM CO. NEW YORK
CURES CATARRH HAY FEVER
PRICE 50 CTS
SOLD BY YOUR DRUGGIST.

MEN We will send you the MARVELOUS and UNFAILING French Preparation, CALTHOS FREE by MAIL, and a legally executed guarantee that CALTHOS will STOP Discharges and Emissions, CURE Varicocele, and RESTORE Lost Vigor.
Use it & pay if satisfied.
Von Mohl Co., Importers, Cincinnati, Ohio.

HOUSES
Painted with the
Clare-Speaker Paint
Will look well for years. This paint covers more, looks better and wears longer than any other. The colors are the most modern shades. If you intend painting it will pay to use these goods. Color cards and valuable information free. Ask your dealer for color cards or address THE CLARE-SPEAKER CO., Minneapolis, Minn.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.
CATARRH
Sold by Druggists or sent by mail. 50c. E. T. Hazeltine, Warren, Pa.

Minn Hist Society

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

St. Hilaire Spectator.

VOLUME XI. ST. HILAIRE, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 25, 1893. NUMBER 27.

THE NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

DIGEST OF THE NEWS FROM ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

All Important Occurrences of the Past Week, Boiled Down and Arranged for Rapid Reading.

Washington.

Application for authority to organize the First National Bank of Hartlet, Iowa, and the Northwestern National Bank of Superior, Wis., have been filed with the controller of the currency.

Congress will consider a plan to abolish all pension agencies for the payment of pensioners, and provide for the disbursement of this money from the treasury directly by means of checks.

The supreme court yesterday advanced the case of Alex F. Smith vs. Eddy B. Townsend in the settlement of which is involved a title to a large part of the homestead entries in Oklahoma. It is what is called a "sooner" case.

A convention of delegates from all the states of the Union of the National League for Promoting Good Roads will open to-morrow at Chamberlin's hotel. From seventy-five to one hundred delegates are already in the city. Senator Manderson of Nebraska will preside.

The bill to encourage the construction of an electric railroad between Chicago and St. Louis, which is to run trains at 100 miles an hour, by permitting the entry duty free of materials for the road, was debated at some length in the ways and means committee yesterday morning, but no action was taken. The discussion showed that the committee is not favorable to the bill.

Representative Cummings, chairman of the committee on library, which is conducting an inquiry into alleged favoritism on the part of the department of state in furnishing copies of archives to certain persons and refusing it to others, has received a letter from William Henry Smith, in which he states that if he is unable to appear before a committee he will go before a commissioner and make an affidavit as to his testimony. Until this is done the committee will take no action.

Accidental Happenings.

A fire at Brewster, N. Y., destroyed the town hall, Hall & Smith Bros.' store.

A boiler in the Kelly-Metz mill at Muncie, Ind., exploded, causing a loss of $2,500. No person was injured.

An explosion of gas in a furnace fired the clothing of Annie Meyer, a New York servant, and she burned to death.

L. C. Sturgess was burned to death near Rockford, Ill., in attempting to rescue $600 from a burning building.

Arthur Allan was smothered at Montreal while asleep, a lighted cigar falling into a waste basket.

A sleigh at Attleboro, R. I., is struck by a train and eight of its occupants killed and twenty badly wounded.

Fire at Groveton, Tex., destroyed 1,000,000 feet of dressed lumber and three loaded cars. Loss, $20,000.

F. H. Merritt's bottling establishment, the postoffice and the printing office of the Brewster Standard. The loss is upward of $100,000, the insurance on which will amount to about $75,000.

As the funeral cortege of John Yoereick was crossing a cable line at Chicago, the hearse collided with a grip car. The coffin was hurled from the hearse, the lid broken off and and the corpse forced half-way out of the coffin. The crowd were about to mob the gripman of the car when the police arrived and quelled the disturbance.

Personal Mention.

Sam Jones wants to arrange a joint debate with Ingersoll.

David J. Carey is suing his aunt, Mrs. W. H. Price of New York, to get possession of his mother's family Bible.

Robert Hubbard Nelson, a member of the junior class of Yale university, died of brain fever caused by overstudy.

It is said that his success in various enterprises is making Secretary of War Elkins one of the wealthiest men of the country.

A trio of rich New York sisters, afflicted with the Paderewski craze, have embroidered on their hose the first phrase of the master's famous minuet.

Willis Emory, the youngest son of Commander W. E. Emory, formerly naval attache of the American legation in London, died in Paris.

George R. Graham, founder of Graham's Magazine, is critically ill at Orange, N. J., where he has long been supported by George W. Childs.

Mittens Willett, the actress, is dying in New York, of cancer. She is young, handsome and an excellent actress. She has traveled with McCollogh, Barrett, Clara Morris and others.

Dr. M. O. Ricketts (colored) of Omaha is a member of the Nebraska legislature. The doctor is a bright, intelligent looking gentleman, and in conversation the smoothest in the house. He enjoys the distinction of being the only colored man that ever held a seat in the Nebraska legislature.

Among the Wicked.

A large discrepancy is said to have been discovered in the accounts of the ex-state auditor of Illinois.

John McFee, an Indianapolis lawyer, is charged with forgeries amounting to $6,000. He has fled.

John Lannagin, living near Marisa, Ill., committed suicide by shooting himself.

Coughlin, sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder of Dr. Cronin in Chicago, is granted a new trial. It is believed that he cannot be convicted again.

Rev. Nathaniel Hyde of Indianapolis wrote to the board of public safety that many young girls were held prisoners in houses of bad repute. The police are investigating.

G. A. Stanton, a New York insurance broker, has been arrested for criminal libel, charged with having issued a circular reflecting on the standing of the American Assurance Lloyds.

Robert George, nephew of United States Senator J. T. George, committed suicide at Itabena, Miss., while on his way to the Carrollton jail in charge of a sheriff's posse. Young George was charged with the murder of Capt. W. B. Prince, one of the most prominent and wealthy planters in the state.

Judge Peters at St. Johns, N. S., sentenced Dr. Randell and C. B. Weldon to the penitentiary for five years. The prisoners were recently found guilty of defrauding insurance companies and benefit associations out of large amounts by effecting "graveyard" insurance upon a number of people in Nova Scotia.

United States officers ran down the Henry Starr gang of desperadoes near Hartlesville, thirty miles northeast of Clairmont, I. Ter. In the fight which followed the officers succeeded in killing one of the desperadoes outright and mortally wounding another. The wounded man has five bullet holes through him and he is expected to die. Henry Starr, leader of the gang, escaped.

In front of the Tremont hotel at Fort Scott, Kan., Mrs. Annie Crawford was seized by a man, who covered her face with a cloth saturated with chloroform, and was robbed of her jewelry, consisting of earrings, diamond finger rings and $8 in money. An hour later she was found unconscious in front of her mother's residence, and was not able to tell her experience until this morning. She is still very ill. Mrs. Crawford is the wife of a railroad conductor of Chicago, and has been visiting her mother at this place.

From Other Shores.

Fifty persons are killed in the Congo country by a dynamite explosion.

The body of a woman cut in 178 pieces was found in a coffee sack at Moscow recently. Nothing has been learned as to the identity of her slayer.

An official inquiry into the condition of the Banco Romana reveals that the note issue, instead of being 73,000,000 lire, as announced by the bank, reaches a total of 135,000,000 lire.

Domico Taragnello, an Italian, and Sind Kee, a Chinaman, were hanged at Nanaimo, B. C. Each man murdered his fellow countryman. Kee walked to his doom firmly, while Taragnello had to be dragged to the scaffold.

The French steamship St. Marie, from Madrid and Havre, ran down an Italian bark off Villa Franca during a heavy sleet storm. The bark went down with all her crew of thirteen men.

The strike of the miners in the Saar district, Germany, has ended. All the miners in Saarbrook and vicinity are at work, and the protest meetings have been abandoned. Quiet is prevailing throughout the mining region.

Mr. Black, D. S. C., a teacher of classics and mathematics, his wife and two-year-old son, were found dead in their home at Hove, a suburb of Brighton, by some neighbors. It is possible that Black murdered his wife and child and then committed suicide by taking poison.

Word reached Winnipeg of the death at Quebec of "Bob" Holloway, one of the leading insurance men of Winnipeg. Word of his death will be sad news to the Winnipeg curlers in St. Paul, as the deceased was very prominent in the game here.

Michael Davitt has consented to stand as a candidate for Northeast Cork, one of the seats to which William O'Brien was elected in July. Davitt's election is certain, there having been no opposition to the Nationalist candidate in 1885, 1886, 1887 and 1892.

The infanta Isabella has withdrawn her provisional promise to open the Chicago Columbian exposition. It has been learned from good authority that her chief reason for declining to visit the United States is that if she did so she would be obliged to visit old Cuba and Porto Rico, where yellow fever generally prevails.

At Queretaro, Mex., an attempt was made to arrest a lunatic, who was thought by his relatives to be in a condition requiring confinement. The lunatic, who was armed with a long knife, made a desperate effort to regain his liberty. He broke away from the officers and stabbed eight persons. Four of those injured will die. He was finally captured and locked up.

In the parliamentary Panama inquiry M. Stephane, M. Propper's clerk, who testified that he gave a list of compromised deputies to M. Clemenceau, was recalled. He reiterated in detail his statements as to the list received by him from Baron de Reinach and its delivery to M. Clemenceau, contradicting in every particular the denials made yesterday by Clemenceau before the committee.

Gossip of the Sports.

Stamford, Conn., for glory. The race will take place sometime in February.

Billy Murphy, the Australian featherweight, has arrived in New York, and will go into training at once for his fight with Johnny Griffin, the Braintree lad, before the Coney Island Athletic club Feb. 6.

J. C. Comstock of Kalamazoo, Mich., was defeated in a mixed wrestling match by W. H. Quinn of Detroit. The contest was for an $800 purse, and took place last evening at Kalamazoo.

Ted Pritchard, the English middleweight, will not visit America to battle with Alex. Greggins before the Crescent City Athletic club for the $6,000 purse offered by that organization. Pritchard cabled Richard K. Fox that the fight was off.

Miscellaneous Item.

New York city is short of coal.

An effort is being made to corner tin.

An emery wheel trust has been formed with a capital of $6,000,000.

An epidemic of scarlet fever is prevailing at Seminary, Ill. Over twenty children are sick with the disease.

Chinamen are illegally entering the United States at Detroit, crossing from Canada on the ice.

Steps are being taken to form a typewriter trust, to include the Remington, Caligraph, Hammond, Yost, Dinsmore and Brooks.

William Hazlett, who, with a companion, Potts, made a trip in a cask through the whirlpool of Niagara, has determined to undertake the feat again.

An anti-trust distillery, with a daily capacity of 600 barrels, is to be established at Louisville, Ky.

Pennsylvania will send 8,000 national guardsmen to the world's fair.

Natural gas has been discovered in large quantities on Paddy's Hen and Chicken island, about two miles above Memphis, in the Mississippi river.

The suit of M. T. Horine against Alfredo Barrilla, Patti's nephew, for $80,000 damages, for alienating the affections of Mrs. Horine, has been dismissed at Kansas City.

A party passed through Clarendon, Tex., with a petrified man five feet ten inches tall, on their way to the world's fair. The man was found in a cave in the Gaudaloupe mountains, New Mexico. A rusty, worm-eaten Sharps rifle was found near him.

When the will of Horace Smith of Springfield, Mass., was opened it was found that with the exception of $10,000 the entire estate, valued at about $3,000,000, was given to benevolent and charitable institutions.

W. D. Baron, secretary and general manager of the People's Mutual Accident association of Pittsburg, denies the statement attributed to Insurance Commissioner Luper of Pennsylvania that the company is hopelessly insolvent. The valid claims against the company do not exceed $6,000.

MINNESOTA LEGISLATURE.

Proceedings of the Legislature Day by Day.

FRIDAY, JAN. 13.

SENATE.

Senator Peterson, J. W., offered a resolution giving the railroad committee a clerk at $5 a day. Senator Grafe offered a similar resolution to give the appropriation committee a clerk. Senator Kelly gave notice of debate on the first resolution and Senator Leavitt on the second, and both went over.

A bill was introduced by Senator Wood memorializing congress to pass the anti-option bill, which was referred to the committee on grain and warehouses.

A bill to amend the law relating to religious corporations by adding a provision providing they shall not transfer their real estate was introduced by Senator Kiester and referred to the judiciary committee.

The memorial to congress urging the passage of stringent quarantine laws was reported back to the senate with the recommendation that it pass. The bill was then read the second and third times, under suspension of rules, and passed by a vote of 40 to 7.

The chair appointed Senators Sevatson, Towney, Dedon, Dean and Craven as the grain investigation committee called for by resolution passed yesterday.

HOUSE.

Mr. Fletcher, from the judiciary committee, reported on H. F. No. 38, (making it a misdemeanor to surrender any right of citizenship), and moved to render same to committee on labor. Adopted.

Mr. Anderson introduced a resolution to add to the regular standing committee of the house a special committee of five on dairy and dairy laws; adopted.

The resolution authorizing the house clerk, on the written request of any member to subscribe for newspapers to the amount of 21 cents a day for each member, was taken up and was lost.

SATURDAY, Jan. 14.

HOUSE.

The house transacted very little business yesterday morning and adjourned shortly after 11 o'clock until Monday at 4 p. m. When the roll was called Mr. Jacobson, evidently having in mind the senatorial election and the rumors connected therewith, wanted to know why there were so many absentees. He received no satisfaction, however, as Mr. Greer informed him that under the rules it is not necessary for a member to give a reason for his absence during one day.

Several bills were introduced, but not of a general character, and the only one of importance was the bill of Mr. Boggs, which readjusts the salaries of the county officers of St. Louis county on a somewhat liberal scale. This bill was passed under the suspension of the rules. Mr. Comstock of Hennepin also introduced a bill relating to insurance companies, which provides for the abolition of the 80 per cent clause. A similar bill is already before the house.

MONDAY, Jan. 16.

SENATE.

Senator Grafe called up the resolution offered Friday, giving the committees on enrollment a clerk. The resolution was adopted.

Senator Peterson introduced a resolution authorizing the president to appoint a clerk on the committee on railroads; Mr. Donnelly moved to amend by giving the chairman of the committee the power to appoint the clerk, the bill was lost and the original motion adopted.

Senator Sanborn offered a concurrent resolution adopting the rules of the joint session of the Twenty-seventh legislature as the rules of the joint session of this session. The resolution was adopted.

A large number of bills were introduced, among the most important being the following:

By Senator Probsfield—S. F. No. 77, a joint resolution memorializing congress in regard to the Pacific railway subsidies. After some little discussion it was passed by a vote of 35 to 1. Senator Dean alone voting in the negative.

By Senator Wood—S. F. No. 73, a bill requiring railroad companies to put in track scales at stations shipping 50,000 bushels of grain a year, and to manage and keep the same in repair, under penalty of $500 fine for failure to comply with the provisions of the law; to the committee on grain and warehouses.

By Senator Wood—S. F. No. 70, a bill in relation to elevator sites on railroad right of way and condemnation proceedings in reference thereto.

By Senator Tawney—S. F. No. 83, a bill providing for the commitment to insane asylums of men found to be insane after hearing in the district court.

HOUSE.

The following bills were introduced:

By Mr. Boggs—H. F. 87. to establish a state normal school at Duluth. It asks for an appropriation of $2,000 for plans and specifications. The building is not to cost over $100,000, and is to be built out of the reformatory stone at St. Cloud, and to be conditioned on Duluth donating five acres of land. Referred to state normal school committee.

By Mr. Peterson—H. F. 88, relating to taxable transfers of property. Referred to committee on judiciary.

By Mr. Walsh—H. F. No 89, to regulate travel on street cars. Companies are required to furnish seats and cannot eject for not paying fare if not so furnished. The fare made 3 cents if the passenger stands. To committee on incorporations.

By the Same—H. F. No. 91, to regulate travel on railways. The provisions are the same as in H. F. No. 89. The fare made 1 cent per mile if passenger stands.

By Mr. Noyes—H. F. No. 91, relating to animals running at large in Washington county; to Washington delegation.

By Mr. Wilson—H. F. No. 92, relating to the salary of supreme court reporters. After 1893 it is made the same as judge of district court, $3,000 per year. To committee on judiciary.

By the Same—H. F. 93 relating to indemnity insurance corporations against personal injuries. The indemnity company may be joined as defendants with the companies with which the injured may be employed. Referred to judiciary.

By Mr. Greer—H. F. 94, relating to probate courts. The state to furnish Minnesota reports. To committee on judiciary.

The house adjourned to 10 tomorrow.

TUESDAY, Jan. 17.

SENATE.

After the disposition of the anti-option resolution, the Lieut. Governor announced that the time had arrived for the election of a U. S. Senator.

Senator John Day Smith, of Hennepin, placed C. K. Davis in nomination. Daniel W. Lawler's name was placed in nomination by Senator McHale, and Senator Lommeb nominated S. M. Owen.

The ballot resulted as follows: Davis 20; Lawler 17; Owen, 11; Start, 1; Scheffer, 1; Lind, 1; Merriam 21.

HOUSE.

At noon, the speaker announced the election of a U. S. Senator in order.

C. K. Davis, D. W. Lawler and S. M. Owen were placed in nomination.

The vote resulted as follows; Davis, 67; Lawler, 31; Owen, 12; scattering, 8; absent 1.

WEDNESDAY, Jan. 18.

SENATE.

Senator Dedon offered a resolution calling for the appointment of a committee of three "to inquire into the manner of taxation of logs and lumber and also of railroad lands already disposed of and to report at their earliest convenience." The resolution was adopted.

The following bills were presented and referred:

By Senator Sanborn—S. F. No. 88, a bill appropriating $150,000 to erect a fire proof building for the use of the Minnesota Historical Society on their lot at the corner of Tenth and Wabash streets; to committee on public buildings.

By Senator McMillan—S. F. No. 88, a bill to amend Chapter 171 of the General Laws of 1885, allowing mortgages to purchase property on foreclosure; to committee on judiciary.

By Senator Tawney—S. F. No. 90, a bill to tax gifts, inheritances, at the rate of $2 on every $100 valuation in certain cases; to committee on judiciary.

By Senator Burkhardt—S. F. No. 93, a bill appropriating $1,200 to build bridges in Wabasha county; to the committee on roads and bridges.

By Senator Allen—S. F. No. 94, a bill to require the clerks and treasurers of independent school districts to publish the minutes of school meetings; to the committee on education.

By Senator Dougherty—S. F. No. 95, a bill to make title good to real estate, when husband or wife did not join in conveyance, provided it is shown that conveyance was made prior to 1880; to the committee on judiciary.

Senator Tawney offered a resolution for the appointment of a committee on sanitary affairs and state quarantine. The resolution was adopted.

Resolutions of respect on Ex-president Hayes were adopted.

The senate then met with the house in joint session.

HOUSE.

Mr. Noyes offered a resolution, that on account of the death of ex-President R. B. Hayes the flag of the capitol be put at half mast and a copy of the resolution be sent the family of the deceased. Adopted, with one negative vote cast by Mr. Salls.

Mr. Walsh called up his coal investigation resolution, offered on Jan. 10. It calls for a special joint committee of nine, three senators and six representatives. He moved its adoption, and spoke briefly in favor of the motion, and demanded the ayes and nays. The vote was: Ayes 82, nays 5.

Bills were introduced and referred as follows:

By Mr. Neilson—H. F. No. 111, relating to assignments by corporations, to dispense with filing of releases; to committee on judiciary.

By Mr. Cairns—H. F. No. 119, relating to the election law. It amends the law, to provide for additional judges of election, known as assistant judges, to facilitate counting of the ballots; to committee on elections.

By Mr. Jacobson—H. F. No. 121, relating to the sale of intoxicating liquors.

By Mr. Minette—H. F. No. 110, to authorize township supervisors to issue bonds for funding purposes and for town indebtedness. The bonds are limited to 7 per cent to run 15 years; to committee on towns and counties.

The house went into the committee of the whole. The mileage question was under discussion as was also the bill for pro-rating of liquor licenses. After considerable discussion the committee rose and reported progress.

JOINT SESSION.

The house and senate met in joint session at noon. The speaker announced the election of U. S. Senator in order and ordered the call of the roll. The vote resulted Davis; 85; Lawler, 49; Owen, 23; Scheffer, 2; Lind, 2; Dickinson, 1; Merriam, 2; Start, 1; Clapp, 8. C. K. Davis having received a majority was declared elected.

THURSDAY, Jan. 19.

SENATE.

Senator Crandall offered a resolution inquiring of the state treasurer why some railroad companies pay 1 per cent, others 2 per cent and still others 3 per cent gross earnings tax, as appears from his report, and why such gross earnings tax is not paid in equal percentages by all roads. The resolution was adopted.

The following bills were introduced and referred.

By Senator Glader—S. F. No. 103, a bill to appropriate $2,000 to widen and improve the channel of certain lakes in Kandiyohi county and Shokopee creek, in Swift county; to committee on roads and bridges.

By Senator Erickson—S. F. No. 104, a bill providing that one-half of the money received from liquor licenses by villages shall be turned into the county revenue fund; to committee on towns and counties.

By Senator Wood—S. F. No. 105, a bill to appropriate $5,000 to aid in building bridges in Marshall county; to committee on roads and bridges.

By Senator McMillan—S. F. No. 106, a bill to provide election penalties for township and village elections, to the committee on elections.

By Senator Stevens—S. F. No. 107, a bill to amend the law relating to roads and bridges; to committee on roads and bridges.

By Senator Stevens—S. F. No. 108, a bill to legalize the defective execution of deeds, etc., providing that the bill shall not apply to any instrument now in litigation; to committee on judiciary.

By Senator Tawney—S. F. No. 109, a bill to amend the probate code relating to wards and guardians and providing that where deceased left no more property than a homestead, notice to fix time need not be made; to committee on judiciary.

The senate then went into committee of the whole on general orders and after being in session some time, the committee rose and the senate adjourned.

HOUSE.

The grain and warehouse committee reported favorably on H. F. No. 34, with amendments. The report was recommitted.

The following bills were introduced and referred:

By Mr. Koerner—H. F. No. 122, relating to issue of licenses of intoxicating liquors in certain cases; to committee on temperance.

By Mr. Wacek—H. F. No. 125, to regulate elections; to committee on elections.

By Mr. Bjorge—H. F. No. 126, to repeal the law for capital punishment, and make murder punishable by life imprisonment; to judiciary committee.

By Mr. Gunn—H. F. No. 127, repealing the act of 1879 to punish drunkenness by fine and imprisonment; to the judiciary committee.

Rev. Mr. Wagoner—H. F. No. 128, to establish state elevator and warehouse by the state.

By Mr. Neilson—H. F. No. 129, relating to writs of attachment; to judiciary committee.

By Mr. Elliott—H. F. No. 130, regulating expenses of candidates; to committee on elections.

By Mr. Bleecker—H. F. No. 132, to regulate the holding of conventions and primary elections; to committee on elections.

The speaker, under the joint rule announced the elections of Cushman K. Davis as United States senator.

Africans Become Christians.

The Basle missionaries in the Cameroons, Africa, are witnessing the rapid growth of a very remarkable spontaneous movement among the natives of the Abo and Wuri countries. Societies have sprung up among them, calling themselves "the man of God," who have renounced idolatry, declared in favor of the Christian God, and keep the Sabbath. In the Abo country there is scarcely a single native town that has not one of these societies. Although unable to read, each member purchases and carries about with him a copy of the New Testament as an evidence of membership, and makes every effort to acquire some knowledge of it, at least by heart.

GEN. R. B. HAYES IS DEAD.

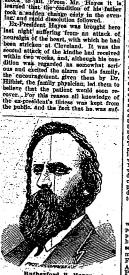
HIS DEMISE SUDDEN AND UNEXPECTED.

Neuralgia of the Heart, From Which He Had Been a Sufferer for Only a Few Days, Caused His Death.

But One Ex-President Left.

Fremont, Ohio, Jan. 18.—Ex-President R. B. Hayes died at 11 o'clock to-night, but the information of his death was not known for some time later, as everything was kept exceedingly quiet in the vicinity of the Hayes mansion. An early report that the condition of ex-President Hayes was improving nicely, and he was now resting easily, allayed most suspicion, so that the sudden appearance of Webb Hayes with the announcement that his father had just died proved a shock to all. From Mr. Hayes it is learned that the condition of his father took a sudden change early in the evening and rapid dissolution followed.

Ex-President Hayes was brought here last night suffering from an attack of neuralgia of the heart, with which he had been stricken at Cleveland. It was the second attack of the kind he had received within two weeks, and, although his condition was regarded as somewhat serious and excited the alarm of his family, the encouragement given them by Dr. Hilbist, the family physician, led them to believe that the patient would soon recover. For this reason all knowledge of the ex-president's illness was kept from the public and the fact that he was suffering from heart trouble did not become generally known. Dr. Hilbist remained almost constantly at the distinguished patient's bedside, no alarming symptoms appearing until this evening, when he became rapidly worse.



Rutherford B. Hayes.

Ex-President Hayes left home last Monday on a trip to Columbus, Buffalo and Cleveland. At the last mentioned place he spent a few days with his son, Webb C. Hayes During the last month he had complained of one or two slight attacks of neuralgia of the heart, but as they soon passed away he thought nothing of it. On Saturday he experienced a recurrence of the malady but being prepared for his way home proceeded on his journey accompanied by his son Webb. Word had been sent home by telegraph of the condition of the general, and he was met at the train by his son, Rutherford B. Hayes, and Dr. Hilbist, the family physician with a carriage. Entering the carriage they were driven to the Hayes mansion in Spiegel Grove, where all attention was given the stricken general during the day. Sunday the Hayes house was kept quiet and Dr. Hilbist spent most of the day watching at the bedside. The doctor stated that the ex-president had been suffering with a severe attack of heart neuralgia or angina pectoris which he had received while at Cleveland, but that he rallied somewhat, though he was not out of danger. To-day there was apparently no change and the death of the ex-president, when it came, was a terrible surprise.

No Hope for Murderer Harris.

Albany, Jan. 18.—The court of appeals to-day affirmed the judgment of the lower court in the case of the people vs. Carlyle W. N. Harris, appellant. This was an appeal from a judgment convicting Harris of murder in the first degree. The defendant was indicted by the grand jury in New York city in February for causing the death of Helen Neil Potts. Harris was secretly married to the girl under an assumed name, some twelve months before she died, and the capsules were given her by Harris a short time before the day set by the girl's mother for a public marriage.

With Stane and Besom.

St. Paul, Minn., Special, Jan. 18.—Yesterday was the opening day of the tournament of the international curling association, and the hundreds of visiting enthusiasts put in the time until the wee sma' hours this morning in a manner worthy of canny Scots. Little could be surmised as to the final outcome of the bonspiel from yesterday's sport, but the rinks from the far north seemed to be in the pink of condition, and Manitobans are likely to carry away many of the costly prizes offered, with the Milwaukee rinks for close competitors.

Street Railway Postal Service.

Washington, Jan. 18.—Postmaster Harlow of St. Louis reports that his street railway postal service has proved eminently successful in every particular. During the two weeks covered by the report, the number of pieces of local mail received and delivered, at a saving of from four to five hours each, has been from 300 to 500 daily.

Dwelling House Destroyed.

Hastings, Minn., Special, Jan. 18.—The dwelling of W. G. Cooper was burned to-day. There was a small insurance on the building in the St. Paul Fire and Marine.

Flouring Mills in Ashes.

Deadwood, S. D., Jan. 18—The Whitewood flouring mills, with a capacity for fifty barrels per day, were destroyed by fire to-day. Loss, $15,000; insured.

Arrested for Forgery.

Mason City, Iowa, Special, Jan. 18.—Matt Brennan, a young man who has resided in this city from childhood, was arrested to-day, charged with forging checks. The first ones have just been traced to their origin. The extent of the forged paper in circulation is not known.

Cigarette Factory Destroyed.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 18.—The cigarette factory of Allen & Ginter, a branch of the American Tobacco company, and Valentine's meat juice works were destroyed by fire to-day. Loss about $250,000; insured.

A FAITHLESS WIFE.

Wrecks a Home in South Dakota.

Huron, S. D., Special, Jan. 23.—This city is experiencing a sensation. The parties most deeply interested are well known in this part of the state, the wronged husband having been an employe of the Chicago & Northwestern railway for nearly a dozen years. W. H. Copeland was left a widower some years ago with three little children to care for. He naturally sought the love and sympathy of the woman whom he afterward married. The 21st of April, 1891, Mr. Copeland married his now faithless wife, since which time he has loved, cherished and supported, and to whom was born a son, now about one year old. During the married life of the pair, Mr. Copeland says all was love and peace until about the 13th of January, when his suspicions were aroused that his wife was playing false to her marriage vows, which called for an investigation by him that revealed the truth of his suspicions. Here one William F. Amidon of this city appeared on the scene. Mrs. Copeland was making long and frequent visits to a neighbor's, where Amidon was boarding, and their acts became so bold that Amidon appeared on the streets wearing a gold watch and chain of Mrs. Copeland's.

At this juncture Copeland sought legal advice, and he went to his wife and demanded an explanation of her conduct, when she informed him that she was tired of her home and her marriage relations and vows, and at once took the young child and went to the Menzie house. The next day Mr. Copeland swore out a warrant before Justice Grant, charging Amidon with carrying concealed weapons, and Night Watch Stanners was sent to arrest him. The arrest was made and the prisoner locked in jail over night, and the next morning brought before Justice Grant and the trial set for Wednesday. The time for the trial arrived, but no prisoner appeared, after which it was learned that Amidon and Mrs. Copeland, with the child, had fled to parts unknown. Yesterday it was learned that the pair were in the country at a friend of Amidon's, and Deputy Sheriff Treadway, in company with Mr. Copeland, went in pursuit. Sheriff Treadway secured Amidon and the child, and they returned to town.

Eight Severely Injured.

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 23.—A serious wreck on the Pennsylvania road happened at Docklow this morning. An express train had stopped to repair the air brake, which was out of order, when a second section crashed into it. The Pullman sleeper was completely telescoped. Following is the list of the injured: A. A. Steern, New York; Prof. H. W. Rolfe, Philadelphia, injured internally; Jeff Ingraham, conductor; Mrs. Weller, Chicago; W. Ackhurst, Greenville, Ill.; J. F. Sipe, Cleveland; Alfred Belknap, Philadelphia; Clement Ciambre, supposed to be from Philadelphia. All except Rolfe and Steern proceeded to their destination on a special train with other belated passengers. The Steelton operator has admitted his carelessness in allowing the second section to enter his block.

A World's Fair Scandal.

Albany N. Y., Jan. 23.—A regular hornets' nest has been stirred up by the threatened world's fair investigation. None of the legislators who have received complaints are ready yet to put in formal charges against anybody, but the fact that some action is likely to be taken has awakened a very lively interest in all quarters. Now that the public is aroused, tey intimate that the rest will be easy. Aggravated exhibitors will be asked to put their complaints in shape so that the evidence will be ready to present to the committee. The demand for an investigation will then be made and the complaints sifted, with a particular view of finding out just where the blame can be laid. It is understood that most of the protests came from the big manufacturing interests. For a long time there have been rumors in the air that "influence" was required to get the best results at Chicago.

The Freeze Unprecedented.

Toledo, Ohio, Jan. 23.—Not in the history of the present generation has Lake Erie been frozen as it is now. There is an unbroken field of ice from Detroit river to Put-In bay. Fishermen have driven fifteen miles out from Monroe and returned with the statement that the ice was solid all the way and that it extended as far as they could see. The entire Lake Erie archipelago is frozen up and teams are crossing the mouth of the Detroit river. Fishermen have been compelled to suspend business. Considerable uneasiness is felt, because if the winter breaks up as it usually does there can scarcely fail to be a very serious flood.

Municipal Corruption.

Des Moines, Jan. 23. — The water works controversy is becoming highly sensational. The Daily News to-day publishes an affidavit of John J. Hamilton, United States attorney, that Hubbel offered him $20,000 to support his proposal for purchase of the works by the city. He calls for prompt investigation of other charges of corruption.

Halm & Thompson Assign.

Eau Claire, Wis., Special, Jan. 23.—Holm & Thompson, dry goods merchants, made an assignment to F. J. Farr. The firm had been in business for ten years. The assignment caused great surprise. The firm has a stock worth about $30,000. Liabilities are unknown, but it is understood the assets fully cover them.

Fell Down Stairs and Was Killed.

Eau Claire, Wis., Special, Jan. 23.—Martin Cahill, an old resident, was found covered with blood at the foot of a flight of stairs in his dwelling to-day. He died a few minutes after he was found. He was an old bachelor, and lived alone. His brother, who is a farmer living near here, persistently demands that an inquest be held.

The City Must Settle.

Madison, Wis., Jan. 23.—Judge Bunn handed down a decision in the notorious Norton case against the city of Superior today that compels the city to execute a contract made three years ago. When the city was in its infancy the officials purchased from the Norton heirs of St. Louis property valued at $156,000 for park purposes. The city afterward attempted to rescind the contract and suit was brought by the heirs compelling the city to keep good its part.

President Hill at Everett.

Everett, Wash., Special, Jan. 23.—James J. Hill and party have reached the terminus of the Great Northern line on the Pacific coast. Mr. Hill's injured arm continues to improve. The balance of the party are well.

Married a Danseuse.

London, Jan. 23.—A sensation has been caused in Irish circles by the announcement that T. B. Curran, member of parliament for Kilkenny, has been privately married at the registry office in Manchester to Marie Brooks, an Australian danseuse, who is playing the principal part, that of a boy, in a local pantomime. Mr. Curran is about twenty-two years of age, and is the youngest member of the house of commons. He is a handsome young man. He is the son of Mr. T. Curran, member of parliament for South Sligo. Mr. Curran, senior, is an Irish Australian, who is reported to have made a fortune in the colonies.

THE FIFTY-SECOND CONGRESS

What Is Being Accomplished by our National Lawmakers.

FRIDAY, JAN. 13.

SENATE.

The senate to-day, after an explanation by Mr. Sherman, passed a bill to extend to the North Pacific ocean the provisions of the statutes for the protection of fur seals and other fur bearing animals.

The McGarrahan bill was under consideration for half an hour, and after a speech against it by Mr. Miller, it went over till next Monday.

HOUSE.

The Republicans in the house filibustered all day against the consideration of private war claims, with the result that nothing was accomplished.

Tuesday next was substituted for tomorrow for the consideration of bills reported by the committee on judiciary.

SATURDAY, Jan. 14.

SENATE.

Donelson Caffery, the new senator from Louisiana appointed to fill the unexpired term of Mr. Gibson took the oath of office today and exercised twice his right to vote each time in antagonism to the anti-option bill. That measure came up late in the afternoon, but was antagonized by two motions, on neither of which was there a quorum voting. Stimulated, however, by a hint from Mr. Sherman that that measure was blocking up all important business, Mr. Washburn gave notice that he would ask the senate to remain in session next Wednesday until a final vote on the anti-option bill was reached.

Most of to-day's session was occupied by Mr. Morgan, of Alabama, on the Nicaragua canal bill. In the course of his speech he spoke sadly of the Monroe doctrine as "worn, torn and fragmentary" and as having been kicked by the senate into "doll-rags."

HOUSE.

The time of the house was principally consumed to-day in the consideration of the bill ratifying the agreement with the Cherokee nation of Indians for the cession to the United States of the tract of land known as the "Cherokee outlet." The government appropriates $8,000,000 to carry out its part of the contract. The measure was amended so as to allow the United States six years in which to pay the compensation, in the meantime the government to pay 5 per cent interest upon that sum.

MONDAY, Jan. 16.

SENATE.

After a quorum was procured as the result of a call of the senate, some considerable progress was made on the anti-option bill. An amendment was agreed to, fixing the first of July, 1893, as the time when the bill is to go into effect.

The resolution offered by Mr. Wolcott, instructing the committee on foreign relations to inquire as to the expenditures in and about the construction of the Nicaragua canal, since the accounts of expenditure rendered two years since was agreed to.

The McGarrahan bill went over without action.

The joint resolution introduced by Mr. Peffer, limiting the presidential office to one term, was then taken up and Mr. Peffer addressed the senate in support of it.

Mr. Peffer had not concluded his speech at 2 p. m., when the anti-option bill came up as the special order, and he gave notice that he would resume the argument tomorrow.

Mr. Call (Dem.) Florida, read an argument in favor of this bill.

HOUSE.

A motion to suspend the rules and pass a bill to settle the claims of Arkansas and other states under the swamp land grants failed to secure the necessary two-thirds vote and was therefore defeated.

Coming over from the former suspension day was a bill to settle and adjust the claims of Arkansas and other swamp land grants.

The bill was lost. Yeas, 132; nays, 85—not the necessary two-thirds in the affirmative.

TUESDAY, Jan. 17.

SENATE.

The anti-option bill which has monopolized almost the whole time of the senate (after the morning hour) during the present session and which is expected to reach its final vote tomorrow was debated for nearly three hours and then went over without action. Sweeping denunciations of the measure were made by Senator Hoar, Vest and Platt as being in utter contravention of the constitution of the United States and in violation of the rights of the states. Mr. Platt yielded to many interruptions and was therefore unable to finish his argument today.

The McGarrahan bill received its death blow for this session of the senate to-day, the affirmation vote falling eight short of the constitutional majority.

HOUSE.

The session of the house to-day was an interesting one. Work was mapped out for the remainder of the week, and for Tuesday and Wednesday of next week, but beyond this little was done. A few private measures were passed and the committee on the judiciary having under a prior order, the right of way, called up some bills of secondary importance. The one of the most public interests was that providing for the punishment of offensive passengers on the high seas, which was passed.

WEDNESDAY, Jan. 18.

SENATE.

At the conclusion of the reading of the journal, Mr. Sherman rose and in a feeling manner announced the death of ex-president Hayes, and a motion that the senate adjourn out of respect of his memory which was carried.

HOUSE.

The death of ex-president Hayes was announced and the house adjourned out of respect to his memory.

THURSDAY, JAN. 19.

SENATE.

The discussion of the anti-option bill was continued in the senate today from 2 o'clock until the time of adjourning, but no action was taken on the bill itself or on Mr. George's amendment to it. Notice was given however, by Mr. Washburn that he would ask the senate to remain in session tomorrow until a final vote is reached. In the morning hour Mr. Peffer (Pop.), of Kansas, concluded his speech in favor of a single term of the presidential officers; a new McGarrahan bill was introduced and referred to the judiciary committee, and an amendment was given notice of by Mr. Wolcot (Rep.), of Colorado, to the bill suspending the purchase of silver bullion.

HOUSE.

The greater part of today in the house was consumed in filibustering. Mr. Kilgore, of Texas, was to the fore. By his dilatory tactics he encompassed his object of defeating the bill for the erection of a monument to the prison ship martyrs and on the measure for the construction of a revenue cutter for the Pacific coast, but without opposition a bill was passed to meet the requirements of the interstate commerce law relative to the testimony of witnesses. A bill amending the interstate commerce act was called up and passed, but its main feature—which strikes out the "pooling" section of the original act—was eliminated. A bill was passed for the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi river at New Orleans; the national quarantine bill was next in order but its opponents succeeded in staving it off until Saturday.

GREAT NORTHERN

TIME CARD.

NO. 8 Daily				NO Daily
7 40 p m	Lv	St. Paul	Ar	6 55 am
8 10 "	11	Minneapolis		6 25 am
06 a m	218	Barnesville		10 25 pm
10 45 am	79 Lv	Crookston	Ar	4 00 pm
11 15 "	80	Shirley		3 30 "
x11 45 "	81	Ives		x3 00 "
x12 20 pm		Wylie		x2 20 "*
12 45 "	82 Ar	St. Hilaire	Lv	2 00 "

*Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

S. S. Buzza Agt.

Dr. H. GRUNDY.

Physician & Surgeon.

Graduate of the University of Toronto Canada and member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario.

Messages from the surrounding country attended to,

Office in Drug Store

THIEF RIVER FALLS,

NORTHERN PACIFIC

THE

GREAT TRAMSCONENTAL ROUTE.

Passes through Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, Manitoca, Montana, Idaho, Oregon and Washington.

THE DINING CAR LINE

Dining cars are run between Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Winnipeg, Helena, Butte, Tacoma, Seattle and Portland.

PULLMAN SLEEPING CAR ROUTE.

Pullman service between Chicago St. Paul Montana and the Pacific Northwest; and between St. Paul, Minneapolis and Minnesota North Dakota and Manitoba points.

THE POPULAR LINE.

Daily Express Trains carry elegant Pullman sleeping Cars, Dining cars, Day Coaches, Pullman Tourist Sleepers and Free Colonist Sleeping Cars.

YELLOWSTONE PARK ROUTE.

The Northern Pacific R. R. is the rail line to Yellowstone Park; the popular line to California and Alaska; and its trains pass through the grandest scenery of seven states

THROUGH TICKETS Are sold at all cupon offices of the Northern Pacific Railroad to points North, East, South and West in the United States and Canada

TIME SCEDULE,

	Leave Crookston Daily	Arrive Crookston Daily
For Staples, Minneapolis, St. Paul Duluth Ashland and points East and South	7:05 p. m.	8:20 a m,
For Grand Forks Grafton Drayton, Winnipeg and oints in North Dakota and Manitoba	8:27 a. m.	7:10 p. m

For Rates, maps, Time Tables or special information, apply to Agent Northern Pacific R R. at Crooksto Minn., or

Chas. S. Fee,
Gen. Pass. Agent
St, Paul' Minn.

ST. HILAIRE MEAT MARKET.

All kinds of fresh and salt meat always on hand.

I make a specialty of buying and selling cattle of all kinds.

If you want to buy or sell anything in that line it will pay you to give me a call.

JAMES DAINARD.

FRED Eikhof

DEALER IN CHOICE

WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS.

Beer always on tap.

Pool Room in Connection.

Broadway St. Hilaire.

FRANK IVES,

Attorney and Counselor AT LAW,

CROOKSTON and ST. HILAIRE, Minn.

Will Practice in ALL The Courts, OF T E STATE and and before the U. S. Land Office Crookston and at Washington.

Will give special attention to contests of claims.

BREVITIES.

Wheat is 60 cents.

H. E. Ives is in St, Paul this week on business.

Fresh Oysters at W. A. Arthurs try them.

W, A. Sorsoleil was at Red Lake Falls last Friday on business,

For No. 1 pure buck wheat flour call on Fricker & Welch.

Swan Anderson, of Wylie, was in town last Friday on business.

If you want some nice fresh oysters call on W. A. Arthur.

C. G. Rapp has been visiting relatives in Chicago the past two weeks.

A complete line of undertakers goods always on hand at Holmes Bros.

Ed Erickson, the Crookston butcher, was in town to-day buying stock.

Mr. Swank, of Red Lake Falls, was in town yesterday on business.

We have been having some very pleasant weather the past week.

S. M. Hoff left for the southern part of the state last Friday on business,

S. M, Dainard and wife returned last Friday from their visit to Thompson.

L. Ellington, of the Scandia bank of Crookston was in town on business to day.

Now is the time to secure your flour cheap. Call for bargains on Fricker & Welch.

S. M. Dainard shipped a car of cattle and a car of hogs to St Paul last Friday.

If you want anything in the line of confectionary fruit or oysters call on W. A. Arthur.

George Crocker, of Minneapolis, was in town the latter part of last week on business.

James Dainard came up from Crookston to-day and will visit with relatives a short time.

S. M. Dainard left last Friday for Chicago where he will attend the Lumbermen's convention,

Prof, F. H. Gambell left for Crookston last Monday and will remain until school is again opened,

H. Doolittle, representing McKibbin & Co. of St. Paul, was doing business in town the first of the week.

J. W. Swanstrom, of Thief River Falls was doing business in town a couple of days the first of the week,

Miss Carrie Stranahan visited friends at Crookston last Saturday and Sunday returning home on Monday.

Mr. W. Adams and wife leave to-day for the southern part of the state where they will visit friends a couple of weeks

School will commence next Monday morning January 8th Let parents see that their children attend from the start.

The opening of school has been postponed one week owing to the appearance of some new cases of diphtheria in town.

Rev, Willett wishes us to announce that hereafter there will be services in the M. E. Church every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Wm. Williams arrived on last Friday's train, from Goodhue county, and will visit for a short time with his brother M. Williams.

It is rumored that Edward. Giste has resigned his position as clerk at C. G. Rapp's store and has accepted a "higher" position.

Gen. Supt. Case and Acting Division Supt. Ponsouby, of the Great Northern, were up on a special last Thursday on a tour of inspection.

Johnson & Marshall have decided to open their warehouse here and will be ready for business next week. W. A. Sorsoleil will have charge.

We regret to announce the death of Clara, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Brannum, last Sunday morning after a very short illness. The bereaved parents have the sympathy of all.

"Papa, what is a veterinary surgeon?" "One of those fellows at the pension office, my son, who examines the veterans for pensions."—Ex,

Lars Elslud has accepted a position as section foreman for the Great Northern at Red Lake Falls and moved to that place with his family last Monday,

The Great Northern Co. have decided to extend their line through from Park Rapids to Leech Lake the coming season and posters are out asking for men and teams for the work. J. W. Speelman, well known here, is to be Supt of construction on the new line.

Miss Lizzie Zarrocher came up from Cookston last Friday to finish her term of school here but owing to the appearance of some new cases of diphtheria it was decided to keep the schools closed another week and she returned home on Monday.

Two new cases of diphtheria at S. M. Dainard's were reported last week, Dr Dunlop, of Crookston was called last Monday and reported that they were about well. No new cases have been reported this week and it looks as if the disease had been entirely stamped out, It would be well, however, not to relax precautions for some time yet.

A large number of our citizens assembled last Friday evening and treated Mr. and Mrs. M. Williams to a pleasant surprise. The evening was spent in dancing and other amusements. At midnight refreshments were served and after several hours of enjoyment the party broke up and all went home well satisfied with the evenings entertainment.

The following is the report of the business transacted at the Crookston Land Office at Crookston during the year ending Dec. 31st, The total cash receipts of the office during the year were $28,401.28. There were 597 homestead entries, 414 final entries and 122 cash entries, and, with the timber and railroad selections, making a total of 1,172 entries aggregating 164:553.21 acres,

One of the pleasantest parties of the season was enjoyed by a number of our young folks at the residence of Mr, John Halverson about three miles east of this place last Saturday evening. Arriving there they were cordially welcomed by Mr. and Mrs. Halvarson, and the evening was spent in dancing and playing games. The party returned to town the following afternoon and all declare that they couldn't have had a better time.

The crusade in favor of good roads is being taken up all over the country with the result that the people are becoming more and more imbued with the necessity of building thoroughfares on which they can travel rapidly and comfortably. The farmer who does not want good roads between his place and where he transacts his business is a poor economist. This is a question that the farmers alliances ought to take up and discuss.—Ex.

Senator Lommen's bill to reduce the rate of interest seems likely to pass, from the fact that the southern members who come from a section that has an established reputation and whose constituents can borrow all the money they want at from 6 to 8 per cent, will be likely to favor it. While the Journal is firm in the belief that it would not be for the best interests of this section we do not object to its passage if the majority demands it. We should consult our own best interests in the matter and if we are in a position where we do not need money or in such a position as to be able to get all we want at 6 or 8 per cent, why pass the bill, otherwise it is better to wait until we are.—Polk County Journal.

The most reliable reports upon the present visible supply of wheat in this country place it at the enormous amount of eighty two million bushels or the largest surplus ever known at this season of the year. This shows beyond question that the farmers are devoting too much of their land to this single branch of agriculture. But as patent as this fact is, and as inevitable as it is that the price will remain low as long as so much is produced. It is difficult to find any remedy that will reach our farmers here. They cannot turn their attention to corn and hogs as the farmers in Kansas can, and therefore they are actually forced to devote the greater part of their lands to wheat year after year, The present depression in the price and the vast surplus will no doubt cause some to seed less the coming year than heretofore, but whether this will be carried far enough to have the desired effect is very doubtful. To help as far as they can, farmers here should grow as much barley and feed as many hogs as they can at a profit, and also put a few sheep on their places and rest part of their land each year. These things, if practiced by each, would help amazingly to greatly reduce the visible supply by this time next year.

Averting a Plague of Mice.

A recent interesting instance of what science can do against apparently overwhelming odds occurred in the plains of Thessaly. The crops of that district of Greece were threatened with entire destruction by swarms of field mice. Every effort at destroying them proved inefficient, and finally Pasteur was appealed to. He referred his correspondent to Loeffler, whose recent researches among disease microbes have made him famous; and the Athenian government finally invited Loeffler to Athens, where, after some experimentation, he determined upon a line of procedure.

Pieces of bread were prepared, each of which contained numbers of a certain micro-organism known to be extremely deadly to mice, producing in them a disease much like typhoid fever. The same microbes, if eaten by man or by domestic animals are absolutely harmless. This bait was placed freely within reach of the wild mice, and at the same time other mice inoculated with the bacilli were turned loose, that their dead bodies might be eaten by the others.

In this way the disease was quickly distributed. Nine days after the baiting the mice had entirely ceased to show themselves and further injury to the crops was averted. Other districts were subsequently treated by the same method and reported similar results.—Youth Companion.

Disappearance of a Paris Character.

The old woman with two wooden legs who used to occupy a seat at the corner of the Rue de la Paix and the Boulevard des Capucines, where she was as well known and considered as much of a fixture as the opera house or the Grand hotel, has vanished from her accustomed post and is said to be dying. She was not exactly a beggar, for she never solicited alms and always had some small wares, chiefly key rings and dog chains for sale.

Her presence at that spot dates back for nearly fifty years. She was a young woman when she came to establish herself there. Everybody knew her by sight and nobody knew anything about her. In that remarkable book, "The Englishman in Paris," she is mentioned as having been at one time a protege of Napoleon III, and as having offered to lend him money when he was Prince Louis Bonaparte merely and was understood to be in financial difficulties. One of the newspapers of Paris published an anecdote respecting her some years ago. She forthwith sued the offending journal and obtained not only a contradiction of the story (which was indeed a sheer fabrication and an abominable one), but a certain amount of damages as well.—Paris Cor. Philadelphia Telegraph.

Reminding an Absentminded Man.

There is a business man in Omaha who is so absentminded that he would leave his head at the office were it not for the fact that it is fastened on beyond his power to remove it. A few days ago he invited a friend to take dinner with him on the following day, and upon the acceptance of the invitation seized his pen and began writing, remarking that he would have to write to his wife and tell her about it. The friend was puzzled and asked an explanation. "Oh, I always write to my wife immediately after I invite a friend to my house," said the abesntminded man. "You see, if I waited until I reached home, it is 1,000 to 1 that I would forget it, and then when I took the friend up there would be a large cloud on the political horizon."

The next day the friend asked the wife of the absentminded man about it, and she confirmed her husband's statement, adding further, that she never told her husband what to purchase for the house. She mailed a letter to him at his office address, and as soon as he received it he would step to the telephone and order the necessary supplies. In this way the family larder was always well supplied. It is a plan that other wives might employ to good advantage.—Omaha World-Herald.

English Names in Boston.

The Boston Post doesn't like the English names given to many Boston streets and hotels in the Back Bay, as, for instance, Arlington, Berkeley, Dartmouth, Exeter, Arundel, Bristol, Grosvenor and Earlscourt. "The people who live in these houses, and in most all the others, too," it says, "wear their clothes after a distinctly English fashion: their coachmen sit up on their boxes arrayed in distinctly English liveries; they address them and all their servants, male and female, by their last name, since that is how it is done in London, you know. The turnouts are all English, the horses are docked, because it is English, and if there is anything that is English that is not in vogue in the Back Bay it is because—but there is not."

A Fortunate Chicken.

At Palatka, Fla., a large hawk lately captured a young chicken, and in flying over the town with his captive became frightened and dropped it in front of a market. It is said that the chicken was not hurt much by the fall and has taken up its quarters in the store.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Notice To Farmers.

We will pay you cash for hides, hay barley, oats, cord wood, good steers or anything marketable that you have to sell.

E. T. Spafford & Co.

CHEAP EXCURSIONS TO CANADA

Low round trip tickets will be on sale by the Great Northern from Crookston Grand Forks and stations north to boundary and west to Minot, to points in Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick Nova Scotia, on Nov, 27th, Dec, 6th Dec 18th to 22nd inclusive, and Dec 27th 1892. Tickets good for 90 days with transit limits of 15 days each way, going and returning, This will allow holders to stop in the Twin Cities, in Chicago to see the wonderful buildings of the World's Fair, and other points enroute.

Extension of time beyond 90 days made at small additional cost. For particulars and tickets see S. S. Buzza agent at St. Hilaire.

I will pay the highest market price or veal calves, fresh eggs and butter.

S. M, Dainard.

INTERESTING ITEM.

It is to the interest of parties contemplating going east to consider the great advantages the Great Northern offers (from) through its fast passenger service to St. Paul and to all points west to the Pacific coast, their free colonist cars, and magnificent Dining and Sleeping cars. The shortest route, close connections, quickest time and fare as low as the lowest. Any information cheerfully given,

S. S. Buzza
Agent.

CHATTEL LOANS

I am prepared to loan money on chattle security at reasonable rates. One years time. Call On

H. E. IVES.

WANTED. Salesmen. Local and Traveling, To represent our well known house. You need no capital to represent a firm that warrants nursery stock first-class and true to name. WORK ALL THE YEAR. $100 per month to the right man. Apply quick stating age. L. L. MAY & CO.
Nurserymen, Florists and Seeds men,
St. Paul Minn.
(This house is responsible.)

MARLIN SAFETY REPEATING RIFLES

Made in all styles and sizes. Lightest, strongest, easiest working, safest, simplest, most accurate, most compact, and most modern. For sale by all dealers in arms. Catalogues mailed free by

The Marlin Fire Arms Co.,
New Haven, Conn., U. S. A.

All who are indebted to S. M. Hoff are requested to call and settle up at once or the debt will be collected by law.

U. S. LAND OFFICE.
Crookston Minn December 5 1893

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before U. S. Land Office at Crooksten Minn. on January 24 1893 viz: Daniel Johnson H D 12053 for the Lot 5 Sec. 6 and Lot 1 Sec 7 Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of said land viz:

J. A. Sjortrom Anton Sundahl J. A. Peterson, K. Sundahl all of St. Hilaire, Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn. Dec. 7 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on January 26 1893 viz: Charles Gomoll H D 11784 for the SE ¼ Sec 25 Tp 152 R 45.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land viz:

Gottlieb Gerlach, August Morel, Charles Peterson Henry Leppert all of Wylie Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn Dec 14 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on Feb 16 1893 viz:

Peter Sanderson H D 14159 for the NW ¼ SE ¼ NE ¼ SW ¼ and Lots 5 and 6 Sec 6 Tp 151 R 43,

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Peter Anderson, John Strawberg, O. K. Ellenson H. Johnson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn. January 3 1893

Notice is hereby given that he following named settler has filed notice Of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and has said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver of the U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn, on February 16 1893. viz: Anton Peterson HD 12762 for the SE ¼ Sec. 7 Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land viz:

Julius Nelson, James Evenson, Daniel Johnson, Erick Anderson all of St, Hilaire Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

CLOSING OUT SALE!

At E M Hoff's Store

My whole stock of

Dry Goods and Notions

Gents Furnshing, Goods

$5,000 worth of ready made clothing

Foot wear of all kinds and everything belonging to a full stocked general merchandise store will be closed out at cost in the next 90 days.

COME EVERY BODY AND SECURE GOOD BARGAINS.

E. M. HOFF

CROWN ROLLER MILL.

EQUIPPED WITH THE LATEST AND BEST IMPROVED MACHINERY.

Manufactures the well known PERFECTION FANCY PATENT and WHITE ROSEFLOUR.

Rye and Feed mill in connection,

Flour and Feed always kept on hand

Custom work a specialty.

FRICKER & WELCH Prop

HILAIRE MINNESOT

CHAS G. RAPP.

A large and complete line of

General Merchandise

CONSISTING OF

Dry Goods, Groceries, Clothin

Boots & Shoes, Hats & Caps

Notions

THE ST. HILAIRE SPECTATOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY EVENING.
H. E. IVES, Propr.
SUBSCRIPTION PRICE:
Advance, [illegible]
If not in Advance [illegible] Per Year
Entered in the Post Office at St. Hilaire, as Second Class Mail Matter [illegible]
WEDNESDAY January 25 1893.

IN WASHINGTON.

DEPARTMENT CLERKS ARE NOT SO BAD, AFTER ALL.

They Have Contributed Freely to Relieve Distress Among the Poor, During One of the Worst Winters Ever Known in Washington—Facts, Gossip and Stories Written By Frank Mead.

WASHINGTON, JAN 18, 1893

WORKING FOR charity has been, of necessity, almost a steady occupation for a great many women in Washington City, during the past two months, while the men, who could afford to do so, have contributed money freely to relieve distress among the poorer classes. I desire to pay tribute to a class of people in the Nation's Capital who very seldom receive praise from their fellow citizens. The call for contributions to save life and prevent suffering during the recent frigid period has been unprecedented. The clerks in the departments have responded nobly, cheerfully, generously. Again and again have calls been made upon them, and again and again have they responded, "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver," hence the department clerks of Washington City must rank very high with the Almighty in this trying season.

The weather here has been simply monstrous. Up to this time almost one month of excellent sleighing and no signs of a thaw yet. The suffering among the poor has been greatly relieved by the generous charity of wealthy people of the city.

It may seem singular to your readers that those who suffer most from cold weather in Washington are the people from our own section—the extreme Northwest. The reason is obvious after a winter's experience here. Nobody in Washington thinks of building their house to guard against zero weather. The windows and doors are loosely put in, there are no double windows, and apparently no effort at construction so as to retain the heat and keep out the cold. A Minnesota or Dakota barn, for warmth, is preferable to many handsome residences in Washington. And then, the heating arrangements! Why, colds, coughs, consumption and pneumonia clap their hands in glee at the approach of winter here. It is no use. This has been an awful winter in Washington—worse than you comfortable double-window people of the Northwest dream of. The list of prominent deaths you can all read about, but the long roll of those who are unknown will never reach you.

The McGarrahan claim was assassinated in the Senate last Tuesday in an effort to pass the bill over the President's veto. It is, of all the thousands of claims now pending before Congress, the most celebrated. McGarrahan owns some valuable land now being mined in California by a rich company. His title is based on a Mexican grant. There is no possible doubt of the justice and equity of his title. Again and again has the title in him been pronounced complete. But the other fellows have possession, and the land is valued away up in the millions. Ever since 1857 he has been in Washington fighting for justice. The present Congress passed a bill giving McGarrahan the right to go before the Court of Claims and establish his right to the property. The bill passed both houses by a large majority. President Harrison vetoed the bill. It was believed that the measure could be passed over the veto, but it failed. The vote in the Senate stood 30 against 19 for passage over the veto. Pettigrew and Kyle of South Dakota, Hansbrough of North Dakota, and Washburn of Minnesota voted for the passage over the veto. Sawyer of Wisconsin and Allison of Iowa voted to sustain the President.

"Billy" McGarrahan must commence all over again and continue the fight for his rights. Without discouragement, or excitement, or any possible manifestation of feeling, he retired from the gallery and remarked:

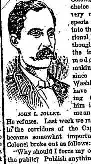
"Well, it is hard lines, boys, but I commence again tomorrow morning."

The measure known as the Anti-Option Bill has had a most remarkable history. It was introduced in the House at the beginning of last session by Mr. Hatch, of Missouri. Simultaneously Senator Washburn introduced a similar bill in the Senate. The two measures created a most intense excitement in all the large cities throughout the entire country. New York, Chicago, New Orleans and Minneapolis—the great centers where futures on agricultural products are most dealt in—were at once in a turmoil of excitement. Influential men who were leaders in the business of brokerage in futures from all these and other centers made their appearance in Washington, and every scheme for its defeat known to the scientific use of money was tried. There was no vulgar and open bribery, such as is known in some unmentionable states of our beloved country, but the delicate, perfumed and artistic use of money was unstinted.

Easily the leader of the lobby opposition to the bill last winter was Mr. Sawyer, the great commission merchant of Minneapolis. He was one of the most remarkable men of his generation anyhow. He was in many respects a commercial and financial genius. Springing direct from the people, he had all of the strength and much of the weakness of the lower classes of America. Uncultivated, but able, alert, suave, kindly, generous, he made a great impression upon the statesmen of both houses with whom he came in contact.

For one month Mr. Sawyer worked night and day, organizing the opposition to the bill. Then his health failed, and he returned to his home in Minneapolis, took to his bed and died in a few days. From that day there was no leadership connected with the opposition to the bill. It has been guerrilla warfare, each interest working for itself.

It was in many respects unfortunate that Colonel Jolley's constituents in South Dakota could not see their way clear to renominating him for the seat in the House he is about to vacate. The Colonel is a most choice spirit in very many respects and fits into the congressional harness as though born to the incident of modern law making. Ever since coming to Washington I have been striving to seduce him into giving me an interview. He refuses. Last week we met casually in the corridors of the Capital, and I became somewhat importunate. The Colonel broke out as follows:



JOHN L. JOLLEY.

"Why should I force my opinions on the public? Publish anything I might have to vouchsafe and at once my respected fellow citizens out in South Dakota would say, 'There he goes again! That idiot Jolley (or jolly idiot) after we have called him home and spanked him, turns about for the purpose of giving us advice.'

"Do you know that all the signs indicate that the Populist movement in South Dakota has just about kerflummixed? Look at our respected Senator Kyle now—a most excellent gentleman, by the way—but Good Lord! politically how much does he weigh? Why, he has got almost as much heft in directing legislation here in Washington as I would have in a fistic contest with Champion Corbett. Yes, the Populist influence is about spent in my State. Before the next presidential election you will have heard the last of them as a political party, and the kickers will be crawling under cover in one or the other of the old parties—turning up on the old band wagon.

"Yes, I wish the session was over. We shall not do much; and I really think we should not, for the Democrats of the country gave us such a confounded church-mauling last fall that I am inclined to let them have full swing, and see how they will serve the multitude that restored them to power. Good bye. I will not be interviewed."

The candidacy of ex-Governor Ordway for the North Dakota senatorship has provoked considerable criticism here in Washington. It may not be generally known that Governor Ordway's real home is here in Washington and has been ever since—in the war time—he was elected sergeant-at-arms of the House. He has a large property here, a handsome residence, a controlling interest in the Central Market and is regarded as a citizen of the National Capital. When he was appointed Governor of Dakota Territory (away back in 1880) he took some money out there and invested largely in real estate. Since then he has always claimed his home in Dakota—but always lived here.

The sub-committee on Indian affairs on the Indian appropriation bill consists of Chairman Peel of Arkansas, Allen of Mississippi, and Turpin of Alabama, Democrats, all Southerners, who know nothing of Indians; and of Pickler, South Dakota, and Wilson of Washington, Republicans, who know all about redskins. It is fair to presume that Pickler and Wilson will see that Northwestern appropriations are adequate.

Senator Pettigrew introduced a bill in the senate instructing the secretary of the treasury not to deliver any of the souvenir coins provided for in the bill passed at the last session unless the world's Columbian exposition shall deliver a good and sufficient bond, conditioned that if for any reason whatever the world's fair is opened to the public on Sunday the corporation shall pay to the United States the sum of money it shall have received from the sale of coin, not less than $2,500,000.

WE WANT YOU

to act as our agent. We furnish an expensive outfit and all you need free. It costs nothing to try the business. We will treat you well, and help you to earn ten times ordinary wages. Both sexes of all ages can live at home and work in spare time, or all the time. Any one any where can earn a great deal of money. Many have made Two Hundred Dollars a Month. No class of people in the world are making so much money without capital as those at work for us. Business pleasant, strictly honorable, and pays better than any other offered to agents. You have a clear field, with no competition. We equip you with everything, and supply printed directions for beginners which, if obeyed faithfully, will bring more money than will any other business. Improve your prospects! Why not? You can do so easily and surely at work for us. Reasonable industry only necessary for absolute success. Pamphlet circular giving every particular is sent free to all. Delay not in sending for it.

GEORGE STINSON & CO.,
Box No. 488, Portland, Me.

DO YOU WANT TO ADOPT A BABY?

Maybe you think this is a new business, sending out babies on application; it has been done before, however, but never have those furnished been so near the original sample as this one. Everyone will exclaim, "Well! that's the sweetest baby I ever saw!" This little black-and-white engraving can give you but a faint idea of the exquisite original, which we propose to send to you, transportation paid. The little darling rests against a pillow, and is in the act of drawing off its pink sock, the mate of which has been pulled off and flung aside with a triumphant coo. The flesh tints are perfect, and the eyes follow you, no matter where you stand. The exquisite reproductions of this greatest painting of Ida Waugh (the most celebrated of modern painters of baby life) are to be given to those who subscribe to Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893. The reproductions cannot be told from the original, which cost $400, and are the same size (17x22 inches). The baby is life size, and absolutely lifelike. We have also in preparation, to present to our subscribers during 1893, other great pictures by such artists as Percy Moran, Maud Humphrey, Louis Deschamps, and others of world-wide renown. Take only two examples of what we did during the past year, "A Yard of Pansies," and "A White House Orchid" by the wife of President Harrison, and you will see what our promises mean.

"I'M A DAISY."

Those who subscribe for Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893 will possess a gallery of exquisite works of art of great value, besides a Magazine that cannot be equaled by any in the world for its beautiful illustrations and subject matter, that will keep everyone posted on all the topics of the day, and all the fads and different items of interest about the household, besides furnishing interesting reading matter, both grave and gay, for the whole family; and while Demorest's is not a fashion Magazine, its fashion pages are perfect, and we give you, free of cost, all the patterns you wish to use during the year, and in any size you choose. Send in your subscription at once, only $2, and you will really get over $25 in value. Address the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York. If you are unacquainted with the Magazine, send 10 cents for a specimen copy.

Ask Your Dealer For

[illegible] WHIPS.

FEATHERBONE is made from Enameled Quills—nature's own toughest, and strongest elastic material. Best wearing whips made for 35c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50. All styles for Buggy, Cart, Track, Team and Riding. Be sure and ask for a FEATHERBONE.

FOR SALE BY

S. M. HOFF

y St. H

Going to Buy
A Dictionary?

GET THE BEST,
Webster's International.

A Choice Gift
A Grand Family Educator
A Library in itself
The Standard Authority

WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY

SOLD BY ALL BOOKSELLERS.

The International is a new book from cover to cover, fully abreast of the times, and is the successor of the authentic "Unabridged." Ten years were spent in revising, 100 editors employed and over $300,000 expended before the first copy was printed.

Do not buy reprints of obsolete and comparatively worthless editions.

Send for free pamphlet containing specimen pages and full particulars.

G. & C. MERRIAM CO., Publishers,
SPRINGFIELD, MASS., U. S. A.

U.S. Land Office

Crookston Minn, Jan. 7 1893.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and said proof will be made before U. S. Land Office at Crookston minn. on Feb. 21 1893 viz:

John August Lundbeck HD 11973 for the S NE ¼ and Lots 3 and 4 Sec. 3 Tp 152 R 44.

He names he following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of said land viz:

John Ellison, Martin Ryland Elias Svenson, Ernest Svenson, all of St. Hilaire, Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON, Register.

U.S LAND OFFICE.

Crookston, Minn., Nov. 17 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn on December 29 1892. viz:

Peter E. Engh HD 1232 for the NW ¼ Sec. 23 Tp 152 R. 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Halvor Aamodt, Ole J. Hegg Peter Anderson, Ole J. Johnson, all of St. Hilaire, Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register,

U. S. Land Office

Crookston Minn., Nov. 25 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver, U. S Land Office at Crookston Minn on Jany. 5 1893 viz:

Julius Nelson HD 11890 for the S. W. ¼ sec. 8 tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove her continuous residence upon, and cultivation of said land viz;

James Evenson B. I. Konlog, Nels Evenson Anton Peterson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

E. T. SPAFFORD S. M. DAINARD

E. T. SPAFFORD & CO.

DEALERS IN

LUMBER, LATH AND SHINGLES.

A complete stock of all kinds of Lumber Lath, Shingles, Mouldings, Building Paper Sash, Doors and Screens, Lime, Cement Stucco, Plastering Hair, Brick etc. always hand at the lowest market prices.

S. M. Dainard, Manager.

BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE, MINN

E. T. SPAFFORD & CO.

WILL ALWAYS PAY THE
HIGHEST MARKET PRICES
FOR
All kinds of
CATTLE.
Cor wood, Hay, Oats,
Barley and flax.
Ground Feed for ale
S. M. DAINARD.
Manager.

Reserved For
THE
ST. HILAIRE
TOWNSITE
COMPANY

W. A. ARTHUR.

DEALER IN

FRUITS, CONFECTIONARY
TOBACCO AND CIGARS.
STATIONARY OF ALL KINDS
Lunch Counter
Warm meals at all hours.

BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE MINNESOTA

JUSTUS L. JOHNSON

DEALER IN

pure medicines Fancy articles, perfumer and stationery, paints oils and dye stuffs.

Cigars, Candy, Fruit and Soft Drinks always on hand.

Barbershop in connection

BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE

I CAN SAVE YOU
MONEY
If you wish to make
REAL ESTATE
LOANS.
For full particulars call or address
H. E. IVES.

SPECTATOR OFFICE ST. HILAIRE.

HOLMES BRO'S

Dealers in

HARDWARE, TINWARE,

We are carrying a heavy and complete line of Heating and Cooking stoves.

GOOD GOODS LOW PRICES
CALL ON US FOR BARGAINS

BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE MINN.

FARMERS STORE

NEW GOODS AT HARD PAN PRICES.

If you want to save money do your trading with

HALL BROS.

DEALERS IN

Dry Goods, Groceries
Notions.

BROADWAY [illegible]

S. M. HOFF

DEALER IN

HARDWARE

A new and complete stock of all kinds of Hardware, Tinware, Stoves, Fencing wire, Nails, in fact everything usualy kept in a first-class Hardware Store,

AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES

Call and examine Goods and Get Our Prices.

BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE.

DR PRICE'S
Cream Baking Powder.
The only Pure Cream of Tartar Powder.—No Ammonia; No Alum.
Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

A GREAT CONTORTIONIST.

Marinelli, Whose Muscles Have Been Developed, but Not His Bones.

Most of us know the so-called gutta-percha men, or, as the "artists" would call themselves, contortionists. Nowadays such are usually "billed" as serpent men or man snakes. The most prominent among these phenomenal beings is Marinelli. He owes his place to his grace of movement and the ease of his "corkscrew" contortions. Twice he has been examined by the highest scientific authority—in 1886, by Prof. Virchow, in Berlin, and in 1889, by Prof. Billroth, in Vienna. Both have delivered lectures before specialists on him. Both examinations have proved that there is nothing abnormal in Marinelli's bone system, and that he has never been subjected to any operation in order to attain his remarkable abilities. The "virtuoso" is wonderful and unique (says the Copenhagen Nordstjernen) on account of his muscle system, which naturally existing in fine proportions, has been developed by exercise and a strong will. The peculiarity with Marinelli is that the muscles have been developed in preference to the bone system. He is really a mass of muscles under a soft and elastic skin. It was, therefore, impossible for the scientists to locate his muscles and inner organs while he was in his contorted positions. Along his back the muscles are so developed that Marinelli can cross his shoulder blades. Prof. Virchow shows that contortions like those of Marinelli are natural to childhood, particularly among uncivilized peoples. He has proved that by experiments on a twelve-year-old Kalahari girl. When she was laid flat on the ground, face down, he could gradually bend the back so that the head touched the buttocks. It is this really normal, natural faculty which contortionists develop from early childhood. Not all attain equal perfection and elegance of movement. Marinelli does not diet in any particular way. He lives sensibly, and has for six years maintained a weight of 120 pounds. He eats twice a day, at 10 a. m. and 5 p. m. When he comes upon the stage, which is usually about 9 or 10 p. m., he is neither full of food nor hungry. Of late years he does not train. He is twenty-eight years of age.

GIVING BABY A CHANCE.

A Gold Dollar, a Bible and a Stepladder for Luck.

Think of a baby twenty-four hours old climbing a step ladder!

Monthly nurses all agree that if a baby goes downstairs before it goes upstairs its path in life will be downward and ill-luck will attend it. Accordingly, precautions should be taken against such an omen. In this instance, the child having been born on the top floor of the house, it could not be carried upstairs, and, therefore, its mother had suggested the ingenious plan of having a stepladder brought into the room, so that the nurse could mount it with baby in her arms.

But that was not all. A small testament was attached by a string to the child's arm and in its chubby little fist was placed a gold dollar. Thus, reasonable certainty was secured that the boy would grow up both rich and pious. At the same time it seemed very odd to see such superstitious observances practiced in the city of Washington in the year 1892. Some people say that it is very bad luck indeed for a baby to see itself in a mirror before it is a year old, though why this should be so considered it would be difficult to tell.—Washington Star.

FACTS A—Absolutely. B—Best. C—Cure for Pain.
ST. JACOBS OIL
FIGURES 1—A Prompt Cure. 2—A Permanent Cure. 3—A Perfect Cure.

Justice to All.

It is now apparent to the Directors of the World's Columbian Exposition that millions of people will be denied the pleasure of becoming the possessors of

World's Fair Souvenir Coins

The Official Souvenir of the Great Exposition—

The extraordinary and growing demand for these Coins, and the desire on the part of the Directors that equal opportunities may be afforded for their purchase, have made it necessary to enlarge the channels of distribution. To relieve themselves of some responsibility, the Directors have invited

THE MERCHANTS

Throughout the Nation to unite with the Banks in placing Columbian Half-Dollars on sale. This is done that the masses of the people, and those living at remote points, may be afforded the best possible opportunity to obtain the Coins.

THE FORTUNATE POSSESSORS

of SOUVENIR COINS will be those who are earliest in seizing upon these new advantages.

$10,000 Was Paid For The First Coin

They are all alike, the issue is limited, and time must enhance their value. The price is One Dollar each.

HOW TO GET THE COINS:

Go to your nearest merchant or banker, as they are likely to have them. If you cannot procure them in this way, send direct to us, ordering not less than Five Coins, and remitting One Dollar for each Coin ordered. Send instructions how to ship the Coins and they will be sent free of expense. Remit by registered letter, or send express or post-office money order, or bank draft to Treasurer World's Columbian Exposition, Chicago, Ill.

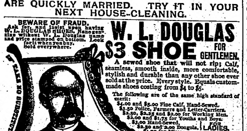
"WELL BRED, SOON WED." GIRLS WHO USE
SAPOLIO
ARE QUICKLY MARRIED. TRY IT IN YOUR NEXT HOUSE-CLEANING.



TAKE NO SUBSTITUTE.
THIS IS THE BEST $3. SHOE IN THE WORLD.
WILL NOT RIP.

BEWARE OF FRAUD. Ask for, and insist upon having W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES. None genuine without W. L. Douglas name and price stamped on bottom. Look for it when you buy. Sold everywhere.

W. L. DOUGLAS $3 SHOE FOR GENTLEMEN.

A sewed shoe that will not rip; Calf, seamless, smooth inside, more comfortable, stylish and durable than any other shoe ever sold at the price. Every style. Equals custom-made shoes costing from $4 to $5.

The following are of the same high standard of merit:
$4.00 and $5.00 Fine Calf, Hand-Sewed.
$3.50 Police, Farmers and Letter-Carriers.
$2.50, $2.25 and $2.00 for Working Men.
$2.00 and $1.75 for Youths and Boys.
$3.00 Hand-Sewed, } FOR
$2.50 and 2.00 Dongola, } LADIES.
$1.75 for Misses.

IT IS A DUTY you owe yourself to get the best value for your money. Economize in your footwear by purchasing W. L. Douglas Shoes, which represent the best value at the prices advertised as thousands can testify. Do you wear them?

Will give exclusive sale to shoe dealers and general merchants where I have no agents. Write for catalogue. If not for sale in your place send direct to factory, stating kind, size and width wanted. Postage Free. W. L. Douglas, Brockton, Mass.

AMYATT'S CHILD-FRIEND.

I.

It caused a good deal of wonder among the officers of Jack Amyatt's regiment when he suddenly loomed out in a new character, that of a literary man.

The Red Horse was a very popular regiment in the service, and Jack Amyatt was, as indeed he had been ever since he joined, one of its most popular officers. Through the various grades of cornet, lieutenant and captain, he had made no enemies, while he had gathered many friends. He was essentially a good all-round man, popular with his men, who would have followed him into the jaws of death and back again, and good at sport of any and every kind.

"What a fuss you make about Major Amyatt," cried a fair beauty one day to one of the youngsters, who had been extolling his accomplishments.

"Oh, the major's such an out and out good sort, returned the lad, blushing a fine scarlet all over his handsome face at thus being caught at hero worship.

"Is he?" responded the lady, who tried every fascinating art in her power on Amyatt, but without avail. "What does he do to win him so much adulation!"

"I don't know about adulation," said the lad rather curtly. "But I know he is the best soldier I ever knew, and the most popular. Why, the regiment would follow him to the dev—, to the end of the world, that is," correcting himself hastily. "He's good, that is, among the best of any sport you like to mention, and he's the best army writer there is, in spite of the shoals of women who have tried their hand at putting us on paper, and only succeeded in making their soldiers look like bagmen out for a holiday in a blazer and a pair of tennis-shoes."

The beauty drew herself up with a little more dignity than she usually displayed. "Dear me, Mr. Arlington, you are severe—almost as severe as Major Amyatt looks when he goes to a ball, and stands regarding us frivolous and faulty women as stiff and straight as if he had swallowed his ramrod as well as bringing the other parts of his uniform with him."

It was on the tip of young Arlington's tongue to remind the beauty that a ramrod is not part of a cavalry officer's equipment, but, as he had done a minute or so before, he remembered his manners in time and let the remark pass without further notice.

"Well, I don't think the major cares much about ladies," he admitted.

"I'm sure they don't care much about him," returned the beauty sharply.

He wondered at the tartness of her tone, if that was indeed the case, but as she was a beauty, and somewhat of a power in the neighborhood of the station at which they were quartered, he did not want to offend her more than was necessary in taking up the cudgels in his major's defence. "I never heard him say a word against a woman in my life," he said, eagerly, "never. Only, he don't seem to be very keen on dancing and afternoon teas, and so on. By the way, Miss Vane, will you come and have a cup of tea or anything?"

The beauty thought she would have an ice, and took the lad's arm with alacrity; glad perhaps, to get away from the subject of a man who had remained blind and deaf to the attractions and fascinations, liberally set forth for his benefit from time to time, of the beauty of the county. The name of major was not mentioned again, but all the same, the conversation had set young Arlington thinking about it.

"I say," he said, that evening to Moore, the senior subaltern, "is Amyatt what you'd call a woman hater?"

"Not a bit of it," returned Moore, promptly; "I don't believe he thinks enough about 'em to hate them."

"But that's sailing pretty near the wind, eh!" inquired Arlington, laughing.

"No, I don't think so. Aymatt doesn't dare go out to tea much; but then he has plenty else to do. To me he never seems to think of getting married; but then he's only six-and-thirty, and what fellow in his senses would think of getting married before that?"

"A good many do," Arlington ventured to say. He felt guilty that his thrust had gone home, for he at twenty-two had thought fondly of the marriage state more than once; for the matter of that, indeed, he had thought of it many a time and oft.

"Yes, a good many do," responded Moore who had never known what it was to feel a qualm at his heart such as threatened to ruin all his peace of mind, "and a good many fellows wish they'd let it alone."

"Well, I'm not altogether so sure about that," returned Arlington, who in spite of his modest air, was as well able to stick to his own opinions as any man in the regiment.

Now this conversation no more enlightened him as to the state of the major's affections or natural inclinations than the one with the beauty had done, so Arlington put his question to some one else choosing this time the senior captain, one George Trevor; and when Trevor heard it, he stared hard at him.

"Amyatt a woman hater! Whatever put such an idea as that into your head?"

"Well, I can hardly say; but he is, do you think?"

"A woman-hater—no, of course he isn't."

"But Trevor, he never has anything to do with women at all, never goes to teas, or bazars, or any garden parties, or even balls, if he can get off it, and when he does go he never dances."

"No more he does! He never did dance, even as a cornet."

"Was he the same then?"

"I fancy he was, certainly he never hung about the women much," Trevor admitted.

"Did he have a let-down any time do you think?" Arlington persisted.

"A let-down, no. The women were always too jolly eager to have him at any price. Lord, I've seen hundreds of women try for Amyatt, hundreds of 'em!"

"That's just it!" put in Arlington, eagerly. "They all try—but they just have to try. It's queer, for Amyatt's a handsome chap, and rich as a Jew."

"Can't say, I'm sure. Just now he's so taken up with his novel-writing and every spare minute seems to go to that."

"But why did he take up novel-writing?" cried the lad.

"Faith and I can't say," Trevor laughed. "But his love-making's mighty pretty for a woman-hater, don't you think?"

Meantime the object of all this thought was in the sitting room of his comfortable quarters overlooking the green, which occupied part of the barrack-square. It was a pretty room, with walls of dark olive-green, relieved only by four or five pictures in plain gilt frames, all of them originals of the illustrations of the story which made his name famous—no, not his name, but that by which he chose to be known to the world.

For Major Amyatt did not write under his own name, preferring for many reasons to be known as "John Dawes," the chiefest of which was that as a beginner he had scarcely time to contemplate the possibility of other than failure, and he had no wish to appear before the regiment in the light of non-success. So, although for some time his intimates had known him as the popular author who stood second to none as a faithful delineator of army men and manners, to the world at large he was still John Dawes, and but few knew that the name was not his own.

A handsome man was Major Amyatt; and looking at him as he sat at the table, one could not wonder at young Arlington's curiosity concerning his past life. It would be hard to say positively that any trace of disappointment—what Arlington called a "let down"—marked his pleasant, fresh face, or lurked in the steady gray eyes, that were as clear and cool and undisturbed as a lad of sixteen.

He had a frank and tender smile, too, and he was smiling then over a letter which lay open upon the table before him; a letter which had been forwarded by his publishers, through whom it had been sent, a letter written in a clear, unformed child's hand, on paper which had been ruled with pencil lines.

"My dear Mr. John Dawes," it said, "I have read all your books, and like them very much. But, please, I do want to know if Laura is going to marry Gerard King. I do hope you won't go and marry her to any one else, because I am very, very fond of him. So I am of nearly all the others, but I like Gerard best.

"Laura is my name, too. I hope you won't mind my writing to you, though I am still rather little. I am nine, or at least nearly nine, and have no brothers or sisters, so that I read a great deal. But I have a dog called Gyp, and my mother is not very old, so that she plays with me a good lot.

"With best love, I am your loving little friend, "LAURA HOLT.

"P. S.—It was quite my own idea to write."

Like most writers who have won a hold upon the hearts of the people, Amyatt was accustomed to receiving many letters from all sorts and conditions of men and women who were utter strangers to him, expressing all manner of sentiment about his work. Nor was this the first letter he had had from a child; but it was the first that had touched him so deeply as this one did. There was a quaintness about its phrases, a brave frankness about its sentiment, a freshness in its tone, which won his heart.

"I hope you won't go and marry her to any one else, because I am very, fond of him." "Laura is my name, too." "I am nine, or at least nearly nine." And "It was quite my own idea to write." Amyatt read the letter again, with a feeling which, if he had been a woman, would have brought tears into his eyes, but which, as it was, gave him a suspicious lump in his throat and that tender smile on his lips.

"Dear little soul," he said softly, "I must write to her"—and forthwith he drew some paper before him, and wrote a long and charming letter to the new little friend who was nine, or, scrupulous little soul that she was, "at least nearly nine." Then he, too, added a postscript, which was, "Write to me again."

II.

Amyatt's little friend did write to him again, a letter full of glee caused by his. Then Amyatt answered that, for he couldn't leave the poor little woman's pretty words unanswered, don't you know; and so, before long, quite a brisk correspondence passed to and fro between them.

He still kept up his nom de plume, though for no particular reason other than that he wished to avoid the trouble of an explanation, and it was all the same to her; and long letters filled with accounts of her child's life or with her opinions of his characters came to him regularly, and was as regularly answered. Sometimes he would send her a book, and often she would send him a little box of flowers, which adorned his buttonhole.

"Rather a new departure for you, eh, old chap?" Trevor hinted.

"Better late than never," returned the major, cheerfully.

"I always thought Amyatt would take it badly if he did take it," confided the senior captain to Arlington.

"Ah, but you didn't think he ever would take it," Arlington said by way of a reminder.

"Well, that's true," Trevor admitted.

Amyatt, however, knew nothing of the gossip in the regiment concerning him other than what Trevor had actually said to him; for, in spite of his great popularity, there was a certain something about him which effectually prevented even that familiarity which usually exists among officers of the same regiment. And the days passed on until they grew into weeks, as the days of busy men do, when one day he realized that it was more than six weeks since he had heard from his child friend, Laura Holt.

"How odd that little soul has not written," he thought; "perhaps she, too, has forgotten."

However, as he had just got some numbers of a magazine in which a short story of his was appearing that month, he put a wrapper around one and addressed it to "Miss Laura Holt;" and by return of posts there came for him a letter in a strange handwriting, bearing the post mark of the town in which she lived.

Aye, but was it so strange? Amyatt stared at it for a full minute before he opened it, his memory going back, back, back—Oh, to the days of his boyhood, gone never to come back again, never any more. And then, when he tore the cover and found that it contained a little note in his friend's round handwriting, that memory straightway vanished.

"Dear Mr. John Dawes," it said, "thank you so much for sending me the story. Mother is just going to read it to me, but I have thought it odd I didn't write so long. I have been very ill, [illegible] been five weeks in bed already. Ever your loving friend, "LAURA"

Naturally, Amyatt knew but little about the ailments of children, but it seemed to him that for a child of nine years to be in bed five weeks at a stretch, with no immediate prospect of getting up again, was a very bad sign, and in his anxiety he appealed to the regimental surgeon.

"What's the matter with the child," he asked.

"I don't know."

"Then you'd better make the illness shorter, or give it scarlet fever," he said, thinking that Amyatt was merely stating a case for one of his stories.

"But it is a real child," the major explained.

"Very bad lookout, then," returned the doctor, decidedly.

Then Amyatt wrote to the mother.

"I shall be grateful if you will tell me how my little friend is," he said. "I assure you if I had known her for twenty years I could not feel more anxious than her letter has made me feel this morning." Yet even when this was gone, he still could not take his thoughts away from the dear little friend whom he had never seen, lying prostrate, for the handwriting told him she must be indeed very ill, on a bed of sickness and pain.

In two days the reply came, written in the same hand as the cover of the child's last letter, hand-writing which set every nerve in his body throbbing, every pulse beating like a steam engine.

"My little girl is very, very ill," Mrs. Holt wrote, "much worse since she wrote to you, and the doctors told me last night that I must be ready to face the worst. When I tell you that she and I are quite alone in this world, you will know what my agony is. I can't write about it. I can only thank you and bless you for all the pleasure you have given her, and beg you, utter stranger that you are, to pray that this blow may not fall upon me.

"Yours gratefully,
"LAURA ST. MARY HOLT."

"Utter stranger that you are!" Why, even in his concern and distress, Amyatt almost laughed aloud. A stranger to her—a stranger to her! the letter, the handwriting, the name, had all brought back the self-same memory that the cover of the child's letter had called back only the other day! The memory of what? Well, just this: Of the only woman that he had ever asked to be his wife, the only woman he had ever loved.

She had told him frankly and simply that she was engaged to another man, and Amyatt had rushed away, never asking, in his misery, so much as his rival's name.

So it had been Holt! And he was dead. Yes, evidently he was dead, for she had said that she and the child—the child who was dying—were quite alone in the world.

But he could help her there! She should be alone in the world no longer, for he would go to her—he would stand between her and the world, he would offer her his strong arm and his true heart to guard her from all evil, to keep her so that trouble should not come nigh her.

"Aye, but could he help her so that trouble should not come nigh her? No; no, alas! for when he reached her side the little child was—dead.—John Strange Winter, in London Ladies' Pictoral.

A CARPENTER-COOK.

Royal Menu on a Deal Table Without Table-cloth.

For forty years there was maintained in the same ownership an eating-house, at the corner of Market and Monroe streets, which was renowned for its beefsteaks. Some time since the proprietor of this place retired from business, or at least attempted to do so; but his former clients would not hear of it. Although he abandoned the eating-house down town he has continued to gratify his patrons under conditions which would deter any but the most enthusiastic bon vivants. In the office of a carpenter shop up town he still continues to cook his famous beefsteaks. So much is he in request that parties must notify him days in advance of their coming. The most exacting amateurs of the town to avail of his cookery are content to put up with what, under ordinary conditions, they would consider revolting inconveniences. All that this famous man provides for them in the carpenter shop is a deal table without a cloth a towel—not a napkin—to each person, a plain bench without a back to sit upon, no knives, forks nor plates. The steaks are cooked over the embers of a fire made of hickory wood. When the meat is done the proprietor cuts it up into small slices, which he places between two pieces of buttered bread. These his patrons eat while held in the hand. The merit of this man's cooking resides in the use of only the very choicest well-ripened beef and his method of broiling. It is unquestionably superlative and not to be equalled in any restaurant or private house of this town. It is related that on a certain occasion a group of twenty persons consumed seventy pounds of beefsteak.—New York Sun.

ROBBED THEM WITHOUT MERCY

Queer Misunderstanding of an Apprentice Hand in a Turkish Bath.

When the new apprentice assumed duties at the Turkish bath establishment the manager thought he seemed rather stupid and entered into a long explanation of what he was to do, says the New York Herald. He particularly emphasized the command that the attendant was to "rub 'em without mercy."

During the day the manager heard a great many complaints from his patrons that they had lost their personal property. He thought that a sneak thief must have come in to get washed, and resolved to be on the look out. He discovered nothing, however, though he peeked around most of the day like an amatuer detective, hiding in all sorts of places.

Toward the time when the new attendant was to go off duty the latter went into the manager's office and began behaving with much mystery. He walked around like a web-hen, waiting until the coast was clear. When there was none but himself and his chief in the office he tiptoed up to the door and locked it. Then he produced from his pockets five gold watches, some diamond rings, a few scarfpins and a gold-headed cane, which he set forth with great pride before the manager, who [illegible] "You told me to rob 'em without mercy," said the delighted novice, "and I done it. Do yer think I'll suit, boss?"

"August Flower"

"For two years I suffered terribly with stomach trouble, and was for all that time under treatment by a physician. He finally, after trying everything, said my stomach was worn out, and that I would have to cease eating solid food. On the recommendation of a friend I procured a bottle of August Flower. It seemed to do me good at once. I gained strength and flesh rapidly. I feel now like a new man, and consider that August Flower has cured me." Jas. E. Dederick, Saugerties, N.Y.

He Wanted Double Pay.

A distinguished Edinburgh professor desiring to go to church one wet Sunday, hired a cab. On reaching the church door he tendered a shilling—the legal fare—to cabby, and was somewhat surprised to hear the cabman say, "Twa shillin', sir." The professor, fixing his eye upon the extortioner, demanded why he charged two shillings, upon which the cabman dryly answered: "We wish to discourage traveling on the Sawbath as much as possible, sir."—London Advertiser.

ELIAS DAVIS, of the Penn National Bank, of this city, was elected cashier of the Camden National Bank, to succed the late I. C. Martindale.

Mexico's primary schools are attended by 543,077 pupils.

Massachusetts has a lady prison commissioner.

The moon is without water and destitute of an atmosphere.

The best remedy for rheumatism. Mr. John W. Gates, Petersburg, Va., writes: "I used Salvation Oil for Rheumatism and obtained great relief. It is the best remedy I have ever tried, and shall always keep it in the house."

1893—and no postage stamp licker invented yet!

A great cure for cough—Mrs. A. K. Morris, 456 Canton St., Philadelphia, Pa., writes: "I took several bottles of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup for a bad cough and was entirely cured."

Ice made at zero temperature will last longer than that made at 18 or 20 degrees.

Catarrh Cannot Be Cured

with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is not a quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years, and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing Catarrh. Send for testimonials, free.
F. J. CHENEY & CO., Props., Toledo, O.
Sold by druggists, price 75c.

The population of Aurora, Nev., was once 5,000. It is now, it is said, but 25.

TO EXCHANGE. Choice Lots and Houses cheap. Will exchange for farms unincumbered. Address W. F. Horsnell, 613 Manomia St., St. Paul, Minn

In Douglass county, Col., 48,000 fruit trees are irrigated by one company.

Sudden changes of weather cause Throat diseases. There is no more effectual remedy for coughs, colds, etc., than BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES. Sold only in boxes. Price 25 cents.

Astronomers claim that there are 17,500,000 comets in the solar system.

Travel With a Friend

Who will protect you from those enemies—nausea, indigestion, malaria and the sickness produced by rocking on the waves, and sometimes by inland traveling over the rough beds of ill laid railroads. Such a friend is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Ocean mariners, yachtsmen, commercial and theatrical agents and tourists testify to the protective potency of this effective safeguard, which conquers also rheumatism, nervousness and biliousness.

There are claimed to be 72 places named St. Etienne in France.

SYRUP of FIGS

ONE ENJOYS

Both the method and results when Syrup of Figs is taken; it is pleasant and refreshing to the taste, and acts gently yet promptly on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, cleanses the system effectually, dispels colds, headaches and fevers and cures habitual constipation. Syrup of Figs is the only remedy of its kind ever produced, pleasing to the taste and acceptable to the stomach, prompt in its action and truly beneficial in its effects, prepared only from the most healthy and agreeable substances, its many excellent qualities commend it to all and have made it the most popular remedy known.

Syrup of Figs is for sale in 50c and $1 bottles by all leading druggists. Any reliable druggist who may not have it on hand will procure it promptly for any one who wishes to try it. Do not accept any substitute.

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
LOUISVILLE, KY. NEW YORK, N.Y.

Ely's Cream Balm
WILL CURE
CATARRH
Price 50 cents.
Apply Balm into each nostril.
ELY BROS., 56 Warren St., N.Y.

ALLEN'S IRON TONIC BITTERS
[illegible]

PENSION JOHN W. MORRIS, Washington, D.C.
Successfully Prosecutes Claims.
[illegible]

N. W. N. U. No. 4—1893

How the English Eat.

When, as rarely happens, English farm laborers come to this country, they find it extremely difficult to accommodate themselves to the current American custom of eating but three meals a day. An English maid servant and nurse, who lived to be more than 100 years old, averred that she had always been accustomed to "a dew bit and breakfast, a stay bit and dinner, a nommet, a crumment, and a bit after supper." Extra meals are common enough during the harvest season in this country. The hasty breakfast at 3:30 in the morning is followed by a "stay-bit" at 9 o'clock and by luncheon between the noonday dinner and the after-sunset supper. In parts of Southern Pennsylvania the dinner hour is 11 o'clock in the morning, and it would not be difficult to show that Americans living on the same meridian are dining all the way from that hour until 7 in the evening. The great mass of country folk still dine at noon.

After The Grip

"I was very weak and run down and did not gain strength, like so many after that prostrating disease. Seeing Hood's Sarsaparilla highly recommended, I began to take it, and was more than pleased with the way it built me up. I think it has made me better than before I was sick. I have also been delighted with HOOD'S PILLS, and always prefer them to any other kind now. They do not gripe or weaken. I am glad to recommend two such fine preparations as Hood's Sarsaparilla and Hood's Pills." MRS. ISAIAH EMERSON, Manchester, N. H.

Mrs. Emerson.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures

Get Hood's.

HOOD'S PILLS are purely vegetable, carefully prepared from the best ingredients.

A Ruddy Glow

on cheek and brow is evidence that the body is getting proper nourishment. When this glow of health is absent assimilation is wrong, and health is letting down.

Scott's Emulsion

taken immediately arrests waste, regardless of the cause. Consumption must yield to treatment that stops waste and builds flesh anew. Almost as palatable as milk.

Prepared by Scott & Bowne, N. Y. All druggists.

CURED FOR A CENT.

If you have a hard rasping cough and a feeling of tightness across the chest, with fever, you must take care or you will have an attack of pneumonia. If this be the case, lose no time, but get a bottle of Reid's German Cough & Kidney Cure. It is the only cough remedy on the market that will instantly relieve pneumonia, because it is a stimulant, but perfectly harmless so you can take it in any quantity, until you are relieved. If your druggist does not have it, write us on a postal card giving your name and address, and the name of this paper, send it to the SYLVAN REMEDY CO., Peoria, Ill. and we will send you a trial bottle free.

HOME TREATMENT For All Chronic Diseases. Pamphlet sent free. ST. PAUL MEDICAL & SURGICAL INSTITUTE, Merrill Bldg., St. Paul, Minn.

FREE An extract of 70 pages of Dr. Nelson's Celebrated book "Facts for the sick," for 4 cents in stamps. Dr. Nelson corner of Washington and 3rd Aves., South Minneapolis, Minn.

CURES CATARRH
LONDON BALM
SOLD BY YOUR DRUGGIST.

HOUSES
Painted with the
Clare-Speaker Paint

Will look well for years. This paint covers more, looks better and wears longer than any other. The colors are the most modern shades. If you intend painting it will pay to use these goods. Color cards and valuable information free. Ask your dealer for color cards or address THE CLARE-SPEAKER CO., Minneapolis, Minn.

EARHUFF ORGANS

The Only Absolutely Mouse and Dust Proof Organ On the Market.

Artistic designs, good workmanship, best Hand rubbed finish. Every Organ Guaranteed. If not handled by your dealer write to factory for prices. Address,

J. G. EARHUFF, ORGAN CO.
NORTH ST. PAUL, MINN.

PISO'S CURE FOR
Consumptives and people who have weak lungs or Asthma, should use Piso's Cure for Consumption. It has cured thousands. It has not injured one. It is not bad to take. It is the best cough syrup. Sold everywhere. 25c.
CONSUMPTION

Minn. Hist. Society

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

St. Hilaire Spectator.

VOLUME XI. ST. HILAIRE, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1893. NUMBER 28.

THE NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

DIGEST OF THE NEWS FROM ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

All Importent Occurrences of the Past Week, Boiled Down and Arranged for Rapid Reading.

Washington.

The President refused to pardon Harper, the Cincinnati bank wrecker.

The Republican senators decided to try to pass a bill making New Mexico, Utah and Oklahoma states.

Secretary Noble decided that Dr. Eastman's charges against Capt. Brown of Pine Ridge agency are false and that Eastman must leave the agency.

Ensign G. F. Ormsby, U. S. N., sues the government for $5,319 salary. He was court-martialed for unbecoming conduct, and under the sentence lost his salary. He claims that the court-martial was improperly conducted.

The petition clerk of the house document room is literally swamped with many thousands of petitions from all parts of the country praying that congress enact legislation for the opening of the World's Columbian Exposition on Sunday. The Congressional Record contained the 13 columns of the titles of such petitions sent in by societies, associations and individuals, all of which have been referred to the Columbian Exposition committee.

A sub-committee of the legislative committee of the World's Columbian Exposition, consisting of Gen. J. W. Sinclair, West Virginia, J. W. Woodside, Philadelphia; D. R. Smalley, Vermont; John Royd Thatcher, New York; H. P. Rucker, North Dakota, and Mr. Sanders, Mississippi, will appear before the senate appropriation to carry the national committee through the fair. This will include the $25,000 deficiency.

Indian Commissioner Morgan has gone to Chicago to buy in open market 400,000 pounds of bacon for issue to Western tribes of Indians under treaty stipulations. This bacon was contracted for last May at $7.54 per hundred pounds, but the contractor has failed to fulfill his agreement and the government will, therefore make the purchase, charging the contractor the difference between the price agreed upon and the present market price. Since last May bacon has advanced in price about 50 per cent.

Accidental Happenings.

The Northwestern College, at Albany, Mo., was burned. $15,000.

The Tise block at Winston, S. C., burned. Loss, $100,000.

The H. Myer Boot & Shoe Company at Freeport, Ill., suffered a $30,000 loss by fire.

A dozen buildings were burned at Clinton, Mo., including Churchill Bros.' livery stable and fifteen horses.

Six miners were killed by a fall of earth in a mine shaft at Ponty Predd, near Aberdale, Wales. Nine men were injured.

The Norwegian schooner Ino was lost off Papa Westra, on the Scottish coast, and all hands perished.

De Wolf Hopper, in some of his acrobatic feats in "Wang," at Rochester, N. Y. broke a ligament in his right ankle, and is now laid up in New York.

The schooner Volante has been wrecked on the California coast. The body of Capt. Peterson was found in the hold. The crew is missing.

James Downs, a farmer living near Terra Haute, Ind., reached home with his skull badly fractured, and soon died. It is thought that he was murdered.

The schooner Mineola was dismasted and waterlogged in mid-Atlantic. The captain, his wife and five seamen were rescued by the ship S. D. Carlton, and landed in New York.

Eight men were injured by the wrecking of an Illnois Central train near Dixon Ill. The accident occurred during a blinding snow storm, and the injured men suffered greatly from exposure.

Personal Mention.

Mrs. Amelia Barr is said to make £2,000 to £3,000 a year out of her literary work.

M. Clemenceau, the French duelist, rides a bycicle and is fond of it as a means of travel.

Miss Mary Cuniffe has been postmaster at Las Cruces, N. M., for over ten years and has just been reconfirmed.

Congressman I. H. Goodnight of Franklin, Ky., who was thought to be out of danger, has suffered a relapse. His condition is serious.

The Exchange Telegraph company is authority for the statement that Prince George of Wales will marry Princess May of Teck during the second week of April.

A daughter of the noted Parson Brownlow lives in Knoxville, Tenn. Her name is Mrs. Anna Patrick, and she is said to be a woman of remarkable force of character.

The crown prince of Roumania's allowance has been fixed at $120,000 a year, half of which is to come from his country, and the other half from his uncle, King Charles.

At the request of Emperor William, Frau Wagner has given her consent to the production at the Berlin opera house of the version of "Rienzi," which was rewritten by Wagner late in life.

Kipling's unpopularity in Chicago is probably due in part to the fact that his wife's father, the late Joseph N. Balestier, predicted that Chicago would have only 2,000,000 population in 1911. About 5,000,000 is the average Chicago expectation.

Among the Wicked.

Twelve prisoners escaped from jail at Springfield, Mo.

Miss Maggie Tumy was found murdered at Fort Worth Tex.

Arthur J. Morton was found murdered at Tolleston, Ind.

Beatty will be the next Homestead poisoning conspirator placed on trial.

Jessie Mate, who killed Joseph Baughman in a bar-room fight at Osgood, O., was captured at Collett, Ind.

J. H. A. Mack, under $3,000 bonds at Kansas City to appear for trial on a charge of embezzling $10,000 from the American National Bank, has jumped his bail.

Motion for a new trial has been made at Pittsburg in the case of Hugh Dempsey, convicted of poisoning Homestead steel workers.

The twenty-three cattlemen under arrest in Wyoming for killing rustlers are discharged, the case against them being dismissed.

The famous rustler murderer trials at Cheyenne, Wyo., have come to an end. The state could not find twelve unbiased men to serve as jurymen, and the defendants have been set at liberty.

A man with half a dozen or more wives is under arrest in Cincinnati, charged with conducting swindling operations through the mails.

George B. Prescott, the electrician, attempted suicide by drowning while a passenger on the steamer Trinidad, from Bermuda.

The festivities at a Polish wedding at Baltimore ended with a fight, in which John Sabush ran amuck with a knife, stabbing fifteen men.

Frank Henschel, a clerk in a commission house at St. Louis, shot and fatally wounded his sweetheart at her home in St. Louis, after which the young man killed himself. He is supposed to have been insane from the excessive use of cigarettes.

At a Methodist revival eight miles from Springfield, Mo., James Simons and John Snow became involved in a quarrel and fought with knives. Both received severe wounds. Mrs. Simmons entered the fray and was badly cut, as was another female of the same family. George Snow, a son, received a mortal wound.

From St. James Parish, La., comes the story of the lynching of three negroes suspected of murder. They were Robert Landry, who is supposed to have killed a man named Dewhurst at New Hope Crevasse, and "Chicken" George and "Dick" Davis, charged with the robbery and murder of the telegraph operator of Deleon Station in St. James Parish.

From Other Shores.

The British minister to Guatemala is beaten by a mob, perhaps fatally.

The British military force in Egypt is to be increased.

A hard battle is fought in Sicily between gendarmes and peasants resisting eviction, in which many are killed or wounded.

Princess Marguerite youngest sister of Emperor William, is married to Prince Frederick Charles of Hesse.

Marie Brooks, an American dancer has become the wife of T. B. Curran, the Irish member of Parliament.

Gen. Francisco Benavides, chief in command of the remaining Garza forces, and Prudencio Gonzales, next in command, were captured by Lieut. Dickman and Lieut. Walker.

The vault in the corner-stone of Del Volador market at the City of Mexico has been robbed of all the articles of gold and silver placed within.

Heavy snows have interrupted railway traffic throughout Switzerland. The St. Gothard tunnel has been blocked by an avalanche.

A sensation has been caused in London by the secret marriage of Lady Lillian Fitz Clarence, the pretty 19-year-old daughter of the Earl of Munster, to Capt. Boyd, aged 50.

The latest letters from Samoa state that Robert Louis Stevenson, the novelist, is in good health. His friends here, therefore, discredit the adverse reports in regard to his condition.

The bodies of two seamen, and a quantity of ship's fittings and a number of boats have washed ashore at Pana Westley, an island of the Orkno group off the coast of Scotland. The wreckage indicates the steamer Ikno, a Norwegian, has foundered and it is supposed all on board of her were drowned.

Gossip of the Sports.

"Doc" O'Connell, the welter weight, who was defeated in his fight (that with Dawson in San Francisco six weeks ago) has been appointed instructor in sparring of the Boston Athletic Association.

Nunc Wallace, the ex-champion bantamweight of England, is fast regaining the laurels that he lost when he was defeated by George Dixon. He whipped Joe Portly in 24 rounds in London a few days ago.

Peter Maher has taken the pledge for one year and his backer, Dave Holland, has sent him to the Hot Springs to get into shape, when an effort will be made to get a match on between him and Joe Choynski.

The postponed heavyweight contest between Jim Doherty, of Cambridge, Mass., and John Cattanach, of Providence, was held at the Metropole Club, Providence, Jan. 10, and was won by the latter in the tenth round.

Dan Needham and Shadow Maber, of Australia, have been matched to fight to a finish before the Butte Athletic Club in February for a purse of $1,250. The Butte City Club have also offered a purse of $2,500 for a fight between Jack Dempsey and Roddy Gallagher.

The Coney Island Athletic Club has matched "Kid" Hogan, of Brooklyn, and "Dolly" Lyons of New York, to fight 20 rounds on Feb. 7. The bout will precede the finish contest between Johnny Griffin and "Australian" Billy Murphy. Ed Nail has $500 he would like to bet that Lyons defeats Hogan.

Billy Meyer's refusal to meet Andy Bowen did not mean that he would not fight this spring if given the chance. Alf Kennedy has telegraphed to Capt. Cook, of Boston, asking him to arrange, if possible, a fight between Myers and Burge for the latter part of April, the men to weigh in at 138 pounds at the ring side.

The Political World.

J. W. Ady, United States district attorney, is nominated for senator by the Republicans of the Kansas legislature.

Miscellaneous Item.

The cold weather has caused a shortage in the oyster crop.

A company has been formed at St. Joseph Mo., to erect $100,000 anti trust distillery.

Orders have been issued for the New York police to arrest all street beggars.

A line of steamers is to be run between New York fair ports on the west coast of South America.

Up to the present time eighty-four cases of cholera have appeared in the Nietlebem Asylum at Berlin, with thirty-four deaths.

Cohen Bros., dry goods dealers at Salt Lake City, have failed owing $119,000 and with $100,000 assets.

The passengers and crew of a vessel arriving at Colon become cannibals to save themselves from starvation.

The cargo of the La Champagne, from New York for Liverpool, includes $4,400,000 in gold.

Relics of an ancient race are exhumed in Adams county, Iowa.

Railroads and transportation companies make arrangements to establish a bureau of information on the world's fair grounds.

The Lansing, Mich., Driving Club has decided to sell its track to meet its indebtedness. This does not mean an abondonment of the track association, but will result in reorganization.

At attempt is made in the Nebraska legislature to secure the impeachment of Gov. Crounse for willful neglect in connection with the Lincoln back failure, whereby the state lost considerable money.

The Chicago Directory does not contain the name of Wm. Merceran, the alleged wealthy Chicagoan, said to have eloped with Alice Stahl, the 19-year old daughter of a prominent resident of Binghamton, N. Y. No such person as Merceran can be traced in Chicago.

The Whisky Trust has reduced the output of spirits in the Chicago distilleries, including the Calumet, Shufeldt and Riverside. Notice has been given to the department of internal revenue that from now the output of these distilleries will be reduced 3,900 gallons daily.

JAMES GILLESPIE BLAINE.

HIS TIRELESS BRAIN IS FOREVER AT REST.

The Angel of Death Has Claimed the Foremost Statesman of the Age, and America Has Lost Her Favorite Son.

A Nation Mourns.

Washington, Jan. 28.—One more name, that of James G. Blaine, has been added to the list of the nation's dead. Once more the thoughts of the people are turned toward the man, who, as the "Plumed Knight," was such an object of devotion. For years he stood in the very first rank of the great men of the land and few men have ever wielded such a potent influence as James G. Blaine. He was the one whom his party delighted to honor and whose word was law with his followers. With the exception of the presidential chair he achieved every form of success possible to a statesman in a free country. He began at the bottom of the ladder of fame. He rose to the top, and with his death there passes away one of the foremost figures in the history of the republic. Few men have had so many ardent admirers and devoted friends. He made many bitter enemies as well. This was but a natural result of the position he filled in life. But now all animosity is buried, and friends and political foes alike unite in expressions of regret at the passing away of the "man from Maine."

The news of Mr. Blaine's death spread through the departments with startling rapidity. Within a few moments after the event the rumor reached the state department and ran through the entire building in an inconceivably short space of time. Officials and clerks poured into the corridors in search of information which would substantiate the rumor, and the telephones were kept busy with inquiries. The first intimation of his death came by word of mouth, and soon after was officially confirmed from the White House. While the death of the statesman created a profound sensation throughout the building, this feeling was intensified in the state department, where there is hardly an official or employe who had not a personal acquaintance with the dead man. Although the event was daily expected and every one was in a measure prepared for the reception of the sad news, it was a shock to every one. It is a noticeable fact, as indicating the character of the man who, for two terms held the highest position in the cabinet, that of secretary of state, and was one of the foremost men of the age, that he never again passed under the portals of the state department

After the Day of His Resignation.

He has never re-entered the department which so long had him as the chief since that memorable Saturday, June 5, when he penned the brief resignation, which probably caused a more profound sensation than any similar missive in the history of this country. The resignation was written in the little ante-room which opens from the secretary's office. It was penned, sealed and directed to the president in a few moments. Mr. Blaine then arose and strode from the building, never to enter it again.

Those who were long in the state department and knew Mr. Blaine when he was at his best, recognized with sorrow during his last service that there was a remarkable change in his physical condition. Mr. Blaine was conscious of his poor state of health. A prominent Republican who called on him about a year ago, in speaking of this said: "I went to Mr. Blaine the latter part of last January and asked him if he was going to be a candidate for the presidency. He answered: 'No, sir; I cannot entertain the thought for one moment. It would kill me sure, and I know it, and I do not believe I have a friend on earth who would ask me to be a candidate if he knew the state of my health.' Mr. Blaine added: 'I am going to write a letter on the subject.' After Mr. Blaine had written his letter announcing that he would not be a candidate for the Republican nomination he was waited upon by his friend and urged to reconsider his action. It was represented to Mr. Blaine, who was then ill, that the campaign would be made so easy for him as to involve no physical or mental exhaustion, and that the result would be his triumphant election. With an air of despondency the sick man replied that he was satisfied that he could not live through a heated political campaign, or that if he should, the harrassments of a presidential office would surely terminate his life within six months after he took his seat. He intended, and this statement is significant in some of the subsequent events, to resign his office of secretary of state in the early summer, retire to his Maine home and spend his remaining days in quiet literary work. Mr. Blaine's death at last but not without premonition. The attending physicians have said repeatedly in these later days, since hope of recovery was abandoned, that when the end came it would probably occur with at least two or three hours' warning. This one announcement at least, among many perplexed and contradictory statements has been verified by facts. The approach of death was made evident to the family fully two hours before its actual occurrence. It was between 8 and 9 o'clock this morning when the first dangerous symptoms were observed. The family had taken their breakfast, and the trained nurse, Mrs. Price, had gone down for breakfast also, leaving the patient temporarily alone. James G. Blaine, Jr., had on his coat and hat preparatory to starting off for his day's duties in the office of the Pennsylvania Railroad company, where he is employed, when his mother suggested to him that it would be better to wait till the nurse came up. He promptly acquiesced. Mr. Blaine had passed a restless night and had been pronounced "no worse" even by his cautious physicians. But beyond a perceptible increase of languor, which had marked his condition during the past few days, there was no very alarming change to be noted. When the nurse returned from her breakfast, however, her experienced eyes at once saw that the end was drawing near. Both physicians were immediately telephoned for and arrived within a few minutes of each other. The powerful heart stimulant (nitroglycerine) which had several times before brought the patient out of the dark valley of death was powerless now. Dr. Hyatt at 9:30 came out and said to the group of waiting reporters that he feared that the end was at hand. In the meantime all the family had been summoned into the death chamber—Mrs. Blaine, the devoted wife; Miss Hattie Blaine, his unmarried daughter; Mrs. Damrosch, his married daughter; James G. Blaine, Jr., his only surviving son, and Miss Dodge (Gail Hamilton), his cousin. In silent, tearful sorrow they Witnessed the Closing Scene.

Came Painlessly and Quietly,

The patient lay so quietly that even the doctors were hardly able to say when he died. No word of consciousness, no look of recognition had passed. At 10:45 he lay so still that the window shades were raised to give more light to enable the physicians to determine if life still lingered. Fifteen minutes later they proclaimed him dead. The news was instantly flashed all over the world. Young Mr. Blaine was in the act of writing a note to President Harrison to inform him of the event when the president himself arrived, accompanied by his private secretary and the secretary of state, Mr. Foster. All the rest of the cabinet quickly followed, and the excitement throughout the city became general as the news spread. Both houses of congress adjourned, and the former associates of the ex-senator and ex-speaker of both political parties united in eloquent tributes to his memory.

A public funeral was suggested, but the wishes of the family prevailed and the ceremonies will be of a private nature. They will be held at the Presbyterian Church of the Covenant, where Mr. Blaine was a pew-holder, on Monday morning. Dr. Hamlin, who officiated at the funeral of Mrs. Harrison and her father, will conduct the services. The remains will be laid to rest in the beautiful Oak Hill cemetery in Georgetown, which now forms part of Washington City, by the side of his favorite son, Walker Blaine, and his daughter, Mrs. Coppinger. The physicians have officially made public the cause of death as Bright's disease, aggravated by tubercular disease of the lungs, and followed by heart failure.

The following is the official statement of the attending physicians as to the cause of death:

The beginning of Mr. Blaine's illness dates back some years. The earliest signs of ill health were associated with, and no doubt due to a gouty tendency which manifested itself in subacute attacks of gout, disturbances of digestion and progressive innutrition and anaemia. Subsequent events prove that at this time changes were going on in the arteries of the body which resulted later in symptoms of obliterations of vessels and chronic diseases of the kidneys.

In December signs of lung complication appeared, which were no doubt connected with the general disease; but as tuber bacilli was found in the sputa it is probable that there was some tubercular infection as well. Much of the distress which Mr. Blaine suffered was associated with this disease of the lungs and his death was certainly hastened by it. For three days before Mr. Blaine's death there was no marked change in his condition, and on the night before his death he did not seem to be in any immediate danger. Towards morning of the 27th his pulse was observed to be very feeble and his breathing became much embarrassed. As a result of the heart failing action oedema of the lungs occurred, and he died without much suffering at 11 o'clock. Doctors Janeway and Loomis of New York were called in consultation and rendered important service by their advice.

WILLIAM JOHNSTON, M. D.
FRANK HYATT, M. D.

This statement will not be supplemented by an autopsy on the body of Mr. Blaine, the members of the family being thoroughly satisfied as to the cause of deth. To a reporter Dr. Johnston said: "During yesterday, nothing of importance occurred. Mr. Blaine simply lay there in a feeble condition, taking but very little nourishment. Indeed, he has taken but very little nourishment since his serious attack of Dec. 18, and this has consisted almost wholly of milk. At no time has he had any difficulty with his stomach and has been able to digest whatever food was given him. Throughout his long illness he has been able to recognize the members of his family and physicians. While he has not conversed to any extent, even with his family for some time past, he has always been able to indicate his wants very clearly. To the questions that have been asked him he has always replied intelligently, but in monosyllables."

No Hope of a Recovery.

Dr. Johnston further said that there had been really no hope of Mr. Blaine's ultimate recovery since that Sunday in December, but up to within the last two or three weeks a strong hope had been entertained that his life might be prolonged. Since that time, however, there has been no hope. No effort has been made to sustain life by the use of stimulants, and practically nothing has been done except to give him nourishment. Dr. Johnston continued:

"I was called this morning to the Blaine residence about 9:30 o'clock and found Mr. Blaine in a very exhausted condition. He had grown weaker during the early morning hours, and about 9:30 o'clock the nurse observed that his breathing was more difficult and his pulse more feeble than it had been. Dr. Hyatt was also sent for and arrived there about 10 o'clock. After my arrival Mr. Blaine continued to grow weaker very rapidly, his pulse becoming more feeble. He died at 11 o'clock. He was perfectly conscious up to within a few moments of his death, and recognized all those around him. He died without suffering."

The body will not be embalmed for burial, the family objecting to any disturbance of it. The casket will be of red cedar, covered with black cloth, and the solid silver plate on the top will contain the following inscription: "James Gillespie Blaine, born Jan. 31, 1830. Died Dec. 27, 1893." Mrs. Blaine requested that no official notice be taken of Mr. Blaine's death, but custom requires official promulgation of the fact.

The state department is now draped with black in respect to the memory of ex-President Hayes, and at the request of Mrs. Blaine no additional emblems of mourning will be placed on the building. There will be short services at the house on Monday and later ceremonies at the Church of the Covenant. The organ will be played by Walter Damrosch, the dead man's son-in-law. The pall bearers will be twelve in number and selected from Mr. Blaine's personal and official friends. This evening Mrs. Blaine sent a note to President Harrison in response to his message of sympathy.

Still in a Deadlock.

Olympia, Wash., Jan. 28.—There was no change to-day in the senatorial situation. The legislature adjourned out of respect to Mr. Blaine.

Attempted to Hold a Caucus.

Lincoln, Neb., Jan. 28.—There was no material change in the senatorial ballot to-day. The Republicans tried to hold a caucus last night, but only forty-seven of the sixty-four members of the legislature were present.

A Jail in Ashes.

Menomonie, Wis., Special, Jan. 28.—The Dunn county jail in this city was burned last night. Loss, about $5,000; partially insured. Cause, a defective flue.

MINNESOTA LEGISLATURE.

Proceedings of the Legislature Day by Day.

FRIDAY, Jan. 20.

SENATE.

Senator Sanborn introduced a joint resolution on the death of President Hayes which was adopted.

The following bills were presented and referred.

By Senator McHale—S. F. No. 111, a joint resolution asking congress to appropriate $25,000 to improve the Minnesota river in Scott county.

By Senator Eaton—S. F. No. 112, a bill proposing an amendment to the constitution limiting sessions of the legislature to 60 days' duration; to the committee on judiciary.

By the Judiciary Committee—S. F. No. 115 a bill providing for the revision of the laws at a cost not to exceed $12,000 and making an appropriation therefor.

Senator Crandall introduced S. F. No. 116, a bill to appropriate $63,500 for current expenses and additional buildings at the state public school at Owatonna; to the committee on finance.

The senate went into committee of the whole, Senator Leavitt's bill for the taxation of incomes was under discussion. The committee rose and reported progress and the senate adjourned til 3 p. m. Monday.

HOUSE.

The senate memorial on the death of ex-President Hayes was adopted.

Mr. Cotton called up the senate resolution that the judiciary committee jointly consider the taxing of sleeping car property. The resolution was concurred in.

The senate memorial asking congress to appropriate $25,000 for a bridge at Belle Plaine, Scott county, over the Minnesota river, was passed under the suspension of rules.

Mr. Fleming called for the judiciary committee on H. F. No. 22, raising the amount of liabilities of corporations in case of death of employes. Mr. Fletcher explained that it was withheld for amending the title. A long discussion ensued when finally on motion of Mr. Fleming, o. Crow Wing, the committee was ordered to report.

Mr. Guttersen reported a joint resolution declaring for the election of the United States Senator by the people. The resolution was adopted.

MONDAY, Jan. 23.

SENATE.

The senate met at 3 o'clock with barely a quorum present.

The following bills were introduced:

By Senator Stevens—S. F. No. 122, a bill authorizing the sheriffs and deputy sheriffs to complete foreclosure sales after the expiration of their term of office; to committee on judiciary.

By Senator Phillips—S. F. No. 123, a bill to permit cities and counties to renew the per sent tax on personal property; to committee on judiciary.

By Senator Keller—S. F. No. 124. A bill appropriating $3,600 for the St. Cloud Normal school and making a standing appropriation of $25,000 annually; to committee on normal schools.

By Senator Smith, E. R.—File No. 125, a bill legalizing and confirming town plats in certain cases; to committee on judiciary.

By Senator Dean—S. F. No. 126, a bill to regulate private elections and political caucuses; to committee on elections.

By Senator Dean—S. F. No. 128, a bill providing that manufacturers of steam boilers shall indicate by a stamp the qualities manufactured; to the committee on manufactures.

By Senator Wood—S. F. No. 131, a bill to amend the state constitution by providing for the forfeiting to the state of lands remaining unoccupied by railroad companies for the time of two years after the adoption of the amendment; to committee on judiciary.

HOUSE.

Mr. Howard from the committee on rules, reported favoring the increase of the members of committee on municipal legislation, to 19 members. The rule was adopted.

Mr. Zelch, from the grain and warehouse committee, reported a substitute for House Files 33 and 66, and recommending that the latter be indefinitely postponed. The part of the report to indefinitely postpone was adopted. The report presented by H. F. 133, to be known as the grain and warehouse bill of the house. The report was adopted and the bill was read. It is a consolidation of the bills of Mr. Jacobson, of Lac qui Parle, and Mr. Bjorge, of Otter Tail. It went, under the rules, to the committee of the whole. The bill was also ordered printed.

The following bills were introduced and referred.

By Mr. Railson—H. F. 135, to change the rate of interest on sale of state lands from 7 to 5 per cent; to committee on interest laws.

By Mr. Wilson—H. F. No. 133, relating to the boundaries of independent school districts; to committee on education.

By Mr. French—H. F. No. 139, to authorize the election of commissioners of highways, in townships; to the committee on towns and counties.

By Richardson, H. M.—H. F., 143, relating to malicious mischief. It was made a penal offense to release or drive away any teams, or other mischievous caper; to committee on judiciary.

TUESDAY, Jan. 24.

SENATE.

Senator Donnelly objected to a resolution of Senator Hompe providing for a clerk for the committee on grain or warehouses, and on his declaration that he would act as clerk himself, the resolution was lost.

The following bills was introduced and referred:

By Senator Stockton—S. F. No. 132, a bill to appropriate $110,000 for the erection of buildings at the Institute for Defectives at Faribault; to the committee on finance.

By Senator Sevatson—S. F. No. 133, a bill to provide that debts not a lien upon the property of decedents before death shall not become so after death; to the committee on judiciary.

By Senator Dougherty—S. F. No. 134, a bill to legalize corporate publications in certain cases; to the committee on corporations.

By Senator Craven—S. F. No. 135, a bill to repeal chapter 43 of the laws of 1887, relating to roads and bridges; to the committee on roads and bridges.

By Senator Stevens—S. F. No. 136, a bill to amend the probate code; to the committee on judiciary.

By Senator Day—S. F. No. 137, an amendment to the game and fish laws, to the committee on game and fish laws.

By Senator Barr—S. F. No. 138, a bill appropriating $2,000 additional for the state normal schools, except that at Moorhead, which is given $1,000; to the committee on normal schools.

The resolution providing for an investigation of the coal combine was passed.

HOUSE.

The committee on appropriations reported favorably on H. F. No. 73, to supply the deficiency in the governor's contingent fund. Adopted.

The railroad committee presented majority and minority reports on the anti-scalper bill. Both were referred to the committee on judiciary.

From the committee on incorporations House Files No. 8 and 9 were recommended to be turned over to the committee on municipal corporations. Adopted.

From the same—H. F. No. 86 was recommended to pass. Adopted.

The election contest of Bidderman vs. Hinrichs was reached in special order at 11 o'clock, and the time was reset, on request of attorneys, for Jan. 27, at 11 o'clock.

The following bills were introduced and referred.

By Mr. Blacken—H. F. No. 180, to compel railroads to make tickets over their lines good until used; to committee on railroads.

By the Same—H. F. No. 190 to legalize mortgage foreclosure certificates; abrogating the 20-day clause; to committee on judiciary.

By Mr. Fletcher—H. F. No. 191, authorizing banks to deposit with trust companies; to committee on judiciary.

Mr. Boggs—H. F. No. 181, limiting time in the vacation of streets and alleys in villages, may be called in question, to 10 years; to committee on judiciary.

By Mr. Anderson—H. F. No 182, to regulate sale of real estate for delinquent taxes; to committee on taxes and tax lands.

By Mr. Wyman, H. F. No. 176, regulating benevolent charitable or missionary societies, with reference to election of officers, in certain cases; to committee on incorporations.

WEDNESDAY, Jan. 25.

SENATE.

A communication was received from the state treasurer, in answer to the resolution of Senator Crandall, inquiring why some railroad companies pay 1, some 2 and some three per cent gross earnings tax. The treasurer stated that this was in accordance with the gross earnings law; which provided that certain per cents should be paid after certain years.

The following bills were introduced and referred.

By Senator O'Brien—S. F. No. 143, relating to changes in the articles of incorporation or corporations; to the committee on judiciary.

By Senator O'Brien—S. F. No. 144, limiting the time for commencing actions on shares of stocks, bonds, etc.; to the committee on judiciary.

By Senator O'Brien—S. F. No. 145, amending the law relating to full paid stock in corporations; to committe on corporations.

By Senator Burkhardt—Q. F. No. 146, authorizing towns to refund moneys collected on improperly or illegally executed bonds; to the committee on judiciary.

By Mr. Nelson—S. F. No. 147, amending the statute relating to the service of summons and complaint in court actions in justice courts; to committee on judiciary.

By Senator McMillan—S. F. No. 148, appropriating $150,000 for the construction of a library and assembly hall at the State University. To the committee on university.

By Senator Allen—S. F. No. 149, a bill to amend the law relating to the insurance of state teachers' certificates. To the committee on education.

By Senator Donnelly—S. F. No. 150, a memorial to congress asking that all anthracite coal lands be condemned and taken possession of by the government. On motion of Senator Donnelly the rules were suspended and the memorial was adopted by an unanimous vote.

HOUSE.

The following bills were introduced and referred.

By Mr. Boxrud—H. F. No. 198, to regulate peddlers and peddling; to committee on judiciary.

By Mr. Pray—H. F. No. 199, to authorize Minneapolis to issue bonds to build a bridge over the Mississippi; to committee on roads and bridges.

By Mr. Noyes—H. F. No. 200, to appropriate $600 to build a bridge in the town of Forest Lake Washington county; to committee on appropriations.

By Mr. Fleming—H. F. No. 201, to regulate the practice of veterinary medicine, surgery and dentistry; to committee on judiciary.

By Mr. Temple—H. F. No. 202, to appropriate $500 to build a bridge over the Cannon river, in Rice county; to committee on appropriations.

By Mr. Sheli—H. F. No. 203, relating to life insurance companies; to committee on insurance.

By Mr. Staples—H. F. No. 204, to provide for county teachers training schools; to committee on education.

By the same—H. F. No. 205, to define public school holidays; to committee on education.

By Mr. Cotton—H. F. 210, to legalize certain proceedings of villages in granting franchises for street railway companies; to committee on municipal legislation.

The house then went into committee of the whole, with Mr. Cairns, of Hennepin, in the chair.

THURSDAY, Jan. 26.

SENATE.

Several nominations sent in by the governor were confirmed.

The following bills were introduced and referred:

By Senator Nelson—S. F. No. 154, a bill to place express companies under the supervision of the railroad commission; to the committee on railroads.

By Senator Lommen—S. F. No. 155, a bill relating to the storage and transportation of grain; to the committee on grain and ware houses.

By Senator Lommen—S. F. No. 156, a bill to insert a long and short haul clause in the transportation laws; to the committee on railroads.

By Senator Wood—S. F. No. 157, a bill to regulate the maximum charges for the transportation of freight and passengers; to the committee on railroads. The bill was ordered printed.

By Senator Brown—S. F. No. 158, a bill to repeal chapter 144 of the laws of 1885 and all laws amendatory thereof relating to grain and warehouses; to the committee on grain and warehouses.

By Senator Brown—S. F. No. 159, a bill repealing certain laws relating to the railroad and warehouse commission; to the committee on grain and warehouses.

The senate went into committee of the whole with Senator March in the chair.

The income tax discussion was not resumed. When the bill was reached its author, Senator Leavitt, moved that the committee report progress upon it, and the bill was passed over. The discussion will be resumed at the next session of the committee. Senator Leavitt stated that he would certainly continue his fight for the proposition.

The senate adjourned until 10 a. m. to-morrow.

HOUSE.

The following new bills were read and referred:

By Mr. Sullivan—H. F. No. 213, regulating primary elections, and conventions. The bill contains no particularly new provisions; to committee on elections.

By Mr. Winston, H. F. No. 214, relating to the charters of cities.

Referred to committee on municipal legislation.

By the Same—H. F. No. 215, relating to the enforcement of mechanics' or laborers' liens; to committee on labor and labor legislation.

By Mr. Rodger—H. F. No. 216, to regulate the employment of women and children in factories or other work. It prohibits work more than 60 hours in any week, and no children who cannot read or write shall be employed except during school vacation; to committee on labor.

By Mr. Leonard—H. F. No. 217, relating to sale of homesteads and regulating foreclosures thereon; to committee on judiciary.

By Mr. Bleecker—H. F. 218, relating to bonds in action in justices courts; to committee on judiciary.

By Mr. Turrell—H. F. No. 221, to secure certain irregularities in private incorporations of the state; referred to committee on judiciary.

By the Same—H. F. No. 222, to provide for suits for injuries resulting from sale of intoxicating liquors. All wives or relations injured by persons intoxicated may have action for damage against seller of the liquor; to committee on judiciary.

By Mr. Charles—H. F. No. 223, relating to elevators at terminal points. It makes all public warehouses subject to state inspection and requires roads to allow warehouses on tracks and rights of way; to committee on grain and warehouses.

THE FIFTY-SECOND CONGRESS

What Is Being Accomplished by our National Lawmakers.

FRIDAY, JAN. 20.

SENATE.

The senate today paid an additional mark of respect to the memory of Gen. Hayes by adjourning without transacting any miscellaneous business. The credentials of Mr. Gray were placed on file, and then Mr. Brice, (Dem.) of Ohio, offered a resolution that the senate has heard with deep regret of the death of R. B. Hayes, formerly chief magistrate of the United States, and that, as a further mark of respect to his memory on this, the day of his funeral, the senate do now adjourn.

HOUSE.

The house for the second time this week adjourned out of respect to ex-President Hayes.

SATURDAY JAN. 21.

SENATE.

The new Columbian postage stamp was vigorously attacked in the senate today by Mr. Wolcott, of Colorado, who called up his joint resolution directing the discontinuance of these stamps. In a brief, but decidedly breezy speech, Mr. Wolcott ridiculed the postmaster-general's mercantile idea that a large profit might be made from their sale to stamp collectors—an idea, he said, that might suit some Central American state that was a "few thousand dollars shy." He was unwilling to have unloaded on stamp collectors "a cruel and unusual stamp," and rather approved of a physician's idea that it might be used as a "chest protector." Senators enjoyed the speech, and the joint resolution would have been passed instantly had not the chairman of the postoffice committee (Mr. Sawyer, Rep., Wis.) interposed an objection, which sent it to that committee.

HOUSE.

The feature of the session of the house today was the consideration of the national quarantine bill. It was ushered in by an eloquent speech from Congressman Raynor, of Maryland, who depicted the danger which was imminent to the people of this country from unrestricted immigration and who urged upon the house the necessity of agreeing to some national law which would protect the United States from an invasion of its most deadly enemy—cholera. There were a few constitutional objections raised against the measure, but outside of Mr. Raynor's speech, and a few remarks made by Mr. Cockran and Mr. Lodge, there was little interest manifested in the bill, which comes up again Monday morning.

MONDAY, JAN. 23.

SENATE.

Mr. Chandler (Rep.) diverted the senate today by arraigning two Republican senators (Messrs. Hoar, of Massachusetts, and Platt, of Connecticut) for putting forward against the anti-option bill a constitutional argument that would be equally strong in its application to the tariff law. He warned them that they would be called upon to defend the tariff law in the next congress if the Democrats were true to their platform on which the presidential ticket had been elected; and he intimated that their contention that taxes could only be imposed for the purpose of revenue, not for the purposes of destruction, would be fatal to a high protective system. At the conclusion of Mr. Chandler's speech the anti-option bill went over without action, an agreement having previously been reached that the vote on that bill shall be taken on Tuesday of next week.

HOUSE.

There have been many stormy and confused sessions of the house, but they have generally been held when a matter of political or personal interests has been at stake. Barely has a more boisterous meeting been held over a non-partisan and non-personal measure than that which occurred today. Members were at cross purposes over the quarantine bill. The most earnest supporters believed that it did not go far enough, and while they acquiesced in some of the amendments made by the New York members, they did so under protest and in the belief that if they did otherwise the measure would meet a lingering death through filibustering. After many parliamentary wrangles the bill was finally passed.

TUESDAY, JAN. 24.

SENATE.

The death of Justice Lamar, was announced and the senate adjourned out of respect to his memory.

HOUSE.

Mr. Holmes (Dem., Indiana) moved that the house go into committee of the whole for the further consideration of the sundry civil bill.

The motion was defeated—yeas, 107; nays, 137.

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 25.

SENATE.

Neither the anti-option bill nor the Cherokee outlet bill which have the right of way in the senate had any show of consideration today. The hour of the session was taken up in routine matters—none of them entitled to be regular—as of much public interest. The only exceptions were the introduction of the bill for the admission of Utah as a state and an amendment reported from the committee on naval affairs and referred to the committee on appropriations looking to a further increase of the navy. The rest of the day's session, from 1 o'clock up to the adjournment, passed behind closed doors and was devoted to the question of whether the nomination of Mr. McComas as one of the judges of the supreme court of the District of Columbia should be or not be confirmed.

HOUSE.

Filibustering against the bankruptcy bill was inaugurated today by Mr. Kilgore. In the first place he insisted on the reading of the journal in full. Then he objected to the approval of that document, and an hour was consumed before it was finally agreed to as a portion of the records of the house. He was ably seconded in his endeavor to defeat the bankruptcy bill by Mr. Pierce, of Tennessee, who supplemented his every filibustering motion with another which was calculated to prevent action, and the filibustering continued.

THURSDAY, JAN. 26.

SENATE.

There were not many senators in the chambers today during the debate on the anti-option bill; but those who were present witnessed the remarkable circumstances of the state's rights Democrat, Mills, of Texas, having his argument against the constitutionality of the bill sustained by the stalwart Republican, Hiscock, of New York.

Mr. Mills declared his belief that the sentiment in favor of local self-government prevailed from New England to the Pacific ocean; and Mr. Hiscock asserted that there had been rarely presented to congress a measure in which less regard had been paid than was paid in the pending measure, either to the proprieties of legislation or constitutional restrictions.

An effort to pass a bill creating a commission of alcohol liquor traffic gave Mr. Vest (Dem., Mo.) an opportunity of ventilating his views on such specimens of "crank legislation," and on those "pseudo-philanthropists," who wanted to use the powers of congress to advance some special hobby, to which they are devoting their otherwise useless lives.

HOUSE.

In the house today the sundry civil bill was granted the right of way, and while a few obstructions were placed on the track, none of them proved disastrous and the bill made fair progress.

GREAT NORTHERN

TIME CARD.

NO. 8 Daily NO Daily

7 40 p m Lv.........St. Paul.........Ar 6 55 am
8 10 " 11 ....Minneapolis........ 6 25 am
Ca am 2 15........Barnesville......... 10 25 pm
10 45 a 25 " 9 Lv.......Crookston.......Ar 4 10 pm
11 35 " 30 ....Shirley........... 3 30 "
12 45 " 31 ....Ives........... x3 00 "
x12 20 pm ....Wylie............ x2 20 "
12 45 " 12 Ar......St. Hilaire......Lv 2 00 "
*Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

S. S. Buzza Agt.

Dr. H. GRUNDY.

Physician

& Surgeon.

Graduate of the University of Toronto Canada and member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario.

Messages from the surrounding country attended to,

Office in Drug Store

THIEF RIVER FALLS,

NORTHERN PACIFIC

THE

GREAT TRAMSCONENTAL ROUTE.

Passes through Wisconsin, Einnesota, North Dakota, Manitoca, Montana, Idaho, Oregon and Washington.

THE DINING CAR LINE

Dining cars are run between Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Oinnipeg, Helena, Butte, Tacoma, Seattle and Portland.

PULLMAN SLEEPING CAR ROUTE.

Pullman service between Chicago St. Paul Montana and the Pacific Northwest; and between St. Paul, Minneapolis and Minnesota North Dakota and Manitoba points.

THE POPULAR LINE.

Early Express Trains carry elegant Pullman sleeping Cars, Dining cars, Day Coaches Pullman Tourist Sleepers and Free Colonist Sleeping Cars.

YELLOWSTONE PARK ROUTE.

Toe Northern Pacific R. R. is the rail line to Yellowstone Park; the popular line to California and Alaska; and its trains pass through the grandest scenery of seven states

THROUGH TICKETS are sold at all coupon offices of the Northern Pacific Railroad to points North, East, South and West in the United States and Canada

TIME SCEDULE,

	Leave Crookston Daily	Arrive Crookston Daily
For Staples, Minneapolis, St. Paul Duluth Ashland, and points East and South	7:05 p. m.	8:20 a. m.
For Grand Forks Grafton Drayton, Winnipeg and oints in North Dakota and Manitoba	8:27 a. m.	7:10 p. m

For Rates, maps, Time Tables or special information, apply to Agent Northern Pacific R. R. at Crookston Minn., or

CHAS. S. FEE,
Gen. Pass. Agent
St. Paul Minn.

ST. HILAIRE

MEAT MARKET,

All kinds of fresh and salt meat always on hand.

I make a specialty of buying and selling cattle of all kinds.

If you want to buy or sell anything in that line it will pay you to give me a call.

JAMES DAINARD.

FRED Eikhof

DEALER IN CHOICE

WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS.

Beer always on tap.

Pool Room in Connection.

Broadway St. Hilaire.

FRANK IVES,

Attorney and Counselor

AT LAW,

CROOKSTON and ST. HILAIRE, Minn.

Will Practice in ALL The Courts, OF T E STATE and and before the U. S. Land Office Crookston and at Washington.

Will give special attention to contests of claims.

BREVITIES.

Wheat is 60 cents.

Fresh Oysters at W. A. Arthurs try them.

Shoveling snow is a popular pastime lately.

For No. 1 pure buck wheat flour call on Fricker & Welch.

If you want some nice fresh oysters call on W. A. Arthur.

The Great Northern auditor was in town to-day checking up Agent Buzza.

A complete line ot undertakers goods always on hand at Holmes Bros.

Snow drifts are visible everywhere and the country roads are in bad condition.

Business this week amounts to almost nothing as the roads are so bad that farmers cannot come into town.

Now is the time to secure your flour cheap. Call for bargains on Fricker & Welch.

Martin Williams left last Wednesday for a short visit among friends at Northfield Minn.

C. G. Rapp returned home last Saturday from a two weeks visit to Chicago and other points.

If you want anything in the line of confectionary fruit or oysters call on W. A. Arthur.

The young people of the village enjoyed a pleasant dance in Dainard's Hall last Sasturday night.

John and Samuel Dainard, of Crookston, were in town a short time last Monday, visiting their cousins the Dainard Bros. here.

Speaking of weather we are having all kinds of it this winter, but this week will undoubtedly be the banner week of the winter.

H. O. Hanson and James Evenson a couple of the prominent merchants of Thief River Falls, were in town a short time to-day.

We understand that Oscar Pest will leave us early in the spring for Chicago where he will accept a position in the World's Fair,

Mr. F. H. Gambell and Miss Lizzie Zarracher returned from Crookston last Monday and opened school in the afternoon, after a six weeks vacation,

S. M Dainard returned from St. Paul last Friday where he had been doing business for a week. We have been informed that Sam would have been home earlier if he had not missed the train.

Ed Giste wishes us to announce that he has not resigned his position in Rapp's store and does not intend to, and that the "higher position" he has been looking for will not interfere with his duties in the store.

The train was several hours late to day on account of the blizzard, and it was preceeded by a snow plow. We learn that the main line is blocked and no mail from the south has reached here since Monday.

Fred Eikhof is making an extended visit at Crookston for the past week. Rumor has it that Fred is looking for a maiden fair upon whom to bestow the title of Mrs. Eikhof and that he has sworn not to come home without her.

Conductor Harry Norris informed us that Division Superintendent Jenks is authority for the statement that we will have a daily train on this branch in a few days or as soon as the matter can be arranged. Strange as it may seem the prospects for a daily train at last seem favorable,

Most any kind of a bill on any kind of a subject has already been introduced in the state legislature, but few, so far, have been introduced that will do the state any good. The all important question in the legislature at present is "how can we put in the full ninety days." No one, however, doubts but that they will do it.

The death of James G. Blaine although not unexpected, was nevertheless quite a shock to all the admirers of that distinguished American citizen. The name of James G. Blaine will go down to posterity together with Henry Clay and Daniel Webster as the greatest American statesmen of their day, and their names will be remembered and reverenced by future generations of loyal Americans where the names of presidents will be forgotten.

The mercury's falling,
At a rate that's appalling,
And the blast comes straight from the Pole,
And the cold is cruel,
And we need more fuel,
So bring us in a good load of poles.

If our delinquent subscribers don't want to be afflicted with more of this they had better bring us in a load of wood quick.

A bill has been introduced in the senate providing for the election of presidential electors in this state by congressional districts, the same as in Michigan. But there is no danger of the Republicans allowing it to pass.—Long Prairie Leader.

A bill will soon be introduced in the legislature under which the railroad land grants will be made taxable. That these lands should bear their share of taxes would seem only reasonable and just, and we hope to see such a law passed,—Lanesboro Journal.

James Dainard, of the firm of Dainard Bros., came down from St. Hilaire last evening and went to McIntosh this morning to buy a couple of carloads of stock they are now shipping stock to St. Paul where it is selling at good prices.—Crookston Times,

By all means, gentlemen of the Twenty-eighth pass speedily the bill appropriating $1,500 a year to each militia company. What will that sum be, compared with the loss the Minnesota Iron company might have sustained if ex-Gov. Merriam hadn't sent those militiamen post haste up on the range the moment it was known that the miners there were thinking of striking? and who knows how soon a regiment of them may have to be ordered out again to stop two men from fighting? Don't be niggardly, gentlemen, with the saviors of society.—St. Paul Globe.

The county division boomers are in full force again at St. Paul but are having a hard time of it. The new constitutional amendment which does away with special legislation, stops a special bill being introduced and they have prepared a general bill which will be introduced. The bill provides that a special election may be called to divide a county if sixty per cent of the voters of the county so petition. The bill will meet with considerable opposition from other parts of the state and it is extremely doubtful if it will pass.

We are pleased to state that, at last our village is entirely free from diphtheria. We have had in all nearly twenty cases of the disease and all are to be congratulated upon the fact that only three deaths ensued. Had it not been for the prompt sanitary measures taken to stop the spread of the disease it would undoubtedly have done much more damage. Upon the approach of spring, however, all must be exceedingly cautious, and all refuse must be cleaned up in the strictest manner possible.

Yesterday morning we were favored with a good sized snow storm, the snow continuing to fall until afternoon, about eight inches of snow falling. About one o'clock the wind commenced to blow and in a few minutes one of the worst blizzards ever seen in this section of the country was on deck. While the storm only lasted about eight hours, it was exceedingly violent and the weather turned intensely cold, the thermometer registering as low as 54 below, and even at noon to-day as low as 46 below The storm would compare very favorably with the ones the old settlers talk about.

The people who reside near the school house in St. Hilaire have seen a curious light in the school rooms several times lately. A light will appear in one of the windows and then disappear again. The people living near had an idea that the light was caused by some one in the building but as it appears quite often they are at a loss to explain the phenomenon. They have set to watch it and if it is some of the boys trying to play a ghost trick they will be caught and severely dealt with.—Crookston Times,

The check to emigration to the country districts which kept farm lands at a standstill for several years, reacted on the cities and checked their growth, and it is probable that it will be one or two years before they will revive and grow as they did in the 80's. The drift of population toward the cities is all the time becoming more marked, and the cities will for this reason recover sooner than the country. After the Columbian Exposition, all the Northwestern cities are likely to grow again as rapidly as they did a few years ago. Meantime farmers who live on good lands which have been held at $5 to $12 per acre may safely mark them up to $20 and $25, and in many localities even higher, with cost of improvements added. Good land will never again go begging for buyers in the northwest. Big cities mean many mouths to be fed with the the products of the farm.—N. W. Agriculturist,

Counting all sidings, there were 216,150 miles of railway in the United States June 30, 1891. The number of corporations is growing less, sixteen having been abandoned and ninety-two have merged in others. Nearly one-half the mileage is operated by forty-two companies. There are eighty companies each having a revenue of over $2,000,000. Of the eighty-one billion tons of freight carried that year, those eighty roads transported sixty-seven billion. There are 1785 railway corporations in all, 889 of which are independent. The tendency to consolidation is very marked as the figures given indicate. The capital is $9,828,475,015 as given in the report of the Inter State Commerce commission. The gross earnings were $1,095,761,895. The average revenue per passenger per mile was 2.142 cents and for freight per ton per mile $.895. The net earnings were $2 263 per mile on a capitalization of $6 801 per mile. The freight department brings in over two-thirds of the receipts, the passenger traffic, one-fourth, while it costs over one-third the expense.

A two-month's bill for articles purchased for the United States senate and paid for by Congress, running through last May and June, contain such items as 8½ gallons of cologne, five dozen combs, 400 quinine pills, six gross of fine toilet soap, nine bottles eau de quinine and any amount of shaving soap, essential oil, olive oil, castor oil, flesh brushes, etc. Over $1,000 was spent for such luxuries in two months and the fun is still going on. Wouldn't it be a good idea to relieve Uncle Sam of such an imposition?—Minneapolis Journal,

The two most absent minded men on record are the fellow who thought he had left his watch at home, and then took it out to see if he had time to go back and get it, and the man who put on his office door a card saying "Out, will be back soon" and on his return sat down on the stair step to wait for himself.—The Advance.

Two grounds urged as reasons why the United States should accept the Hawaiian islands, should be carefully weighed. A great statesman of Europe has styled these islands as being an "outlying plantation of the United State." Commercially they have long been american dependencies. The past year the exports of the islands amounted to $15,000,000, and their imports were about $6,000,000. The great bulk of their exports consisting of sugar, rice, bananas and other fruits came to us. During the year the United States imported sugar from Hawaii amounting in value to $7,442,047. We also imported from there a large amount of coffee. A vast amount of American capital is invested on the islands principally in sugar growing. The islands lie 2000 miles southwest of San Francisco on a direct line of ocean travel to China and Japan, hence the Monroe doctrine applies in the case. Were a European power to gain control of them our Oriental commerce would be at the mercy of that power. The strategic importance of the acquisition can be seen at a glance upon this showing. Sugar growing in this country is limited and coffee is not raised here. It seems also to be a matter of great importance that we should have a safe harbor in mid-ocean for refitting coaling and provisioning.

The policy of our nation is opposed to subsidies while Great Britain and other European nations have built up great commercial interests upon the seas by subsidizing ship owners. There will soon be plying between Australian ports and the British possessions on the Northern Pacific, a line of highly subsidized steamers. The danger is great that Great Britain will undertake to convert the Hawaiian islands from an American to a British commercial center. All these things are worth weighing before taking a decided step, and they should be weighed at once for delay may be dangerous. There are, no doubt, plausible arguments on the other side of the question and these should be called up and discussed as well—St. Paul Globe.

Notice To Farmers.

We will pay you cash for hides, hay barley, oats, cord wood, good steers or anything marketable that you have to sell.

E. T. Spafford & Co.

CHEAP EXCURSIONS TO CANADA

Low round trip tickets will be on sale by the Great Northern from Crookston Grand Forks and stations north to boundary and west to Minot, to points in Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick Nova Scotia, on Nov. 27th, Dec. 6th Dec 18th to 22nd inclusive, and Dec 27th 1892. Tickets good for 90 days with transit limits of 15 days each way going and returning. This will allow holders to stop in the Twin Cities, or Chicago to see the wonderful buildings of the World's Fair, and other points en route.

Extension of time beyond 90 days made at small additional cost. For particulars and tickets see S. S. Buzza agent at St. Hilaire.

I will pay the highest market price for veal calves, fresh eggs and butter.

S. M. Dainard.

INTERESTING ITEM.

It is to the interest of parties contemplating going east to consider the great advantages the Great Northern offers one through the fast passenger service to St. Paul and to all points west to the Pacific coast, their free colonist cars, and magnificent Dining and Sleeping Cars. The shortest route, close connections, quickest time and fare as low as the lowest. Any information cheerfully given,

S. S. Buzza
Agent.

CHATTEL LOANS

I am prepared to loan money on chattle security at reasonable rates. One years time. Call On

H. E. IVES.

WANTED. Salesmen, Local and Traveling, To represent our well known house. You need no capital to represent a firm that warrants nursery stock first-class and true to name. WORK ALL THE YEAR. $100 per month to right man. Apply quick stating age. L. L. MAY & CO.
Nurserymen, Florists and Seeds men,
St. Paul Minn.
(This house is responsible.)

MARLIN RIFLES

Made in all styles and sizes. Lightest, strongest, easiest working, safest, simplest, most accurate, most compact, and most modern. For sale by all dealers in arms. Catalogues mailed free by

The Marlin Fire Arms Co.,
NEW HAVEN, CONN., U. S. A.

are requested to call and settle up at once or the debt will be collected by law.

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
Crookston Minn December 5 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on January 21 1893 viz:

Daniel Johnson H D 12023 for the Lot 5 Sec. 5 and Lot 1 sec 7 Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land viz:

J. A. Sjortrom Anton Sundahl J. A. Peterson. K. Sundahl all of St. Hilaire, Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn. Dec. 7 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on January 28 1893 viz Charles Gomoll H D 11784 for the SE ¼ Sec 25 Tp 153 R 45.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land viz:

Gottlieb Gerlach, August Morel, Charles Peterson Henry Leppert all of Wylie Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn Dec 16 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on Feb 16 1893 viz:

Peter Sanderson H D 14120 for the NW ¼ SE ¼ NE ¼ SW ¼ and Lots 5 and 8 sec 6 Tp 151 R 41.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz.

Peter Anderson, John Strawberg, O. K. Ellenson B. Johnson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn. January 3 1893

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver of the U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on February 16 1893. viz:

Anton Peterson HD 12232 for the SE ¼ Sec. Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land viz:

Julius Nelson, James Evenson, Daniel Johnson, Erick Anderson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

CLOSING OUT SALE!

At E M Hoff's Store

My whole stock of

Dry Goods and Notions Gents Furnshing, Goods $5,000 worth of ready made clothing Foot wear of all kinds and everything belonging to a full stocked general merchandise store will be closed out at cost in the next 90 days.

COME EVERY BODY

AND

SECURE GOOD BARGAINS.

E. M. HOFF

CROWN ROLLER MILL.

EQUIPPED WITH THE LATEST AND BEST IMPROVED MACHINERY.

Manufactures the well known PERFECTION FANCY PATENT and WHITE ROSE FLOUR.

Rye and Feed mill in connection.

Flour and Feed always kept on hand

Custom work a specialty.

FRICKER & WELCH Prop

HILAIRE MINNESOT

CHAS G. RAPP.

A large and complete line of

General Merchandise

CONSISTING OF

Dry Goods, Groceries, Clothin

Boots & Shoes, Hats & Caps

Notions

THE ST. HILAIRE SPECTATOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY EVENING.
H. E. IVES, Propr.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE:
Advance.
If not in Advance. [illegible] Per Year

Entered in the Post Office at St. Hilaire, as Second Class Mail Matter

WEDNESDAY February 1 1893.

IN WASHINGTON.

SENATOR WASHBURN TALKS ABOUT OPTIONS DEALING

He Believes That Men Who Speculate in Prices of Food Products, Compose a Dangerous Criminal Element, That Should Be Wiped Out by Law and Society.

WASHINGTON, JAN. 31, 1893.

DEATH HAS COME so often this winter, to take our great men away, that Washington has been in mourning almost every week since Congress opened. All great men are known in Washington, and when death falls upon a great soldier, a statesman, or a lawyer, this city, that may have been his home during a part of his life, mourns his loss and reveres his memory.

There was striking similarity between Mr. Blaine's passage over the Silent River, and the crossing of that other unconquerable American—General Grant. Both were intensely, and always, AMERICAN. Both were great and aggressive. Neither ever surrendered to any earthly power. Each was upon the bed of death for months, from which each knew he could never rise.

Whatever may be the view of the reader about the advisability of passing the Anti-Option Bill, there can be no possible difference of opinion as to the character of the contest waged by Senator Washburn, of Minnesota. No measure presented for congressional consideration during several years has provoked the opposition brought out by the Anti-Option Bill. Money, influence, corporate greed, commercial prejudice and financial traditions were all consolidated against him. The Junior Senator from Minnesota has labored with energy and patience to attain his end. Even the enemies of the bill unite in complimenting the Senator upon the legislative ability he has manifested in the contest. Senator Washburn said to the writer:

"This fight has been made in the interest of the farmers and producers of America. No class of men have been so heartlessly and criminally treated as the food producers of the Nation by the conscienceless speculators of the large commercial centers. Long ago I determined that if the opportunity was offered to me to do so, I would strike one blow at the gambling fiend that was robbing the honest people of the country of their hard earned substance. That blow I embodied in the Anti-Option Bill. The men who deal in futures, as a class, compose the most dangerously criminal element of the commercial classes today. Behind the system of dealing in futures the gmabling spirit has taken its final refuge. All other forms of gambling become moral when compared with this. It is not only robbing and ruining the farmers and planters of the country, but is doing infinitely more injury to the gamblers themselves. Every great, organized crime is always most ruinous to the criminals who seek to profit by it. It was so with slavery, with polygamy, with the Louisiana lottery. It is so with option dealing.

"For two years I have been traduced and slandered as no other public man has been since the war period. This I consider the highest praise that could possibly be conferred upon me personally, and the very strongest argument in favor of the justice and righteousness of my measure. Until I began this fight I had no sort of conception of the terrific ramifications of this organized crime, or of the mighty influence it wielded for wrong doing. Every step taken in studying the subject has opened new vistas of criminality, injustice, organized selfishness and downright robbery that have perfectly amazed me. I knew years ago, by instinct rather than information, that option dealing was wrong. But until lately I did not know how infamously vile it was. And its worst feature is that it is utterly impossible to fix a personal responsibility for any one of its catalogue of sins. If the crimes and misdemeanors of the system could be divided and personalized, one season's operations in the grain and cotton market alone would suffice to people and overflow every state prison in the country.

"My fight against the system has only just commenced. If I live it will be prosecuted in other directions. If I die there are now plenty of younger and stronger men to take up the work where I leave off."

Mr. Johnson, member of the House from North Dakota, has returned from his flying trip to Bismarck where he went, as proclaimed by many newspapers, for the purpose of "downing Casey." Mr. Johnson, in speaking to me, disclaimed any such intention, and stated that his visit was made chiefly to use what influence he might have, first in securing the return of a Republican Senator, and secondly to see for himself whether money was actually being used dishonestly to further the chances of any candidate. Here is what he says on that subject:

"North Dakota in 1893 will be relieved of the suspicion of sending any man to the Senate through the corrupt use of money. I could not learn that any candidate had offered money, and I firmly believe that no man will offer any. I believe a Republican will be elected, and I believe that, whoever he may be, he will hold his seat as honorably as any man in the Senate. A new era has opened in my State. Honest men everywhere are waking up to the disgrace that attaches to "boodle," and I predict that in future North Dakota will be as free from scandals of corruption as Massachusetts or Georgia."

The Republican senatorial caucus has agreed to vote for the admission of Oklahoma, New Mexico and Utah to Statehood. It refused to consider the claims of Arizona. But notwithstanding this concession there will probably be no new States admitted during this session, chiefly for the reason that the time is too limited. Only five weeks more of life belongs to this Congress; and its time will be fully taken up with the Appropriation Bills and other measures.

It does not seem possible for the bill restricting immigration to pass during this session. The country must therefore depend upon quarantine for protection against the advent of cholera. The National Quarantine Bill passed the House early last week, after a most exciting debate; the opposition coming chiefly from New York City and New Orleans. The National Government will by this law—and it will probably pass the Senate—have full and complete power of quarantine, and will have to take the responsibility in case cholera finds a lodgement in the country.

North and South Dakota were both among the delinquents until the eleventh hour in sending the electoral vote of their States to the National Capital by special messenger. They were accompanied in their remissness by Georgia, Indiana, Oregon, and one or two other States. Just why all of these splendid Commonwealths neglected so long to give a profitable picnic to some deserving citizen I have not learned.

A Washington novelty just now is the gathering of ice form the Potomac. The work is mostly done by negroes, who work awkwardly, with poor tools. Large crowds look on all day long. It has been eight years since ice was taken from the Patomac at Washington.

A. W. Dunn, who represents The Pioneer Press in Washington, has learned a very odd story about the late Mr. Lamar, which shows what a worker the Judge was while a member of President Cleveland's cabinet. The story is, that when Judge Lamar was Secretary of the Interior it was his plan to go down to the department very early in the morning and remain there late at night at his work; in fact, he could work better when the big building was practically vacated than at any other time. The coal contractors for the Interior Department were compelled to put the coal in the building while it was unoccupied, and they chose the night for the work, but as Lamar would come down at 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning they were obliged to suspend work immediately he appeared on the scene. Occasionally he would come back from dinner and work far into the night, and the men would stand around on the curb waiting until he departed, so that they could wheel the coal into the building and not be interfered with by the secretary, who would permit no noise while he was deeply engaged with knotty land cases.

Just what effect upon the official social life of the capital Mr Blaine's death will have, has not been definitely decided. Some invitations have already been recalled, but Mr. Blaine had a decided repugnance to making any public demonstration of sorrow, and on two or three occasions in his career here his house was opened when it ought to have been closed had the usual practice been followed. Mrs. Blaine deplores any public recognition of her sorrow, and it may be that, in deference to her desire, the routine of social events will not be further disturbed.

I am informed that the new appropriation bill provides $166,000,000 for pensions, which amount is $20,000,000 more than the last appropriation.

Congressman Lind, of Minnesota, is looking after the bill providing for a bridge between Duluth and Superior. Duluth people want this bridge. Superior people don't. A warm fight is being made, pro and con.

South Dakota members of the Senate and House have been especially active in regard to a timber culture bill, that will likely become a law. It is important to settlers in all prairie states who have made tree claims. Briefly explained, the bill provides that all persons who have made tree claim entries of land and have been unable to make trees grow thereon, shall be permitted to prove up by paying a very small fee.

FRANK J. MEAD.

U.S. Land Office

Crookston Minn. Jan. 7 1893

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and said proof will be made before U.S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on Feb. 21 1893 viz:

John August Lundbeck HD. 11974 for the S ½ NE ¼ and Lots 3 and 4 Sec. 3 Tp 152 R. 46.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of said land viz:

John Ellason, Martin Boland, Elias Svenson, Ernest Svenson, all of St. Hilaire Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON, Register.

DO YOU WANT TO ADOPT A BABY?

Maybe you think this is a new business, sending out babies on application; it has been done before, however, but never have the babies furnished been so near the original sample as this one. Everyone will exclaim, "Well! that's the sweetest baby I ever saw!" This little black-and-white engraving can give you but a faint idea of the exquisite original, which we propose to send to you, transportation paid. The little darling rests against a pillow, and is in the act of drawing off its pink sock, the mate of which has been pulled off and flung aside with a triumphant coo. The flesh tints are perfect, and the eyes follow you, no matter where you stand. The exquisite reproductions of this greatest painting of Ida Waugh (the most celebrated of modern painters of baby life) are to be given to those who subscribe to Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893. The reproductions cannot be told from the original, which cost $400, and are the same size (17x22 inches). The baby is life size, and absolutely lifelike. We have also in preparation, to present to our subscribers during 1893, other great pictures by such artists as Percy Moran, Maud Humphrey, Louis Deschamps, and others of world-wide renown. Take only two examples of what we did during the past year, "A Yard of Pansies," and "A White House Orchid" by the wife of President Harrison, and you will see what our promises mean.

"I'M A DAISY."

Those who subscribe for Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893 will possess a gallery of exquisite works of art of great value, besides a Magazine that cannot be equaled by any in the world for its beautiful illustrations and subject matter, that will keep everyone posted on all the topics of the day, and all the fads and different items of interest about the household, besides furnishing interesting reading matter, both grave and gay, for the whole family; and while Demorest's is not a fashion Magazine, its fashion pages are perfect, and we give you, free of cost, all the patterns you wish to use during the year, and in any size you choose. Send in your subscription at once, only $2, and you will really get over $25 in value. Address the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York. If you are unacquainted with the Magazine, send 10 cents for a specimen copy.

Ask Your Dealer For
WHIPS.
FEATHERBONE is made from [illegible] [illegible] nature's own toughest, and strongest elastic material. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] $1.00, $1.25 & $1.50. All styles for Buggy, Cart, [illegible] Team and Riding. [illegible] [illegible] and ask for a FEATHERBONE
FOR SALE BY
S. M. HOFF
St. Hilaire

Going to Buy
A Dictionary?
GET THE BEST,
Webster's International.
A Choice Gift
A Grand Family Educator
A Library in Itself
The Standard Authority
WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY
SOLD BY ALL BOOKSELLERS.
The International is a new book from cover to cover, fully abreast of the times, and is the successor of the authentic "Unabridged." Ten years were spent in revising, 100 editors employed and over $300,000 expended before the first copy was printed.
Do not buy reprints of obsolete and comparatively worthless editions.
Send for free pamphlet containing specimen pages and full particulars.
G. & C. MERRIAM CO., Publishers,
SPRINGFIELD, MASS., U. S. A.

U S LAND OFFICE.

Crookston, Minn., Nov. 17 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn on December 29 1892. viz:

Peter E. Engh HD [illegible] for the NW ¼ Sec. 21 Tp 152 R. 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Halvor Aamodt, Ole J. Hegg, Peter Anderson, Ole J. Johnson, all of St. Hilaire Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

U.S. Land Office

Crookston Minn., Nov. 25 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver, U.S. Land Office at Crookston Minn on Jan. [illegible] 1893 viz:

Julius Norton H.D. 11890 for the S W ¼ sec. 8 tp 152 r 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove her continuous residence upon, and cultivation of said land viz:

James Everson, R. I. Konieg, Nels Evenson, Anton Peterson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

WE WANT YOU
to act as our agent. We furnish an expensive outfit and all you need free. It costs nothing to try the business. We will treat you well, and help you to earn ten times ordinary wages. Both sexes of all ages can live at home and work in spare time, or all the time. Any one any where can earn a great deal of money. Many have made Two Hundred Dollars a Month. No class of people in the world are making so much money without capital as those at work for us. Business pleasant, strictly honorable, and pays better than any other offered to agents. You have a clear field, with no competition. We equip you with everything, and supply printed directions for beginners which, if obeyed faithfully, will bring more money than will any other business. Improve your prospects! Why not? You can do so easily and surely at work for us. Reasonable industry only necessary for absolute success. Pamphlet circular giving every particular is sent free to all. Delay not in sending for it.
GEORGE STINSON & CO.,
Box No. 488, Portland, Me.

E. T. SPAFFORD. S. M. DAINARD.
E. T. SPAFFORD & CO.
DEALERS IN
LUMBER, LATH AND SHINGLES.
A complete stock of all kinds of Lumber Lath, Shingles, Mouldings, Building Paper Sash, Doors and Screens, Lime, Cement Stucco, Plastering Hair, Brick etc. always on hand at the lowest market prices.
S. M. Dainard, Manager.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE, MINN.

E. T. SPAFFORD & CO.
WILL ALWAYS PAY THE
HIGHEST MARKET PRICES
FOR
All kinds of
CATTLE.
Cor wood, Hay, Oats,
Barley and flax.
Ground Feed for Sale
S. M. DAINARD.
Manager.

Reserved For
THE
ST. HILAIRE
TOWNSITE
COMPANY

W. A. ARTHUR.
DEALER IN
FRUITS, CONFECTIONARY
TOBACCO AND CIGARS.
STATIONARY OF ALL KINDS
Lunch Counter
Warm meals at all hours.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE MINNESOTA

JUSTUS L. JOHNSON
DEALER IN
pure medicines Fancy articles, perfumer and stationery, paints oils and dye stuffs.
Cigars, Candy, Fruit and Soft Drinks always on hand.
Barbershop in connection
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE

I CAN SAVE YOU
MONEY
If you wish to make
REAL ESTATE
LOANS.
For full particulars call on or address
H. E. IVES.
SPECTATOR OFFICE ST. HILAIRE

HOLMES BRO'S
Dealers in
HARDWARE, TINWARE,
We are carrying a heavy and complete line of Heating and Cooking stoves.
GOOD GOODS LOW PRICES
CALL ON US FOR BARGAINS
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE MINN.

FARMERS STORE
NEW GOODS AT HARD PAN PRICES.
If you want to save money do your trading with
HALL BROS.
DEALERS IN Dry Goods, Groceries
Notions.
BROADWAY [illegible]

S. M. HOFF
DEALER IN
HARDWARE
A new and complete stock of all kinds of Hardware, Tinware, Stoves, Fencing wire Nails, in fact everything usualy kept in a first-class Hardware Store,
AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES
Call and examine Goods
and Get Our Prices.
BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE

DR PRICE'S Cream Baking Powder.
The only Pure Cream of Tartar Powder.—No Ammonia; No Alum.
Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard

WITH PICK AND SHOVEL.

Graphic Story About Ice Mining for Codfish.

An old sailor to the Artic region has been telling how he misses really cold weather down this way:

"Tain't the kind of air I'm used ter," he said. "I don't believe I'll ever get what I want this side of the Labrador. You don't have to fish for cod down to the Labrador. You just gets a pick and shovel and mines 'em just mine 'em out of the icebergs. They're frozen in fast. Some of 'em have been in there for a million years, more or less. They got catched up some time and just frozen in. A whaling man 't knows his business can tell off hand where he'd strike a paying lead. He lands a crew on a berg and they cut a level place to stand on and then just open galleries into the ice. You find the cod in seams like coal. I never worked in a coal pit but I've had the thing explained to me, and it's about the same. The cod were swimming around and a layer of them got frozen. Then would come a layer of plain ice underneath, without any trimmings and afterward another layer of cod. It's colder work than fishing, cod mining is, but the returns are quicker. There are mines down to the Labrador that have been worked for years and years until they have run out. The Yak's—them's the Eskimos—know where the best cod mines are and they won't tell but the whalers know a thing or two likewise. I'm a whaler myself.

MENAGERIES OF METAPHOR.

Some of the Queer Expressions Used by the Nations.

Let us take a turn with the animals and insects of metaphor. The Scotch have a saying: "You have a bee in your bonnet." The meaning is that the head has a new idea or fancy that is for the time paramount. "Your head is full of bees" is an old-time phrase, meaning that dreamy theories have taken possession of the brain. The connection between bees and the soul was once generally maintained: hence Mohammed admits bees to paradise. The moon was called a "bee" by the priestesses of Ceres, and the word lunatic still means one with "bees in his head."

"The wolf at the door," is a common expression in all countries, and we say of a ravenous eater: "He has a wolf in his stomach." It implies hunger, starvation. It is said that there are people who use the term literally to frighten their young children into habits of industry and economy, so that the wolf of hunger may never appear at the doors.

"A frog in the throat" is a common expression referring to a husky speaker.

"I smell a rat" has long been a popular saying when some mystery has been discovered or a hidden clue found. It was an Irish barrister who got off the mixed metaphor: "I smell a rat. I see him waving in the air; but if we are careful we shall nip him in the bud."

How She Became Famous.

"How can she command such a salary when she is only an ordinary little actress?"

Parsons—Heavens, man, she is the only actress in America who hasn't been chosen as the model of the Montana statue.—Inter Ocean.

Every Person Should Read This

This is the season when a slight cold is apt to develope into serious pulmonary trouble. You should therefore guard against the first approach of the evil. If you are troubled in this way, the time to attend to it is now. Ask your druggist for Reid's German Cough and Kidney Cure. If he has not got it, write your name on a postal card and send it to the SYLVAN REMEDY CO., Peoria, Ill., and we will send you by return mail free, a trial bottle of this great remedy. It is the only cough remedy on the market that does not contain poison. We make you this offer, because we want you to try our remedy. We are so confident it is what you want, that we are willing to stake our reputation on it.

CURES CATARRH

SOLD BY YOUR DRUGGIST.

MEN
We will send you the MARVELOUS and UNFAILING French Preparation, CALTHOS FREE by MAIL, and a legally executed guarantee that CALTHOS will STOP Discharges and Emissions, CURE Varicocele, and RESTORE Lost Vigor.
Use it & pay if satisfied.
Von Mohl Co., Importers, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Garfield Tea Overcomes results of bad eating.
Cures Sick Headache, Restores Complexion, Saves Doctors' Bills. Sample free. Garfield Tea Co., 319 W. 45th St., N.Y.
Cures Constipation

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.
CATARRH
Sold by Druggists or sent by mail. 50c. E. T. Hazeltine, Warren, Pa.

N. W. N. U. No. 5.—1893

Don't Check Perspiration.

It is singular that although the fact that perspiration is the only safeguard provided by nature against sunstroke has appeared in print hundreds and thousands of times, people are still on the look-out for something to check perspiration, instead of increasing it, during the intense heat. Not a day passes but we have calls for something to check perspiration, and the explanation that nothing can be safely used for this purpose is accepted with very poor grace by those to whom it is given. It is dangerous to even check perspiration of the feet unless it is very excessive, and even then the remedy is apt to be worse than the disease. Of course this only refers to perspiring during hot weather; cold sweats are a never-failing indication of intense weakness, and ought to receive prompt medical attention.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Some European soldiers still wear body armor.

Look out for counterfeits! See that you get the genuine Salvation Oil! Do not let the dealer sell you some "just as good," but insist upon getting the genuine with the "Bull's Head trade-mark on the wrapper.

Greek helmets covered the head, back of neck, ears and eyes.

It is because persons who once try Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, always buy it again, that its sales have become so enormous. The success of this great remedy in curing cold, cough, croup and sore-throat is simply marvelous.

Mount Ætna had its first recorded eruption in 425 B. C.

The Modern Invalid

Has tastes medicinally, in keeping with other luxuries. A remedy must be pleasantly acceptable in form, purely wholesome in composition, truly beneficial in effect and entirely free from every objectionable quality. If really ill he consults a physician; if constipated he uses the gentle family laxative Syrup of Figs.

R. A. T. S. are the suggestive initials of the name of a Dowagiac, Mich., social club.

A pamphlet describing home treatment for all chronic diseases sent free. Address St. Paul Medical & Surgical Institute Merrill Building, St. Paul, Minn.

About 25,000 new volumes are added to the Boston Public Library each year.

The coldest winter the world ever knew occurred during the year 1435.

"I have been occasionally troubled with Coughs, and in each case have used Brown's Bronchial Troches, which have never failed, and I must say they are second to none in the world.—Felix A. May, Cashier, St. Paul, Minn.

The steam printing press was invented by Richard Hoe in 1842.

Disease is unnatural and is but the proof that we are abusing nature. It is claimed that Garfield Tea, a simple herb remedy, helps Nature to overcome this abuse.

America used 19,685,000 bottles of French champagne in '92.

Allen's Iron Tonic Bitters cure Dizziness. All genuine bear the signature of J. P. Allen, Druggist, St. Paul, Minn.

As Sure as the Sun Shines on a Clear Day,

Just so surely will a neglected attack of liver complaint multiply other bodily troubles. To the prompt, certain relief of this ailment, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is particularly adapted as well as to the indigestion, constipation and sick headache, of which it is the parent. The liver is always affected in malarial complaints. These are cured and prevented by the Bitters, potent too in rheumatic, nervous and kidney disorder.

JUST A LITTLE
pain neglected, may become RHEUMATISM,
NEURALGIA,
SCIATICA,
LUMBAGO.
Just a little SPRAIN
may make a cripple.
Just a little BRUISE may make serious inflammation.
Just a little BURN
may make an ugly scar.
Just a little COST will get a bottle of
ST. JACOBS OIL,
A PROMPT AND PERMANENT CURE.
Years of Comfort against Years of Pain for
JUST A LITTLE.

A copy of the "Official Portfolio of the World's Columbian Exposition," descriptive of Buildings and grounds, beautifully illustrated in water color effects, will be sent to any address upon receipt of 10c. in postage stamps by THE CHARLES A. VOGELER CO., BALTIMORE, MD.

25 DOSES 25¢ THE GREAT TAKE THE BEST COUGH CURE 25¢ 50¢ & $1 SHILOH'S CURE.
Cures Coughs, Hoarseness, Sore Throat, Croup, Whooping Cough and Asthma. For Consumption it has no rival; has cured thousands where all others failed; will cure you if taken in time. Sold by Druggists on a guarantee. For Lame Back or Chest, use SHILOH'S PLASTER. 25cts.
SHILOH'S CATARRH REMEDY.
Have you Catarrh? This remedy is guaranteed to cure you. Price 50 cts. Injector free.

ELY'S CREAM BALM
when applied into the nostrils, will be absorbed effectually, cleansing the head of catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions. It allays inflammation, protects the membrane from additional colds, completely heals the sores and restores sense of taste and smell.
Try the Cure.
CATARRH

THE CURE FOR CATARRH COLD IN HEAD
HAY FEVER
DEAFNESS
HEADACHE
ELY'S CREAM BALM
50c.

HAY-FEVER
A particle is applied into each nostril and is agreeable. Price 50 cents at Druggists or by mail. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren Street, New York.

A SHAM TRAGEDY.

At about 9 in the evening a man turned the corner of Madison avenue and Sixty-third street, walked slowly along the block, then, pausing, glanced at a row of handsome houses which stood in their sameness, dark and stately, selected the third, mounted the high steps and authoritatively rang the bell.

It was early spring, the air was soft, the night still, and the sharp clang echoed for a moment before the door was opened by a trim waiting maid. The moonlight revealed to this maid a boyish-looking fellow, who held carefully in both hands a flower-pot containining a most beautiful azalea in full bloom of its pink blossoms. The maid involuntarily smiled as she saw the lovely flower, and the smile was answered by an engaging one from the young man.

"Is Mrs. Courtland at home?"

"No, sir."

"Mr. Courtland?"

"No, sir; they are at the theater.

An expression of disappointment crossed the youth's face, and he hesitated as if puzzled.

"Won't you step in?"

After an instant's pause the man did so, threw a comprehensive glance about him and said: "I promised to deliver this plant to Mrs. Courtland herself; but it's a long way up and I believe I'll leave it."

He had one of those pathetic voices in which there is an unconscious appeal, and this, together with his frank blue eyes and pleasant manner, created sympathy for his disappointment in the maid's heart. So she received the plant carefully from him and was about to place it on a hall chair when the man gently interposed: "Excuse me; I'd rather you'd put it in a safer place."

"Surely," and, as the plant was heavy, the maid went slowly down the long hall, turning her back completely. The man dropped a card on the chair, pushed the door to with a loud slam, and with astonishing agility and lightness sprang up the staircase, disappearing before her return.

"Well? he might ha' waited," she muttered, throwing the card into the silver salver; and the man, who paused in the hall above, heard her descend into the basement.

He smiled, listened, stepped into the dimly lighted, library passed through two dressing-rooms into the bedroom beyond, lighted up the gas slightly, and with a lightning glance took in the apartment and its appointments. As he had calculated, the room was prepared for the night, so he had little chance of being disturbed. He touched nothing until he caught sight of a gray coat, thrown carelessly over a chair. This he seized, thrust his hand into the inside pocket and drew forth with evident satisfaction a letter, which, hastily examining, he kept. He then replaced the coat with precision, lowered the light, listened intently, and prepared to descend, when the click of a nightkey was heard in the lock.

The owners of the house had returned.

A pause. Footsteps on the stairs. Double portiers draped the doors. He slipped between them.

Mrs. Courtland entered, turned up the light, and with negligent grace threw off a long opera wrap, revealing that she was a beautiful woman, in full evening dress; tall, slight, blonde. For a full minute she gazed at herself reflected in the cheval glass; then discontentedly sat down before it and commenced unclasping the ornaments from her dress and hair and arms.

A well-built man with a plain face and fine carriage entered and stood silently regarding her.

"Tired, Gertrude?" Mr. Courtland asked kindly.

"No."

"Sick?"

"No."

"What then?"

"Bored, so bored."

"Why not have gone to the opera?"

"I have heard 'Lohengrin' until I hate it."

"Gertrude," tenderly, "you are not unhappy? You love me?"

"Yes," indifferently.

"Then what troubles you?"

"Nothing. Everything is so tedious. I am weary of people, weary of clothes, weary of myself."

"And weary of me?"

His wife did not answer, perhaps she did not hear.

Mr. Courtland pondered intently, looking at her curiously as she unwound a long scarf from her throat. Suddenly he crossed the room, and taking up the gray coat put his hand into one of the pockets.

"Where is that letter?"

"What letter?" asked his wife, startled by the sharp tone of his voice.

"The letter I left in the pocket of this coat."

The man behind the portieres started.

"I saw no letter," replied Mrs. Courtland, rising.

"You have stolen it," his voice increasing in harshness, as with mechanical courtesy he handed her the scarf she let fall.

"Richard!"

"Stolen it!" I say.

He was a powerful man. His brow grew heavy, his dark eyes glowed, his hands trembled; he looked brutal, and as he strode up to his wife the woman shrank.

"Richard, what is it? Why are you so strange?"

The man concealed became intensely interested.

Mr. Courtland, seizing his wife's arms, forced her down before him.

"Give it up," he spoke thickly.

"Richard; I swear I do not understand you."

"Give it up," he reiterated.

"Heaven help me! He will kill me," —for her husband suddenly made a menacing movement as though to seize her throat.

"Stop!" and wild with excitement the man burst out from behind the portieres.

The three attitudinized, in amazed silence.

"Who are you?" asked Mr. Courtland.

The man hesitated then answered simply: "Jonas Crane."

"Oh!" cried Mrs. Courtland, "take care; he may be armed."

The young man smiles. "I should think, ma'am," he said quietly, "you'd be more afraid of him than me. If I hadn't a thought he'd hurt you I'd never given myself away."

Mrs. Courtland looked bewildered. In her surprise she had forgotten her husband's anger.

"What are you doing here?" she asked.

"Well," he replied respectfully, "I'd as lief not say."

"Yes, but you must say. You are not a thief?"

"No'm."

"Well, then?" from Mr. Courtland.

"Well, sir," said the youth cheerfully, "I work for Boyton"—naming a swell tailor— "and before he sent your suit home he wore it courtin' his lady friend; and left a letter in it. It was not the kind of a letter," looking down modestly, "for others to see, and I undertook to get it without lettin' you know he'd wore your clothes, but I got rattled when you seemed so mad. The letter wasn't any use to you was it?"

"Yes, Richard, what made you so angry?"

"Gertrude," answered her husband, "I expected to find no letter. I was giving a lesson in realism. It was a pretense—a little bit of acting to cure my wife's ennui."

"Then you was actin', sir," said Jones, doubtfully. "I'm thinking it'll be for our mutual advantage to say nothin' of all this. Good evening, ma'am," and with a polite little bow Jonas Crane walked downstairs, and they heard him shut the front door softly behind him.

"Well, Gertrude," said Mr. Courtland, hopefully, "was the end of your evening successful? If it pleases you, tomorrow I'll try something in the comic line—do a little dance, dally with the scenic, or dip into melodrama."

His wife, rousing herself, gave a regretful sigh.

"It was very interesting, Richard, very; but"—looking up at him with a shadow in the lovely eyes—"I wish I had read that letter."—Annie Nettleton, in New Orleans Times-Democrat.

FOUR AMERICAN MUMMIES.

The Remains of Four Toltecs, Who Died 800 Years Ago in Mexico.

The best and rarest of the curiosities at the California State Mining Bureau's museum are to be on exhibition at the Mechanics' fair, and among them are many things which have been seen by comparatively few. Some valuable new features are also to be included, according to the San Francisco Examiner.

There is the American mummy family, surpassing in interest the Egyptian mummies, because the bodies themselves, in remarkable preservation, are shown, and the beholder doesn't have to exercise his imagination on discolored cloth and painted wood. The American mummies are Toltecs, the race that preceded the Aztecs and once inhabited Mexico, and, as near as can be scientifically calculated, they died 400 years before Columbus discovered the land in which they were buried. The family consists of four, a man, woman and two children. All will be shown in the sitting postures exactly as they were found.

The bodies were discovered in a cave high up in the mountains of New Mexico, about 200 miles from Deming. They had been placed there fully 800 years ago, probably for protection against some enemy, and the entrance to the cave had been sealed with sun-dried adobe bricks and natural rocks, cemented together with adobe plaster. The mumified bodies of the male and female were found seated side by side, faced toward the east, as was the ancient burial custom. A 7-year old boy was at the right of the father, and a girl of probably 2 years was at the left of the mother. No embalming process had been used, and the petrification was entirely due to the drying action in that high and air-tight cave. The skeletons are wonderfully well preserved and the muscles, nerves and tendons, with the various internal organs, all remain. The skin of the faces may even be seen, and on the head of the woman is yet her splendid growth of dark brown hair. The clothing remains, though not intact. The man's garment was of some rough material that looked like dried grass plaited. The woman was dressed in woven cloth and, true to her sex, she had the larger child clad in a fabric, while about the baby was a robe of fur. Eight centuries have passed and the Toltecs are going to the mechanic's fair.

AMERICAN MACHINERY.

The Markets of the World Easily Within the Grasp of the United States.

A study of manufacturing on both sides of the Atlantic, writes Albert C. Pentz, the expert consulting engineer, in the current number of the Engineering Magazine, has suggested the belief that the United States can occupy exclusively the markets of the world with her constructive manufactures, if free to do so. Who can compete with us in sewing machines, in agricultural implements, in small machine tools, in shoe machinery, in hat machinery, in printing presses and appliances, in steam engines, in woodworking machinery, in furniture, and in all the industrial arts that have attracted the attention of our people?

In these things this country could, if permitted by equal terms, at this moment destroy by competition the like arts of every other country in the world. She could invade the markets of the countries employing the cheapest labor and sell goods cheaper than those produced on the spot. Hence Americans need have no fear of cheap labor or of goods produced by hand, but they may enter with confidence any free market in any civilized country and place distinctive American products of distinctively American quality at paying prices, and sell rapidly. American customers are the most critical and demand the best made, and if such goods satisfy the market here they will have a sale anywhere that they may be made known and offered at reasonable prices.

It is a good idea to grow such farm [illegible] as fluctuate least in its [illegible]. It enables one to calculate with some degree of certainty upon the outcome of his work. A good draft horse is such a product.

Money for Farmers.

The moral enforced by the low price of wheat is an ancient one, which the Pioneer Press has preached to the people, not entirely without effect it is glad to say, for the last twenty years. It is through diversified farming that our agricultural interest is to work out its own salvation; and the men who are suffering because they have expended all their capital and labor on the production of wheat which will market for little above what it has cost them, have, to a certain extent, only themselves to blame. The plain fact is that there is over-production of wheat. There is more wheat raised in the world than can be marketed, under ordinary conditions, at a price sufficient to give the grower a reasonable compensation for his work. This is natural consequence of an unprecedented development of the wheat-growing area in the United States. Under the stimulus of cheap lands and low transportation rates, the wheat product of this country has increased faster than the world's demand, so that there is a steady surplus. It is a state of things which will remedy itself in the course of a few years; but in the meantime it is full of hardship for those whose dependence is upon a crop no longer rated at a price which gives a living profit.

When this state of affairs comes to pass in any other business, unless it is known to be temporary, men do not continue to put their labor into products that offer no satisfactory return. They change their industry with surprising swiftness to conform to the transitions of the market, and over-production cures itself by the transfer of activity from the field where there is too much to that where there is a deficit. Now it is really easier for the farmer to do this than for any other man. The manufacturer cannot cease making one product and engage his men upon another without extensive changes and considerable loss. But the fields of the farmer are, unless climatic conditions forbid it, as available for the growing of one product as another. If he continues to raise wheat and nothing but wheat, when every elevator is full and all the side-tracks are crowded with cars, when the price is unsatisfactory and shows no sign of recovery, he must lay the major part of the blame for his misfortune upon himself. For he can diversify his industry when he pleases to do so. The wisdom of it has been appreciated by a great many farmers of Minnesota who have escaped from the thralldom of the single crop idea. Our great dairying interest has arisen largely in response to the demand for diversification. But the whole Northwest is still more indifferent than it should be to the advantages of mixed farming, and especially to the need of a larger attention to the raising of live stock.

To consider but a single item, there has been now for some years a constant demand for more hogs than the market can furnish, at prices which makes hog-raising a remunerative business. This does not require the abandonment of other farm interests, or any especial changes in the farmer's programme. The hog is an animal easily cared for, a good forager, and thriving upon the products of the farm and the refuse of the dairy. There is a splendid market right here at home. The great packing industry of St. Paul is hampered only by lack of the raw material. While thousands of cars of wheat are waiting on the tracks for a chance to unload, and for the buyer who does not come, the machinery of the pork packing establishments can run only on short time because not enough hogs can be secured to keep it busy. There is no trouble with the demand. It was satisfactory before, and now the removal of the embargo placed by foreign nations upon American hog products has increased it vastly. The officers of St Paul packing institutions say that they could have used this year more than twice the number of hogs they have been able to buy, although one concern has expended $5,000,000 in that time for hogs and cattle among the farmers of the state. A bushel of wheat is worth now from 40 to 50 cents at the farm, according to the market, which is little if any more than cost of production, and sometimes below it. A good hog is worth from $18 to $20. There is good money in breeding them for such a market, and an escape from the conditions which have borne so hardly upon the farming population in the last few years. The future of the farmer depends upon his ability to conform his labor to the state of the market. When any manufactured commodity falls so low in price that there is no money in making it, the capitalists form a combine and either shut down part of the mills or engage their machinery in other business until demand has increased, meantime securing a larger price for the lessened output and making themselves whole. That is the policy for the farmer, and it does not need an organization or a combine. Let every farmer in the Northwest give at least a portion of his time, of his labor and of his acreage to the raising of cattle and hogs for the market. He will get more money for the wheat that he raises with the balance than he does now for a greater crop, and the handsome receipts from these other interests will be clear profit. Diversified farming is more than ever the true gospel for the farmer to-day. Those who have tried it know that there is money in it. Let us see more of it yet in Minnesota and the Dakotas, and the pulse of prosperity will cease to beat high or low with every fluctuation of the wheat market.

Barley-Fed Hogs.

From St. Paul Saturday Reporter Dec. 31st 1893.

Geo. Fowler, of Fowler Bros. Mapleton, North Dakota, brought in a couple more loads of barley-fed hogs last week, of their own feeding, that compared with any hogs in the yard as regards to quality. Mr. Fowler has tried hog raising in that northern country for several years, feeding barley and occasionally wheat screenings and finds he can raise as good a hog on barley and as cheap as on corn. In fact, he brought in a load of barley hogs two years ago that were the best received here that year.

We think Northern Minnesota farmers especially those above the "cornbelt," would do well to think over the above when they are selling wheat at 40 to 50c per bushel. Hogs can be raised as well and as cheaply in Northern Minnesota as in Iowa.

It may take better winter quarters in Minnesota, but to offset that it is well to remember that a case of hog cholera was never heard of in the colder climate. South St. Paul wants a million hogs in '93, and will take every hog raised in Minnesota at its market value for cash. The average cost of hogs on this market for the past five years is about $4.50, which pays a profit in excess of any crop the farmer can raise, while the present price is about $7.50 per c. w. t., live weight.

Farmers should diversify their product. Constant raising of wheat and grain impoverishes the land, and renders it comparatively, of little value. A crop of hogs can be raised and marketed in from ten to twelve months. Every farmer north of St. Paul should raise, at least a few hogs, and they should use good judgment in securing good breeds of hogs. Farmers who wish to engage in hog raising can secure the breeding hogs, any day in the year, at the Stock Yards, in South St. Paul, this fact is mentioned as farmers are constantly asking us where they can secure the stock hogs.

Legal Advice Was Not Wanted.

Watson—Up again for stealing chickens, Uncle Mose, are you?

Uncle Mose—Yes sir, I guess so.

"I suppose you'll want some legal advice, won't you?"

"No, sir; I'se gwine to have a lawyer this time."—Inter Ocean.

A Difference in Dates.

He, after the introduction—I don't suppose you remember me, but I think we used to be in the same Sunday-school class together.

She—I don't think so. When I was a little girl in Sunday-school I was always in a girls' class.

He—But this was when you were a teacher.—Truth.

Alaska miners pay 50 cents for a potato.

The youngest English bride on record was 2 years old.

After the Grip
"I was very weak and run down and did not gain strength, like so many after that prostrating disease. Seeing Hood's Sarsaparilla highly recommended, I began to take it, and was more than pleased with the way it built me up. I think it has made me better than before I was sick. I have also been delighted with HOOD'S PILLS.

Mrs. Emerson, and always prefer them to any other kind now. They do not gripe or weaken. I am glad to recommend two such fine preparations as Hood's Sarsaparilla and Hood's Pills." MRS. ISAIAH EMERSON, Manchester, N. H. Get Hood's.
Hood's Cures

HOOD'S PILLS are purely vegetable, carefully prepared from the best ingredients.

SCRATCHED TEN MONTHS
A troublesome skin disease caused me to scratch for ten months, and has been cured by a few days' use of S.S.S.
M. H. WOLFF, Upper Marlboro, Md.

SWIFT'S SPECIFIC
I was cured several years ago of white swelling in my leg by using S.S.S. and have had no symptoms of return of the disease. Many prominent physicians attended me and all failed, but S. S. S. did the work.
PAUL W. KIRKPATRICK, Johnson City, Tenn.
Treatise on Blood and Skin Diseases mailed free.
SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., Atlanta, Ga.

IMPORTED Percheron & Shire Stallions first class $800. 1, 2 & 3 years' time. Imported mares cheap. Hiram C. Wheeler, Odebolt, Sac Co., Iowa.

"German Syrup"
JUDGE J. B. HILL, of the Superior Court, Walker county, Georgia, thinks enough of German Syrup to send us voluntarily a strong letter endorsing it. When men of rank and education thus use and recommend an article, what they say is worth the attention of the public. It is above suspicion. "I have used your German Syrup," he says, "for my Coughs and Colds on the Throat and Lungs. I can recommend it for them as a first-class medicine."—Take no substitute.

SEEDS WARRANTED. Best in the World.
By mail, postage paid, 1 cent a package and up. Grand lot of EXTRAS given with every order. Prettiest and only FREE Catalogue in the world with pictures of all varieties. Send yours and neighbors' address.
R. H. SHUMWAY, ROCKFORD, ILLINOIS.

HOUSES
Painted with the
Clare-Speaker Paint
Will look well for years. This paint covers more, looks better and wears longer than any other. The colors are the most modern shades. If you intend painting it will pay to use these goods. Color cards and valuable information free. Ask your dealer for color cards or address THE CLARE-SPEAKER CO., Minneapolis, Minn.

"WELL BRED, SOON WED." GIRLS WHO USE
SAPOLIO
ARE QUICKLY MARRIED. TRY IT IN YOUR NEXT HOUSE-CLEANING.

HALL'S ★ ★ ★
City of Toledo, Lucas Co., State of Ohio. } S. S.
Frank J. Cheney makes oath that he is the senior partner of the firm of F. J. Cheney & Co., doing business in the City of Toledo, County and State aforesaid, and that said firm will pay the sum of ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for each and every case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by the use of HALL'S CATARRH CURE.
Frank J. Cheney
Sworn to before me, and subscribed in my presence, this 6th day of December, A. D. 1889.
NOTARIAL SEAL LUCAS CO., O.
A. W. GLEASON, NOTARY PUBLIC.
HALL'S CATARRH CURE IS TAKEN INTERNALLY, and acts directly upon the Blood and mucous surfaces.
CATARRH
TESTIMONIALS:
E. B. WALTHALL & CO., Druggists, Horse Cave, Ky., say: "Hall's Catarrh Cure cures every one that takes it."
CONDUCTOR E. D. LOOMIS, Detroit, Mich., says: "The effect of Hall's Catarrh Cure is wonderful." Write him about it.
REV. H. P. CARSON, Scotland, Dak., says: "Two bottles of Hall's Catarrh Cure completely cured my little girl."
J. C. SIMPSON, Marquess, W. Va., says: "Hall's Catarrh Cure cured me of a very bad case of catarrh."
Hall's Catarrh Cure Is Sold by all Dealers in Patent Medicines.
PRICE 75 CENTS A BOTTLE.
CURE
THE ONLY GENUINE HALL'S CATARRH CURE IS MANUFACTURED BY
F. J. CHENEY & CO., TOLEDO, O.
Testimonials sent free on application. ★ BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

All cannot possess a
$10,000 Souvenir
(This sum was paid for the first World's Fair Souvenir Coin minted.)
in the shape of a coin, but many can have fac-similes of this valuable work of art—only special coin ever issued by the U. S. Government—for $1 each.
United States Government
World's Fair Souvenir Coins—
The Official Souvenir of the Great Exposition—
5,000,000 of which were donated to the World's Columbian Exposition by the Government, are being rapidly taken by an enthusiastically patriotic people.
As there early promised to be a demand for these Souvenirs that would render them very valuable in the hands of speculators, the Exposition Authorities decided to place the price at $1.00 for Each Coin
and sell them direct to the people, thus realizing $5,000,000, and using the additional money for the further development of the Fair.
Considering the fact that there were but 5,000,000 of these coins to be distributed among 65,000,000 people, in this country alone (to say nothing of the foreign demand,) and that many have already been taken, those wishing to purchase these mementoes of our Country's Discovery and of the grandest Exposition ever held, should secure as many as they desire at once.
For Sale Everywhere
Realizing that every patriotic American will want one or more of these coins, and in order to make it convenient for him to get them, we have made arrangements to have them sold throughout the country by all the leading Merchants and Banks. If not for sale in your town, send $1.00 each for not less than five coins, by Post-office or Express Money-order, Registered Letter or Bank Draft, with instructions how to send them to you, all charges prepaid to Treasurer World's Columbian Exposition, Chicago, Ill.

Minn Hist Society

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

St. Hilaire Spectator.

VOLUME XI. ST. HILAIRE, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1893. NUMBER 29.

THE WEEKLY NEWS DIGEST

EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK IN A CONDENSED FORM.

The Latest and Most Important News of the World, Culled From the Telegraph Reports of the Press Associations.

The Capital.

It is declared that President Harrison will veto the anti-option bill if it ever reaches him.

The collection of internal revenue for the first half of the present fiscal year aggregated $84,297,428, as against $77,124,754 for the corresponding period of the last fiscal year, an increase of $7,172,674.

The appropriation committee has reported the pension appropriation bill. It carries an appropriation of $166,400,000 being an increase of $20,662,650 over the appropriation of the current fiscal year and $431,350 less than the estimates.

Secretary of the interior decided in favor of Campbell, W. Graham and against Alphonso Sylvester, Mitchell land district. He also decided against the reinstatement of the entry of Chas. O. Gilbert and his mortgagee the J. I. C. Threshing Machine Company Huron land district.

Casualty.

The Collegiate Institute at Ottawa, Ont., burned. Loss, $40,000.

A 10-year-old boy named Lichtmark shot his brother at Wenamac, Ind., while hunting.

Three men were killed and forty stunned by the explosion of five kegs of powder in a coal mine near Zanesville, O.

Two more deaths have occurred from the Alton, Ill., oil explosion. The fatalities now number twenty-eight.

Edward Riddler, aged twenty-three, was killed in Ogilvie's elevator at Minnedosa, Man., being caught in the machinery.

The roofs of some of the world's fair buildings are crushed in by heavy snow, causing $100,000 damage.

The plant of the Portsmouth wheat works and four dwellings burned at Portsmouth, O. Loss, $100,000.

The clothing store of Mosenfelder & Kohn, at Rock Island, Ill., burned. Loss $25,000.

Fire at Oakesdale, Wash., on the 27inst., destroyed six blocks of buildings and caused a total loss of $500,000.

The residence of James Malone, at Wheeling, W. Va., was burned and Louis Malone and Edward McCarthy were burned to death.

Several villages on the Island of Zante are entirely destroyed by another earthquake, and many of the inhabitants are killed.

A horse attached to a delivery wagon ran away on Second Avenue, in New York and knocked down and injured ten persons, five of them being children.

A freight train on the Missouri Pacific road jumped the track at Leavenworth, Kan., and collided with the old union depot. The depot was demolished and Brakeman McLaughlin was killed.

The bodies of John Michaels, wife and three little children were discovered frozen to death in a hovel in Putman county, W. Va., near the Lincoln county line. A fourth child, an infant, was heavily wrapped and was found to be alive.

People in Print.

Bishop Wigger, of the Catholic diocese of Newark, is to be tried for fostering Cahenslyism.

Ex-Gov. John M. Thayer of Nebraska denies the stories that he is penniless and broken down physically.

The Official Gazette announces that the king of Spain has scarlatina. No serious danger is apprehended by his physicians.

Lord Wolsely, who is now commander-in-chief in Ireland, would not be averse to taking the governor-ship of Canada.

Mrs. Whitelaw Reid will soon be the possessor of one of the largest diamonds in the world. It is now being cut for her by a famous Dutch lapidary.

The death of Commander R. E. Hitchcock, United States navy, who was until a few weeks ago commander of the United States steamer Alert, in the China station, is reported.

The will of the late Gen. Butler, has been filed in the Middlesex probate court at East Cambridge, Mass. It bears the date of 1854, with a codical added in 1862. All his estates, real and personal are left to relatives, including a wife and mother since deceased.

Now that ex-President Hayes is dead the treasury department at Washington will no doubt, soon have his features on the bank bills. It is a rule of the department that only the faces of the illustrious dead be used on the money issues. There are several issues with the portraits of Generals Grant and Garfield.

The Mexican-consulate at St. Louis, which John F. Cahill has occupied for several years without salary and with very small fees is about to be closed. Mr. Cahill, however, refuses to send the archives of the office to consul general in New York, as requested, unless the Mexican government honors his claims for services rendered heretofore.

Sinful Doings.

Luke Tatem, a negro wire murderer, was hanged at Camden, Ark.

Two "window smashers" secured two trays of diamonds from H. Wachhorst's jewelry store at Sacramento, Cal.

Martin Davis, colored, shot his wife dead at Macahachie, Tex. A strong guard surrounds the jail to prevent a lynching.

A shortage of $500 has been discovered in the post-office at Charles City, Ia. It is charged to Arthur Welber, since deceased.

Sheriff Joseph Tumlinson, at Encinal, Tex., shot and killed his wife, then committed suicide. Family trouble is the supposed cause.

Fifteen prisoners escaped from jail at Murray, Ky. One charged with murder refused to accept the opportunity to escape, and remained in his cell.

W. H. Byer, bookkeeper for the Hovsky Miller Brewing Company, of Helena, Mont., who absconded some time ago, was arrested in Wichita, Kas.

Unknown persons stole all the gymnasium suits of the University of Illinois students from the gymnasium of Champaign.

Phillip Molles, aged 19, committed suicide at his father's farm near Athens, Ill., by cutting his throat. He was in a delirium caused by high fever at the time.

J. P. Campbell, wanted at Princeton, Cal., for several murders, was arrested at Texarkana, Tex. He was a fugitive for seven years. A reward of $3,000 was offered for his arrest.

A chemical analysis shows that the death of Louis Sainyiy, a Homestead workman, was due to poison. Large quantities of croton oil and arsenic were found in the stomach.

At Bluefield, W. Va., Policeman Chandler was attempting to arrest a negro. The latter shot the officer just as the policeman fired, and both dropped together, both being killed.

Louis Bender, a convict in the Jacksonville, Ill., penitentiary, burned himself to death in his cell in a fit of temporary insanity, setting fire to his straw bunk under the impression that he was freezing.

As a result of a quarrel with her lover, Daisy L. Uhler, aged 21 years, committed suicide at Baltimore. The young woman was popular in social circles, and noted for her beauty and accomplishments. She took poison.

Frank Larkin, once a base ball pitcher, and one of the first to throw a curved ball, is in Raymond Street jail, Brooklyn, suffering from delirium tremens. While on a spree a few days ago Larkin shot a policeman and later he cut his own throat.

Rush Morgan, one of the most noted outlaws and desperadoes in the mountains, was shot and killed near Hubbard Springs, Va. Morgan had a record second to none in this section of feuds and killing. It was his custom to cut a notch on the stock of his Winchester every time he killed, and the count showed seventeen notches.

The Foreign Budget.

Mr. Gladstone says he has no intention of recommending the appointment of Lord Tennyson's successor as poet laureate.

The queen of Hawaii is deposed and a provisional government formed. Annexation to the United States is sought.

The National Irish League of America issues an address denouncing Gladstone's home rule bill.

Baron Hirsch and the Rothschilds head a new Panama canal syndicate, and will subscribe 25,000,000.

Italian government officials and legislators are deeply involved in the great banking scandal.

The czar attended a court ball recently, a fact which disposes of the report that he had been injured by an attempt upon his life.

An explosion of fire damp occurred in the general Von Blumenthal coal pit at Recklinghausen, Westphalia. Eighteen miners were killed instantly and seventeen were injured.

An inquiry at the Berlin foreign office in regard to the attitude of Germany on the Hawaiian situation elicited the information that Germany was at present passive, but if the United States should annex Hawaii Germany ought to demand a slight compensation elsewhere.

Duke Victor of Ratibor, prince of Corvey, prince of Hohenlohe-Schillingfurst and president of the Prussian upper house, died at Breslau. The late duke was born in Langenberg, Feb. 10, 1818. He was proprietor of the lordships of Kieferstaedtel and Zembowitz, general of Prussian cavalry and hereditary member of the upper house, was a chevalier of the Order of the Black Eagle and held other dignities.

The list of ex-ministers and deputies whom Sgr. A. Monzilli, director of the bureau of the industry and commerce, who was arrested for complicity in the bank scandals at Rome, gave to a reporter on the morning before his arrest as having been subsidized by the banks now in trouble includes Baron Nicotera, formerly minister of the interior, and ex-Minister Amadeix, and also Deputies Montagna, Geppa, Dezerobi, Sinionetti, Mezzinion and Nardocci.

Sporting Scraps.

Billy Hawkins the light weight pugilist, has telegraphed his backer at Ottawa that he is prepared to go to New Orleans to fight Austin Gibbons for a $5,000 purse which President Noel has offered for the match.

The annual bench show premium list is out, and shows that 211 classes will be represented and prizes aggregating $12,000 awarded. The show opens in Madison Garden Feb. 21 and finishes Feb. 24.

Danny McBride, the 110-pound pugilist who has a record of 30 victories and no defeats, is anxious to arrange a limited round bout or finish fight with Billy Plimmer. McBride claims he can get backing for a $1,000.

At the Oakland race track a few days ago Geraldine equaled the world's record of 54 seconds for 4½ furlongs. A year ago at the North Bergen track, Toano, with 116 pounds up, made the record, which has never been equaled until the present performance of Geraldine, the fast Californian.

Billy Murphy, the Australian featherweight pugilist who is matched to fight Johnny Griffin for $6,000 before the Coney Island Athletic Club on February 6, arrived at New York from San Francisco. He was met at the depot by Charley Horan, his manager, Johnny Eckhardt and Martin Murphy, his trainers.

Jack Wilkes, the crack St. Louis welter weight, will leave shortly for San Francisco, where he has been matched to fight Frank B. Ales by the San Francisco Athletic Club. Ales was the boxing instructor of the club until a short time ago. The St. Louis boy fought to a draw Tommy Ryan, the acknowledged champion welter weight of America. He has been endeavoring to get on a match in one of the San Francisco clubs for some time past.

General News.

There are fifty cases of small-pox at Cleveland, O. Ten deaths have occurred.

St. Louis wholesale grocery houses will combine.

The Erie car works at Erie, Pa., have been attached on a claim for $102,000.

Col. Sinn sues Cora Tanner, the actress, for absolute divorce. The charges are not made public.

A suit involving $10,000,000 was begun at Akron, O., against Judge Burke and others, charging conspiracy.

Henry Brill, books and stationery, failed at St. Joseph, Mo. The liabilities are $30,000 and the assets $35,000.

The will of A. A. Low, of Brooklyn, disposes of an estate of $5,000,000 to his family. The sum of $67,500 goes to charity.

A rich find of gold is reported on the west side of New York Mountains, in San Bernardina County, Lower California.

A dispatch from Montreal says that John C. Eno, the ex-president of the First National Bank, intends to return to New York.

Heirs of Stephen Ellis, killed by a train after being ejected from it, were awarded $11,000 damage in a suit against the Louisville & Nashville road.

Thomas Callan, who with Michael Harkins, was sentenced on February 3, 1883, to fifteen years penal servitude on the charge of carrying dynamite with intent to blow up the House of Commons, has arrived in New York. He was secretly released from Portland prison.

William B. Austin, chief engineer of the Omaha city hall, disappeared three months ago from his post. A man in passing through the county hospital recognized him as one of the patients. He was crazy and completely changed. He had been brought to the hospital a month ago, but was not recognized.

NORTHWEST NEWS BUDGET

THE WEEKLY ROUND-UP OF IMPORTANT NEWS.

A Concise Account of the Happenings of the Past Week in Minnesota, North Dakota, Iowa and Wisconsin.

Minnesota.

The citizens of Wilmar have started a movement in favor of incorporation.

The dry goods firm of G. M. Brand & Bro., of Fairfax, has made a voluntary assignment.

It is said that the creditors of the defunct bank at Fairfax will receive 100 cents on the dollar.

A. W. Stone's hardware store at Birds Island was destroyed by fire. Loss, $10,000; insurance, $8,500.

Mrs. Havestad, residing in Aurdal, committed suicide by hanging while temporarily insane.

Mrs. John Preizel, was examined in probate court at Stillwater adjudged insane, and committed to the Rochester asylum.

Farmers at Lewiston for some time have not been satisfied with prices paid them for barley, and now propose to build an elevator and ship their own grain.

M. J. Paine & Son, grocers at Staples assigned to the Wills-Stone Mercantile Company, of Duluth. Assets and liabilities not yet made public.

John Winkels, one of the oldest furniture dealers of Winona, died recently. He has resided here for twenty-six years, and was sixty-nine years of age.

Work has commenced on the erection of a new 30,000 bushel elevator at Buffalo. A new match factory, with a capacity of 200,000 boxes per day, is to be established.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Matthews, who were early settlers in Lake City, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage recently, assisted by the families of their six children, numbering upwards of forty.

Articles of incorporation of the Wisconsin Lumber company have been filed at Faribault. The capital stock is $200,000. They will manufacture all kinds of lumber, sash, doors, blinds and building materials.

Miss Katie Schroeder, came very near being killed at Hastings, a rifle which her brother picked up going off, the bullet entering the corner of her mouth and passing through her right cheek almost under the ear.

The Minnesota hotel, one of the old landmarks of Crookston, was partially destroyed by fire. The building was owned by J. H. Thomas and valued at $5,000. It was leased by Mrs. Sherrer, and the greater portion of her furniture was destroyed.

A taxidermist of Lake City, has received from Wabasha a puppy with a double body from the shoulders back. It has eight legs, the four hind ones being perfect, but two of the fore legs, though of full size, are croked against the side of the body.

At a special meeting of the directors of the Duluth, Mesabi & Northern directors at Duluth 40,000 new shares were issued. A. D. Thompson purchased it and gave his certified check for $400,000 for it. This gives the Merritts complete control.

Lewis Pederson, a young Scandinavian of Pope county about twenty-six years old, committed suicide at his uncle's in Benson by drinking four ounces of carbolic acid. Financial troubles of small moment is the only reason which can be assigned for the act.

At a meeting of the Washington county commissioners the petition of a large number of residents of the lower half of the town of Marine, to be set off as an independent town, was granted and the town of May was thus formed.

A stranger, Scandinavian, was badly frozen in the woods near Mansfield. He started to walk from Perry's place to Fay's camp and was overtaken by a blizzard. When found by some loggers he was unconscious and so badly frozen that he will probably die. He was taken to Minneapolis.

The state council of the Catholic Knights convened at Shakopee and elected the following officers: Willey, Minneapolis, president; Henry Nicholin, Jordan, vice president; William L. Kelly Jr., St. Paul, secretary; Joseph Hovorka, Shakopee, treasurer; William Louis Kelly, St. Paul, delegate to national convention. The next council meets at New Prague.

Wisconsin.

Charles A. Sutherland, a La Crosse painter has been arrested on a charge of adultery.

The new opera house at Rice Lake has been completed. It has a seating capacity of 1,000.

The total number of prisoners in Waupun at present is 539, of whom 19 are females.

John Conroy was arrested at Kenosha on a charge of burglary, and held in $1,000 bonds.

The Sand River Lumber Company, of Bayfield, recently sold 10,000,000 feet at $11 a thousand.

A satchel containing medical instruments valued at $40 was stolen from the office of Dr. F. S. Pope, at Racine.

While Fred Gussman, a resident of Madison, was cutting ice on Lake Mendota, he fell and broke his leg.

The annual meeting of the Wisconsin State Agricultural Society will be held at Madison, February 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10.

Lena Nelson, a spinster residing at La Crosse, has been adjudged insane and will be committed to the county asylum.

David C. Jones, a resident of the town of Utica, Winnebago County, for the past forty years, died at the age of 75 years.

The Flour Exchange Building Company, of West Superior, has filed articles of incorporation. The capital stock is $100,000.

The earnings of prisoners let out on contracts at Waupun for the months of December and January amounted to $11,000.

The jury in the case of M. Morris & Co., of La Crosse, against the London Insurance Company, to recover the insurance on their stock of clothing recently destroyed by fire, returned a verdict for the plaintiff.

Oran Vincent, a resident of Rock County since 1848, died at his home in Milton, aged 86 years. He was greatly interested in the advancement of education, and was a trustee of Milton College for many years.

Articles of incorporation for the Columbian Finance Company have been filed at West Superior. The capital stock is $200,000.

Miss Lydia Finger, of Appleton, was married to Fred. Valentine, of Green Bay. The ceremony took place at the bride's home.

Supt. Nevins, of the state fish hatchery, estimates that 10,000,000 trout and 40,000,000 pike fry will be planted in the waters of the state this spring.

Kewaunee parties are about to sue the Lackawana Company for $900 worth of fish that were lost by the foundering of the steamer Newburg.

A syndicate of Waupaca business men intend to build a $10,000 hotel and erect a number of summer cottages on the shore of one of the lakes in that vicinity.

Andrew Hase, an employe of the Smith Manufacturing Company at La Crosse, who was hurt by a belt a few days ago, died of his injuries. He was 30 years of age.

Work on the new electric street railway at Green Bay will be commenced early in the spring. It is expected that the line will be in operation within six months.

Peter Carlson, a lumberman working in Austin's camp near Eau Claire, cut his foot almost off while chopping. It will probably be necessary to amputate the limb.

L. J. Moss of Superior, who was injured in a train wreck at Kent, Ills., last week, was taken to a hospital in St. Paul for treatment. It is thought he will recover.

It is reported that Martin Pattison, of West Superior, received $30,000 per month for royalties from mining properties during the shipping season.

Miss Annie Peterson, a young woman residing at West Supirior, has been adjudged insane and committed to the Northern Hospital at Oshkosh.

Fire destroyed a barn owned by T. J. McGrath, near Green Bay. Two horses perished in the flames. Loss, $600; insurance $200.

The damage suit of Sel Ehle against the Terminal Company, at West Superior, has been settled out of court. The plaintiff had both his legs broken in a collision last December.

A passenger train on the Green Bay, Winona & St. Paul road broke a wheel under one of the coaches near La Crosse. Two coaches were thrown from the track, but no one was injured.

Anton Antis, residing at Superior, has been pronounced insane by a committee of physician at that place. His relatives, who live in Monroe County, have been notified of his condition.

The roof of Stone Bros.' carriage house at Beloit fell, from an overweight of snow. A hack and several other carriages were thrown into the river, and $600 damage was done to carriages by being broken.

North Dakota.

Alpena is about to acquire a new flour and feed mill.

Arne Arneson, of Fargo, has mysteriously disappeared. Foul play is suspected.

Andrew Haskins, a wealthy citizen of Portland, while temporarily insane, committed suicide at Hot Springs, Ark.

Andrew J. Ness, of Fargo, was arrested on charge of having defrauded the First National Bank of that city out of $450 by means of a raised check.

Thirty women voted at the school election held in Reynolds, and elected their candidate. There were five opposition tickets in the field. A new school-house will be erected at a cost of $3,000.

The Farmers' elevator at Ardock, operated by E. R. Jocobi, was burned to the ground with 20,000 bushels of wheat. The building was valued at $6,000, insured for $2,500; grain fully insured.

A large dwelling house owned by M. Olson in East Grand Forks and occupied as a house of ill fame was totally destroyed by fire with nearly the entire contents. The inmates lost all their clothing and had a narrow escape from death in the fire themselves. The house was valued at 2,500; furniture, $1,000; no insurance.

A meeting of prominent citizens of Devils Lake resolved to organize a company with $50,000 capital stock to put in an electric light and street car plant. It is proposed to run the line to the Chautauqua grounds. Fifteen thousand dollars was subscribed also, and it was agreed to donate 100 by 140 feet to any person erecting an $8,000 hotel in the city by July 1.

James Sheehan and Frank Ellis, alias Swede Frank, prisoners in the county jail at Devil's Lake charged with grand larceny, broke out by prying off the bars on the door. Sheehan was recaptured about eight miles east of this city walking along the Great Northern track without cap or overcoat. The thermometer was 30 below. His face and ears were badly frozen.

Iowa.

Escaping gas asphyxiated Louis Franklin and C. C. Rapp, at Davenport, Ia.

At the M. E. Church Indianola, $30,000 was raised as a gift to Simpson College $10,000 being contributed by William Baxten.

The grand jury at Boone, Ia., indicted the Rev. D. E. Sutton, a Free Methodist minister of that town, for adultery, his wife being the complainant. Sutton in default of bond was sent to jail.

Dora Cushman, aged 7, daughter of H. C. Cushman a traveling salesman of Oskaloosa, Ia., was burned to death. The mother was also severely burned in trying to save the child.

Mr. Daughty, county auditor of Emmett county, has absconded, leaving a shortage in his accounts of nearly $7,000. An examination was being made of his books when he disappeared.

W. H. Voobles, conductor on the Iowa Central, has been appointed assistant superintendent of the Iowa Central, with headquarters at Marshalltown. He assumes the duties at once.

Conductor Charles E. Brown, Iowa Central, was run over by switch engine in the yards at Marshalltown and his body was horribly mutilated. He was 23 years old and leaves a wife and young child.

Charles Rapp and Lewis Franklin, a traveling man, were found dead in the room of the former at Davenport. A gas pipe had burst and the two deaths resulted from asphyxiation. Four other persons occupying adjoining rooms were discovered insensible, but they are now out of danger.

While cleaning out an old cellar at Independence a skeleton was found under the basement floor. The building has been occupied for saloon purposes for 30 years and foul play is suggested. The general surmise is that some stranger was murdered for his money. The limbs were severed from the body above the knees.

J. H. Windsor gave out at Des Moines of the defalcation of his stepson, Edgar Lewis, who was employed by the Liverpool Packing Company, and disappeared a couple of months ago. He says the books show a shortage of $4,034.88 which he stands ready to make good. He further says that Edgar is in Florida with his wife; that he has a mental trouble and does not believe that he is short in his accounts and that the young man can return to Des Moines and he will not be prosecuted.

MINNESOTA LAWMAKERS

DOINGS OF THE LEGISLATURE DAY BY DAY.

Routine Report of the Proceedings of Both Branches of the Minnesota Legislature During the Past Week.

Friday, Jan. 27.

SENATE.

The following bills were introduced and referred:

By Senator Keller—S. F. No. 161, a bill to provide penalties for the adulteration of coffee to the committee on judiciary.

By Senator Smith, J. D—S. F. No. 166, to amend the law relating to the weighing of grain; to the committee on grain and warehouses.

By Senator Smith, J. D.—S. F. No. 166 to amend the law relating to the weighing of grain; and warehouses.

By Senator Smith, J. D.—S. F. No. 167, a bill to provide that docking horses' tails shall be a misdemeanor; to committee on judiciary.

By Senator Smith, J. D.—D. F. No. 104, making it a misdemeanor to mistreat a minor; to the committee on judiciary.

By Senator Barr—S. F. No. 160, a bill to authorize town and cities to refund their indebtedness; to committee on judiciary.

By Senator Dean—S. F. No. 173, a bill fixing the legal rate of interest at 6 per cent; to the committee on judiciary.

The senate went into committee of the whole, with Senator McMillan in the chair.

The bill appropriating $100,000 to reimburse the subscribers to the World's Fair fund was under discussion. Senators Donnelly, Kelly, Stevens and Leavitt took part in the discussion which was finally brought to a close by the adoption of a motion to rise and report progress.

At the afternoon session the senate went into committee of the whole and the discussion of the World's Fair appropriation bill was resumed.

The senate adjourned until Monday at 3 p. m., on motion of Senator Tawney. This was out of respect to Blaine's memory.

HOUSE.

The following resolutions were introduced:

By Mr. Monahan, of Winona—That each member be allowed $10 for postage stamps. The vote was: Aye, 29; no, 61.

By Mr. Turrell—To recall H. F. No. 222 from the judiciary committee and refer to committee on temperance. Adopted.

By Mr. Boggs—H. F. No. 236, to legalize improvements and special assessments therefore; ordered to be printed and referred to committee on judiciary.

By Mr. Young—H. F. 237, to forfeit the lands and franchises of the Hastings & Dakota railroad; to committee on public lands.

By Mr. Fletcher—H. F. No. 241, relating to divorces, and granting relief in certain cases. The court can grant divorces in either case when both parties ask it, at his discretion; to committee on judiciary.

By Mr. Turrell—H. F. No. 243, to provide for text books for district schools. Districts are to make contracts for five years; to committee on education.

The senate memorial to congress of the coal trust was read, and after discussion was rejected.

The death of J. G. Blaine was announced and on motion a committee was appointed to draft resolutions of sympathy.

H. F. No. 61, providing for pro-rating of liquor licenses, was lost by a vote of: ayes, 34; noes, 35.

The house went into committee of the whole. The committee took action as follows:

H. F. No. 37—Relating to trials in civil actions; recommended to pass.

H. F. No. 49—To municipal charter act to regulate making assessments; progress reported.

H. F. No. 183—The grain and warehouse substitute; progress reported.

H. F. No. 56—Progress reported.

H. F. No. 44—Increasing to $200 the amount of personal property exempted; to be indefinitely postponed.

H. F. No. 23—To amend chapter 123, General Laws of 1891; progress reported.

The report was adopted, except H. F. No. 49, which was recommitted to the committee on judiciary, to remain in its place on general order.

The house, on motion of Mr. Dunn, adjourned to Monday 4 p. m., out of respect to the memory of James G. Blaine.

Saturday, Jan. 28.

SENATE.

Not in session.

HOUSE.

Not in session.

Monday, Jan. 30.

The two houses met in joint session today and held memorial services in honor of James G. Blaine. Eloquent and touching orations were delivered by Senators Donnelly, Stevens, Smith and Tawney and Representative Winston.

Tuesday, Jan. 31.

SENATE.

Among the more important bills introduced and referred were the following:

To provide for the government of municipal corporations; amending the law governing county superintendents of schools; appropriating $100,000 to open the closed waterways in Norman and Polk counties; amending the laws relating to the taxation of mining companies; to provide that five-sixths of a jury may return a verdict after six hours' deliberations; to provide for the erection of a sugar beet factory at the State Agricultural College; to fix the liability of insurance companies.

Several senate bills were read a third time and passed.

The remainder of the day was spent in committee of the whole for the discussion of various bills.

The senate adjourned till Thursday.

HOUSE.

The greater part of the time was taken up with committee reports.

The following bills were introduced and referred to the proper committees:

To appropriate $2,000 for a bridge over Shell Rock river in Freeborn county; relating to incorporation of villages; relating to mileage of county commissioners; to appropriate $2,000 to build an iron bridge over the Maple river, in Blue Earth county; to appropriate $2,000 to build a bridge over the Zumbrota river, Olmstead county; relating to roads, crossways and bridges; relating to roads, cartways and bridges; a joint resolution amending joint rule 18; to establish the office of examiner of telegraphers and train dispatchers.

Mr. Tyrell moved to take up the World's Fair appropriation bill, notice of passage of which was give by the senate, but it was defeated.

The house adjourned to 10 o'clock Thursday.

Wednesday, Feb. 1.

SENATE.

Not in session.

HOUSE.

Not in session.

Thursday, Feb. 2

SENATE.

The following bills were introduced and referred to the proper committees:

A bill to appropriate money to aid in the construction and improvement of a wagon road in the county of Sibley; a bill to make married women responsible for her own debts like an unmarried woman, and to empower her to convey property to her husband or vice versa.

A bill amending the law relating to the examination of teachers by county superintendents.

A bill to provide that all farmers who use a three-inch wagon tire after June, 1894, shall have one-fourth of their road tax abated.

A bill requiring all county officers to file with the county commissioners a sworn statement of fees received.

The following bills were passed:

S. F. No. 95, Dougherty's bill to legalize certain documents transferring real estate executed by married women under power of attorney prior to 1860; S. F. No. 54, Stevens' bill making proceedings for vacation of streets and alleys legal if such proceedings have not been protested against for five years; and S. F. No. 122, Stevens' bill to authorize sheriffs and deputy sheriffs to complete foreclosure sales after their terms of office expire, were all passed.

The senate went into committee of the whole for the discussion of pending measures.

HOUSE.

The morning was taken up with reports of committees.

Horton's bill relating to pool-selling was read a second time and placed on general orders.

A large number of bills were introduced and referred among the more important being:

A free school text book bill; relating to the probate court, regulating bequests; to promote the safety of passengers, by requiring coaches to be heated by electricity; relating to labels and trade marks, and to prohibit the counterfeit or imitation of the same; to regulate the sale of liquors, in quantities of five gallons or more; abolish the present penalties on real and personal property after July 1, 1893, and to make the interest on same thereafter 8 per cent.

Stamp Collectors Their Victims.

"The new Columbian stamps, while they seem large when compared with our ordinary stamps," remarked a well-known stamp collector of the city, "are not nearly so large as some of those once used by some of the South American governments. It is a fact, not generally known, that for years many states paid nothing whatever for their stamps, but were supplied free by the engravers, who looked to the collectors for their profits. The arrangement made was that the model should be changed every three months, and that at the end of this period all unused stamps should be returned to the sellers. In this way a great many different issues were gotten out, all of which soon became rare and commanded high prices. The number of people who collect stamps is much larger than is generally supposed, as is proved by the fact that the dealers made a handsome profit out of the transaction."—St. Louis Post Dispatch.

Misplaced Bragging.

He was a very tired-looking man. Dejection was written on every line in his face, and as I was a stranger in the village with nothing to do and no one to talk to, I relieved my pent-up spirits by expressing my sympathy with him in his troubles, whatever they were.

"Thanks," he said; "my chief trouble seems to be that I am an idiot from idiotville, and that is incurable. I just got into a bragging match with a stranger in the post-office. He bet he was richer than I was, and I took him on—just for fun. I told him all I had and more, too, and after a while he gave in, saying he wouldn't have thought it. Then I said I'd swear to it, and he said all right, and I did; and by thunder, who do you suppose he was?"

"I don't know. Who?"

"The assessor!" he groaned.

It certainly was a case of hard luck.

How It Struck a Southerner.

A southerner visiting the city was asked by a resident:

"What in all that you have seen has impressed you most?"

"The tired and worn-out appearance of the people I have met," was the astonishing answer. "They all seem to be on the run. They seem to have a hunted look. They go about as if they had but one day to live and are too tired to make it interesting."—New York Tribune.

Previous.

Van Winkle—Where did you get the new smoking jacket?

Von Blumer—That's my wife's Christmas present.

Van Winkle—But it isn't Christmas yet.

Von Blumer—No; but the man came to collect the bill, so she had to show it to me.—Clothier and Furnisher.

Hard to Please.

Visitor—"Why are you growling about wanting rapid transit? Look at the elevated railroads."

New Yorker—"Too slow. Make too many stops."

"They have express trains, haven't they?"

"Yes, but the express trains never stop where I want to get off."

Cattle that are housed in the barnyard and fed on a straw-stack will not be a source of much profit for the next few months. And the man who winters his stock in this way is not a stockman—but a scrub.

A young man at Moline, Ill., is suing his barber for $5,000 damages for mutilating his mustache in the process of trimming it. Perhaps the barber had a switch to look after and was in a hurry.

New Zealand exports produce every year to the value of $75 for each head of the population. The net increase in such exports has been from $28,800,000, in 1881 to almost $50,000,000 in 1890.

Trusting your harvester to the tender mercies of the weather, from one year to another is a more disastrous trust, as far as you are concerned, than the most arbitrary harvester trust that was ever organized.

AN ANTIPODEAN DELUGE.

AUSTRALIANS ENDANGERED BY FLOODS.

Inhabitants of Queensland Cities and Settlements Are Compelled to Fly for Their Lives—Terrible Loss of Life and Property.

Too Much Moisture.

Brisbane, Feb. 6.—Incessant rains for several days have caused floods throughout Queensland. Part of this city is under water. People are deserting the low-lying districts, as many houses are submerged to the second floor and the water is still rising. The towns of Bundaberg, Ipswich and Bundamba are suffering most severely, and are threatened with total demolition. The inhabitants have left their houses, and those who have not fled to the higher lands have taken refuge in the roofs of the highest buildings. All domestic animals and hundreds of cattle have been drowned. A large loss of human life is reported, but nothing definite can be ascertained as to the total number. A mine near Bundamba was flooded and several miners were drowned. In Ipswich many houses have collapsed. Goodna is entirely under water, and the inhabitants have taken refuge on the hills. Hundreds are homeless, without shelter and without food. The loss of property is enormous. Cattle have been drowned by the thousands. Railways have been washed out and telegraph lines have been broken. All regularity of travel has ceased. Most railways have stopped running trains.

A Farmer's Terrible Fate.

Hokah, Minn., Feb. 6.—A terrible misfortune befel the family of Charles Luetzan, consisting of himself and wife, living on a farm six miles east of here. During the cold of Wednesday night they awoke to find their house in flames. Without waiting to dress they succeded in getting outside, but Mr. Luetzan thought of valuable papers within the dwelling and made a rush for the inside. He had just got in when the kitchen of the burning dwelling fell upon him. There were no neighbors near and no help was available. His wife, thinly clad, and amid terrible suffering from cold and fire, succeeded in extricating him, but not until he was fatally burned. Both were terribly frozen, the wife so much so that it is necessary to amputate the toes of both feet. Mr. Luetzan suffered terrible agony during all day Thursday and died early in the evening. He was literally roasted.

Has Six Wives.

St. Joseph, Mo., Feb. 6.—Five mad women are looking for George W. McAdams, a fresco painter, who claims Chicago as his home. A few months ago McAdams appeared in this city and in almost as many weeks managed to become engaged to and marry five different women in this and neighboring towns. The victims were all girls who had a little money, which McAdams would borrow after the marriage had been performed, on pretense of going to Mount Ayr, Colo., to start in business. All his marriages were performed under different names, and he was only found out here when the probate judge received a letter from the sixth wife at Kittanning, Pa., asking for information concerning him. McAdams has fled, carrying with him the money he received from his five dupes.

Protestant and Catholic.

Madrid, Feb. 6.—The excitement caused among Roman Catholics by the opening of a Protestant church in this city several weeks ago threatens trouble. When the Protestants announced four days ago that they would meet this afternoon in the theater opposite the Jesuit college the police feared a counter demonstration to the Catholic student riot in Barcelona on Jan. 29. When the Protestants assembled to-day they found a strong force of police and about 100 of the civil guard drawn up around the college. During the services a petard exploded a few yards from the theater. Three policemen and a civilian were wounded. The services were cut short and the congregation hurried in a panic from the theater. Nothing has been ascertained as to the identity of the person who exploded the petard.

Drifting Helpless at Sea.

San Francisco, Feb. 6.—Nothing has been heard of the missing steamer City of Peking, which is now ten days overdue. A steamer will be sent to look for her, with an extra force of engines, so that if her machinery is broke down it can be repaired. The opinion is growing here that the Peking is drifting about helpless. She had a $2,000,000 cargo and 200 people on board.

Quarantine Ordered.

Washington, Feb. 6.—Secretary Rusk has been informed that pleuro-pneumonia exists among cattle in Canada and has issued an order that all cattle imported from Canada shall be held in quarantine ninety days. He has further ordered that all meat cattle imported from Canada must be entered at the port of Buffalo, N. Y., which is hereby designated as a quarantine station.

Gas Works Destroyed.

Philadelphia, Feb. 6.—Fire to-day at the Twenty-fifth ward gas works totally destroyed the purifying house and two sheds, one of which was owned by the city. The total loss is estimated at $150,000, of which the city loses $25,000, the remainder falling upon the Philadelphia Gas Improvement company.

Parochial School Destroyed.

Chippewa Falls, Wis., Special, Feb. 6.—The parochial school of the Church of the Sacred Heart, in the town of Edison, this county, was destroyed by fire to-day, the flames breaking out of the room while the sisters were at breakfast. The building was a large two-story frame, valued at $3,000. The insurance is $1,500 on building and $800 on contents.

Killed While Sparring.

New Orleans, Feb. 6.—At Prof. John H. Duffy's arena of St. Charles street last night Ed Williams, known as Goodrich, was killed by John Green during a sparring exhibition in the fourth round. Both men are colored. The former resided in Louisville and the latter here. Green was arrested, along with the seconds, all colored.

The Engineer Injured.

Fond du Lac, Wis., Special, Feb. 6.—A bad wreck occurred on the Northwestern road near Chester to-night. The head engine of a double-header on a passenger train was ditched by the turning of a rail. Henry Brazall, the engineer, was internally injured.

Deland's Chemical Works in Ashes.

Fairport, N. Y., Feb. 6.—The Deland chemical works were burned to-day, entailing a loss of $200,000. It was feared at one time that the entire village would be destroyed.

For Post Chaplain.

Washington, Feb. 6.—The president sent to the senate the nomination of Patrick J. Hart of Minnesota to be post chaplain.

Dr. Graves Again Free.

Denver, Feb. 6.—Dr. Thatcher Graves, convicted of the murder of Mrs. Josephine Barnaby and sentenced to death, is at liberty to-night and is practically a free man. Dr. Graves' bond was fixed at $50,000, which amount was easily obtained. What his future course will be is not announced. He will appear in court Monday to have his bonds finally approved and the date for the new trial fixed.

Murder and Suicide.

Indianapolis, Feb. 6.—Philip Fahrback called upon Bessie Pitman to-day and finding another man in her company seized a revolver on the dresser and shot the woman, fatally. He then shot himself through the heart, dying instantly.

GREAT NORTHERN

TIME CARD.

NO. 3 Daily.				NO Daily
7 40 pm	Lv	St. Paul	Ar	6 55 am
8 10 "	11	Minneapolis		6 25 am
6 am 213		Barnesville		10 25 pm
10 45 am	Lv	Crookston	Ar	4 00 pm
*11 15 "		Shirley		x 3 30 " *
*x11 45 "		Ives		x3 00 " *
x12 20 pm		Wylie		x2 20 " *
*12 45 "	4 17 Ar	St. Hilaire	Lv	2 00 " *

*Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

S. S. Buzza Agt.

Dr. H. GRUNDY.

Physician & Surgeon.

Graduate of the University of Toronto Canada and member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario.

Messages from the surrounding country attended to,

Office in Drug Store

THIEF RIVER FALLS,

NORTHERN PACIFIC

THE

GREAT TRANSCONTENTAL ROUTE.

Passes through Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, Manitoba, Montana, Idaho, Oregon and Washington.

THE DINING CAR LINE

Dining cars are run between Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Winnipeg, Helena, Butte, Tacoma, Seattle and Portland.

PULLMAN SLEEPING CAR ROUTE.

Pullman service between Chicago St. Paul Montana and the Pacific Northwest; and between St. Paul, Minneapolis and Minnesota North Dakota and Manitoba points.

THE POPULAR LINE.

Daily Express Trains carry elegant Pullman sleeping Cars, Dining cars, Day Coaches, Pullman Tourist Sleepers and Free Colonist Sleeping Cars.

YELLOWSTONE PARK ROUTE.

The Northern Pacific R. R. is the rail line to Yellowstone Park; the popular line to California and Alaska; and its trains pass through the grandest scenery of seven states

THROUGH TICKETS Are sold at all cupon offices of the Northern Pacific Railroad to points North, East, South and West in the United States and Canada

TIME SCEDULE,

	Leave Crookston Daily	Arrive Crookston Daily
For Staples, Minneapolis, St. Paul Duluth Ashland and points East and South	7:05 p. m.	8:20 a m.
For Grand Forks Grafton Drayton, Winnipeg and points in North Dakota and Manitoba	8:27 a. m.	7:10 p. m

For Rates, maps, Time Tables or special information, apply to Agent Northern Pacific R R. at Crookston Minn., or

CHAS. S. FEE,
Gen. Pass. Agent
St. Paul Minn,

ST. HILAIRE MEAT MARKET.

All kinds of fresh and salt meat always on hand.

I make a specialty of buying and selling cattle of all kinds.

If you want to buy or sell anything in that line it will pay you to give me a call.

JAMES DAINARD.

FRED Eikhof

DEALER IN CHOICE

WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS.

Beer always on tap.

Pool Room in Connection.

Broadway St. Hilaire.

FRANK IVES,

Attorney and Counselor AT LAW,

CROOKSTON and ST. HILAIRE, Minn.

Will Practice in ALL The Courts, OF T E STATE and and before the U. S. Land Office Crookston and at Washington.

Will give special attention to contests of claims.

BREVITIES.

Wheat is 60 cents.

Fresh Oysters at W. A. Arthurs try them.

S. M. Hoff was at Crookston on business last Monday.

For No. 1 pure buck wheat flour call on Fricker & Welch.

Mrs. S. M. Dainard spent a couple of days at Crookston this week.

If you want some nice fresh oyster call on W. A. Arthur.

A complete line ot undertakers goods always on hand at Holmes Bros.

S. M. Dainard, was at Crookston several days last week on business,

Peter Dainard was at Crookston a couple of days the first of the week,

The weather the past week has been of the kind that you read about.

J. W. Swanstrom, of Thief River Falls was doing business in town this week.

George W. Brady was in town visiting friends for a short time last Sunday

Now is the time to secure your flour cheap. Call for bargains on Fricker & Welch.

If the new game bill becomes a law hunting dogs will be a drug on the market.

If you want anything in the line of confectionary fruit or oysters call on W. A. Arthur.

R. B. Vining, of Thief River Falls, was in town to-day on his way home from Cookston,

Fred Eikhof returned from his Crookston visit last Sunday. Strange to relate he returned alone,

Miss H. Ihlsing left to-day for Crookston where she will spend several days visiting friends.

The young folks of the village enjoyed another pleasant dance at Dainard's Hall last Saturday evening,

Frank Kratka the Thief River Falls real estate man, was in town last Monday on his way home from St. Paul.

Martin Williams returned last Sunday from the southern part of the state where he has been visiting friends.

P. S. Stranahan came over from Donaldson to-day and will spend a week or more visiting with his family,.

Everyone will join in the wish that the blizzards and extremely cold weather are things of the past for this winter.

Attorney J. C, Mathews will leave this week for the Soldiers Home at Minneapolis where he will receive exzellant treatment.

Mr. and Mrs. E, J. Holmes returned home last Monday from Goodhue county where they have been visiting friends for the past six weeks.

We learn that there will be a dance at Dainard's Hall next Friday evening. Good music will be furnished and all are invited to attend.

The SPECTATOR was compelled to issue a blizzard edition to its subscribers in the village last week on brown paper, owing to the supply of papers being detained by the storms.

The trains were badly blockaded last week and from Wednesday until Sunday we were without a train or mail. The train on Sunday brought up the mail for five days.

Daily trains commenced running last Monday with Conductor C. S. Dilly in charge. The change coming as it does at the dullest season of the year must mean that it will be permanent.

K. F. Vine, of Crookston, was in town several days last week, and returned again last Monday. He has rented the Brown building and is having it repaired and will open a meat market. Mr. Vine thoroughly understands his business and will do well.

Although the past week has been the coldest for several years with several bad blizzards, we have still to hear of any suffering from the cold. It is farther south where they are not prepared for cold weather that people freese to death,

---

The Rhinehart—Anderson election contest for county commissioner of the first district of Polk county has been decided by Judge Ives in favor of Rhinehart.

Congressman Hall the gentleman who so earnestly and effusively desires the appointment of some good Minnesotan of Scandinavian extraction as minister to Sweden, writes home that he is in imminent peril of receiving that appointment himself. It will pain that good man to have greatness thus thrust upon him against his will.—Minneapolis Tribune.

The N W. Agricultural and Driving Association of Crookston, have decided to hold an agricultural fair at their grounds in Crookston the coming fall. The move is a good one as Polk county is altogether too prominent a county to be without an annual fair. If properly managed the fair will undoubtedly prove a success, but if "skin games" and sure thing gamblers are as prominent as they were last summer, it will not,

The question of the annexation of Hawaii or the establishment of a protectorate, divides opinion almost solidly on partisan lines. Of the twenty senators favoring it all are Republican; those opposed are Democrats and of the twenty-five non-committal senators all but four are Democrats. In the house about the same proportions appear. The press of the country divide about the same way. Davis and Halversen favor it, Hall opposes it and Lind is non committal.—St. Paul Globe

Faribault Republican: Are not the present accommodations ample for the transaction of the official business of the state? Is not the building capable of being comfortably warmed and ventilated? Are not its surrounding healthful? The answer to these questions should be decisive as to a new capitol building at the present time. Municipal pride of architectural adornment is a consideration that can be properly left out of sight. St. Paul has wanted a new capitol for years, but the money for building it must be supplied by the state at large.

Man is a consistent creature, indeed he is. Senator Sawyer of the Michigan legislature has brought down upon himself a tornado of censure which bids fair to annihilate him because he introduced a bill requiring all railroads in Michigan to furnish free passes to state officials, while the legislators who were elected with the understanding that they would fight the pass system, and are now riding on passes and drawing milage are being treated as gentlemen of the highest standing. The interests of the public will always be trampled in the dust unless the people entertain more consistent sentiments.—St. Paul Globe.

We learn that the new county division bill which the Red Lake Falls and McIntosh boomers are trying to pass, requires that an election to divide a county must be called upon a petition of five hundred names being presented to the county commissioners. While we are of the opinion that it is necessary for a bill of this kind to be passed, we think the legislature would make a mistake unless the terms of the bill require that the petition be signed by more than a majority of the legal voters of the county. Any town in the county could get five hundred signers to a petition and put the county to the cost of an election.

Donnelly always tells more or less truth whenever he makes a speech. When he said the other day day in the State Senate that a large amount of money is being unnecessarily spent for salaries and in paying for worthless exhibits by the State's World Fair Commissioners, he told the truth. It seems impossible to get anything done, where the expenditure of public funds is left to the discretion and control of individual agents, without a whole raft of bloodsuckers getting a "rake off" in some way or other. The state should make a liberal appropriation for Minnesota's exhibits at the World's Fair but no man should be allowed to feather his nest out of this money.—Warren Register.

Some legislation to stop the rapacity and petty tyranny of parties who purchase tax liens has long been necessary, and the bill introduced yesterday in the legislature by Mr. Cole to abolish penalties for the non-payment of taxes on real and personal property and to substitute interest therefore seems to meet the requirement. Delinquent taxes which only draw 8 per cent interest until paid, a rate which can't be disturbed by the tax title sharp will not have such an attraction for this class of investors, and the delinquents will be properly protected from extortion. The bill also requires the county auditor to furnish itemized statements of taxes due on any realty to any person applying. This arrangement taken in connection with the proposition to divide tax payments in two equal semi-annual installments may be characterized as legislation for the proper relief of taxpayers.—Minneapolis Journal.

Advices from Washington are to the effect that two townships in the White Earth Indian reservation will be ready for sale sometime in May. The lands however, are chiefly agricultural. The change in administration is calculated to result in postponing the date when the more valuable timber lands on these reservations will be thrown upon the market.—Lumberman.

Mr. Brownlee, of Terrebonne, was in town Friday, and made the News a pleasant call and gave us an account of the fire at that place which burned Mr. H. H. Ames flour mill at Terrebonne, on Monday evening. The fire broke out about 9:30 a. m. in the second story. Before it was noticed the fire was under such headway that but a few things were saved, There were but a few hundred pounds of flour saved. The wheat bins were nearly all filled. There was a large amount of wheat, flour and feed consumed, The loss is estimated at from $10,500 to $14,000. The insurance on the mill is $6,000. This is the third mill that Mr. Ames has had destroyed by fire at that place, the first having burned about five years ago.—Red Lake Falls News.

W. C. Nash and Martin Purcell appeared before the county commissioners at the last session and filed complaint against the city justices of this city alleging among other things that when anyone without money is arrested in this city the county of Polk is made to pay all the costs as well as the officers fees. When the person arrested has money the arrest is made in the name of the city, so the complaint alleges, and the officers get their fees direct from the person arrested if conviction follows and it is generally understood that conviction is sure to follow where the culprit has a fat roll, In connection with this matter the county attorney has given it as his opinion that police officers have no jurisdiction outside of the city limits. The commissioners have also decided to put the county to no expense in the matter of supressing or trying to suppress gambling, if any exists in the city so long as the encourages the different devices for gaining an easy dollar Pending an investigation, and the Courier has been creditably informed that the matter will be thoroughly sifted, a majority of the bills now on file in the county auditor's office from officials of this city will be hung up. If the charges as set forth in the complaint are true, let the facts come out. Another municipal election is fast approaching and if there is as much rottenness in the city as claimed, every honest citizen and tax-holder will rejoice over a full and complete exposure. If, on the contrary there is nothing but sweetness, purity and a healthful administration, then a stop should be put at once to the idle rumors which ever and anon greet the thinking public.—East Grand Forks Courier.

Judge Thayer of Iowa calculates that bad roads cost the farmers of the United states $135,000,000 per year, and the rest of the world as much more. Farmers need not be told that bad roads are expensive to them. After a man has been forced to unload his mired wagon, and carried the entire load across a mud hole on his back and reloaded it he is prepared to admit that bad roads are expensive to farmers. Their products usually bring the highest prices just when the roads are impassible and it is impossible to haul them to market. But the pinch on the road question lies in the fact that they cost money, and good roads mean increased taxation. It is natural to "kick" against taxes even if $1.00 expended brings $5.00 in returns. The advocates of the turnpike system in Ohio, Indiana and others of the older states, were almost mobbed by farmers who lived on roads which they could scarcely travel on horseback after a rain, because the cost of the turnpike was assessed against the benefited land. After a few years' experiance with good roads, the same farmers would not have gone back to mud again for ten times the cost. There is no tax which pays so large a dividend as that which is wisely expended in road work—N. W. Agriculturist.

Notice To Farmers.

We will pay you cash for hides, hay barley, oats, cord wood, good steers or anything marketable that you have to sell.

E. T. Spafford & Co.

CHEAP EXCURSIONS TO CANADA

Low round trip tickets will be on sale by the Great Northern from Crookston Grand Forks and stations north to boundary and west to Minot, to points in Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick Nova Scotia, on Nov. 27th, Dec, 6th Dec 18th to 22nd inclusive, and Dec 27th 1892, Tickets good for 90 days with transit limits of 15 days each way, going and returning. This will allow holders to stop in the Twin Cities, in Chicago to see the wonderful buildings of the World's Fair, and other points enroute.

Extension of time beyond 90 days made at small additional cost. For particulars and tickets see S. S. Buzza agent at St. Hilaire.

I will pay the highest market price for veal calves, fresh eggs and butter.

S. M. Dainard.

INTERESTING ITEM.

GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY LINE

It is to the interest of parties contemplating going east to consider the great advantages the Great Northern offers them through its fast passenger service to St. Paul and to all points west to the Pacific coast, their free colonist cars, and magnificent Dining and Sleeping cars. The shortest route, close connections, quickest time and fare as low as the lowest, Any information cheerfully given,

S. S. Buzza
Agent.

CHATTEL LOANS

I am prepared to loan money on chattle security at reasonable rates. One years time. Call On

H. E. IVES.

WANTED. Salesmen. Local and Traveling, To represent our well known house. You need no capital to represents a firm that warrants nursery stock first-class and true to name. WORK ALL THE YEAR. $100 per month to the right man, Apply quick stating age. L. L. MAY & CO.
Nurserymen, Florists and Seeds men,
St. Paul Minn.
(This house is responsible.)

MARLIN SAFETY RIFLES

Made in all styles and sizes. Lightest, strongest, easiest working, safest, simplest, most accurate, most compact, and most modern. For sale by all dealers in arms. Catalogues mailed free by

The Marlin Fire Arms Co.,
NEW HAVEN, CONN., U. S. A.

All who are indebted to S. M. Hoff are requested to call and settle up at once or the debt will be collected by law.

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
Crookston Minn. December 5 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on January 24 1893 viz: Daniel Johnson H D 12052 for the Lot 5 Sec. 6 and Lot 1 Sec 7 Tp 153 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of said land viz:

J. A. Sjortrom Anton Sundahl J. A. Peterson K. Sundahl all of St. Hilaire, Polk co

Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn. Dec. 7 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on January 28 1893 viz Charles Gumoll H D 11784 for the SE ¼ Sec 25 Tp 153 R 45.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land viz:

Gotlieb Gerlach, August Morel, Charles Peterson Henry Leppert all of Wylie Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn Dec 14 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on Feb 18 1893 viz:

Peter Sanderson H D 14150 for the NW ¼ SE ¼ NE ¼ SW ¼ and Lots 5 and 6 Sec 6 Tp 151 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Peter Anderson, John Strawberg, O. K. Eliasson B. Johnson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn. January 3 1893

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and has said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver of the U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn, on February 16 1893. viz:

Anton Peterson HD 12788 for the SE ¼ Sec. 7 Tp 153 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land viz:

Julius Nelson, James Evenson, Daniel Johnson, Erick Anderson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

CLOSING OUT SALE!

At E M Hoff's Store

My whole stock of

Dry Goods and Notions
Gents Furnshing Goods
$5,000 worth of ready made clothing
Foot wear of all kinds
and everything belonging to a full stocked general merchandise store will be closed out at cost in the next 90 days.

COME EVERY BODY AND SECURE GOOD BARGAINS.

E. M. HOFF

CROWN ROLLER MILL.

EQUIPPED WITH THE LATEST AND BEST IMPROVED MACHINERY.

Manufactures the well known PERFECTION FANCY PATENT and WHITE ROSEFLOUR.

Rye and Feed mill in connection.

Flour and Feed always kept on hand

Custom work a specialty.

FRICKER & WELCH Prop,

HILAIRE MINNESOTA

CHAS G. RAPP.

A large and complete line of

General Merchandise.

CONSISTING OF

Dry Goods, Groceries, Clothing
Boots & Shoes, Hats & Caps
Notions

ST. HILAIRE SPECTATOR.
[illegible] EVERY WEDNESDAY EVENING.
H. E. IVES, Propr.
SUBSCRIPTION PRICE:
Advance, [illegible]
If not in Advance, $2 00 Per Year
Entered in the Post Office at St. Hilaire, as Second Class Mail Matter

WEDNESDAY February 8 1893.

IN WASHINGTON.

HAWAIIAN ISLANDS MAY NOT BE GOOD FOR US.

Chinamen, Ignorance and Leprosy May Be Acquired, in Large Quantities, With the Pacific Ocean Group, If Uncle Sam Wants to Close the Deal.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6, 1893.

MOST EVERYBODY in Washington would like to see the United States flag and our Boys in Blue in full possession of the Pacific Coast islands called Hawaii. There are no party lines drawn in the matter. At any rate, if there are, we don't discover it here. There is a suspicion that England is opposed to letting the islands pass entirely into Uncle Sam's control. That makes us all the more eager to get them.

Senator Pettigrew, of South Dakota, sometimes grows satirical and ironical. Meeting him the day after the news of the Hawaiian revolution in miniature became known at the National Capital, your correspondent asked his opinion:

"We have been waiting several decades," he remarked, "for this dramatic event. The American people have just been starving for Hawaii to make for themselves an appetizing Sandwich. They raise sugar, upon which those enterprising grangers, who bathe—when they do bathe—in the genial waters of the Pacific ocean, would annually receive millions of dollars in good United States currency as bounties. They have a population of 30,000 Indians, (Kanakas) who are about as civilized as our neighbors, the Sioux, out West; 20,000 Chinamen, 10,000 of whom bring with them the blessing of leprosy, and 5,000 or 10,000 white people, half of whom are adventurers, one-quarter missionaries and one-quarter invalids. Yet our people are passionately patriotic. Did they not indorse the payment of 15,000,000 good hard American dollars for the mountains and icebergs of Alaska? And do they not submit cheerfully to a small gang of smart citizens using that country as though it was their private real estate? And are not our people ready to fight England and all creation at any possible expense of blood and treasure to hold the seal fur franchise for a close corporation?

"By George! The patriotism of us Americans is immense—simply indescribable in its dimensions.

"My friend, we shall annex the Sandwich islands. There is being born just now a generation that believes in annexation as a manifest destiny. Then we shall tackle Hayti, Cuba, Canada, Mexico and Central America each in succession. It is written in the book of fate. The Young American has no longer a West to go to. He must go somewhere. He is nomadic, restless, uneasy, and will keep in motion if he has to fight for it. Hawaii may be an expensive luxury. No matter, we are out of meat. We are hungry and want a Sandwich."

It seems to have been a decision of Fate that those Pacific ocean islands should become a part of the United States. Such predictions have been made frequently by leading public men, and as long ago as last November Minister Stevens wrote a letter to the State Department setting forth the advantages of the Hawaiian Islands to the United States and the desirability of their acquisition by the country. The entire area of the Islands is about six thousand square miles. In addition to sugar, which is now much the largest product, the soil and climate are admirably adapted to raising rice, bananas, oranges, coffee, grapes and other crops. Well governed and properly developed, they are capable of maintaining a population of 300,000 to 400,000. There are also extensive ranches for the raising of sheep and cattle, so as to be capable of supplying steamers and other vessels both in peace and war. The two harbors of Honolulu and Pearl river, about six miles apart, are entered by narrow channels, closely banked by mountains, so as to be impregnably defensible at not large expense. Their ultimate possession by the United States is of the utmost importance to American commerce in the Pacific, which promises vast developments if wisely carried out and without too much delay.

President Harrison is being criticised by J. S. Clarkson, of Iowa, and Senator Cullom, of Illinois, for appointing a Southern Democrat to the Supreme Court to succeed the late Judge Lamar. On the other hand, I hear some talk among Democratic Congressmen from the South to the effect that Judge Jackson is not entirely satisfactory to them either. But of one thing all may be certain. The nomination is satisfactory to President Harrison, and if the appointment shall be confirmed by the Senate, and I am told it will be, the President can stand all the criticism his party or the opposing parties can stir up. There is one point about Judge Jackson that should be enlarged upon and made prominent. He is a true blue American citizen.

All this talk about a Republican President never having placed a Democrat on the Supreme Bench is out of place and not true. Just look back to 1863, and remember that President Lincoln placed Stephen J. Field in the Supreme Court. Mr. Field was a Democrat then and is a Democrat now, and he still holds forth as Supreme Judge and the people like him, so do his associates.

I have been looking up the public offices that may be filled by good Democrats after March 4 next, with the consent and assistance of President Cleveland. There are some very fair jobs that must be given out. Among the number are 17 surveyor-generals, one each in Arizona, Alaska, California, Colorado, Florida, Idaho, Louisiana, Minnesota, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota, Utah, Washington and Wyoming. The salaries attached to these offices range from $1,800 in Florida, Louisiana, Minnesota and Nevada to $2,500 in California. In a majority of the states the salary is $2,500. There are also 123 local land offices with a register at each, with salaries ranging from about $750 to $3,000. Two of these offices are in Alabama, 1 in Alaska, Arizona has 2, Arkansas 4, California 10, Colorado 13, Florida 1, Idaho 5, Iowa 1, Kansas 7, Louisiana 2, Michigan 2, Minnesota 5, Mississippi 1, Missouri 3, Montana 5, Nebraska 12, Nevada 2, New Mexico 4, North Dakota 5, Oklahoma 4, South Dakota 8, Utah 1, Washington 7, Wisconsin 4, and Wyoming 6. Then there are 11 chiefs of divisions in the general land office who receive a salary of $2,500 a piece; 1 chief clerk at $2,000, 10 principal examiners at $7,000, 2 law clerks at $2,250, 2 law examiners at $2,000, 1 receiving clerk at $1,800, a confidential clerk to the commissioner who receives $1,600. The Postoffice Department has 65,000 postoffices to fill.

Hon. O. M. Hall, Representative from the Third Minnesota district, and also Representative-elect, may be appointed by President Cleveland to one of the second-class missions—that to Sweden and Norway. And why should he not? He is from the one State in the American Union which shelters more Scandinavians than all the others combined. He has for years been the neighbor, counsellor and friend of thousands of our Swedish and Norwegian fellow citizens. He represents the only reliable Democratic district in the North Star State, and has from the beginning been one of the ablest of Mr. Cleveland's friends and supporters.

Mr. Hall is the first man prominently in the field for a leading Federal appointment under Mr. Cleveland's administration.

Secretary Rusk, of the Agricultural Bureau, is feeling good just now over some late and successful tests in curing cattle of the disease known as lumpy jaw. The Secretary says that his department has demonstrated that the disease can be speedily cured, and his experiments will result in greatly benefiting farmers and stock growers. The late experimenting was done in Chicago. Eighty-five cattle were slaughtered, all of which had been affected with this disease, and 68 were found to be completely cured. This is even better than the showing made on the first lot of 100 killed, which showed 68 per cent. of cures.

In Washington we look upon John G. Carlisle, of Kentucky, as the next Secretary of the Treasury, and one of his very first official acts may be to remove J. T. Williams, of Mankato, Minn., from one of the easiest jobs in Washington, that of custodian of plates and dies in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. Mr. Williams was placed in the office by Mr. Windom. The place is one of great responsibility, but there is very little work about it. The salary is $201 per month.

"Uncle Loren" Fletcher, Member-Elect from the Fourth Minnesota District, is spending some days in Washington. He goes everywhere, sees everything, and seems to be enjoying his visit immensely. He will go from here to California, back to the Hot Springs, and try to get to Washington again in time for the inauguration. His election has rejuvinated Mr. Fletcher, and he enjoys the prospect of his Congressional duties immensely.

Last week John H. Haswell was started out to Montana by the State Department to get the Montana electoral vote, resulting from the November elections. He got as far as St. Paul and was then called back to Washington because the great State of Montana had suddenly remembered to attend to one of her most important duties, and the State messenger got through to Washington before the Government messenger got through to Montana.

The negro exhibit at the World's Fair is the latest affair to be looked after by Senator Kyle, of South Dakota. He has introduced a bill appropriating $50,000 for an exhibition at the World's Fair showing the progress of the American negro in the past quarter of a century.

I notice that the Fish Hatchery at Duluth will receive about $5,000 in the new appropriation bill, and I am informed that many of the Northwestern streams and lakes are stocked with fish from the Duluth station.

FRANK J. MEAD.

U.S. Land Office

Crookston Minn. Jan. 7 1893.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and said proof will be made before U.S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on Feb. 21 1893 viz:

John August Lundbeck HD 11273 for the S ½ NE ¼ and Lots 3 and 4 Sec. 2 Tp 152 R 44.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of said land viz:

John Eliason, Martin Ryland Elias Svenson, Ernest Svenson, all of St. Hilaire Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

DO YOU WANT TO ADOPT A BABY?

Maybe you think this is a new business, sending out babies on application; it has been done before, however, but never have those furnished been as near the original sample as this one. Everyone will exclaim, "Well! that's the sweetest baby I ever saw!" This little black-and-white engraving can give you but a faint idea of the exquisite original, which we propose to send to you, transportation paid. The little darling rests against a pillow, and is in the act of drawing off its pink sock, the mate of which has been pulled off and flung aside with a triumphant coo. The flesh tints are perfect, and the eyes follow you, no matter where you stand. The exquisite reproductions of this greatest painting of Ida Waugh (the most celebrated of modern painters of baby life) are to be given to those who subscribe to Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893. The reproductions cannot be told from the original, which cost $400, and are the same size (17x22 inches). The baby is life size, and absolutely lifelike. We have also in preparation, to present to our subscribers during 1893, other great pictures by such artists as Percy Moran, Maud Humphrey, Louis Deschamps, and others of world-wide renown. Take only two examples of what we did during the past year, "A Yard of Pansies," and "A White House Orchid" by the wife of President Harrison, and you will see what our promises mean.

"I'M A BABY."

Those who subscribe for Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893 will possess a gallery of exquisite works of art of great value, besides a Magazine that cannot be equaled by any in the world for its beautiful illustrations and subject matter, that will keep everyone posted on all the topics of the day, and all the fads and different items of interest about the household, besides furnishing interesting reading matter, both grave and gay, for the whole family; and while Demorest's is not a fashion Magazine, its fashion pages are perfect, and we give you, free of cost, all the patterns you wish to use during the year, and in any size you choose. Send in your subscription at once, only $2, and you will really get over $25 in value. Address the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York. If you are unacquainted with the Magazine, send 10 cents for a specimen copy.

Ask Your Dealer For

WHIPS.

FEATHERBONE is made from [illegible] Quills—nature's own toughest, and strongest elastic material. [illegible] All styles for Buggy, Cart, Track and Riding. Be sure and ask for a FEATHERBONE.

FOR SALE BY

S. M. HOFF

St. H

Going to Buy A Dictionary?

GET THE BEST,

Webster's International.

A Choice Gift

A Grand Family Educator

A Library in Itself

The Standard Authority

WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY

SOLD BY ALL BOOKSELLERS.

The International is a new book from cover to cover, fully abreast of the times, and is the successor of the authentic "Unabridged." Ten years were spent in revising, 100 editors employed and over $300,000 expended before the first copy was printed.

Do not buy reprints of obsolete and comparatively worthless editions.

Send for free pamphlet containing specimen pages and full particulars.

G. & C. MERRIAM CO., Publishers,

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., U. S. A.

U.S. LAND OFFICE.

Crookston, Minn., Nov. 17 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn on December 29 1892. viz:

Peter E. Eugh HD [illegible] for the NW ¼ Sec. 21 Tp 152 R. 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Halvor Aamodt, Ole J. Hegg Peter Anderson, Ole J. Johnson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register,

U. S. Land Office

Crookston Minn., Nov. 25 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver, U. S Land Office at Crookston Minn on Jany. 5 1893 viz:

Julius Nelson HD 11890 for the S W ¼ sec. 2 tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of said land viz:

James Evenson B I. Konlog, Nels Evenson Anton Peterson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

WE WANT YOU

to act as our agent. We furnish an expensive outfit and all you need free. It costs nothing to try the business. We will treat you well, and help you to earn ten times ordinary wages. Both sexes of all ages can live at home and work in spare time, or all the time. Any one anywhere can earn a great deal of money. Many have made Two Hundred Dollars a Month. No class of people in the world are making so much money without capital as those at work for us. Business pleasant, strictly honorable, and pays better than any other offered to agents. You have a clear field, with no competition. We equip you with everything, and supply printed directions for beginners which, if obeyed faithfully, will bring more money than will any other business. Improve your prospects! Why not? You can do so easily and surely at work for us. Reasonable industry only necessary for absolute success. Pamphlet circular giving every particular is sent free to all. Delay not in sending for it.

GEORGE STINSON & CO.,

Box No. [illegible], Portland, Me.

E. T. SPAFFORD. S. M. DAINARD

E. T. SPAFFORD & CO.

DEALERS IN

LUMBER, LATH AND SHINGLES.

A complete stock of all kinds of Lumber Lath, Shingles, Mouldings, Building Paper Sash, Doors and Screens, Lime, Cement Stucco, Plastering Hair, Brick etc. always on hand at the lowest market prices.

S. M. Dainard, Manager.

BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE, MINN.

E. T. SPAFFORD & CO.

WILL ALWAYS PAY THE

HIGHEST MARKET PRICES

FOR

All kinds of

CATTLE.

Cor wood, Hay, Oats, Barley and flax.

Ground Feed for sale

S. M. DAINARD.

Manager.

Reserved For

THE

ST. HILAIRE

TOWNSITE

COMPANY

W. A. ARTHUR.

DEALER IN

FRUITS, CONFECTIONARY

TOBACCO AND CIGARS.

STATIONARY OF ALL KINDS

Lunch Counter

Warm meals at all hours.

BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE MINNESOTA

JUSTUS L. JOHNSON

DEALER IN

pure medicines Fancy articles, perfumer and stationery, paints oils and dye stuffs.

Cigars, Candy, Fruit and Soft Drinks always on hand.

Barbershop in connection

BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE

I CAN SAVE YOU

MONEY

If you wish to make

REAL ESTATE

LOANS.

For full particulars call on or address

H. E. IVES.

SPECTATOR OFFICE ST. HILAIRE.

HOLMES BRO'S

Dealers in

HARDWARE, TINWARE,

We are carrying a heavy and complete line of Heating and Cooking stoves.

GOOD GOODS LOW PRICES

CALL ON US FOR BARGAINS

BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE MINN.

FARMERS STORE

NEW GOODS AT HARD PAN PRICES.

If you want to save money do your trading with

HALL BROS.

DEALERS IN

Dry Goods, Groceries Notions.

BROADWAY [illegible]

S. M. HOFF

DEALER IN

HARDWARE

A new and complete stock of all kinds of Hardware, Tinware, Stoves, Fencing wire, Nails, in fact everything usuey kept in a first-class Hardware Store,

AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES

Call and examine Goods and Get Our Prices.

BROADWAY ST. HILAIRE

DR. PRICE'S Cream Baking Powder.

The only Pure Cream of Tartar Powder.—No Ammonia; No Alum.

Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

A SERPENT GOD.

It Was Discovered in Ohio—Nearly 2,000 Feet in Length.

In the state of Ohio an ancient serpentine form of clay, nearly 2,000 feet in length, like that in Adams county, was discovered last spring in Warren county, near the town of Morrow. The serpent mound is about 15 feet wide and 4 feet high, and it is one of the vestiges of the ancient system of serpent worship among the autochthonous inhabitants of this continent. Some skeletons of the mysterious race that once dwelt in the Ohio valley have been unearthed along the line of the windings of this clay monster: The most important contribution of the year to the popular knowledge of the archæology of that valley is Warren K. Moorhead's "Primitive Man in Ohio," a work which, while giving details of the excavations and discoveries that have been made, attempts to show that these aborigines were really but few in number and were but high-grade savages, far inferior to the mound buildings of Mexico and South America.

SYRUP of FIGS

ONE ENJOYS

Both the method and results when Syrup of Figs is taken; it is pleasant and refreshing to the taste, and acts gently yet promptly on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, cleanses the system effectually, dispels colds, headaches and fevers and cures habitual constipation. Syrup of Figs is the only remedy of its kind ever produced, pleasing to the taste and acceptable to the stomach, prompt in its action and truly beneficial in its effects, prepared only from the most healthy and agreeable substances, its many excellent qualities commend it to all and have made it the most popular remedy known.

Syrup of Figs is for sale in 50c and $1 bottles by all leading druggists. Any reliable druggist who may not have it on hand will procure it promptly for any one who wishes to try it. Do not accept any substitute.

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
LOUISVILLE, KY. NEW YORK, N.Y.

CURES CATARRH

LONDON BALM
LONDON BALM Co
NEW YORK
CURES CATARRH HAY FEVER

SOLD BY YOUR DRUGGIST.

PENSION JOHN W. MORRIS, Washington, D.C.
Successfully Prosecutes Claims.
Late Principal Examiner U.S. Pension Bureau.
3 yrs in last war, 15 adjudicating claims, atty since.

She Knocked Him Out.

He was whistling and she didn't like it.

"I wish," she said "when you are walking with me you wouldn't whistle. It is extremely rude,

"I am whistling for the want of thought," he replied, with evident intent to be very crushing.

"If that's what it's for," she remarked," I think I may say without fear of successful contradiction by any one who knows you, that you don't have to."

Then he stopped—Exchange.

China has 20 times more coal than Europe.

Catarrh Cannot Be Cured

with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is not a quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years, and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing Catarrh. Send for testimonials, free

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Props., Toledo, O.
Sold by druggists, price 75c.

The kangaroos in Australia consume on an average as much grass as sheep.

Only one person in 1,000 dies of old age.

Singing practice wards off consumption.

If Checkmated Early.

Rheumatism is shorn of its terrors. When it is young, annihilate it with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters and prevent life-long torture. If it is chronic, it is always liable to attack the heart with a fatal result. The poisons taken to cure it simply alleviate its pangs, and are themselves dangerous in a slight overdose. Indigestion, liver or kidney trouble, costiveness, malaria and loss of appetite and flesh are remedied by the Bitters.

Every man in Russia must be provided with a passport.

The proprietors of Ely's Cream Balm do not claim it to be a cure-all, but a sure remedy for Catarrh and Cold in the head.

I have been afflicted with catarrh for 20 years. It became chronic and extended to my throat, causing hoarseness and great difficulty in speaking, indeed for years I was not able to speak more than thirty minutes, and often this with great difficulty. I also, to a great extent, lost the sense of hearing. By the use of Ely's Cream Balm all dropping of mucous has ceased and my voice and hearing has greatly improved.—Jas. W. Davidson, Attorney at Law, Monmouth, Ill.

Apply Balm into each nostril. It is Quickly Absorbed. Gives Relief at once. Price 50 cents at Druggists or by mail. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren St., New York.

Russia consumes about 25 pounds of iron per capita.

"August Flower"

"One of my neighbors, Mr. John Gilbert, has been sick for a long time. All thought him past recovery. He was horribly emaciated from the inaction of his liver and kidneys. It is difficult to describe his appearance and the miserable state of his health at that time. Help from any source seemed impossible. He tried your August Flower and the effect upon him was magical. It restored him to perfect health to the great astonishment of his family and friends." John Quibell, Holt, Ont.

"WELL BRED, SOON WED." GIRLS WHO USE

SAPOLIO

ARE QUICKLY MARRIED. TRY IT IN YOUR NEXT HOUSE-CLEANING.

Justice to All.

It is now apparent to the Directors of the World's Columbian Exposition that millions of people will be denied the pleasure of becoming the possessors of

World's Fair Souvenir Coins

The Official Souvenir of the Great Exposition—

The extraordinary and growing demand for these Coins, and the desire on the part of the Directors that equal opportunities may be afforded for their purchase, have made it necessary to enlarge the channels of distribution. To relieve themselves of some responsibility, the Directors have invited

THE MERCHANTS

Throughout the Nation to unite with the Banks in placing Columbian Half-Dollars on sale. This is done that the masses of the people, and those living at remote points, may be afforded the best possible opportunity to obtain the Coins.

THE FORTUNATE POSSESSORS

of SOUVENIR COINS will be those who are earliest in seizing upon these new advantages.

$10,000 Was Paid For The First Coin

They are all alike, the issue is limited, and time must enhance their value. The price is One Dollar each.

HOW TO GET THE COINS:

Go to your nearest merchant or banker, as they are likely to have them. If you cannot procure them in this way, send direct to us, ordering not less than Five Coins, and remitting One Dollar for each Coin ordered.

Send instructions how to ship the Coins and they will be sent free of expense. Remit by registered letter, or send express or post-office money order, or bank draft to Treasurer World's Columbian Exposition, Chicago, Ill.

MR. GRUMBLE'S CURE.

A Lesson for Husbands.

"The old story—the coffee cold, the fire nearly out, and the room full of stifling smoke!"

Mr. Grumble drew his chair up to the breakfast-table as he spoke, with the face of a martyr.

"The coffee is only just made, dear," said Mrs. Grumble, a pretty, timid-looking woman, with soft blue eyes and brown braids; "and I don't really think the room is very cold. As for the smoke, I am sorry, but the man promised me to have the chimney seen to yesterday.

"Of course he did—nobody ever keeps promises to us," groaned Mr. Grumble. "If it had been Smith, now, the chimney would of been seen to long ago. Do give me a piece of steak that is at least warmed through; we're not cannibals, that I know of, to eat our meat raw. But that's always the way—we never had a cook that understood how to broil a steak"

"But my dear——" said Mrs. Grumble.

"Don't tell me," interrupted Mr. Grumble. "I know just how things ought to be done. The paper hasn't come yet, I suppose? No, of course not. I really wish somebody would enlighten me as to why my paper is always half-an-hour later than anybody else's. If the baby doesn't leave off crying, I shall certainly go crazy."

"It's teeth trouble it," sighed Mrs. Grumble, leaving the breakfast-table to walk up and down the room with her fretful little charge.

"Oh, nonsense!" said Mr. Grumble, sharply, charging at a slice of toast with his fork; "you coddle it too much, that's all."

Mrs. Grumble thought of the general commotion into which the house had been thrown about a month previously, when Mr. Grumble had had the toothache. But she only neatled the baby's velvet head against her shoulder, and said nothing—woman's way of disposing of a great many little martydoms.

"Now, then, where's my hat?" demanded Mr. Grumble, rising, and looking around. "Very singular that that hat is never in its place!"

"It is just where you hung it yourself, papa, in the hall," said little Harry, from behind his spelling-book.

"Children shouldn't talk so much," said Mr. Grumble, tartly. "My dear, that rent in the lining of my overcoat isn't mended yet—why did you not see to it?

"I intended to do so," said his wife, apologetically; "but you know we had company last night, and the baby slept so badly that I rose rather later than usual this morning; but——"

"Always some excuse," interrupted her liege lord. "I really don't understand the reason that nothing is ever done right in this house."

He gave the front door rather an emphatic slam as he went out, and little Mrs. Grumble, instead of rebelling against her husband's iron rule, just sat down to cry.

Mr. Grumble wasn't by any means a bad husband. He really loved his wife, and believed himself to be a pattern of conjugal amiability; only he had, somehow or other, fallen into the unconscious habit of fault-finding, and like many another individual, whenever he couldn't think of anything else to do, he grumbled.

"Crying again, Bessie!" exclaimed her brother, coming in an hour or two later. "Now, that's too bad! I suppose Henry has been treating you to another domestic growl? I've a great mind to tell him how uncomfortable you are made by his little eccentricities. Shall I Bess?"

"No, no,—I wouldn't have you breathe a syllable to him for the world!" eagerly exclaimed Mrs. Grumble, hurrieldy drying her tears. "Henry doesn't mean to annoy me. He has the kindest heart in the world, and I know he loves me!"

"I daresay he does," said young Mr. Carleton; "but why is he fretting and fault-finding hour after hour, and day after day? Upon my word, Bessie I think its an oversight in our laws, that there is not one to punish married men who scold!"

"Don't talk so, Tom," said Mrs. Grumble, earnestly. "Henry isn't at all to blame, only baby is very troublesome and I had an indifferent night's rest, and——"

"Oh, ah!—I understand," said Tom, significantly, smiling. "My dear little, forgiving Bess, you ought to be made a martyr of." He sat a moment or two in deep thought, then suddenly starting up, exclaimed, "I must be gone, or I shall be too late at the station to meet Uncle Tompkins. Did I mention to you by the way, that Uncle Tompkins was coming to visit you?"

"Uncle Tompkins? I didn't know we had an Uncle Tompkins, Tom."

"Didn't you, dear? Well, prepare your best bed room for company—the old gentleman is rather particular—grumbles a good deal, in fact: but, then, you are used to that sort of thing."

"But, Tom, I don't quite understand——"

"Don't detain me now, Bessie, I will come myself with the old gentleman, and introduce him. Good-Bye!"

The moment the door had closed behind Tom, Bessie put her baby into the cradle, and clasped her hands to her aching head. What was Tom thinking of? How should she exist with another growler domiciled for nobody knew how long at her hearthstone? But perhaps they might neutralize one another, like two powerful poisons. There was a spice of comfort in that reflection, at least, and Bessie Grumble wiped her eyes, and almost smiled.

What was Mr. Grumble's surprise on coming home that evening, fully primed for a domestic tirade on the subject of a button which had drifted down from his shirt-front during the day, to find his especial easy-chair and corner of the fire occupied by an asthmatic old man, whose head and face were enveloped in a silk handkerchief! He stopped short, in amazement and horror.

"This is Uncle Tompkins," said Mrs. Grumble, who was busy warming a basin of gruel over the fire; and the old gentleman extended one finger without turning his head, saying in a cracked voice:—

"I wish, nephew, you would shut that door. Nobody ever thinks of shutting a door in this house! I'm suffering from a terrible cold. What's that noise upstairs? I beg niece, that your baby won't cry the whole time that I am here. Is tea ready? If so, I will take a cup here by the fire!"

"What does this mean, my dear?" ejaculated Mr. Grumble, in a hurried whisper, and his wife, whose arm he had caught on the way to the kitchen after hot water for Uncle Tompkins, replied in the same tone:——

"Oh! you mustn't mind my uncle, dear; he doesn't mean anything, only he is old and whimsical."

"But a man has no business to make everybody else uncomfortable in this sort of way," muttered Mr. Grumble.

He silently devoured his meal, secretly wondering how long Uncle Tompkins meant to stay. No sooner was the table cleared, than the irascible old gentleman began.

"Grumble," said he, "I wish you'd stop that creaking of your chair; my nerves are so weak; and if you could keep your children upstairs their racket wouldn't disturb me quite so much. I really don't know how I'm going to stand that baby's noise."

"I do not think it is a very noisy baby," said Mr. Grumble, meekly. "Its teeth are very painful just at present."

Mrs. Grumble, who was poking the fire in accordance with her uncle's petulant request, said nothing, but smiled quietly to hear her husband trying to extenuate the baby's sins.

"Well," remarked Uncle Tompkins, "all babies are noisy. And, by the way, Grumble, I wish you would oil the hinges of that squeaking door; and I don't like the smell of that geranium in the window. Halloa! you haven't any top button on your shirt-front! I hope my neice isn't a careless wife!"

"Not at all, sir," said Mr. Grumble, nervously; "but the care of her child and housekeeping duties absorbs a great deal of her time. The instant she finds leisure she will look to my clothes."

"I don't see how a woman can spend her whole time keeping house and looking after pack of children," observed Uncle Tompkins, incredulously.

About ten o'clock the old gentleman was ushered to the spare room, accompanied by a procession of medicine phials, a tub of hot water, woolen dressing robes, and heated blankets for his feet, and his absence occasioned very general relief.

"What an insufferable old duffer that is!" exclaimed Mr. Grumble, throwing himself with a sigh of satisfaction, into his favorite seat once more. "My dear Bessie, how could you endure his eternal fault-finding?"

"I am accustomed to that, Henry; it is the lesson most married women are obliged to learn," replied Mrs. Grumble with a sigh.

Her husband pricked up his ears a little uneasily. "Accustomed to it?" What did she mean? It was not possible—it could not be possible—that he was like that odious old Uncle Tompkins. And yet he wished Bessie had not spoken in that way; somehow, it made him feel excessively uncomfortable. Three days passed away, Uncle Tompkins growing more intolerable the whole time, while Mr. Grumble improved the occasion by making a sort of mental looking-glass of that worthy old gentleman.

"Upon—my—word," said he to himself, "I must have been a perfect nuisance all these years. Why didn't somebody tell me of it?"

At length Uncle Tompkins went away, flannel robes, medicine bottles, and all, and on the same day Tom Carlton arrived, from a temporary absence, nobody knew where.

"So Uncle has been visiting you?" he said gaily, to Mr. Grumble.

"Yes," said the latter, with a slight grimace.

"What sort of a looking man is he?"

Mr. Grumble was silent for a moment.

"Do you know," he exclaimed, bursting into a perplexed laugh, "I couldn't describe a single feature of his face. He was always enveloped like an Egyptian mummy, in a silk handkerchief, something like that one you have in your hand. However, I'm heartily glad he's gone; with my permission he shall never set foot in this house again!"

"No?" said Tom, archly.

"The most intolerable fault-finder I ever met with," said Mr. Grumble; "absolutely the most disagreeable man who ever cumbered the earth! I don't see now it is possible to growl at everything as he did,"

"That's not an uncommon failing, I believe," observed Tom, demurely smiling.

"Very likely," said his brother-in-law, emphatically; "but his visit has been productive of at least one good effect—it has completely cured me of any tendency I might have had that way. I for one mean to leave off grumbling."

"I'm happy to hear it, Nephew Grumble," exclaimed a cracked voice.

The victimized man started up in dismay, scarcely believing the testimony of his senses, as Tom twisted the silk handkerchief skillfully round his head, and bent himself nearly double with an asthmatic sound between a groan and a grunt.

"Why, you don't mean to say that you are Uncle Tompkins?" exclaimed Mr. Grumble.

"Pardon me, Henry," said Tom, smiling, "but I saw that you had unconsciously become an habitual grumbler, and I judged that the best antidote was a faithful representation of your own failings. Was I right?"

His brother-in-law was half-inclined to be angry, but thought better of it.

"Shake hands, Tom," said he. "You're an irreverent young scamp, bur I forgive you. At all events, the cure is complete."

And so Bessie found it.

Misplaced Bragging.

He was a very tired-looking man. Dejection was written on every line in his face, and as I was a stranger in the village with nothing to do and no one to talk to, I relieved my pent-up spirits by expressing my sympathy with him in his troubles, whatever they were.

"Thanks," he said; "my chief trouble seems to be that I am an idiot from Idiotville, and that is incurable. I just got into a bragging match with a stranger in the post-office. He bet he was richer than I was, and I took him on—just for fun. I told him all I had and more, too, and after a while he gave in, saying he wouldn't have thought it. Then I said I'd swear to it, and he said all right, and I did; and by thunder, who do you suppose he was?"

"I don't know. Who?"

"The assessor!" he groaned.

It certainly was a case of hard luck.

ABOUT NIGHTMARES.

A Man Who Found That a Rather Too Solid One Was After Him.

"Have you ever had a nightmare in which some fearful danger threatened you and you can't move or get out of the way?" asked Hermann Solomon of a crowd of peripatetic story-tellers at the Richelieu Hotel, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. "Of course you have, and so have I. Several years ago I had several of these nocturnal visitors every night for a week, and grew weary of them, for, in spite of my determination not to let them bully me out of my equanimity, I would nearly expire each night, and awake with the cold prespiration breaking out all over me.

"Toward the last of that interesting week I stopped with a country landlord in Northern Arkansas, and resolved as I went to sleep that, come what would, I would positively refuse to give in in the least to my imagination.

"Some time past midnight the usual scare came. This time it was a tall and angular woman in white, with a long butcher knife. Mentally I was congratulating myself that at last I was learning to overcome the foolish fears of nightmares, and wondering how it would pass off. I saw the demoniac grin, as she flourished the knife in front of my face, almost without a tremor, and when she laughed a wild, unearthly laugh, I gave a start and found it all real and that I was actually awake.

"Scared! That word can't express it. I dropped down on the other side of the bed as she made a slash at me, and as she ran around the bed, crawled under, reached the door and went down the steps about three at a time ahead of her. By the time we gained 'the big road' I think I had gained several feet, as she had more clothing to interfere with progress than I had just then. I had imagined that a man really scared can't move. Well, I will give any odds desired on the proposition that I moved down that road, and I don't think I would need any corroborative testimony to convince any one who saw me that I was scared.

"About a mile down the road I ran into the arms of her husband and sons, who were out looking for her. She was a little 'outen her head' at times, they said, and she had evidently entered the open door at my landlord's and reached my room without any one knowing it. As her relatives took her home I sadly retraced my steps and found the whole family aroused. The explanation was satisfactory, and the adventure cured me of nightmare."

Straw Shelter.

It is not every farmer that can have a covered barn-yard, but nearly every one can have a good, cheap substitute. If the farmer has his grain in or stacked near the barn all that is necessary for him to do is at threshing time to set in a few forks or posts and place long poles on top of these, with other poles or rails crosswise on them, then let the straw stack extend over and cover all. This makes an excellent place to shelter cattle when turned out in the winter to exercise or to wheel the manure from the stables when the ground is not fit to haul directly to the field. When there is plenty of room excellent pig pens can be made by partitioning part of it off. The body of the straw stack should always be built to protect the north and west sides.—National Stockman and Farmer.

Crows That Divide The Spoils.

As a rule, female birds do most of the work which the little feathered creatures find necessary to their welfare; but Sir John Lubbock, the naturalist, tells of a New Zealand crow with which the case is different. The male bird has a strong bill adapted to cutting and digging into decayed trees, but he is deficient in that horny-pointed tongue which would permit him to pierce the grub and draw it out. The hen bird has, however, an elongated and straight bill, "and when the cock has dug down to the burrow, the hen inserts her long bill and draws out the grub, which they divide between them."

What Delayed the Party.

"Wasn't it awful that Sue and her husband missed the train after their wedding?"

"Just perfectly dreadful! They didn't get away from town till the next morning, did they?"

"No, they didn't. Do you know how it happened?"

"No; how was it?"

"Well, there were only five hours after the conclusion of the ceremony until the train started, and Sue did her best but she declared that she'd die sooner than leave before she got her gloves on."

One Pope's Sermon in Three Centuries.

It is said that the Pope of Rome is the only priest in Christendom who never preaches a sermon. Only once during 300 years has this rule—if rule it be—been departed from. This was in 1847, when Pius IX. was Pope. Father Ventura, a famous orator, was to have preached at a church in Rome. A great crowd assembled to hear him, but at the appointed hour there was no priest. Presently the Pope arrived; probably he, too, had come to listen to Ventura. Taking in the situation at a glance, Pio Nono was equal to the occasion, for he preached the sermon.

It has been estimated that to collect a single pound of honey, the bees must deprive 62,000 clover blossoms of their nectar. To do this the 62,000 flowers must be visited by an aggregate of 3,750,000 bees.

Official figures give the area planted to wheat in France, for the 1892 crop, at 17,450,000 acres; and the crop at 800,477,000 bushels. To rye there were 3,901,000 acres planted, and the crop was 72,076,000 bushels.

The average length of human sickness is ten days.

Can't be beaten! Mr. J. G. Willig, Blue Mound, Ills., writes: "I have used Salvation Oil with wonderful success for inflammatory rheumatism in my foot. It cannot be beat."

The Atlantic ocean is five miles deep in places.

Every one gives it the highest praise. H. Gradel, Druggist, Walnut and Allison Sts., Cincinnati, O., says this of his trade: "I sell my share of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup and my customers that have used this preparation speak of it in the highest terms."

Clay county, Florida, has but one licensed saloon.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of the Quaker Catarrh Cure. Different from all other remedies. It is applied directly to parts affected and gives immediate and permanent relief for all forms of catarrh, colds in the head, influenza, &c. A guarantee can be had with each bottle to refund money if not satisfactory. If you will send us your name and address on a postal card we will send you a sample bottle free of all expense. Address QUAKER MED. ASS'N, St. Paul, Minn

We eat too much and take too little outdoor exercise. This is the fault of our modern civilization. It is claimed that Garfield Tea, a simple herb remedy, helps Nature to overcome these abuses.

A Mr. Toothache is a student at the Kansas State Normal School at Emporia.

Coughs and Hoarseness.

The irritation which induces coughing immediately relieved by use of "Brown's Bronchial Troches." Sold only in boxes.

EXPELLED — every poison and impurity of your blood, by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Then there's a clear skin and a clean system. Tetter, Salt-rheum, Eczema, Erysipelas, Boils, Carbuncles, Enlarged Glands, Tumors and Swellings, and all Blood, Skin, and Scalp Diseases, from a common blotch or eruption to the worst scrofula—these are perfectly and permanently cured by it.

In building up needed flesh and strength of pale, puny, scrofulous children, nothing can equal it.

Unlike the ordinary spring medicines or sarsaparillas, the "Discovery" works equally well at all seasons. All the year round, and in all cases, it is guaranteed, as no other blood medicine is. If it ever fails to benefit or cure, you have your money back. It's not only the best blood-purifier, but it's the cheapest. You pay only for the good you get.

Buy of reliable dealers. With any others, something else that pays them better will probably be urged as "just as good." Perhaps it is, for them; but it can't be, for you.

The Marked Success

of Scott's Emulsion in consumption, scrofula and other forms of hereditary disease is due to its powerful food properties.

Scott's Emulsion

rapidly creates healthy flesh—proper weight. Hereditary taints develop only when the system becomes weakened.

Nothing in the world of medicine has been so successful in diseases that are most menacing to life. Physicians everywhere prescribe it.

Prepared by Scott & Bowne, N.Y. All druggists.

Young Mothers!

We Offer You a Remedy which Insures Safety to Life of Mother and Child.

"MOTHER'S FRIEND"

Robs Confinement of its Pain, Horror and Risk.

After using one bottle of "Mother's Friend" I suffered but little pain, and did not experience that weakness afterward usual in such cases.—Mrs. ANNIE GAGE, Lamar, Mo., Jan. 15th, 1891.

Sent by express, charges prepaid, on receipt of price, $1.50 per bottle. Book to Mothers mailed free.

BRADFIELD REGULATOR CO.,
ATLANTA, GA.
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

25 DOSES 25¢ THE GREAT TAKE THE BEST COUGH CURE 25¢ 50¢ & $1.00

SHILOH'S CURE.

Cures Coughs, Hoarseness, Sore Throat, Croup, Whooping Cough and Asthma. For Consumption it has no rival; has cured thousands where all others failed; will cure you if taken in time. Sold by Druggists on a guarantee. For Lame Back or Chest, use SHILOH'S PLASTER. 25 cts.

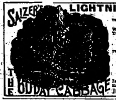
SHILOH'S CATARRH REMEDY.

Have you Catarrh? This remedy is guaranteed to cure you. Price 50 cts. Injector free.

Garfield Tea Overcomes results of bad eating.

Cures Constipation, Restores Complexion, Saves Doctors' Bills. Sample free. GARFIELD TEA CO., 319 W. 45th St., N.Y.

Cures Sick Headache



LIGHTNING—The 60 Day Cabbage.

This is absolutely the earliest cabbage in the world. Seed very scarce. Pkg., 15c.; ½ oz., 35c.; ¼ lb., $2; postpaid.

THE EARLIEST VEGETABLES

Will be in great demand this spring and will fetch big prices. To have the earliest, plant Salzer's seeds. 35 pkgs. Earliest Vegetable Novelties, $1, postpaid.

FOR 14c. (WITH CATALOGUE, 19c.)

To introduce our seeds everywhere, we send, postpaid, upon receipt of 14c.:

1 package Six Weeks' Radish, 10c.
1 " Silver State Lettuce, 15c.
1 " Giant Prolific Tomato, 20c.
1 " Long Giant Cucumber, 10c.
5 " Brilliant Flower Seeds, 35c.

In all 9 Packages, listed nowhere under 90c. ALL FOR 14c.

SALZER'S SEED CATALOGUE

Is the finest published. Costs us over $50,000! It is gladly mailed upon receipt of 5c. postage.

JOHN A. SALZER SEED CO., La Crosse, Wis.

BEWARE OF FRAUD.

Ask for, and insist upon having W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES. None genuine without W. L. Douglas name and price stamped on bottom. Look for it when you buy. Sold everywhere.

TAKE NO SUBSTITUTE
THIS IS THE BEST $3. SHOE IN THE WORLD
WILL NOT RIP.

W. L. DOUGLAS $3 SHOE FOR GENTLEMEN.

A sewed shoe that will not rip; Calf, seamless, smooth inside, more comfortable, stylish and durable than any other shoe ever sold at the price. Every style. Equals custom-made shoes costing from $4 to $5.

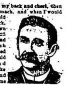
The following are of the same high standard of merit:

$4.00 and $5.00 Fine Calf, Hand-Sewed.
$3.50 Police, Farmers and Letter-Carriers.
$2.50, $2.25 and $2.00 for Working Men.
$2.00 and $1.75 for Youths and Boys.
$3.00 Hand-Sewed, } FOR
$2.50 and 2.00 Dongola, } LADIES.
$1.75 for Misses.

IT IS A DUTY you owe yourself to get the best value for your money. Economize in your footwear by purchasing W. L. Douglas Shoes, which represent the best value at the prices advertised as thousands can testify. Do you wear them?

Will give exclusive sale to shoe dealers and general merchants where I have no agents. Write for catalogue. If not for sale in your place send direct to Factory, stating kind, size and width wanted. Postage Free. W. L. Douglas, Brockton, Mass.

Food Made Me Sick



C. C. Aber.

"First I had pains in my back and chest, then faint feeling at the stomach, and when I would eat, the first taste would make me deathly sick. Of course I ran down rapidly, and lost 25 pounds. My wife and family were much alarmed and I expected my stay on earth would be short. But a friend advised me to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and soon my appetite came back, I ate heartily without distress, gained two pounds a week. I took 8 bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla and never felt better in my life. Today I am cured and I give to Hood's Sarsaparilla the whole praise of it." C. C. ABER, grocer, Canisteo, N.Y.

Hood's Cures

HOOD'S PILLS cure Nausea, Sick Headache, Indigestion, Biliousness. Sold by all Druggists.

Q&C and LOUISVILLE SOUTHERN R'Y.

The Cincinnati & Florida Limited. Finest Trains in the SOUTH.

ONLY VESTIBULED TRAINS FROM CINCINNATI AND LOUISVILLE TO FLORIDA

Half Rates to De Leon Springs, Florida. JANUARY 25.

Lv. Cincinnati 8:30 a. m., Lv. Louisville 7:55 a. m.

Arrive CHATTANOOGA, 7:05 p. m.
ATLANTA, 12:25 a. m.
JACKSONVILLE, 12:15 p. m.
ST. AUGUSTINE, 1:40 p. m.
DE LEON SPRINGS.

Solid Trains Cincinnati to St. Augustine. Takes on Sleeper from Louisville at Burgin. Louisville Sleeper Goes Through to Titusville.

H. A. CHERRIER, 193 Clark Street, CHICAGO, ILL.
D. G. EDWARDS, Gen. Pass. Agent CINCINNATI, O.

A CERTAIN CURE.

Man could live easily to be one hundred years old, if it were not for the failure of his stomach and his liablity to take cold. You can be saved from both of these evils. If you will send your address to the SYLVAN REMEDY CO. Peoria, Ills. and mention the name of this paper, we will send you by return mail free, a box of our Laxative Gum Drops for your stomach or a bottle of Reid's German Cough & Kidney Cure. The best thing in the world for all pulmonary trouble.

HOUSES

Painted with the

Clare-Speaker Paint

Will look well for years. This paint covers more, looks better and wears longer than any other. The colors are the most modern shades. If you intend painting it will pay to use these goods. Color cards and valuable information free. Ask your dealer for color cards or address THE CLARE-SPEAKER CO., Minneapolis, Minn.

ALLEN'S IRON TONIC BITTERS

The most Elegant Blood Purifier, Liver Invigorator, Tonic and Appetizer known. The first Bitters containing Iron ever advertised in America. J. P. ALLEN, Druggist & Chemist, St. Paul, Minn.

PRETTIEST BOOK EVER PRINTED. FREE

SEED Cheap as dirt by oz. and lb. One Cent a pkg. UP, if rare. Cheap, pure, best, 1,000,000 extras. Beautiful Illustrated Catalogue free. R. H. SHUMWAY, Rockford, Ill.

HOME TREATMENT For All Chronic Diseases Pamphlet sent free. ST. PAUL MEDICAL & SURGICAL INSTITUTE, Merrill Bldg., St. Paul, Minn.

PISO'S CURE FOR

Consumptives and people who have weak lungs or Asthma, should use Piso's Cure for Consumption. It has cured thousands. It has not injured one. It is not bad to take. It is the best cough syrup. Sold everywhere. 25c.

CONSUMPTION.

N. W. N. U. No. 6.—1893

Minn. Hist. Society

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

THE

St. Hilaire Spectator.

VOLUME XI. ST. HILAIRE, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 15, 1893. NUMBER 30.

THE WEEKLY NEWS DIGEST

EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK IN A CONDENSED FORM.

The Latest and Most Important News of the World, Culled From the Telegraph Reports of the Press Associations.

The Capital.

Congress canvassed the electoral vote and declared Grover Cleveland the next president.

The committee having charge of the inauguration arrangements has awarded the contract for music for the inaugural ball and promenade concert to the United States marine band of this city.

Secretary Tracy has officially accepted the coast defense ship Monterey. Her builders, the Union Iron Works of San Francisco, lose $32,000 from the contract price, $1,028,050, because she failed to develop the maximum horse-power of 5,400. Her horse-power in the trial was shown to be only 5,077.

Mgr. Satolli has received from Cardinal Rampolla the papal document establishing the permanent apostolic delegation in the United States. As soon as spring opens the papal delegate will start on an extended tour over the United States. He will visit the bishops and their dioceses in order to become more familiar with the church in this country.

Controller Hepburn, in order to secure more accurate and complete returns as to the condition of national banks, has issued a circular letter to the cashiers of national banks directing them in the next return they make to report a classification of certain items, which will show the liabilities of the bank officers and directors in connection therewith.

Casualty.

William Roost of Galveston fell from a train into the bay and was drowned.

The steamer Wilmington was destroyed by fire near Oakland, Or. Loss, $50,000; fully insured.

Patrick Warde, a Canadian Pacific brakeman, was frozen to death near Winnipeg, Man.

Peter Reilly, a laborer employed at the licorice works at Newark, N. J., was boiled to death by falling into a vat of hot licorice.

Frank Kelly, the elevator boy in Coultrie's dry goods store at Zanesville, Ohio, caught hold of an uninsulated electric wire and was instantly killed.

Renson Davis' flour mill at New Castle, Ind., together with his saw mill and bentwood factory, was burned early this morning, entailing a loss of $30,000.

Bocock & Woody's wholesale fruit and confectionery store at Champaign, Ill., was destroyed by fire. Their stock was valued at from $10,000 to $12,000.

William Weldt, an employe of the Aurora, Ill., cotton mills, fell forty feet through a shaftway and was instantly killed.

Fire caused by a gas explosion destroyed a double five-story tenement house in New York city. One man was killed and many injured.

Twenty-four horses, including the valuable stallion, Russell Chief, were cremated by the burning of T. M. Roberts' stables near St. Joseph, Mo. Loss, $25,000.

Fire in Philadelphia at the Twenty-fifth ward gas works totally destroyed the purifying house and two sheds, one of which was owned by the city. Total estimated loss, $150,000, of which the city loses $25,000.

The house of Oliver Pattie, three miles north of Bellaire, Mich., burned to the ground last night. Three children were roasted to death. Their ages were respectively twelve, ten and sixteen. A neighbor's boy, Taylor by name, had been playing with the children, and it is feared that he was burned, too.

While George Toby and William Step were loading a car with stock iron at the Westman rolling mills at Marion, Ind., the beam which supported the bars of iron gave way, burying Toby under eight tons of iron, killing him instantly. Step's head was badly cut, and he received serious internal injuries. Toby leaves a wife and six children.

People in Print.

Mrs. Edward Lloyd, who died in London the other day at the age of ninety, when a girl helped to entertain Blucher on his arrival in England after Waterloo and was present in Westminster abbey at the coronation of George IV., William IV. and Queen Victoria.

State Senator Frank McGowan, of the California legislature, will not accept his salary for the time spent elsewhere than at the state capital, and said, when urged to have his brother appointed to a position on the legislative pay roll: "Not while I am a senator."

Mrs. Peary, who shares the fame of her husband, Lieut. Peary, the famous explorer of Greenland, said in conversation a few days ago that she thought she felt the cold more in Philadelphia during a recent siege of severe weather than she did last year up where a zero temperature is considered moderate.

Ex-Postmaster General Campbell—he was in Pierce's cabinet—who died recently in Philadelphia, inaugurated the registry system, one of the great arms of the postal service. His term of office was signalized by a further reduction of rates of postage and by improvement in the interchange of mails with foreign countries.

Miss Ella Hale of Sandusky, Ohio, lost her voice and became entirely mute during a paroxysm of coughing some five years ago. Her silent affliction clung to her until a few days ago, when in another fit of coughing she regained her voice as suddenly as she had formerly lost it.

Sinful Doings.

Powers and his son at Topeka, Kan. They had accused the man of stealing hay, and he stabbed both to death. The murderer is a Cherokee Strip boomer.

Jack Clifford, the Homestead strike leader charged with killing P. J. Connors during the famous barge battle on July 6, was acquitted.

Three deputy marshals named Rusk, Bruner and Knight, were killed near Tahlequah, I. T., by Bill Pigeon, an Indian desperado.

Miss Sallie Koop, aged twenty-eight years, committed suicide at Brooklyn by taking chloroform and firing four shots into her body with a revolver.

John Marley, aged thirty-four years, an employe of the Homestead Steel works, was found dead in front of one of the furnaces. It is believed he was murdered.

The Guajira Indians have roasted alive three traders who were caught stealing young Indian girls for the purpose of selling them into servitude.

An unknown man killed Liveryman

A reward of $1,000, offered for the arrest of Caesar Huntington, the Copiah county, Miss., robber, will go to Officer J. E. Stanley of Vicksburg, who has arrested the outlaw.

The first case ever recorded in New York city of a suicide of a Chinaman is reported. The man was Glue Poy, nineteen years old. He took Paris green because his sweetheart would not marry him.

Postmaster Inspector Baird placed under arrest at Griffin, Ga., Assistant Postmaster T. B. Thurman, who is charged with extracting money from registered packages. For some time money has been missing from packages passing through his office, and Thurman was subsequently arrested.

Frank Harriet and Willie Ferndon, two negroes arrested at Magnolia, Miss., for robbing and burning Lee Robinson's store at Dickery, were lynched by a mob near the scene of their crime. Five other negroes were arrested, and would have met the same fate but for the timely interference of the sheriff's posse.

The Foreign Budget.

Several lightly built houses in Campolieto, province of Camposso, Italy, collapsed during a high wind. Thirteen persons were killed and fourteen were injured.

The court of arbitration selected to settle the controversy between the United States and Great Britain relative to Bering sea will be constituted on Feb. 22, and will adjourn for a month.

Michael Davitt was elected without opposition to represent Northeast Cork, one of the two seats for which William O'Brien was chosen in the general election, the other seat being for Cork city, which Mr. O'Brien preferred to represent.

Signor Grimaldi, Italian minister of finance, has offered to resign in view of the reports circulated concerning his connection with the bank scandals. While denying any complicity in the frauds, Signor Grimaldi fears that the stability of the cabinet is endangered by his remaining in office.

The caravel Santa Maria, escorted by the cruiser Ista de Luzon, sailed from Cadiz for America. The cruiser will proceed half-way across the Atlantic with the caravel. The Santa Maria will stop for a few days at the Canary islands and several weeks in Cuba.

The Marseilles correspondent of the Paris Liberte says that within the last four days fifty persons have died in Marseilles of a choleric disease. The sanitary commission of this city has sent Dr. Thoinot, an authority on cholera, to Marseilles to ascertain exactly the nature of the disease.

The pope is pleased with what is said in the queen's speech in reference to home rule. His holiness has had many long talks with Cardinal Vaughan of England and with Cardinal Logue of Ireland. The pope said the other day: "Gladstone and I, although the two oldest leaders, have the youngest ideas."

Sporting Scraps.

Jim Barron, an Australian welterweight, knocked out Jimmy Purtell of Michigan, the Saginaw kid, in seven rounds at the California Athletic club.

The Olympic club has matched Andy Bowen of New York and Jack Burke, light-weight of Houston, to fight for a purse of $2,500. The fight is to take place in April.

The backers of Eddie Myer of Chicago and Billy Lavigne of Saginaw have posted second forfeits of $250 each for the $1,000 a side match which is to be decided next month.

The Buffalo Athletic club has matched Al O'Brien of Philadelphia and Billy Welch of Buffalo to fight to a finish at 135 pounds for a purse of $1,000. The event is scheduled to take place on Feb. 22.

The bill to prohibit prize fighting in Indiana, providing that principals should be fined $5,000 and newspapers $3,000 for printing advance notices, was killed Jan. 26 in the Indiana house of representatives.

The Buffalo Athletic club has matched Jimmy Kennard, the "St. Paul kid," and "Maxy" Haugh of Brooklyn, the featherweight, to fight to a finish. The boys will meet on Feb. 8 at 115 pounds for a purse of $1,000, of which $200 will go to the loser.

General News.

The Pennsylvania assembly passed an anti-cigarette bill.

G. L. Jewett & Co., farm implements, failed at St. Joseph, Mo., owing $45,000.

Two young ladies living near Deaten, Neb., are afflicted with glanders.

The missing steamer City of Peking arrives safely at San Francisco.

The Canadian Pacific secures possession of the Duluth & Winnipeg.

Switchmen all over the country will soon demand more pay.

The efforts of the Northwestern to secure a right of way into Denver have been balked by an injunction.

The Chilean government will guarantee the construction of the trans-Andes road, and work upon it will soon begin.

It is stated that 25 per cent of the cattle on the Montana ranges have perished from cold.

Pneumonia was the cause of the death of Algernon Sartoris, the husband of Nellie Grant.

Astonishing revelations involving government officers are promised in connection with the pending congressional investigation of the whisky trust.

Hunters in Michigan are having exciting times just now catching deer alive. The animals find it almost impossible to get through the snow, which is over five feet deep, and the hunters pursue them on snowshoes.

A human head was found on a fence at St. Joseph, Mo. It was identified as that of John Hahn, a German, who had died a few days previous. The head was cut off and placed where it was found by medical students.

Gen. E. K. Stimson, charged with forgery and malfeasance in office as deputy U. S. marshal at Denver, a man of national reputation as a Republican orator, was found not guilty of the crime charged by a jury in the United States court. Immediately after the verdict an ovation was tendered the general, and he was literally carried about the city to the places of business and residences of his friends.

NORTHWEST NEWS BUDGET

THE WEEKLY ROUND-UP OF IMPORTANT NEWS.

A Concise Account of the Happenings of the Past Week in Minnesota, North Dakota, Iowa and Wisconsin.

Minnesota.

Sauk Center is to be lighted by electricity.

The Minnesota hotel, at Crookston, was partially destroyed by fire.

Lawrence Jrosskolp of Columbus committed suicide by taking poison.

Lewis Pederson of Pope county committed suicide by drinking carbolic acid.

An investigation showed that Andrew H. Hollen, who was found dead in the street at Warsaw, died of heart disease.

The livery barn of Albrecht Bros. at Fairfax was destroyed by fire recently. The entire loss is estimated at $3,500.

Joseph Lamay had a hearing at St. Cloud and was held to the grand jury for attempted rape on a four-year-old girl.

Judge Severance at Mankato declares the practice of suspending sentence on good behavior illegal.

The McLeod County Bank block at Glencoe, was badly damaged by fire. Loss, $29,000; insurance, $16,200.

Frank Giefer was sentenced to imprisonment for life for the murder of Leonard Roway last August at Mankato.

The Holy Trinity Episcopal church at Minneapolis was completely destroyed by fire. Loss, $15,000; insurance, $7,000.

At the Lanesboro special election it was voted to issue $1,000 in bonds for additional water works and electric lights.

The Chicago & Northwestern depot at Eagle Lake burned to the ground. It caught fire from a chimney. The loss is unknown.

The Red Wing city council has appointed a committee to secure the necessary legislation to build a bridge across the Mississippi there.

The Chicago & Northwestern depot at Eagle Lake burned to the ground recently. It caught fire from the chimney. Loss unknown.

Isaac N. Fairchild of Minneapolis, who is charged with embezzling $4,000 from the Northern Pacific road, was arrested in Chicago.

The North Star flour mill at Granite Falls, owned by O'Connor & Mickelson, burned to the ground recently. Loss about $15,000; partly insured.

John Gerrish was fatally injured by falling off a sled and being trampled under foot by horses at the Nickerson lumber camp at Kerrick.

The St. Cloud council passed a bill to pay the Great Northern right of way to Anderson's mill, $4,400, over the mayor's veto, with one vote in the negative. badly burned before his wife managed to extricate him. Both suffered terribly from the combined effects of fire and frost, and the husband died on the following day.

Henry J. Bennewitz, formerly sheriff of Marshall county, and a prominent business man of Warren, died recently. He was a son of J. C. Bennewitz, a former resident of Goodhue county.

The extensive mills of the Harris Forge and Rolling Mill company, located at Irondale, a suburb of Minneapolis, were destroyed by fire. Loss, $125,000; insurance, $88,500.

At Hastings Bert Steffen was badly scalded about the ankles by accidentally slipping from a board into a vat of boiling beer while attempting to adjust a belt.

On one of the recent cold days a Mrs. Steiner, living about sixteen miles east of Montevideo, left her home with the intention of going in search of her husband, whom she supposed had been lost on the prairie on his way home from town. She was overcome by the cold, and found dead by the side of a haystack. Her husband reached home in safety.

John Hughes, a brakeman on the Brainerd & Northern railway, fell from a logging train near Brainerd and was run over, both legs being cut from the body. He died in a few minutes.

At Anoka Sullivan's saloon was burned, the entire building being gutted.

Three men while walking on the track near Fergus Falls were struck by a snow plow and killed.

Gustav Fenske, a trusted employe at R. D. Hubbard's mill at Mankato, has been appropriating flour to his own use for a year and a half. He confessed the crime and gave Mr. Hubbard a check for $500 to reimburse him.

Rev. J. B. Perry of Washington, D. C., has been extended a call by the vestry of St. Paul's Episcopal church of Duluth to the rectorship left vacant by the retirement of Bishop Barker. It is not known as yet whether Perry will accept.

Charles Leutzan and wife, residing about six miles from Hokah, awoke during the night to find their house in flames. After escaping from the burning building with barely any clothes, Mr. Leutzan ventured back to secure some valuable papers. He was caught in the fire and Minneapolis insurance men inaugurate a movement to take the control of the fire department out of the hands of the council and invest it in a fire commission. The plan will include all the large cities of the state.

The Winona board of education has engaged Prof. F. L. Rainey of Logansport, Ind., to fill the position of teacher of sciences in the high school, made vacant by the resignation of Prof. Charles W. McCurdy, who goes to the Idaho university.

William Andreos, a rich young farmer living in Martin county, was arrested and brought to Winnebago City on a charge of bastardy, brought by Miss Hurd, a young lady of that place. The affair has been settled by Mr. Andreos marrying the girl.

Fire destroyed the St. Felix Catholic church at Wabasha recently. All the church furniture and adornments were burned, not an article of any description being saved. The fire originated in the sacristy from an unknown cause. This was one of the finest churches in the state and its destruction is a heavy loss to the congregation.

A South Shore train was wrecked near Lake Nebagamore and reached Duluth with only one coach. The rear coach jumped the track from some unknown cause. It was dragged a considerable distance. The conductor was quite seriously injured. The newsboy was cut badly on the knee and one passenger injured.

Aug. H. Seelbeck of Redwood Falls has just secured a patent on a straw blower, to be attached to threshing machines. A blower will dispose of 160 acres of straw. Several large manufacturers of threshing machines desire to secure the patent. An order for 1,000 blowers has been placed with a Minneapolis firm.

Henry Paul, unmarried, aged twenty, and only son of Dan Paul, committed suicide in his room at Spring Valley by shooting with a revolver in the head, the ball entering from the right and top and passing downward toward the base of the brain. Despondency is the only assignable cause. He had said to his parents: "What is the use of living, anyway," but they never supposed he would suicide.

The sheriff of Blue Earth county took John Dohn to the St. Peter asylum recently. Upon searching his person $2,175 in currency, $550 in gold and a certificate of deposit on the National bank of Mankato amounting to $700 were found in his clothing. The money had been saved by hard labor. He had been an inmate of an asylum a number of years.

J. V. Ford, fifty-two years old, died suddenly at Mankato. He was born in Wayne county, Ohio, and came to Iowa in 1840, and to Mankato in 1854, enlisted in Company H, Second Minnesota, served two years and was discharged for disability. After regaining his health he reentered Company E, Second Minnesota heavy artillery, and served until the close of the war.

Wisconsin.

John Bell of Fond du Lac fell off a step-ladder and broke his right arm.

Christian Peterson, an old soldier of Whitehall, became suddenly insane. He was taken to the state hospital.

The death is announced of Horace A. Chase, and old resident of Kenosha. He was a well known Mason of that city.

James McFadden has been arrested at Superior on a charge of assaulting and robbing a Swede named Gus Carlson.

Lewis Flury, who is charged with forcibly entering a postoffice last September, has been arrested at Stockton.

W. F. Costen was fined $100 and costs for running a gambling house at Ashland.

Henry Nerar, aged fifteen, living at Sturgeon Bay, was found frozen to death near that city.

A large wild cat was killed at Docmal's Point, three miles north of Oshkosh. It was nearly dead from cold and hunger.

Al Buechner was instantly killed by falling off a scaffolding, a distance of fourteen feet, at Kaukauna. He was thirty-nine years of age.

The Muench Brewing Company of Appleton have amended their articles of corporation, increasing their capital from $20,000 to $40,000.

Edward K. Tuttle, residing at Baraboo, was seriously and probably fatally injured in a runaway accident at that place.

A workman named Martin Slaastad, employed at Johnson & Field's works, at Racine, had his hand badly mangled in a machine.

William Fenelon was found frozen to death about two miles west of Waupun. He was on his way home from Waupun. An inquest will be held.

Mrs. Julia Birch, a resident of Lancaster, died suddenly at her home in that city. She was fifty years of age and weighed 340 pounds.

Mrs. Frank Meyer died at the Northern hospital for insane. The remains were taken to Sturgeon Bay for burial, where the deceased formerly lived.

R. J. Whipple of Elera, Eau Claire county, has been arrested on a charge of selling liquor in violation of the law. He was bound over for trial in $300 bonds.

Two cases of scarlet fever have broken out in the college at Ripon. A strict quarantine is being enforced, and the college officials hope to prevent the disease from spreading.

The contract for building the new high school at Stevens Point has been let to M. T. Olin of that city for $24,980. Work will be commenced as soon as the weather permits.

The members of Racine Lodge No. 92, F. and A. M., presented Levi H. Yance with an elegant solid gold past-master's jewel. Mr. Yance was master of the lodge for seven years.

Mrs. Stark, an aged woman who was found nearly frozen to death at her home in Appleton a few days ago, died at the county poor farm, where she had been taken for treatment.

The eight-year-old son of H. T. Niemi of Superior has been missing from his home for three days and his parents are fearful that he has met with a serious mishap.

Eleven prominent citizens of Sparta were arrested for driving fast on the streets. Seven of them paid fines of $1.37 each, but the other four intend to fight the case.

The city attorney of Beloit has commenced proceedings against one of the men who recently pleaded guilty to selling liquor without a license, demanding a fine of $50 for each count.

Michael E. Hunt, a resident of Janesville, died at his home in that city, aged thirty-five years. Mr. Hunt suffered a stroke of paralysis last December, and was never able to be about afterwards.

Charles Sutherland, a La Crosse young man, charged with assaulting Mrs. J. F. Bailey at that place, waived examination and was bound over for trial in $3,000 bonds, which the prisoner furnished.

A meeting of Northern Wisconsin millers was held at Oshkosh for the purpose, it is said, of forming a combination or general association in Northern Wisconsin to benefit trade and stiffen the market price.

The annual meeting of the Eastern Alaska Mining and Milling company was held at Eau Claire. The following officers were chosen: President, Matthew Wadleigh; treasurer, E. Huser; secretary, R. H. Downing.

George S. Bliss has been denied a new trial against the city of Racine. Mr. Bliss fell upon a defective sidewalk, injuring one of his legs so that he will be crippled for life. A jury recently awarded him $2,000 damages.

Henry Koehn of Grand Chute, Outagamie county, on rising a few mornings ago, found his stable almost buried beneath a large bank of snow. The only way he could effect an entrance to the building was by tunneling.

The Northwestern road has been experiencing much difficulty in handling its cars at Baraboo. A few days ago there were 700 cars on the track between Baraboo and Winona at one time and trains were badly delayed.

Mrs. Mary F. J. Lowry was granted a divorce from her husband at Janesville. The couple lived in the town of La Prairie, Rock county. She was given the custody of her five children, and the greater portion of the real and personal property.

North Dakota.

A coal famine is reported from Reynolds and Thompson, on the Great Northern branch, which is still blocked.

Sam Green, found guilty at Devils Lake of participating in a prize fight, was fined $30.

J. K. Flynn, arrested at Fargo charged with running a blind pig, was released, the prosecuting witness not being able to identify him.

Democrats of Fargo are making arrangements for a special car to attend Cleveland's inauguration. About fifty will attend from here.

Fire destroyed the residence and part of the household effects of Barney Breens at Devils Lake. Loss about $600; no insurance.

John Young was struck by a Northern Pacific engine in the Fargo yards, and his skull was fractured. He is from Fond du Lac, Wis., and has no friends here.

North Dakota ranchmen are waging war against the importation of Texas and Southern cattle. They allege that the disease known as "Texas fever" is thereby spread among their stock.

Ex-Mayor Ball of Devils Lake has applied for a franchise for a new electric light and power company. The schedule of rates filed is just half the present prices, 200 candle power arc lights to be $10 a month.

Mrs. Daisy Fisher of Hurley committed suicide by taking strychnine.

Farmer's elevator at Ardock was destroyed by fire, together with 22,000 bushels of wheat. Loss covered by insurance.

The valuable right of way across the Sioux lands to the Black Hills, now held by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway, will expire shortly, unless the company makes some move to fulfill its part of the contract.

The safe of the First National bank of Lacota preserved its books and money from damage by the recent fire. The bank reopened and is doing business as if nothing had happened. Loss on building fully covered by insurance.

Warrants were sworn out at Fargo charging eight places with being resorts for selling liquor. A sheriff's posse raided the places, claiming to find liquors in all of them, as follows: Headquarters hotel, John Mason's restaurant, J. K. Flynn's, above the Sherman house, Pete Roach's cigar store, Tom Kennedy's place, Eagle hotel and John Nelson's restaurant. The complaints were all made by two men named Gould and Olson.

Hans B. Hanson of Harwood dropped dead at Fargo while getting on the Great Northern train to go home. It it believed heart disease was the cause. The dead man was about thirty-five years old and had a wife and three children. His wife's father lives in Fargo, and was visited by Hanson yesterday. At that time he seemed in perfectly good health.

Iowa.

S. P. Slipe of Anamosa, Iowa, was killed by the bursting of a buzz saw.

The Chicago & Northwestern baggage depot at Carroll, Iowa, burned, with several adjoining buildings.

One thousand delegates are expected to attend the annual convention of dairymen at Dubuque.

The business portion of Afton was destroyed by fire recently. The loss is $30,000.

A liquor seizure by county officers in Pella, Iowa, resulted in a row in which two students of Central university, at Pella, were injured.

Green B. Caton, aged eighty-five years, was sentenced in Keokuk, Iowa, to six months in the penitentiary for counterfeiting.

Fire in the warehouse of the Lee Broom works at Davenport destroyed forty car loads of broom cord. Loss, $15,000; insurance, $7,000.

Mrs. Charles Craft was severely scalded while preparing dinner at Fort Dodge. She attempted to lift a kettle of boiling water off the stove, when it slipped from her grasp and the contents poured over her face and hands. Medical attendance was given her immediately, but it is feared that serious results will follow.

The Hotel Continental at Centerville burned the other night, the fire originating from the furnace. Will Hale, a traveling man, Julius Fecht, a cigar manufacturer of Ottumwa, and Mrs. McKee, the landlady, jumped out of a third-story window and were fatally injured. M. A. Roberts, an attorney from Ottumwa, had both feet badly burned. Several others were slightly injured.

The Dubuque Malting company, which is a syndicate composed of all the beer brewers of the city, contemplate the erection of a mammoth brewery, containing all the modern improvements. A prominent Chicago architect was in the city this week, submitting plans and sketches of the best breweries in the country. There are four large breweries here now, owned by the syndicate, but none of them are up to modern requirements.

A $10,000 fire visited Scranton recently. It was the work of an incendiary. The flames were discovered in the hardware store of Cox & Steigerwalt. The fire department was unable to do effective work until the hardware store Foster's drug store, the Farmers and Merchants National bank and Gibson's hardware store were totally destroyed by fire. There was an insurance of $7,000.

A distressing casualty occurred in the family of H. W. Kempton, one and one-half miles south of Saylorville. The dress of Gertrude, the five-year-old daughter, caught fire from the stove. She was alone in the room, when her screams attracted her mother, who was in the yard, and the flames were smothering by the woman's clothes. The little girl died this morning.

The residence of Barney McBride, a farmer living near Keokuk, burned to the ground. The night was bitter cold, and in trying to save some of the household effects both Mr. and Mrs. McBride were badly burned. It was over a mile to the nearest neighbor, and the trip through the intense cold added to their suffering. Mrs. McBride's condition is pronounced serious this morning. There was no insurance on the house and the total loss will be nearly $4,000.

ADVANCING PESTILENCE.

CHOLERA SOON TO SWEEP OVER EUROPE.

All Reports and Indications at the Present Time Point to the Spread of the Dreadful Plague the Coming Season.

Fruits of Filth and Fear.

New York, Feb. 13.—The London correspondent of the World cables the following: A tiny shadow foretelling the great plague that is to be has fallen across the land. Just now it is no bigger than a man's hand, but it is sure to grow daily, steadily, inevitably, until it has shrouded all the continent in its deadly black. Not in one place alone has the attack been made, but as if at a given signal, in three widely different countries, the onslaught of the cholera has begun.

From far away St. Petersburg comes the news, wholly expected, of course, that ten persons have died of cholera with the cessation of the frost. From Marseilles, under the warm sun of the Riviera, the plague has all the added horror of newness, and the people are trying hard to cover up the dead and to quiet the fears of the living, for no hint of this must come to spoil the season of pleasure that this month brings there. But worst of all, as directly affecting America, is the news from Hamburg. In the suburb of Altona a prisoner in jail has just died and five other cases are being closely watched. The port of Hamburg itself has not been allowed to escape. On board the steamers Echo and Australia four sailors were stricken with the disease. The weather is moderating all over the continent, and the warm sunshine is kissing back to life the cholera germs. So this week promises to show a wider spread of the great plague. Meanwhile Vienna is sending invitations to all nations to an international health congress to formulate some plan of fighting the common foe, and in England, Southampton is begging parliament to vote money to keep up a rigid quarantine.

Berlin, Feb. 13.—Negotiations as to the programme of the international sanitary conference, to consider precautions against cholera, are still in progress between Austro-Hungary and Germany. The report has been started from semi-official sources that the conference may take place before the end of this month. It, seems hardly possible, however, that the arrangements can be completed within the next four weeks. Cholera specialists of world-wide celebrity and from all parts of Europe are expected to be present.

Marseilles, Feb. 13.—Between 6 and 8 o'clock this afternoon eight persons died of the choleraic epidemic. Two patients were discharged as cured from the hospital. The Swedish consul has refused to issue clearing bills to vessels sailing for Swedish ports. A five days' quarantine has been established by the Greek government for all arrivals from this port.

Mrs. De Lesseps Speaks.

Paris, Feb. 13.—The Figaro publishes an interview with Mme. Ferdinand de Leseps, had since the conviction and sentence of her husband. Mme. de Lesseps was found courageous and resolute as ever and earnest in her belief in her husband's innocence. She said that her husband was in a very weak condition. A week ago he had been seized with a delirium that lasted a day. Then he had a relapse, and had since remained in a state of coma. Alluding to the severity of the sentences, Mme. de Lesseps said: "The very enormity of the sentences will better protect our honor than less thorough-going injustice would have done. Nevertheless there is one thing above all I cannot forgive, and that is that before striking at such a man they waited until physical infirmity had rendered it impossible for him to defend himself. It is better, perhaps, that Ferdinand de Lesseps should be unable to know the frightful character of the blow. When I think of the possibility of Ferdinand de Lesseps being put in prison I ask myself whether I am dreaming."

Mme. Zborowski Protests.

Paris, Feb. 13.—Mrs. Elliot Zborowski has lodged a protest with the United States legation here in reference to the obstacles raised to prevent her regaining the custody of her daughter in accordance with the decree of the South Dakota court which granted her a divorce from Chevalier de Steurs, Dutch minister to France. She will likewise appeal to a higher court against the judgment of the first civil chamber which held that as the proceedings were against a foreign minister, the latter was not within the jurisdiction of the French courts without his consent.

A Pennsylvania Scandal.

Shamokin, Pa., Feb. 13.—It is stated that warrants have been issued to-day for the arrest of thirty-five men prominent in business circles here as a consequence of the confession made by a school girl. In accounting to her father for an unusually prolonged absence from home she admitted that she and many other high school pupils had been decoyed by a married woman at Sunbury, and in her home introduced to the business men now under arrest. The woman implicated by the confession has fled and Northumberland county is convulsed by the scandal.

Exaggerated Reports.

Great Falls, Mont., Feb. 13.—Reports sent from Montana during the last week or ten days have grossly exaggerated the severity of the weather and the loss of live stock on the ranges. There is no truth whatever in the report that 25 per cent of the cattle of any section of this state have frozen. Reports collected from stockmen by the Great Falls Tribune prove that the losses have been insignificant.

Damages for Injured Reputation.

Huron, S. D., Feb. 13.—J. B. Coomer, late city marshal, has brought against Ald. J. W. Breton, claiming $5,000 damages because of statements made against him before the city council, which resulted in his (Coomer's) discharge from the police force.

Ocean Travel.

Havre—Arrived: La Gascogne, New York. New York—Arrived: Westernland, Antwerp; Elbe, Bremen; La Bourgogne, Havre. Breakwater, Del.—Passed: Indiana, Liverpool for Philadelphia.

One of the New Cruisers.

Baltimore, Feb. 13.—The new cruiser Detriot was given a trial trip yesterday by her builders for the purpose of testing her machinery, steering gear and general behavior. As a result the builders say they have little doubt that the vessel will far exceed the specified speed of seventeen knots an hour.

A Mate for the Vesuvius.

Washington, Feb. 13.—The successful result of the test of the Vesuvius may result in the addition of another vessel of the same class to the navy. It is claimed that the experiments with the Vesuvius will enable the navy department to greatly improve on the new vessel should one be built.

TAKING HAWAII IN.

Annexation Evidently in Sight.

Washington, Feb. 13.—It is stated that the Hawaiian commissioners and Secretary Foster have made substantial progress towards an agreement upon a basis for bringing the islands within the territory of the United States. It is believed that at the conference yesterday most if not all the points under discussion were incorporated in the text of the protocols. These points are far more numerous and perplexing than might be imagined at first, and they present several questions which have never before been considered in the history of this country. Hawaii has a full fledged government in existence, and the disposition of the several branches thereof, with their almost infinite ramifications into the life and business of the country, is a problem that requires patience and research for its solving. The revenues of the country are derived from various sources. There are the customs dues, postal revenues, the tax on real estate and personal property, the levy amounting to 1 per cent on the assessed valuation, without distinction of class. These comprise the principal items. How to divide them between the general government and the local government is a difficult question. What difficulties were experienced on this point, it is believed, have been harmonized, and a practical conclusion of the conferences is looked for early in the week. But the date of the official adjournment will probably depend upon the arrival of the other representatives of the deposed queen.

The conditions all point to next week as the earliest time when a formal conclusion of the matter by the state department may be looked for. In case of annexation being recommended by the executive the method of accomplishing it remains to be decided. The question has been discussed by those most interested, and it is understood that only two modes of procedure are deemed feasible. One is by treaty, which the senate alone may ratify, and the other is by an ordinary act of congress, requiring the joint action of the senate and house. It is believed that the former method will be adopted, if favorable action upon the proposition of the Hawaiian commissioners be determined on. To make the treaty effective, of course, the house would have to appropriate the necessary money, so that while the ratification of a treaty of annexation by the present senate is a possibility, the execution of the terms of the treaty will be a heritage for the next congress and administration. Another meeting of the commissioners and Secretary Foster will be held at the state department to-morrow.

Riches From the Earth.

Denver, Feb. 13.—Returns have been received from the first shipment of ore by the Work Mining company of Cripple Creek. The shipments consisted of 70,370 pounds net and assayed $118.20 gold and $60 silver to the ton. On these assays the Omaha and Grant smelter purchased the ore, paying $10 per ton. The pay-streak which has been from twelve to sixteen inches wide has now widened to twenty inches. A large body of 1,400-ounce ore has been struck in the Schiller near the top of Aspen mountain. A big strike is reported in the Fairview at Pitkin. The ore bed is of a stephanite nature giving assays of $10,000 to $12,000 on picked up samples. The entire ten-inch streak will average $1,000 per ton. It is reported that the sale of the big Amethyst mine at Creede, together with the Hillside and Hidden treasure to a New York syndicate has been completed. The price was $1,500,000.

Eleven in Peril.

Green's Hill, R. I., Feb. 13.—The four-masted schooner John Pall of Taunton, Mass., which went ashore in the thick weather of Friday night, lies in a most precarious position. The Quonocontaug life-saving crew made every possible effort to reach her and succeeded in getting sufficiently near to take off Capt. Whittier, who was landed with much difficulty and risk. The rest of the crew, consisting of eleven men, it was impossible to succor, owing to the high seas and the heavy pounding of the vessel upon the rocks. It is feared that all of them will perish. The schooner is sinking deeper every hour, and their fate is nearly a foregone conclusion should she settle far enough to submerge her decks. The seamen who live near the coast consider it extremely improbable that she can last much longer. The only theory assigned for the mishap is that the strong tides and wind, combined with the thick weather, forced the captain out of his reckoning.

Killed While Resisting.

Asheville, N. C., Feb. 13.—Some time ago Mrs. Thomas Johnston, who lives in Tennessee near the North Carolina line, was put in jail at Marshall, Madison county, N. C., for non-payment of costs in a suit. She was released last week. Her husband came to Madison county to a "house raising," and met Alex Grifty, a negro, who laughed at him because his wife had been in jail. Johnston jumped on Grifty and gave him a terrible beating, and then went home. Saturday Grifty swore out a warrant for Johnston, and with two officers and two colored men, went to Johnston's house to execute the warrant. The posse was seen by Johnston as it approached, and calling his wife and son, each presented a gun and warned the party to leave. The party advanced and fired, killing Johnston and wife, and then fled back into the North Carolina mountains. The latest news is that no attempt had been made to arrest the men for the killing.

A Copper Hatchet.

Black River Falls, Wis., Special, Feb. 13.—A remarkable curiosity was shown here recently by one of the Winnebago Indians from Winona. It was a copper hatchet with an edge as keen as it is possible to get steel. He hewed hard wood knots with it to show that it was as hard to break as steel. He said it was found in one of the mounds of Wisconsin near Winona with knives made of the same material. An attempt was made to buy it, but he said he had been offered $25 for it, but would not sell it at any price. He says he has a large number of these "mound builder" curiosities that he will take to the world's fair this summer, some of which have never been found elsewhere. He claims the knives can be sharpened as keen as razors, and says that according to tradition they must be over 500 years old. He expects to sell some of these at fabulous prices at Chicago next summer to relic hunters.

Abandons Catholicism.

St. Louis, Feb. 13.—Rev. A. Konzelman, pastor of the German Baptist church, has introduced to the conference of Baptist ministers Rev. Julius A. Gumppenberg, a convert from the Roman Catholic church. Mr. Gumppenberg was a priest formerly connected with the diocese of Oregon, comes of a noble family in Germany, and is a baron or count in his own right.

Defaulter and Suicide.

Bellaire, Ohio, Feb. 13.—The body of Harry G. Wilson, the $30,000 defaulting superintendent of the city water works, who disappeared Nov. 18, was found yesterday by boys in a thicket twelve miles east of Wheeling, W. Va., where he had killed himself.

Death of a Postmaster.

Birmingham, Ala., Feb. 13.—T. T. Kirk, postmaster at Guin, Marion county, was shot and killed in a street duel at that place yesterday by Dock Sides, a notorious fellow about the neighborhood. The killing was the result of an old feud. One of Sides' brothers was wounded in the fight.

Anarchists Convicted.

Pittsburg, Feb. 13.—Henry Bauer and Carl Nold, the anarchists charged with being accessories before the fact to the attempted assassination of H. C. Frick, chairman of the Carnegie Steel company, limited, were found guilty as indicted. When the verdict was announced Bauer frowned, while Nold turned pale. The extreme penalty for the crime is seven years in the penitentiary. Two years more will be added for conspiracy, of which they were convicted on Thursday. Application for a new trial has been made.

New Bank at St. James.

Washington, Feb. 13.—The First National Bank of St. James, Minn., capital $50,000, was authorized to-day to begin business.

GREAT NORTHERN

TIME CARD.

NO. 3 Daily		NO Daily
7 40 p m	Lv.........St. Paul..........Ar	6 55 am
8 10 " 11	......Minneapolis..........	6 25 am
08 a m 218	......Barnesville..........	10 25 pm
10 45 am 279	Lv.....Crookston.....Ar	4 10 pm
*11 25 " 29	........Shirley..........	3 30 " *
*x11 45 " 31	........Ives..........	x3 00 " *
t12 20 pm	........Wylie..........	x2 20 " *
*12 45 " 82	Ar.....St. Hilaire.....Lv	2 00 " *

*Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

S. S. Buzza Agt.

Dr. H. GRUNDY.

Physician

& Surgeon.

Graduate of the University of Toronto Canada and member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario.

Messages from the surrounding country attended to,

Office in Drug Store

THIEF RIVER FALLS,

NORTHERN PACIFIC

THE

GREAT TRAMSCONENTAL ROUTE.

Passes through Wisconsin, Einnesota, North Dakota, Manitoca, Montana, Idaho, Oregon and Washington.

THE DINING CAR LINE

Dining cars are run between Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Olnnipeg, Helena, Butte, Tacoma, Seattle and Portland.

PULLMAN SLEEPING CAR ROUTE.

Pullman service between Chicago St. Paul Montana and the Pacific Northwest; and between St. Paul, Minneapolis and Minnesota North Dakota and Manitoba points.

THE POPULAR LINE,

Early Express Trains carry elegant Pullman sleeping Cars, Dining cars, Day Coaches, Pullman Tourist Sleepers and Free Colonist Sleeping Cars.

YELLOWSTONE PARK ROUTE.

The Northern Pacific R. R. is the rail line to Yellowstone Park; the popular line to California and Alaska; and its trains pass through the grandest scenery of seven states

THROUGH TICKETS Are sold at all coupon offices of the Northern Pacific Railroad to points North, East, South and West in the United States and Canada

TIME SCEDULE,

	Leave Crookston Daily	Arrive Crookston Daily
For Staples, Minneapolis, St. Paul Duluth Ashland and points East and South	7:05 p. m.	8:20 a m.
For Grand Forks Grafton Drayton, Winnipeg and oints in North Dakota and Manitoba	8:27a. m.	7:10 p. m

For Rates, maps, Time Tables or special information, apply to Agent Northern Pacific R R. at Crookston Minn., or

CHAS. S. FEE,
Gen. Pass. Agent
St. Paul Minn.

ST. HILAIRE MEAT MARKET.

All kinds of fresh and salt meat always on hand.

I make a specialty of buying and selling cattle of all kinds.

If you want to buy or sell anything in that line it will pay you to give me a call.

JAMES DAINARD.

FRED Eikhof

DEALER IN CHOICE

WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS.

Beer always on tap.

Pool Room in Connection.

Broadway St. Hilaire.

FRANK IVES,

Attorney and Counselor AT LAW,

CROOKSTON and ST. HILAIRE, Minn.

Will Practice in ALL The Courts, OF THE STATE and and before the U. S. Land Office Crookston and at Washington.

Will give special attention to contests of claims.

BREVITIES.

Wheat is 60 cents.

Fresh Oysters at W. A. Arthurs try them.

The price of wheat is again on the drop,

For No. 1 pure buck wheat flour call on Fricker & Welch.

M. E. Bjerk went down to Crookston to-day on business.

If you want some nice fresh oysters call on W. A. Arthur.

Ole Brink went over to Euclid on business last Monday.

The country roads are almost impassible on account of the snow.

Martin Williams was at Thief River Falls on business last Monday.

A complete line of undertakers goods always on hand at Holmes Bros.

S. M. Dainard was at Crookston several days last week business,

C. G. Rapp leaves this evening for Crookston for a short business trip.

J. W. Wheeler, of Crookston, was in town several hours last Monday.

Wm. Eikhof came up from Crookston last Monday to visit his brother Fred.

Carl Johnson was doing business at Thief River Falls the first of the week.

Conductor Norrie came up with today's train in place of Conductor Ditty.

Now is the time to secure your flour cheap. Call for bargains on Fricker & Welch.

George Williams was, down from Thief River Falls last Sunday visiting friends.

Chas. A. Johnson, of Thief River Falls was in town last Friday on his way to Crookston.

If you want anything in the line of confectionary fruit or oysters call on W. A. Arthur.

Hans Langseth, the Thief River Falls merchant was doing business in town last Monday.

Yesterday was St. Valentine's day and the usual amount of tender tokens were exchanged.

We have already more snow this winter than has fallen any previous winter for several years.

A. C. Schmidt and W. E. Walker, two of Crookston's prominent business men were in town last Monday.

S. M. Dainard left for St. Paul last Friday with a couple of cars of stock returning home to-day.

We want some cordwood bad and would like to have some of our delinquent subscribers respond.

Messrs J. Frick and Wm. Anderson, a couple of jolly traveling men, were doing business in town this week.

The annual village election will occur in about a month and candidates will soon begin to show on the surface.

The dance last Friday evening in Dainard's hall was well attended and all seemed to have an enjoyable time.

Christopher Sandmoen who was sent to the county jail by Justice Hanson for ninety days has returned having served out his sentence.

Gentle spring is due to arrive according to the calendar in two weeks but we may expect about sixty days of winter weather.

James Dainard returned to-day from St. Paul where he had been with several cars of cattle which he had purchased on the Fosston line.

Owing to the snow blockade we did not have a train yesterday, but it arrived on time to-day. A snow plow came up earlier to clear the way and no trouble was found,

We were very fortunate in having several days of exceptionally fine weather last week. Last Sunday was, as far as weather is concerned, the most perfect day we have had this winter.

A. Chabot is closing out his entire stock of clothing. Every thing is marked down to hard time prices, My dry goods stock is too large, have marked all goods down as they must be sold,

New York Store.

About six inches of snow fell last Monday afternoon and evening and we were again treated to a genuine blizzard of the old fashioned style. For genuine blizzards and cold weather this winter will be justly celebrated,

This weeks storm has been a hard one for the railroads. All trains were delayed and nothing could move until after a snow plow had cleared the way The snow was very heavy and it caused the worst blockade of the season.

My stock must be reduced $20.000 by April 1st, To do this have marked all goods way down and invite all to take advantage of this offer. You can save money by buying your summer's supply now.

New York Store,

The Great Northern have made a decided improvement in the change in time table. Hereafter the train will arrive from Crookston at 10:50 a. m. returning from Red Lake Falls at 2:10 p. m. and leaving again for Crookston at 4 p. M., arriving at Crookston an hour earlier at 6 p. m,

Mr. Wanamaker smiles and smiles at the harsh things said about his big Columbian stamps. They are going off like hot cakes, and when it becomes generally known that the reverse side of said stamps is medicated and warranted to cure catarrh, brace up a torpid liver, destroy the appetite for alchohol, morphine and tobacco and relieve that tired feeling, the demand for the health giving plasters will test the capacity of Uncle Sam's job office,—Ex.

It is claimed by those who are in a position to know that President-elect Cleveland has decided to appoint the following gentlemen as members of his cabinet:

Secretary of State, Walter Q. Gresham of Indiana,

Secretary of the Treasury, John G. Carlisle, of Kentucky,

Secretary of War, Col. Daniel Lamont of New York.

Attorney General, Congressman Culberson, of Texas.

Postmaster General, W. C, Bissel, of New York,

Secretary of the Navy, E. C Benedict of Connecticut

Secretary of the Interior, Hoke Smith of Georgia.

Secretary of Agriculture, a man from the Pacific coast.

Through our columns a few days ago we had occasion to mention the consternation into which the citizens of St. Hilaire were thrown by the appearance nightly, of a strange light in the school house, Our correspondent at that point explains as follows:

"Again on Wednesday, the whole schoolhouse was set in a flood of light. After a considerable amount of ghost-storying, daring, etc., four of St Hilaire's bravest men decided to investigate this "Canton" mystery. After securing the keys, and well armed, they proceeded to the schoolhouse, but upon nearing the place they were surprised to find that the light had suddenly disappeared. They made a hasty retreat to the point where they had at first perceived the light and were again surprised to find the light visible, and this time there was no mistake as ghostly forms could be seen within. Two of the men, however, were not to be fooled in this manner, and leaving the other two on watch they again set out for the schoolhouse, this time on a different line than the first. The lights remained this time and it was then that they solved the mystery.

They were in a direct line between the schoolhouse and Mr. Hall's store, which through the unfrosted windows, emitted the strong light of three large lamps, which reflected upon the schoolhouse windows. The forms they saw were caused by a few sacks of flour in the store."—Crookston Times.

Here is the method of taxation employed in Switzerland; In the first place, no official assessment is made of property, Blanks are destributed to every house to be filled by its occupants This system is known as the "progressive" tax scale, A, who owns $4,000 worth of property, pays taxes on only half of it. B, who owns $25,000 worth pays taxes on eight-tenths of it; while C, who owns $100,000 worth of property pays taxes on the whole of it, The result is that C pays not the proportional twenty-five times on A's taxes but fifty times as much. The income tax is managed after a similar fashion, The rich pay out of all proportion to the poor classes. They probably would not change places with the poor, however, even to save what they decry as unjust taxation, The plan is not always a popular one. Leaving every man to assess himself has the disadvantage that the rich, with stocks and bonds, sometimes do not make returns of them, When a rich Swiss dies, however, the government controls of his estate quickly make amends for all his past misdeeds in the way of assessments, and every penny of taxes is now deducted together with compound interest and fines.—Grand Forks Herald.

The country is full of sharks and "fakes, going about like the "roaring" lion" of the Scriptures, and like his horned counterpart "seeking whom they may devour," A good way to test these traveling agents—for if the men are "fakes" the offering will never be accepted— is to tender a non-negotiable note. You will never get an agent for any fake to take a note payable only to himself or referring on its face to the contract he makes. It is not always a sign that he is a swindle when negotiable paper is demanded but when dealing with strangers you will win nine times where you lose once by refusing to deal with swindlers or traveling agents at all. At any rate don't give a negotiable note to a stranger under any circumstances and if you don't want to give a negotiable note just mark out the words "the order" or "or bearer" which always follows the blank line on which the name is written to whom the note is given. Make the note payable to him and to him alone. That saves you and all your rights, Or if the note is given you by the other party just write ahead of your signature "the payment of this note is made conditional upon the performance of a certain contract for which it is given." Always remember that no matter what written or oral contract you may have, that will have nothing to do with the payment of the note unless it appears on the face of the note.—Iowa City Republican.

If Norman county could get another tier of towns from Polk county it would be a good thing for us, but there seems to be no possible show for such an outcome of the legislation for the division of Polk. Such a change would not relieve those people living fifty miles east of Crookston who are clamoring for a nearer county seat. The best way to divide Polk would be to divide it on the line between 43 and 44 and attach Beltrami to the eastern portion This would make western Polk a grand county, but would not suit the county seat boomers in the small towns.—Norman County Index.

County Treasurer Beaudry says there are nearly four thousand personal property tax payers who have not as yet paid their taxes for this year and as the time expires with the last of this month they will be likely to have an additional ten per cent added to them, The last day or two are always the busiest for the treasurer, as the farmers all wait until the last few days before coming in and then there is such a crowd at the office that it is impossible to wait upon them all, It would be advisable for all city tax payers to attend to this matter at once, and not wait until the last day.—Crookston Times.

John Kubol who came here about six weeks ago to take charge of the barber shop and who was taken ill soon after his arrival here, died last Friday night of lung fever. The deceased came here from Thief River Falls where he had a barber shop for several years and was universally liked. The deceased leaves behind to mourn his untimely death an estimable wife and three small children. The funeral services occured Monday at the Fertile House where he died, under the auspices of the Fertile Cornet Band and his remains were placed at rest in the village cemetery.—Fertile Journal.

Hicks the noted weather prophet, says of this coming spring: "The spring of 1893 and especially the months of March and April will prove exceptionally stormy wet and cold, The equinox of Venus falls in the middle of April instead of May as was the case last spring The facts indicate a battle of cold rain, and snow will fall in the months of March, April and the early part of May instead of lasting through May to June as we had last season.—Ex.

I will pay the highest market price or veal calves, fresh eggs and butter.

S. M. Dainard.

The present legislature is a reform body with a vengence, Bills have been introduced to prevent women wearing hoop skirts and to prohibit the smoking of cigarettes. A bill to prevent dogs from carrying fleas is in order.

Notice To Farmers.

We will pay you cash for hides, hay barley, oats, cord wood, good steers or anything marketable that you have to sell,

E. T. Spafford & Co.

John C. Mathews left last Friday for the Soldiers Home at St. Paul. Mr. Mathews has been sick for the past three months and not getting better concluded to go down there until he regained his health, He has written to friends here stating that he arrived all right and that he is already gaining in health.

Clothing! Clothing!! Clothing!!!

A. Chabot is offering the public goods for less money than ever before, Close buyers are invited. Special sale of dry goods begins Monday.

New York Store.

INTERESTING ITEM.

It is to the interest of parties contemplating going east to consider the great advantages the Great Northern offers them through its fast passenger service to St. Paul and to all points west to the Pacific coast, their free colonist cars, and magnificent Dining and Sleeping cars. The shortest route, close connections, quickest time and fare as low as the lowest, Any information cheerfully given,

S. S. Buzza
Agent.

CHATTEL LOANS

I am prepared to loan money on chattle security at reasonable rates. One years time. Call On

H. E. IVES.

WANTED. Salesmen. Local and Traveling, To represent our well known house. You need no capital to represents a firm that warrants nursery stock first-class and true to name. WORK ALL THE YEAR. $100 per month to the right man. Apply quick stating age. L. L. MAY & CO. Nurserymen, Florists and Seeds men, St. Paul Minn.

(This house is responsible.)

MARLIN SAFETY REPEATING RIFLES

Made in all styles and sizes. Lightest, strongest, easiest working, safest, simplest, most accurate, most compact, and most modern. For sale by all dealers in arms. Catalogues mailed free by

The Marlin Fire Arms Co.,
NEW HAVEN, CONN., U. S. A.

[illegible] who are indebted to [illegible] Hoff are requested to call and settle up at once or the debt will be collected by law.

U. S. LAND OFFICE,
Crookston Minn December 5 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on January 21 1893 viz: Daniel Johnson H D 12652 for the Lot 5 Sec. 6 and Lot 1 Sec 7 Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of said land viz:

J. A. Sjortrom Anton Sundahl J. A. Peterson, K. Sundahl all of St. Hilaire, Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn. Dec. 7 1892.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim and that said proof will be made before the U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn, on January 26 1893 viz Charles Gomoll H D 11784 for the SE ¼ Sec 25 Tp 152 R 45.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land viz:

Gotlieb Gerlach, August Morel, Charles Peterson Henry Leppert all of Wylie Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn Dec 14 1892

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on Feb 16 1893 viz:

Peter Sanderson H D 14150 for the NW ¼ SE ¼ NE ¼ SW ¼ and Lots 5 and 6 Sec 6 Tp 151 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Peter Anderson, John Strawberg, O. K. Ellenson H. Johnson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register

U. S. Land Office
Crookston Minn. January 3 1893

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his inention to make final proof in support of his claim and has said proof will be made before the Register or Receiver of the U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. on February 16 1893. viz:

Anton Peterson HD 12783 for the SE ¼ Sec. 7 Tp 152 R 42.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of, said land viz:

Julius Nelson, James Evenson, Daniel Johnson, Erick Anderson all of St. Hilaire Polk Co. Minn.

HUGH THOMPSON Register.

CLOSING OUT SALE!

At E M Hoff's Store

My whole stock of

Dry Goods and Notions

Gents Furnshing Goods

$5,000 worth of ready made clothing

Foot wear of all kinds and everything belonging to a full stocked general merchandise store will be closed out at cost in the next 90 days.

COME EVERY BODY

AND

SECURE GOOD BARGAINS.

E. M. HOFF

CROWN ROLLER MILL.

EQUIPPED WITH THE LATEST AND BEST IMPROVED MACHINERY.

Manufactures the well known PERFECTION FANCY PATENT and WHITE ROSE FLOUR.

Rye and Feed mill in connection.

Flour and Feed always kept on hand

Custom work a specialty.

FRICKER & WELCH Prop,

HILAIRE MINNESOTA

CHAS G. RAPP.

A large and complete line of

General Merchandise.

CONSISTING OF

Dry Goods, Groceries, Clothing

Boots & Shoes, Hats & Caps

Notions

THE ST. HILAIRE SPECTATOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY EVENING.
H. E. IVES, Propr.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE:
Advance,
If not in Advance, $2.00 Per Year

Entered in the Post Office at St. Hilaire, as Second Class Mail Matter

WEDNESDAY February 15 1893.

IN WASHINGTON.

STORY ABOUT A SENATOR WHO FLOCKS BY HIMSELF.

Facts, Figures and Gossip About the Pension Business, Which Is Conducted in the Biggest Brick Building in the World, With the Greatest Amount of Red Tape—Why It Is So,

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13, 1893.

IN ONE RESPECT, Senator Davis, of Minnesota, is like the Sphinx of Egypt—he never speaks—to newspaper men. That is, he will not talk for publication. He is almost the only Senator, or public men in any station who refuses to reach the people through the newspapers. In this respect "he flocks by himself." Notwithstanding this fact he retains the good will of the fraternity to an extraordinary degree. During his recent struggle for re-election there was not a journalist in Washington who did not sincerely desire his return.

Since the annexation of Hawaii has been broached, every man in Washington whose opinion is of any value, except Senator Davis, has expressed himself on this important topic. Nearly all great men seem willing to try to create a just public opinion on all important topics. But Senator Davis remains distressingly silent.

Mr. Fletcher, Member of Congress elect from the Minneapolis District, spent ten days in Washington. He was followed here by a large number of letters from his old soldier constituents who wanted him to hurry up their pension claims, so that they might get a little comfort out of the money before they died. Speaking of the pension matter Mr. Fletcher said to your correspondent:

"I have been carefully studying the pension question since my arrival here, because I want to act intelligently for the veterans when my official life begins. I find that 728,000 pension claims of veteran Union soldiers have not been acted on, but still remain hanging by the gills, while the claimants are dying at the rate of thousands every year. In round numbers 960,000 claims have been allowed, while more than half of those now drawing pensions have claims pending for an increase. The Pension Office asks for $180,000,000 to meet its obligations next year. This is a vast sum, and naturally makes a taxpayer shudder. But then, when one stops to think, this is a vast country and takes vast sums to keep it in running order. I would just call attention to one other very pertinent fact:

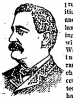
"The money paid out by the Pension Department is in the nature of the payment of a debt long past due, without interest. The money goes immediately into all the channels of trade. It is not hoarded. The men who receive it are poor. Every dollar goes for the necessities of life.

"Besides paying an honest debt, therefore, the Nation is enriching all the channels of commerce.

"The fellows who talk of repealing our pension laws are public enemies.

"There is more demand for the passage of new laws that will hasten the payment of honest claims before the claimants shall be dead."

The arrangements for the grandest inaugural ceremonies ever extended to the advent of any President are rapidly progressing. Politics aside, Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland are exceedingly popular with all classes in Washington. The inaugural arrangements are in charge of an executive committee of 21 men, who have lived long in Washington, and have had previous experience in this same line. The chairman of this committee is J. L. Norris, a prominent patent attorney and Democratic leader. Another member of this committee is A. T. Britton, who was chairman of the Harrison inaugural committee, and had much to do with making it a success.



JAMES L. NORRIS.

Let me say to all veterans and widows of the veterans of the late war who have pension claims pending, that there is no plan known even to the Deity whereby such claims can be expedited. Members of Congress, United States Senators, Cabinet Officers and even the President of the United States himself cannot hasten action upon anybody's pension. The Pension Office is a mill run by very intricate machinery constructed of red tape. This machine is located in the largest brick building in the world. It is run under Civil Service rules. About half of the employees being people from the North who are supposed to sympathize with pension claimants, while the other half are from the South and very naturally do not sympathize so warmly with the Northern soldiers. There are supposed to be over 3,000 people employed and paid salaries in the Pension Office. My statistics—not taken from an official source—may not be entirely correct, but probably about one pension for every 5,000 employes is daily emitted as the grist from this mill.

